RUSH OF HERDS.

Thirteen Thousand Elks Register.

Influx of Special Trains Begins in Earnest for Big Week.

Depot Crush Today Will Be Worst Known Here in Many Years.

Texas Party Comes Long Way in Fine String of Private Cars.

A DOZEN special trains that came in yesterday over the various railroad lines swelled the Elks' population of Los Angeles by more than 2000, and when registration closed last night at general headquarters it was estimated that a total of 13,000 Elk visitors were in the city, not to mention the thousands of other visitors attracted by the low transportation rates.

Still the arrivals of yesterday and the days before were only a small part of the total, for more than thirty specials are scheduled for arrival today, not including two or three that were on the boards for yesterday, but which failed to appear. This promises to be the heaviest day, though many more trains are due tomorrow and Tuesday.

It is estimated that nearly 10,000 passengers will arrive by special train and private car today, in addition to which all regular trains will bring thousands of sightseers, some members of the order and many more who are not.

The principal trains to arrive yesterday, in addition to that from Cincinnati, which rolled in shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning with "Garry" Herrmann and his party, were from Southern Illinois, Louisville, Salt Lake City, East St. Louis, Spokane, Texas and Alameda. Grand Exalted Ruler Rush L. Holland and party arrived during the day, and another train was made up of cars carrying visitors from Detroit, Omaha, Pueblo and the State of Carolina.

JOLLY TEXANS.

The Texas train of yesterday carried only a portion of the Elks of that State. Another train will be in today with a big addition to the Lone Star representation.

There was music galore when the advance guard of the Texas Elks arrived over the Santa Fé at 2:20 o'clock p.m.—music by the band and songs by the White Squadron, turn about time and again, and then some. The Texans brought their wives and families, and they made things entertaining from the start. This is the way Galveston started as soon as it could make itself heard:

"One, two, three,
Who are we?
We're from the city by the sea.
Rah! Rah! Rix!
Rah! Rah! Rix!
Galveston! Galveston!
One, two, six!"

"Billiken," the original, is with them, in the person of J. B. Bealleau, of Benham No. 979, and J. F. Moran, the irrepressible when the music is going, who, for sixteen years, consecutively, has been constable of Precinct No. 1, Galveston, and would rather be constable of that precinct than be Sheriff of the county.

The train that brought the Texans consisted of six sleeping cars and one baggage car, the latter stocked with all the comforts of home, in the way of sandwiches and liquids, both soft and softer—Manitou water, lemonade, and other refreshments for the ladies.

The company includes 148 persons, of whom sixty-eight are Elks, and the remainder members of their families, and friends. All are from Texas, not a person from any other State being permitted to join the party. All were accommodated, as to sleeping, in lower berths.

The train came over the Santa Fé lines all the way, in charge of F. H. Dever, superintendent of the passenger service of the Santa Fé Gulf lines, with headquarters at Galveston, himself an Elk. Fast time was made, the schedule being beaten six hours.

ONE ROUND OF PLEASURE.

Starting at Galveston, the special departed at 6:45 p.m. last Monday, and there was a general assembling of the members of the party at Cleburne on the morning of the 6th. Leaving there at 8:45 a.m., they were given a reception and lunch at Gainesville at noon of the same day, then a 6 o'clock dinner at the Elks' Club and an automobile ride about the city at Oklahoma City at the close of the day. On the 7th, they had a reception and lunch at the Elks' clubrooms at La Junta, Colo., at noon, and a lunch and reception at the Elks' Club in Las Vegas, N. M., the same evening. The 8th was passed on the line, and on the 9th the party visited the Grand Cañon, leaving there at 3 p.m.

On the 10th, coming off the hot and dusty desert, they enjoyed immensely the cool green of the country about San Bernardino, where they were given a noon reception and lunch at the Elks' Club, and trolley and automobile rides about San Bernardino and near-by cities.

The party has quarters at the Minnewaska.

Among the members of the party are: C. N. Rhode, J. M. Byrth, George

WOMEN WANT THEIR BEER.

Female Residents of Kansas Town Sign Protest Against Closing of Saloons.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINERAL (Kan.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The women of this town want beer and have petitioned the Prosecuting Attorney for the privilege of buying it here. Prosecuting Attorney Majors of Cherokee county, recently closed the saloons in Mineral.

Today he received a petition signed by ninety women asking for a restoration of the joints. The petition says:

"We want our beer and we want to get it at Mineral."

The petition was forwarded to John Marshall, Assistant Attorney-General at Topeka. When Prosecutor Majors told the women today that he could not give them relief, the women said they could get 200 additional signers. Most of the women are foreigners.

DISTINCTION TO BE COMMONER.

ONLY NINETEEN AT WHITELAW REID'S DINNER PARTY.

But Then, of Course, They Were Mostly American Millionaires—Ambassador's Independence Day Reception Costs Him More Than One-third of His Full Year's Salary.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] (Copyright.) Ambassador Reid's dinner party and small dance for the King and Queen constituted the most remarkable assemblage of aristocracy ever collected in any London embassy. An analysis of the guests shows they consisted of six royal princes, six royal princesses, six dukes, seven duchesses, seven marquises, five marchionesses, fourteen earls, seventeen countesses, four viscounts, two viscountesses, 280 lords, twenty-six Ladies and only nineteen commoners.

There were eight Americans present, all purely society people, with no representative character.

In view of the movement to induce the American government to provide embassies the owner of Dorchester house has been sounded as to whether he would sell the mansion. It is understood that he intends to occupy it himself at the expiration of the present lease.

Ambassador Reid told one of his titled guests at the King's dinner, in speaking of the movement started by the association, that if other than men of wealth were sent to represent the United States as ambassadors, congress must not only provide embassies but increase salaries. His own Independence Day reception at Dorchester house cost him more than one-third of his year's salary.

GREAT ASTRONOMER DIES.

Prof. Simon Newcomb Passes Away at Age of Seventy-four in Washington.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Prof. Simon Newcomb, the famous astronomer, died at his home in this city at an early hour this morning at the age of 74.

Probably the most noted American astronomical mathematician since the days of Benjamin Franklin, Prof. Newcomb was recognized at the time of his death as one of the world's great scientists. In his capacity as professor of mathematics, he contracted for and supervised the construction of the great telescope which is used today in the Naval Observatory at Washington.

He also assisted in equipping the great Lick Observatory in California. From 1877 to 1897 he was director of the nautical almanac, a government publication famous throughout the world.

TOO MANY WIVES.

BIGAMIST JOHNSON TO PLEAD GUILTY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, June 10.—Christian C. Johnson was given his preliminary examination this afternoon upon a charge of bigamy, will plead guilty in the Superior Court Monday and by Tuesday will probably be en route to San Quentin. He wants to be sentenced quickly and seek refuge behind the bars. He denied that he was married to any other woman besides Mrs. Leopold and Mrs. Tretheway.

When Mrs. Tretheway took the stand she said:

"We were married right here in this courtroom. We stayed in San José that night. Saturday I went to Santa Cruz and he went to San Francisco. The next day we met in my home in Stockton. Monday I discovered a letter in his pocket, addressed to Mrs. Ida Mitchell in San Francisco, in which he referred to her as 'My Dear little wife.' He denied that he had ever married any one but me, but I put him out, baggage and all, giving him $5 so that he would not have to walk back to San Francisco.

"I married him for his wealth and for the children's sake. He told me he had a palace, horses, carriages and jewels, and that I would just have to fold my hands and take it easy the rest of my life, and that my children would have the best educational advantages."

Bail was fixed at $5000, and Johnson was taken into custody by the Sheriff.

In court Johnson wanted to plead guilty at once, but when informed that he could not do so until he appeared for trial in the Superior Court, he said that he would plead guilty at the first opportunity.

HE OWNS IT.

WEYERHAUSER SAYS PLENTY OF TIMBER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—Frederick Weyerhauser, president of the Weyerhauser Timber Company, the largest holder of timber lands in the United States, who arrived in Seattle today from the East, takes issue with Gifford Pinchot, head of the United States Forestry Department, on the statement that there is danger of exhausting the timber supply in the next twenty years. Mr. Weyerhauser says that he believes that the timber supply of the United States will never give out.

"I am very much interested in the forestry problem," said Mr. Weyerhauser, "and I do not believe with Mr. Pinchot that the forests of the country would be wiped out in twenty years. There is no reason to believe that the timber supply will ever be exhausted. I am of the opinion that we will have ample timber for our needs for an indefinite time, for all time, in fact.

"Talk commonly indulged in regarding the depletion of timber in the East, Middle West and South, is an exaggeration. There is still an abundance of timber throughout the South, and also in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and contiguous territory. With ordinarily conservative methods of lumbering, it will last indefinitely. It is constantly growing, young timber is replacing the old and with proper safeguards against forest fires and utterly useless waste, it should last forever."

MUST RECOGNIZE AMERICA.

Bankers Going to Paris to Make Another Effort in Chinese Loan Settlement.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, July 10.—Representatives of American bankers now in London will leave for Paris early next week to make another effort to reach an agreement with European financiers for American participation in the Hankow-Sze Chuen railroad loan of $27,500,000.

The greatest reticence is maintained with respect to the meetings held in London this week. It is understood, however, that the German and French bankers came here under the delusion that the Americans were prepared to accept a compromise. They found, however, that the Americans insisted on the acceptance of the State Department's terms, and the breaking off of negotiations was only prevented at the suggestion, made by the continental representatives, that they be given time to consult with their respective governments, after which further meetings would be held in Paris and Berlin if necessary.

It is certain that the Americans will not recede from their stand taken at the London meeting, and if necessary will insist that China shall not sign the loan agreement until the American claim is recognized.

GERMANY INTERESTED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, July 10.—The participation of the United States in the Chinese railroad loan is referred to by the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung at length in its weekly semi-official article on foreign affairs. It says that the claim of the United States to participate in the loan takes the character of a well considered step of fundamental significance for a change in that country's international policy. It concludes by saying:

"President Taft thus, for the first time, has definitely shown that his opinion differs from that of Roosevelt."

DEATH FOLLOWS DISGRACE.

M. Sakao, Convicted Japanese Sugar Magnate, Takes His Life at Tokio.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOKIO, July 11.—M. Sakao, president of the Japan Sugar Company, convicted during the recent trial of the so-called sugar scandal cases, committed sucide today by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. Sakao was one of the twenty-three persons, nine of them members of the lower house of the Diet, on whom sentence was pronounced a few days ago.

FAREWELL TO VON BUELOW.

BERLIN, July 10.—Prince and Princess von Buelow entertained the staff of the Chancellory and the Foreign Office at a farewell dinner this evening. Herr von Schoen, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, expressed the feeling of regret at Chancellor von Buelow's departure of all the officials who had served under him. The Chancellor replied with much emotion.

BANANA TRADE UPSET.

NEW ORLEANS, July 10.—The banana business is practically demoralized as far as prices are concerned, and the market is almost without a demand for fruit. John B. Cefalu, president of the Central American Steamship Company, which has contracted for fruit along a part of the coast of Spanish Honduras, made this statement today.

FATAL HEAT IN TEXAS.

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 10.—One death and three prostrations at Fort Worth and three deaths as well as several prostrations at Dallas today marked the third day of the warmest weather ever recorded in this section of Texas. Thursday the maximum temperature record was 99, Friday 102, and today 101 degrees.

OIL BARGE BURNS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 10.—The Texas Oil company's barge Harrison, loaded with 135,000 gallons of oil, burned to the water's edge today destroying the company's wharf. Loss, $50,000.

BABY TO BE RAFFLED OFF.

Mother Asks Theater Manager to Dispose of Infant by Chance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BILOXI (Miss.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Unable to provide for her infant, Mrs. H. J. Hoze, a widowed mother, made an appeal to George W. Wilkes, manager of the local theater here, to raffle off her baby, with the understanding that whoever secured the child should allow her the privilege of seeing it once each month.

"I have heard that some theaters have given away babies at their shows," wrote Mrs. Hoze to Manager Wilkes, "and I have an eight-months-old child, which I am unable to support. I wish you would take the little thing and raffle it off. I only pray that some good person will get possession of it. I will not accept any money, for I would not have it said that I sold my baby, but I want the privilege of seeing my child once every month."

After investigating the case, Manager Wilkes accepted the proposition, and set next Monday, July 12, as raffle day. The unique procedure has attracted a world of attention along the Gulf coast.

UNHARMED.

TRAIN WRECK DELAYS ELKS.

HEAD-ON COLLISION BLOCKS FOURTEEN TRAINS.

Passenger and Freight Crash at Cisco, Utah, and Three Trainmen Are Killed, But Passengers Escape Unharmed — Philadelphians Just Ahead of Danger.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., July 10.—Three trainmen killed and one fatally injured and traffic tied up for more than twelve hours, are the results of a head-on collision that occurred about 3 o'clock this morning near Cisco, Utah, about sixty miles west of here, between section five of westbound Denver & Rio Grande passenger train No. 3 and an eastbound sheep train. The wrecked passenger train was carrying the regular passengers only, none of the Elks bound for Los Angeles being aboard.

The engine crew and baggage man of the passenger train were killed, the freight engine men jumping in time to escape. None of the passengers was injured.

The Philadelphia Elks special left here as section four, one hour ahead of the wrecked train. When the latter reached Pinto it found the special on the siding, the engine having gone dead. The Elks special had orders to pass the sheep train at Cisco, but the crew of section five knew nothing of the freight.

Fourteen special trains carrying Elks to Los Angeles were held here all day on account of the wreck. They left for the west at short intervals beginning at 5:30 this evening.

ARBITRATORS DECIDE.

PITTSBURGH, July 10.—"Our finding is that Ashford be reinstated in his job in the company employment, and that he be allowed twenty days' pay for the time he was off duty."

This decision was reached yesterday by arbitrators appointed to adjust the single difference between the Pitsburgh Railways Company and the employés following the recent street car strike.

Settlement of the Ashford dispute dispels the last cloud of the two days' strike on June 27 and 28.

WASHINGTON.

TARIFF IS OUR WAY.

California Products Are Safe.

Conference Will Not Change Rates on Lemons, Oil or Lumber.

Corporation Tax Likely to Be Reduced to One Per Cent.

House, After Much Bluster, Expected to Give in to Aldrich.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] According to well-informed members of Congress, one week or ten days will suffice for the Conference Committee to reach an agreement on the tariff bill, and the programme is to follow the lines of the Senate bill as far as can be done without provoking a veto. The probability, one might almost say certainty, is that nothing vitally affecting California will be disturbed. The President wants free oil, lumber at $1, hides at 5 per cent., with a corresponding reduction on all leather goods, iron ore free, and the corporation tax put at 1 per cent., instead of 2. It is safe to assume that the President's wishes in these respects will be granted.

The composition of the Conference Committee practically insures the victory of Aldrich, modified as indicated. With all its bluster of yesterday, the House will have to give in. Sereno Payne, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, demanded that the conferees from his committee should be chosen according to their seniority, but Speaker Cannon refused to accede to his demand. Cannon, of course, was opposed to low tariff men like McCall, but he could not ignore the Massachusetts man, so he added Dalzell, Fordney and Calderhead, then put on Boutell as his own personal representative.

CALIFORNIA CARED FOR.

Payne and McCall will fight for the House bill. The other four will be against them. Needham might have been a conferee, but as he believed he ought to stand for the bill he helped to make, the Speaker feared to put him on the committee. "Besides," said the Speaker, "whichever way it goes, California is well taken care of."

Instead of 847 amendments, it was found today when the conferees met that only some 300 vital changes in the House tariff bill had been made. More than 200 of the amendments consisted in changing the phrase "as provided by sections 1 and 2 of this act, to read "as provided by this section." This was necessary because the Senate consolidated the dutiable and free lists and made the maximum and minimum provision the second section of the bill. Nearly 300 other amendments relate to phraseology, over which there will be no dispute, and the adjustment of the differences between House and Senate does not seem so serious a task.

CONFEREES MEET.

Two sessions of the conferees were held today. The first began at 10 a.m. and continued until 1:05 p.m. A recess was taken until 2:30 o'clock when the afternoon session began. It was agreed that these hours should continue through the conference.

The afternoon session lasted until nearly 6 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken until 10 a.m. Monday.

All of the conferees were present today, except Senator Cullom, who is not in the city.

Amendments were considered today in their numerical order. When the session closed for the day the conferees had passed through the chemical and earthenware schedules, and more than half-way through the metal schedules. All of the amendments in the schedules, however, were not settled.

The corporation-tax amendment has not been considered by the conferees in any way. Nevertheless, it was predicted in Congressional circles tonight that the proposed tax on the net earnings of corporations would be reduced in conference from 2 to 1 per cent.

It was also reported that the corporation tax and provision might be eliminated, and the House inheritance tax provision restored to the bill, but no confirmation of this story could be had, nor could its origin be traced.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE.

What was believed to be a conference on the corporation tax feature of the tariff bill was held at the White House tonight between President Taft and Atty.-Gen. Wickersham, and at its conclusion the President, Mr. Wickersham, Capt. Butt, the President's aide, and a fourth person, took an automobile ride.

GREAT NOVEL DUE.

CHICAGO, July 10.—The great American novel is due, Prof. James W. Linn, himself an author, said yesterday, speaking at the University of Chicago, on "Have All the Good Novels Been Written?"

"This is the psychological year," he said, "exactly one century from the appearance of that flood of great novels from Scott, Elliott and others.

"The great American novel will come from some obscure author. It will be either romantic, or on some great moral problem."

THINKS TASK IS HOPELESS.

Head of Anti-Dueling Society Near Despair.

"Combat" of Minister and Senator a Blow.

Paris Amused and Shocked by the Affair.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "It is hopeless to try to create a sentiment against dueling when our Minister of Finance, accompanied by the Military Governor of Paris, and a member of the Chamber of Deputies as seconds, meets a Senator, who is also seconded on the field of honor," indignantly said the president of the anti-dueling league today. "This affair has undone all we have accomplished since we came into existence several years ago."

Yesterday's combat, if such it can be called, between M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, and Charles Bos, a Senator, caused a flutter in the social world. It was, in fact, the last matinée of the social season, and Paris was both amused and shocked by the affair. Automobiles, closed against wind and weather, bore fair women out to Vincennes, and cavaliers on horseback cantered out to the pretty park, where men of the first prominence in public affairs were to engage in a duel.

That the encounter was to take place had leaked out despite the supposed efforts to keep it secret. The principals, accompanied by their seconds and doctors, first appeared in Parliament for a few minutes, and then rode in automobiles out to Vincennes, followed by many newspaper men.

They saluted a number of friends as they passed on toward the field of honor. Here far from the vulgar crowd hanging on the outskirts, but before a select gathering, the seconds marked off the ground, placed the combatants at their respective posts and gave the order to fire.

When the smoke cleared away it was found that the anticipated bloody "encounter" had resulted in the bullets exchanged passing harmlessly into the distance. Nevertheless honor was satisfied, and the fact that Senator Bos struck the Minister of Finance on the floor of the Senate will now be forgotten.

CHINESE CLAIM HOLDS.

Japan Concedes Claim of Absolute Sovereignty Over Chien Tao and Title to Pratas.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Japan now concedes China's absolute sovereignty over Chien Tao and the ownership of Pratas.

The Chien Tao settlement will be on the basis of complete accession to China's demands. Regarding the status of Korean residents in the disputed district, the agreement will provide that each shall declare his nationality preference; those desiring to become Chinese subjects will be permitted to naturalise and those choosing to retain their Korean citizenship will be registered as foreigners. China is to exercise full administration and Korean subjects are to enjoy the usual consular protection.

Regarding Pratas, Japan disavows Nishizawa's pretentious claim of discovery.

FEARS RACE SUICIDE.

Germany Alarmed Over Situation in Berlin Where the Birth Rate Is Falling Rapidly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] German statisticians point in alarm to the decreasing birth rate, most plainly observed in Berlin, and a pronunciamento against "race suicide," such as ex-president Roosevelt hurled at the American people, is expected from Emperor William.

As far as Berlin is concerned, there can be no doubt that the situation is serious. Every year shows a decreasing birth rate. In 1908 the total fell to 51,036, from 53,899 the previous year. In 1898 about twenty-nine children were born for every thousand of population, whereas in 1908 the rate had decreased to twenty-four. In 1878 the birth rate was over forty-four to the thousand. Another startling fact just brought to light is that in 1876 every fourth married woman bore a child; in 1908 every ninth.

In ten years the illegitimate births have increased out of all proportion to the natural increase of population.

COSSACKS WAIT FOES.

Russians in Persia Not Strong Enough to Advance, But Will Guard Life of Shah.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, July 10.—The Russian expedition from Baku which landed at Enzeli, a Persian seaport on the Caspian, yesterday, is made up of 1000 Russian and 800 Cossack cavalry with eight field and eight machine guns. Despite the attitude maintained by the Russians, the natives are demonstrating their unfriendliness.

The unopposed advance of Siphidar, the leader of the revolutionists, and Sardarasad, the chief of the Bakhtiari tribesmen toward Teheran, is taken here to mean that Gen. Liakhoff, the Governor of Teheran, considers his force inadequate to engage in a general battle, and that his Cossack brigade merely will guard the life of the Shah.

Persons well informed here, regard the entrance of the revolutionists into Teheran as certain. The deposition of the Shah, which several times, has been mooted, now will cause no surprise.

IMPERIAL VISIT OVER.

Solemn Field Mass Closes the Ceremonies on the Famous Battlefield of Poltava.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

POLTAVGA (Russia) July 10.—The imperial visit to Poltava in connection with the celebration of the bi-centennial of the famous battle, ended today, and Emperor Nicholas departed late this afternoon for Kiev.

The programme included a field mass, celebrated on the battlefield by Archbishop John of Poltava, in the presence of the Emperor and troops, and the trooping of several hundred battle flags of all the famous regiments of the army. They were massed around the field altar, and after mass were carried before the Emperor.

The Emperor made an impromptu visit to the quarters of the peasant deputations last night. For two hours he devoted himself to informal conversation with the peasants. The Emperor gave $2500 to the poor of Poltava.

GRAND DUKE IN DANCER'S TRAIN.

IS SAID TO BE MADLY IN LOVE WITH DE MERODE.

Persistent Rumor Has It That Member of Russia's Royal Family Whose Name Is Guarded Carefully, Is the Latest Victim to the Beauty of Paris Actress.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Russian royal Grand Duke, whose name is guarded by friends of both, is said to be madly in love with Cleo de Merode, famous beauty and dancer. He has followed her through Europe and refuses to be discouraged, though the beauty has declared she has no time for admirers and prefers her art. It was her grace that first attracted him.

It is said the persistent worshiper was present incog. at the exclusive fete given last month by Frederick Townsend Martin of New York at Pre Catalan, where the dancer displayed her newest terpsichorean achievements. In a short, rose-colored skirt, she charmingly danced "le premier pas." Her second dance, invented for this fete, was quite the prettiest thing that Paris has seen. Dressed in a vague Greek drapery, the slim figure against the background of verdure looked like a nymph in a green brake.

The dance was over before the German Ambassador and Princess Radolin arrived, for they came late; but the Duc de Morny intercepted the little dancer just as she was entering her automobile, and persuaded her to repeat her performance.

QUAKES IN FRANCE.

Inhabitants of Aix District Panic-stricken and Camp in the Open.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MARSEILLES, July 10.—Earth shocks occurred last night throughout the same region which suffered seismic disturbances in June. The shocks lasted four or five seconds and were in a direction from east to west.

The inhabitants of Rogues, Lamboso and St. Cannat and other communes in the Aix district were panic stricken and rushed from their dwellings. They are now camping in the open.

At Toulon there was a slight earthshock this evening, but no damage was done.

FOREIGN BRIEFS.

Charles Moore in Berlin.

BERLIN, July 10.—Charles C. Moore, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, who arrived here yesterday with the object of inviting the German government to participate in the naval review off San Francisco next October, was received at the German Foreign Office today by Baron von dem Bussche-Hagdenhausen, who assured Mr. Moore that the invitation would be given careful and sympathetic attention by the German government.

Air Navigators Exhibit.

FRANKFORT (Germany) July 10.—The International Air Navigation Exposition, which probably is the most complete association of everything pertaining to aëronautics ever seen, opened here today and will continue for 100 days. The Wright aëropiane will be shown, but arrangements for flights with this machine have not yet been made.

Higher Tax on Beer.

BERLIN, July 10.—The Reichstag finished the finance reform legislation this evening. So many substitutions have been made since the measures were first introduced that the completed legislation resembled but little the government's original proposals. The scheme finally adopted consists of higher taxes on beer, tobacco and brandy; higher duties on coffee, effervescent wines, cordials and tea. The house also adopted a stamp tax on check stubs and a tax on transfer of real estate.

Rush Troops to Front.

MADRID, July 10.—The first brigade of caseadors, composed of six battalions of infantry, three batteries of artillery and squadron of cavalry, as well as the cruiser Numacia, and the transport Admiral Lobo, have been ordered to Melillia, Morocco, where yesterday four Spanish workingmen were killed by natives, to reinforce the Spanish troops there. No further fighting was reported today.

HORSES AND MEN IN WRECK.

Two Men Killed, Two Injured and Thirteen Blooded Animals Badly Bruised.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—Two men were killed, two seriously injured and thirteen blooded trotting and pacing horses owned by W. B. Taylor and on their way to the Illinois valley circuit meet at Aurora, Ill., were bruised and "fouled" in a freight wreck on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad near Plano, Ill., this morning.

The killed were: Daniel Stevens, horse owner and trainer, and Ray Ensign, trainer.

The injured: Frank English, trainer, and a negro follower of horses who is known as "Midnight" to horsemen in all parts of the country.

None of the horses will be fit to race for a month. One of those injured is Alice Earley, a famous trotter.

OBITUARY.

Harry J. Edwards.

SAN JOSE, July 10.—Harry J. Edwards of the United Gas and Electric Company, died this morning, after an extended illness from Bright's disease. Mr. Edwards for many years was the leading spirit in gas and electric concerns in this city, and until within the past few years was prominent in local politics. He leaves a wife, daughter and son.

William Lofland.

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Lofland, former private secretary for Jefferson Davis, is dead at his home in Auburn, where he had resided for nineteen years. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., 58 years ago. He leaves a wife, five sons and one daughter in Auburn, besides other relatives in the State. For many years he was engaged in the insurance business in Dallas and Galveston, Tex., and after the Civil War occupied the position of private secretary under Jefferson Davis, with whom he was on close terms of intimacy.

"TAFT'S WAY."

LAUD POLICY OF PRESIDENT.

Will Do Much in Orient, Says British Press.

His Administration Compared With Roosevelt's.

Europe Believes He Will Accomplish More.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the Washington government under Mr. Taft's direction is bound to play an increasingly strong role in the Far East, is a deduction made by influential journals from the protest lodged in Peking against the Russo-Chinese treaty, affecting questions along the Russian section of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

As the protest is lodged just at the moment when the terms under which the Americans are to participate in the Hankow-Sze-Chuen Railroad loan are being thrashed out at a meeting of banks here, the situation looks doubly impressive to John Bull.

"Mr. Taft's handling of the foreign affairs," says one commentator, "displays nothing of the flamboyance of his predecessor's methods. But to adopt an Americanism, he "gets there" quite as certainly as ever Mr. Roosevelt did, and in some particulars with less offense.

"We are inclined to think that the results of Mr. Taft's policy in Asia will be more tangible, and less likely to leave an entail of bitterness than Mr. Roosevelt's. The latter's tactics in foreign relations were extremely brilliant, but as happened with him in domestic concerns, the crop of foes was sometimes large. His genius was not conciliatory.

"Mr. Taft will worm his way through the East very much in the eastern fashion. He has the British gift for dealing with oriental people. This quality leads us to expect that he will be able to conclude a new treaty with Japan in 1911."

Intimations that Baron Takahira will be recalled because the Japanese military party thinks him too complaisant are regarded here as exclusively for home consumption in Japan. It is asserted that Takahira and Taft are a "combination which Count Katsura cannot improve for his purpose."

POETIC JUSTICE.

CAB DRIVER IS HER NEMESIS.

HAS WEALTHY WOMAN ARRESTED FOR "BEATING" HIM.

In Police Court She Sobbingly Confesses to Having Run Away from Husband, an Oakland Man, to Meet Former Sweetheart and "Do the Tenderloin."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A handsomely-gowned and heavily-jeweled woman of about 30 years, of decided beauty, who said she is the wife of a wealthy ranch owner, now at the Marlborough Hotel, in Asbury Park, was fined $10 by Magistrate O'Connor today for "beating" a taxicab fare. She had told the magistrate that she ran away from her husband and came to New York to meet a former sweetheart, also married, and "do" the Tenderloin district.

The woman was arrested early this morning. John Dunn, chauffeur of a taxicab, made the complaint against her, alleging that he chased her for more than an hour, after she jumped from his taxicab and sought to get away.

In the Police Court line-up she was in a pitiable state. Her eyes were red from weeping, and she faced the magistrate with quivering lips.

After the chauffeur had told his story, the woman almost fell on her knees in begging the magistrate to be lenient. She admitted that she was a married woman, giving her name as Mrs. Virginia Elsey. Her husband, Herman, she said, is a wealthy ranch owner near Oakland, Cal., and is now at the hotel in Asbury Park. They were on their honeymoon.

She told the magistrate she had imbibed too much wine, ran away from her husband to come to New York and meet an old friend. This friend was the man who joined her in the taxicab, she said, and was a former sweetheart.

"This disgrace will break up our home," she said. "Please, judge, let me go. Here, I have this diamond, worth several hundred dollars. I will give that to the chauffeur if he will only withdraw this charge."

Magistrate O'Connor was obdurate, and he rebuked the woman sternly, and fined her $10. She sent out a diamond and pawned it, paid the fine and left the court, sobbing.

CONDITION CRITICAL.

Woman Who Laid Out the First Tract in Los Angeles Reported at Death's Door.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson is lying critically ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Young, at Tenth and Hoover streets. It was reported last night that she was at death's door.

She laid out the first tract in Los Angeles, the one bounded by Ninth, Tenth, Hill and Olive streets.

TAFT FAMILY OUTING.

BEVERLY (Mass.) July 10.—The entire Taft family except the President, got together for an outing today. They enjoyed an automobile trip along the north shore as far as Magnolia. Mrs. Taft showed evidence of marked improvement in health.

SUICIDE SAYS CORONER'S JURY

Finds Mrs. de la Montanya Shot Herself.

Censures Owner of Pistol for Carelessness.

Witnesses of Tragedy Tell of Woman's Death.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—That Mrs. Lorena de la Montanya died from a wound inflicted by herself, with suicidal intent, and that R. G. Hanford, with whose pistol she fired the shots, was guilty of carelessness in leaving the weapon where she could secure it and should be censured, was the substance of the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury today, after all the witnesses of the tragedy had been questioned before them.

The first witness was Mrs. Margaret Patton, who, with R. G. Hanford, and Charles C. Whittemore, dined with Mrs. De la Montanya, on the evening of the tragedy. She testified that she heard the shot, but did not see it fired, and saw her friend sink to the floor.

She was unaware that Mrs. De la Montanya had a pistol, and at once asked where she got the weapon. Mr. Hanford answered that it was his. Mrs. Patton was positive in her assertion that there was no motive for suicide. She said Mrs. De la Montanya had expressed pleasure at having secured a final decree of divorce, and was planning a trip to Europe, intending to start almost immediately. Celia Badie, Mrs. de la Montanya's maid, confirmed the statemeints of Mrs. Patton.

R. G. Hanford then retold his story of the incidents connected with the affair, stating that when he took his pistol out of his pocket because it interfered with his movements, he laid it down, at the same time cautioning Mrs De la Montanya not to touch it. The first intimation that she had not heeded him came when he heard the shot which ended her life.

PAID FOR HER FACE.

WOMAN'S CLAIM GRANTED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—The Appellate Court today upheld the verdict of a jury in the Superior Court of Alameda county, which awarded Rosie James $15,000 damages from the Oakland Traction Company, for the loss of half of her face in a street-car accident at Oakland in 1900.

The same court refused to restrain Superior Judge A. J. Buckles of Solano county from punishing Charles Lange for contempt of court for ignoring the injunction preventing him from operating a line of ferries from Vallejo to the Mare Island navy yard which the Vallejo Ferry Company claimed was an infringement of their franchise.

The decision of the Monterey Superior Court in the case of the Ford and Sanborn Company against the Brazian Growers' Company was affirmed. Charles B. Brazian, G. T. Duncan and W. F. Duncan, where the plaintiff was awarded $2087.34. The Brazian company appealed, seeking to throw the burden of the judgment on the two Duncans, which the higher court refused to do.

F. A. Elliot lost his appeal from the judgment of the San Francisco courts, which ruled in favor of Jeannette W. Dunn, as administratrix of the estate of Charlotte K. Clark, in the dispute over the rights of the administrators of the estate of Ada M. Hudson and her husband, George Hudson.

The Superior Court at San Francisco was also affirmed in the judgment favoring J. M. Ruth in the suit against his sister, Mrs. Lotta Ruth Krone, for the recovery of a $2000 note, executed by Mrs. Krone in favor of her brother.

OFF FOR ALASKA.

HENEY ON HIS VACATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 10.—Francis J. Heney of San Francisco left for Cordova, Alaska, today on the steamer Ohio with his friend, M. J. Heney, the Copper River Railroad builder.

Before leaving, the attorney said that he would be back in Seattle in ten days and that he would be in San Francisco in time to participate in the Calhoun trial. On the Ohio also were Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Chief of Staff, U.S.A., and Mrs. Bell.

Gen. Bell and his party will disembark at Port Graham then return to [illegible], go into the interior and make a journey down the Yukon.

ST. LOUIS FOR CONVENTION.

Missouri City Seems to Lead in Epworth Leaguers' Choice for Next Session.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—As there were no meetings of the International Convention of the Epworth League of the United States and Canada today, the Leaguers took the day for pleasure and recreation. Many participated in the Kansas day celebration, at which Bishop William A. Quayle, president of the league, was one of the speakers.

At a special meeting of the International Committee this afternoon, applications were received from various cities that desire to entertain the next international convention, which will be held in June, 1913. Applications were received from Minneapolis, Washington, D. C.; Boston, Norfolk, Va., and St. Louis.

Indications are that St. Louis will be selected.

TO GROW BEETS.

WILL TRY NEW LAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Los Angeles syndicate has bonded more than ten thousand acres of land around Redding which it will test, to see if beets can be grown there successfully. Efforts have been made by the Redding Chamber of Commerce for some time to obtain a beet sugar factory and it now looks as though they would be successful. George Brauer, chemist for the Los Angeles company, will go to Redding next week to take charge of the work. If the experiments justify expectations a plant of the type of the one now at Oxnard will be erected. According to statements of those interested the amount paid out yearly by the plant for [illegible] will be $125,000.

KICKS OUT POLICE BOARD.

Former Patrolman Now Mayor of Lowell, Dismisses Men He Once Served Under.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOWELL (Mass.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor Brown today removed from office three members of the Board of Police, Frank K. Stearns, Charles H. Hanson and Thomas P. Bolger. The charges against the three on which the Mayor gave a hearing some time ago, were neglect of duty, malfeasance in office and incapacity. The three men say they will petition the Superior Court for a review of the evidence.

Following the shake-up the Mayor announced the new board as follows: Simon B. Harris, chairman; Judge Charles S. Lilley and Winfred C. MacBrayne.

Mayor Brown was last year a patrolman under the same board which today he has removed from office and his campaign for election, conducted by speeches on street corners and other spectacular means, was fought largely on the issue of police government.

WILL EXPLAINS SUICIDE.

COULDN'T SLEEP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The will of Clarence V. Woodsum, the Sacramento man who committed suicide a month ago in San José by taking poison, was filed for probate in the Superior Court here today. Woodsum's estate is worth about $18,000. In the document Woodsum stated the reason for taking his life was because of ill-health. He had been suffering from asthma and could not sleep at night. He bequeathed all of his estate to his sixteen-year-old sister, Hazel, of this city. The estate consists of a United States bond worth $8000, and mortgages on real estate worth $10,000.

FOR GOOD ROADS.

SUTTER COUNTY MOVE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YUBA CITY, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A movement is on foot among the residents of Sutter county in favor of a bond issue of about $100,000 for roads. Supervisor E. J. White is one of the leaders in the campaign for better highways.

He suggests three main highways—one from Yuba City to Live Oak, one from Yuba City to Meridian, and the third from Yuba City to Nicolaus. He believes the road could be constructed at an average cost of $1500 per mile. It would add about 10 cents to the tax levy to raise sufficient money to pay the interest on the bonds. The county is assessed for about $8,000,000.

M'CLOUD RIOTERS PAY FINES.

ASSAULT CHARGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YREKA, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank Levoti, Joe Bianchi, B. Sabiano, P. Ceaglio and T. Cuono, the five Italians who were arrested at the time of the strike at the McCloud Lumber Company's mills, were arraigned here today. The original charge against the men was inciting a riot, a felony offense, but this was reduced to simple assault, a misdemeanor, at the request of the attorney representing the men. They then pleaded guilty to the charge and were find as follows: Levoti and Bianchi, $55 each; Sabiano and Ceaglio, $50 each; Cuono, $25. The fines weer paid and the men, who have been in jail since May 7, were released.

NEW JOB FOR ASSESSOR.

ESPEE TAX ATTORNEY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUBURN, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George E. Mitchell, for twelve years County Assessor of this place, and president of the County Assessors' Association of California, has been offered the position of assistant tax attorney for the Southern Pacific Company. Mitchell will probably accept the position, which pays a handsome salary. If he does, he will assume his new duties in San Francisco on September 1.

Mitchell is exceedingly popular in this county and is recognized as a competent official. Although a Democrat, he has been elected for three terms in a Republican county.

AGAINST TIME CARDS.

PLACER ORDINANCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUBURN, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the purpose of putting a stop to the issuance of non-negotiable paper by contracting firms to their employés the Placer Board of Supervisors has unanimously passed a stringent ordinance. Its object is to put a stop to the pay-check system in use by some contractors, by which employés either have to wait a long time for their money or cash their pay checks at a discount.

It prohibits any person, firm or corporation from paying for wages any check that is not negotiable for its full face value. The ordinance makes a violation of its provisions a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $500 for each offense.

REALIZED.

ESPEE'S PLANS NOW IN SHAPE.

Long-talked of Scheme Takes Concrete Form.

To Electrify Mountain Division at Last.

Asks Permission to Build Power Plants.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEVADA CITY, July 10.—The electrization of the mountain division of the Southern Pacific Railroad between Truckee and Auburn, which has been talked of for many years, took definite shape today, when C. S. Curtis of the engineering department filed applications with Forest Supervisor Bigelow for permits to build power plants on lands within the government forest reserve in Sierra county.

Water will be carried by flumes and canals from North Yuba River at a point below Sierra City, the intake of the Sierra county system, to the site of the main power-house, near Downieville.

Much of the preliminary work has been done. Permits for the construction of power plants along the Rubicon River behind Lake Tahoe, have been obtained from the government in the name of the Rubicon Water and Power Company, said to be subsidiary to the Southern Pacific. A force of men has been at work for some time on this construction work.

The first power plant will be located at Hale's Camp, in Northern Eldorado county, and the second on the banks of the Rubicon River. With the power system completed, the company will displace steam motive power on its mountain division with electricity. The change will necessitate an outlay of many millions of dollars.

Although little publicity has been given the plans, an important part of which is the shortening of the distances and lessening grades through the building of the cut-off between Auburn and Truckee. Mr. Curtis states that the power plants will be ready for operation by the time this line is finished, and that electric motor cars will be used over it.

It is stated that the company will have use for all the electric power its gigantic plants will furnish. It is also reported that the company hopes to secure control of the independent power companies whose lines pass through the mountains, as it will need more power than its own plants can supply when the whole system is electrized.

The first order given by the Southern Pacific Company for electrical appliances for the project has been placed, it is stated, and amounted to $13,000,000, the largest individual purchase of a similar nature ever made in this country.

While the present project only contemplates the electrization of the portion of the road across the Sierra Nevada Mountains, it is said that the company is already considering the introduction of the same system all over its mountain lines in the northern and southern portion of the State.

POLICE CHIEF ACCUSED.

BY BERKELEY STUDENT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERKELEY, July 10.—Harry Kleinschmidt, the university student who was held in jail several weeks last year on suspicion of having murdered Frank Bellows, a fellow-student, today appeared before the City Council and presented a sworn deposition to the board in which he charged Chief of Police Vollmer with malfeasance in office.

The document is voluminous and covers a series of incidents alleged to have occurred in the police department during several years.

Chief Vollmer denied the charges and stated that he courted the fullest investigation.

CAN'T FIND MORRELL.

IN LAWYER'S OFFICE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 11.—John Bosson, who caused the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morrell on a charge of securing $11,000 from him on a mining fraud, reported at Gov. Gillett's office today, that the man and woman for whom extradition papers for their return to Pennsylvania were granted last Wednesday have disappeared. He said that W. M. Beggs of San José, who was on the Morrells' bond for $10,000 had secured release as a bondsman on a misunderstanding between the District Attorney of Sierra county and the Justice of the Peace of Forrest, in the same county. When the bondsman was released from the responsibility of producing the couple, the Morrells dropped out of sight; they have not been seen since last Thursday night.

MORRELL READY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, July 10.—Morrell and his wife were found in the office of Attorney W. M. Beggs this afternoon, and stated that they have been in San José ever since Weiland was discharged, awaiting the arrival of any officer authorized to extradite. Beggs states that the District Attorney of this county held that the justice's jurisdiction ceased with the issuance of the Governor's warrant. Proceedings at Forest City were therefore dismissed and the bonds exonerated. Attorney McCornish says he told Weiland when discharged that the Morrells would be ready whenever he wanted them and he could get them without trouble.

GOES TO CHINESE POST.

ENGINEERING PROFESSOR.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERKELEY, July 10.—John Leslie Dobbins, a graduate of the University of California, sailed yesterday on the steamer Asia for Tientsin, China, where he has been appointed to the professorship of civil engineering in the Pei Yang Imperial University.

Dobbins resigned a position as chief engineer for the Consolidated Copper Company at Ely, Nev. He expects to remain several years.

WESTON WARMS UP.

Aged Walker Says He's a Little Tuckered, But Plods Along.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—Edward Payson Weston, the pedestrian, was slightly overcome by heat and fatigue today at Clipper Gap, seven miles east of Auburn. Newspaper men, who went out in search of the veteran, came upon him lying under a tree by the roadside.

"I'm kind of tuckered," he confessed.

Ice and cooling drinks were brought out from Auburn on a railroad velocipede. Weston gravely rolled the ice in several cabbage leaves and placed it in his hat, one of the kind used by Chinese vegetable peddlers. Thus reinforced, the old man proceeded into Auburn and passed through without stopping.

Weston will reach Roseville, Placer county, at midnight tonight, and remain there until 12:05 Monday morning. He expects to make Sacramento by 6 a.m. Monday, and will probably pass through in an effort to cover seventy-eight miles that day. He now figures on reaching San Francisco Wednesday morning.

LET DOWN BARS.

CANADA ADMITS CHINESE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) July 10.—Acting upon the request of the Chinese of Vancouver, the Dominion government, by an order of the Council approved in May, 1909, has removed many of the restrictions imposed on Chinese immigration, according to advices received today from Ottawa.

The scope of the exempt class, that is, those Chinese who are not called upon to pay the head tax of $500, has been greatly widened. Immediately the order was approved, its terms were forwarded to all Canadian immigration and customs authorities, but so quietly that the public until today never received intimation of the change in the regulations. The new order so widens the scope of the Chinese immigration act of 1906 with amendments of 1908, in regard to the privileged class of Chinese that it practically leaves only the Chinese laborers to pay the tax, with the pauper, the insane and the infectious still prohibited.

The new order puts even students of "manners and customs" in the student and merchant classes exempted from the payment of head tax.

NAMES ANGELENO.

BANK EXAMINER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Alden Anderson, State Superintendent of Banks, has completed his list of appointees as follows:

Chief deputy, Charles Ewing, Los Angeles; bank examiners, B. F. Wright, Berkeley; W. C. Watson, San Francisco; H. E. Scherer, Los Angeles, and S. P. Young, San Francisco.

W. S. Vawter, Santa Monica, will be appointed special deputy in charge of the Los Angeles branch of the Kimmon Bank, which closed last year.

YOSEMITE TOTAL LOSS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—The famous old side-wheel steamer Yosemite, which went on the rocks near the Puget Sound navy yard last night, and has a great hole in her hull, has been given up as lost.

A number of barges are alongside, trying to float the steamer, in the hope of beaching her, but the chances are against success. The Yosemite is about 55 years old, and her oak timbers are as sound as ever.

She began her career as a passenger boat on the Hudson River. In 1865 her engines were taken out, masts were put in, and she sailed around Cape Horn to San Francisco. There she was reconverted into a steamer, and for many years she plied on the Sacramento River.

Lately, the Yosemite has been in the excursion business on the Sound, and when she met her fate she was as prosperous as in her Hudson and Sacramento days. The steamer was 267 feet long, registered 1319 tons gross, was owned by C. D. Hillman of this city, and valued at $75,000.

SURPRISE WEDDING.

Col. T. V. Eddy of Goldfield and Miss Marie Seahl of San Francisco Married.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. T. V. Eddy, ex-Assistant District Attorney and a prominent lawyer of Goldfield, and Miss Marie Seahl of San Francisco were married in the parlor of the Hotel Golden this morning. Few, if any, of the friends of the happy couple had any idea that the wedding was to take place.

At 9 o'clock Col. Eddy, accompanied by Messrs. Bridges and Winkler, entered the parlor, where Miss Seahl, attended by Mrs. Hunt, was waiting. They were made man and wife by the Rev. Hauterman, who came from Goldfield to perform the ceremony.

Miss Seahl is the sister-in-law of State Senator Coughlan of San Francisco, while the groom is one of the best-known practitioners in the southern part of the State. A wedding breakfast was served immediately after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Eddy will journey to Lake Tahoe, after which they will return to Goldfield.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Train Ends Long Life.

PLEASANTON, July 11.—Allan McDougall, 70 years of age, was killed by a railroad train today while crossing the track.

Honored by Governor.

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—The requisition of the New Jersey officials, for John G. Carter now at San Francisco, was honored today by Gov. Gillett. Carter is wanted at Trenton, N. J., for embezzling $2150 from his brother-in-law on a real estate transaction.

Wilson Gets Reprieve.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Attorneys for John W. Wilson, convicted of the murder of Harry Roas by sending poison through the mail in the guise of medicine, secured a stay of sentence today by moving for a new trial on the ground that they had additional evidence to present tending to show the innocence of the defendant. Judge Dunne heard arguments on the motion and took it under advisement.

Calvin Improving.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—The condition of E. E. Calvin, vice-president and general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, is stated by Dr. F. K. Ainsworth, chief surgeon of the company, to be satisfactory, although the surgeon refuses to say that all danger is passed.

No Room for 'Em.

PORTLAND (Or.) July 10.—More than 100 people wanting to go to San Francisco on the steamer State of California which sailed this morning had to be turned away for lack of accommodations.

Fear Indian Troubles.

VICTORIA (B. C.) July 10.—Rev. A. E. Green, inspector of Indian schools, who arrived here today, says the residents in the Skeena district regard the discontent of the 500 Indians in the villages as likely to cause trouble when navigation closes, and the majority are preparing to send their women and children out.

Solon Weds Book-keeper.

SAN JOSE, July 10.—John T. McGowan of Minneapolis, State Senator, politician and prominent real estate and insurance man of that city, married in St. Joseph's Church in this city this morning to Miss Mae E. Healy, who for three years past has been his book-keeper. The Rev. William Bennett officiated. The witnesses were the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Flannery, whom the bride has been visiting.

ESKIMO TO SEEK POLE.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Mene Wallace, the homesick Eskimo lad, sailed today for North Greenland to rejoin his own people. He issued a "farewell statement" today in which he declared that upon reaching his destination he would organize an expedition of natives and sail with them in search of the pole. He says he can succeed where white men have failed. He carried with him today scientific instruments which he hopes to use in his expedition.

HUNT RAILROAD MAN.

SALIDA, July 10.—As he has failed to return from his ranch near Coakdale, where he is supposed to have gone on business, Salida citizens have instituted a search for George Hammond, auditor for the Rio Grande here.

FAMOUS BRIDGE BURNS.

TROY, N. Y., July 10.—The famous old wooden covered bridge across the Hudson river between this city and Waterford was destroyed by fire.

PITH OF THE NEWS FROM ALL THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago sweltered as the thermometer continued to rise today. Excursion steamers did a big business carrying people away from the heat of the city. The parks were also well crowded. Police and health officials were kept busy attending victims of prostrations. The maximum temperature was 85 degs., with a minimum of 71. Middle West temperatures:

DIVORCE SUIT FOR "HANK."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Hank North" has another chapter to write in the autobiography which he intends some time to put on the booksellers' racks. This will be a companion volume to the great sociological study, "If Christ Came to Chicago," the material for which was compiled by its author, William T. Stead of London, with the aid of "Hank," whose real name is Henry G. Knauff. This is because Mrs. Knauff filed in chancery today a bill for divorce. Knauff, who runs a saloon at No. 209 Twenty-first street, has been known as "Hank North" throughout his career as a dispenser of intoxicants. In the World's Fair year, when Mr. Stead came to Chicago to make sociological investigations, "Hank" was the proprietor of a hotel in a district then notorious as the "Levee." Here came Stead athirst for information. In the guise of a hobo, he was conducted through the underworld by "Hank," who became one of his closest friends. The result of Stead's study of Chicago conditions was the book "If Christ Came to Chicago."

ARCTIC HONEYMOON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Announcement was made today by Mrs. E. H. MacClanahan of Lake Forest of the engagement of her daughter, Anna, to Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell of Labrador, recalling to many Chicagoans the visit of the famous missionary-physician to Chicago about a year ago, seeking funds to finance the monumental work he is carrying on among the fishermen of the Far North. Because of her interest in this work her fiancé is carrying on, it is presumed that after her marriage she will accompany Dr. Grenfell to his northern home and remain there at least during the summer months. Dr. Grenfell has an international reputation, having been decorated by King Edward VII as a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, being the first individual ever to receive such honors as the reward for missionary work. It was in support of Dr. Grenfell that the Grenfell Association of America, of which Henry Van Dyke is a prominent member, was formed.

LA FOLLETTE MUST FIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The indications now seem to point to another political duel between Senator La Follette and W. D. Connor, commonly known as "Silent" William. Three years ago Connor beat La Follette, when, as State chairman, he picked up Davidson for Governor. La Follette had pinned his faith to Lenroot, whom he has since helped into success. Now Mr. Connor is planning, it is said, to come out for the United States Senatorial nomination. Senator La Follette is fully aware of what is going on in Wisconsin. He is satisfied that the fight made upon him in this State has far deeper significance, and is only part of the national fight against him and the principles which he says he represents. As soon as Congress adjourns, La Follette will be back at Madison, and barring some speeches at county fairs and a few Chautauqua lectures, he will remain at home, where he will meet his friends from every part of the State as occasion demands.

WOMEN STORM COURT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AURORA (Ill.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A thousand women fought for entrance to the Council chamber in the Aurora City Hall tonight to get a glimpse of Mrs. Austin Cork, who was to have been arraigned on a charge of cruelly whipping two little step-daughters. Prized "puffs," valued pompadours, back combs and parts of wearing apparel were lost and torn away in the near-fight, and then the hungrily curious were cheated as Mrs. Cork failed to appear. She was to have come into court, but the fright brought on by the struggling women unnerved her, and she went into a long swoon. Mrs. Cork is charged with tying Helen Cork, 9 years old, to a stake and leaving her there a day and a half without any attention, after lashing the child into insensibility. She is also charged with whipping Mildred Cork, 4 years old, with a buggy whip, after stripping the infant nude.

OBLIGING HUSBAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

APPLETON (Wis.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fourteen years ago last April 5, on a downtown street in Appleton, Miss Lucinda Bush of Chicago stepped up to Charles Wenzel of Kaukaukan, a stranger, and asked him to marry her. Wenzel then was 17 years old. He agreed to the proposition, and under the assumed name of John Russell, Wenzel became the husband of Miss Bush. Immediately after the wedding the couple separated and neither had seen the other since until today, when they met in the Circuit Court, where Judge John Goodland annulled the marriage. Miss Bush, when young, was turned from her home in Chicago. Not long afterward she was presented with $3500 worth of property, the donor, however, reclaiming the property soon, with the provision that it would be returned to Miss Bush as soon as she secured a husband. With a view to recovering the property, she set out in search of a spouse. Wenzel was the first man she met. Today her maiden name was restored.

BUSCH HONORED IN BERLIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While celebrating his seventieth birthday anniversary today at Karlsbad, Germany, Adolphus Busch, the millionaire brewer of St. Louis, was notified that His Royal Highness, the Grand Duke of Hesse, had honored Mr. Busch with the title of privy counselor of commerce. A cablegram to officials of the Anheuser-Busch Brewery conveyed the information. August A. Busch, his eldest son, and the brewery's manager, sails from New York, January 24, to join his invalid father.

"We agreed, when we started," said a prominent member of the party last night, "that we might possibly play poker, but we wouldn't play politics during this trip; and we haven't seen any reason, yet, to change our minds. The plan seems to work to our entire satisfaction, and we shall undoubtedly continue it during the trip, and possibly into the future of the order of the State."

When the Grand Lodge is over the Texans will proceed to Seattle in their special train.

On the way to Los Angeles a Texas Elks' Reunion Club was formed, with a view to arranging for and conducting future excursions of the same kind.

TO KEEP OPEN HOUSE.

OAKLAND LODGE'S PLANS.

Oakland Lodge No. 171, represented by its Entertainment Committee, Col. Theodore Gier, chairman; Capt. E. M. Freeman, the port commissioner of Oakland, who is affectionately called "Dad" or "Pop," by every Elk who knows him, and J. Harrison Clay, has opened its headquarters at the Westminster, where the main body of the lodge, accompanied by delegations from twenty-one lodges in the northern district of the State, will arrive at 11 o'clock tonight. James M. Shanly of Oakland, the district deputy for California and Oregon; H. G. Bohnke of the Pacific Mutual, State Senator Price of Santa Rosa, and Harry A. Lane of Alameda county will be with the party.

Capt. Freeman, one of the biggest-hearted of the "Best People On Earth" was explaining the plans of the Oakland lodge last night. "Somehow," he said, "Oakland feels that it is responsible for the order throughout the northern end of the State. We appreciate the magnitude of the task undertaken by the brethren of Southern California, and we feel that we ought to do our full share of the very pleasant work of receiving the Elks from the East and other portions of the country.

"I do not think that anybody has as yet called attention to the fact that this is the first time that the B.P.O.E. has come farther west than Denver for a convention. Yes, sir, it is the first time that California has been chosen as the meeting State, and we think that every native son and every adopted son should do his full duty in showing the easterners, southerners and northerners just what western hospitality really means.

"There are twenty-one lodges in our district, and every one of them will do its best to help in entertaining. Of course," and he smiled proudly, "Oakland will do just a little better than anybody else. We will keep open house throughout the week and will try to outshine all the other California lodges. Associate Justice Melvin of the Supreme Court, you know, belongs to our lodge, and he will be down here for the convention with the rest of his boys."

BOOST.

HOLLAND OUT FOR HERRMANN.

GRAND EXALTED RULER FAVORS THE CINCINNATI MAN.

Holland Expresses His Choice for Successor and Ohio Candidate's Followers Are Jubilant—Sammis Supporters Not Surprised—Grand Lodge Politics Sizzling.

Grand Lodge politics took a lively turn last night, when it became known that Grand Exalted Ruler Holland, after maintaining silence as to his choice of his own successor, had made a public declaration of his preference for August ("Garry") Herrmann, Cincinnati's candidate.

As the contest for Exalted Ruler is the only real one of the convention, interest is intense as to its outcome. The Cincinnati Elks, about 5:30 o'clock last evening, paid a visit to the Grand Exalted Ruler's quarters, in their famous golf uniforms, and tendered him a salute. While the Catalina Band played in the lower lobby, the Elks of No. 5 drew themselves up in line and saluted the head of the order, a courtesy preliminary to a parade of the streets.

The Cincinnati Elks were headed by Herrmann and John Galvin, and the latter introduced Mr. Holland to the marching club.

"My administration is at an end," said Holland. "Nothing can be added to or taken from it, and it must be judged by what has been done. I have remained neutral in this contest up to this time. Now that I have finished I say to you that I hope that the mission on which you have traveled so far will be accomplished, and that when you return to Cincinnati you will carry back with you that for which you came—the highest honor in the gift of our order."

This was cheered wildly by the Cincinnati Elks, and also by the crowd which filled the hotel corridor, including a large number of California Grand Lodge members, who had gone with the visitors to hear the speech.

SAMMIS KNEW IT.

The news that Holland was for Herrmann's election was not a surprise at the Sammis headquarters, according to those in charge, for they said they had known for some time that he leaned toward the candidate of No. 5.

As a matter of fact, all the Past Grand Exalted Rulers here—Fanning, O'Brien and Galvin—are for Herrmann, and the bulk of the Grand Lodge officials are in his van. The support of Sammis in the Grand Lodge official family was conspicuously in the hands of Charles E. Pickett of Waterloo, Iowa, Past Grand Exalted Ruler, and now in Congress from an Iowa district, and Grand Trustee Arthur I. Holly of Hackensack, N. J., who visited Los Angeles with Holland last December. Neither Pickett nor Holly will be here. The former is detained by his work in Congress, and the latter by unavoidable business.

It had been arranged for Pickett, who is influential in Grand Lodge affairs, to place Sammis in nomination, but A. B. Dalton, the Sammis manager, said yesterday that this was no longer possible, and that the nominating speech will be made by another. This is expected today or tomorrow.

As the election is the first order of business in the Grand Lodge Tuesday, the campaign work began yesterday with vim, and will be kept up until the last minute. Both headquarters sent workers to meet the incoming trains, and recruit support among those who were not instructed by their lodges or were not already committed to a candidate. As new supporters arrived they were put in campaign harness and sent out among the unclassified members.

THE GRAND LODGE.

There is an impression that all Elks have votes for Exalted Ruler and other offices. This is erroneous. The membership of the Grand Lodge is composed of all Past Exalted Rulers of subordinate lodges, and they are members for life. As there are over 1300 lodges, this means that there are that number of new members in the Grand Lodge each year. There are now in excess of 10,000 members, but the proportion of representation at a Grand Lodge session has never been over 1300, which was the number at Philadelphia. At that meeting the total registration of members of the Grand Lodge was 1920, and this is the mark that Los Angeles must shoot at if it gains the record for attendance.

When the lodge meets Tuesday, all the officers will be elected. Their installation will be the last thing Friday, so that all the new officials will not fill their stations until the meeting in 1910. Should Herrmann or Sammis be elected Grand Exalted Ruler either would have nothing to do with the present meeting, but everything in the coming year and the next meeting.

Because of the actual attendance at the session, the campaign committees are working hard now for additions to their strength.

"The candidate who receives 650 votes will be elected without doubt," said Sammis's campaign manager.

"It is not likely that more than 1300 votes will be cast," said J. T. Fanning, one of Herrmann's chief aides, and a leader in Grand Lodge affairs for twenty years. "But you can never tell. There is expectancy that this session will break some records and I would not like to predict how many votes will be cast Tuesday."

MAY BEAT PHILADELPHIA.

S. G. Michelson of Phoenix, chairman of the Credentials Committee, says his office at the Alexandria will be opened at 9 o'clock this morning for registration and that an indication of the number on the floor may be disclosed during the day. His belief is that there will be between 1400 and 1500 votes cast, and he also feels that the Philadelphia registration total may be eclipsed.

At Sammis headquarters at the Alexandria yesterday the Campaign Committee was much encouraged by the success of its work. Chairman Dalton said the reports from California, where they had not expected much support, showed a large increase. And from elsewhere, too, he said, unexpected strength was gained.

Herrmann headquarters were lively all day and far into the night and the greatest confidence in an overwhelming victory for the Cincinnati candidate was shown. Nothing was more encouraging, in the many reports received, than the open declaration of Grand Exalted Ruler Holland in favor of Herrmann. The headquarters of both aspirants will watch vigilantly for the coming of the Texas delegation, which has a large vote, much of which is not committed.

LECTURING KNIGHT.

With the arrival of the hosts today and tomorrow another contest for office will take form. It will be between Henry Walter of Philadelphia and J. D. Jones of Scranton, for the office of Grand Lecturing Knight, now filled by Warren G. Sayre of Wabash, Ind. This fight will show a division in Pennsylvania, but is not expected to affect the vote of that State on Exalted Ruler.

Elections for the other offices will be practically without contest. The Grand Lodge follows no precedent of graduation and frequently selects almost its whole official family from the floor. It is the purpose of many members to present Warren Sayre for advancement from the station of Lecturing Knight to that of Leading Knight, and if he consents he will not have opposition, as it looks now.

Aspirants for the station of Loyal Knight have not appeared, but the name of Dr. Kelly of Hartford, Ct., may be presented.

There is only one vacancy in the Board of Trustees. The chairman, W. H. Haviland of Butte, is understood not to wish reëlection, and Perry Clay of Denver is an aspirant for the place.

For secretary, Fred C. Robinson of Dubuque, Iowa, and for Treasurer, Eddie Leach of New York, incumbents, have no opposition and will have none in the light of present knowledge. Nor have any names been announced for the officers of Tiler, Inner Guard and Esquire.

SACRAMENTO ELKS EN ROUTE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With natty uniforms of gray, set off by purple hose and scarfs, and armed with two hundred thousand rounds of souvenirs in various disguises, the Elks of this city left today at 11 o'clock in their special train for Los Angeles. Of such unexpected proportions is the migration that it makes history for Sacramento Lodge, No. 6. Fully 315 members of the herd are on the train, in addition to the Greer's State Band is aboard.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM

Doctor Was Firm and Was Right.

Many doctors forbid their patients to drink coffee, but the patients still drink it on the sly and thus spoil all the doctor's efforts and keep themselves sick.

Sometimes the doctor makes sure that the patient is not drinking coffee and there was a case of that kind in St. Paul, where a business man said:

"After a very severe illness last winter which almost caused my death, the doctor said Postum was the only thing that I could drink and he just made me quit coffee and drink Postum. My illness was caused by indigestion from the use of tea and coffee.

"The state of my stomach was so bad that it became terribly inflamed and finally resulted in a rupture. I had not drunk Postum very long before my lost blood was restored and my stomach was well and strong, and I have now been using Postum for almost a year. When I got up from bed after my illness I weighed 98 pounds, and now my weight is 120.

"There is no doubt that Postum was the cause of this wonderful improvement. I shall never go back to tea or coffee, but shall always stick to the food drink that brought me back to health and strength."

Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Teeth Teeth

WITHOUT A PLATE

Many of you need only a FEW TEETH SUPPLIED. For such cases I can (without the aid of any sort of a plate) fill such vacancies with teeth that are equal to "nature's own." They look natural, feel natural, and in fact by comparison stand the CRITICAL TEST of the most perfect teeth. None are handsomer. I am doing business on the square, and if, after a careful examination, I find it impossible to give you a lasting piece of work, I will not take your case. MONEY HAS NO VALUE when nothing is given in exchange for it.

My Combination Plate

is a trifle more expensive than the ordinary plate, but less than either Bridgework or Alveolar work. An ordinary plate depends alone upon suction to hold it in place. Bridgework is dependent upon the teeth. A COMBINATION PLATE USES BOTH suction and one, two or three teeth (whatever happens to be left in your mouth.) Positively, this plate will hold tightly in place; no loosening when eating or laughing. ASK YOUR MIRROR whether you need one of my RESTORATION PLATES. They knock years from a prematurely old mouth. Beats a beauty doctor. You are cheating yourself if you longer put off having a consultation with me—it's free.

GIVE ELKS SOUVENIRS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Flowers, fruit and ouvenir postal cards distributed by retty damsels in bewitching purple nd white gowns were features of the elcome accorded today by the Elks f this city to their brothers of the ntlered herd passing through here on alt Lake and Santa Fé trains to the rand reunion at Los Angeles.

The members of the Texas delegation were literally taken prisoners and scorted to the lodgerooms, where a ousing welcome was given them. The two-hour stay was filled with peech-making. Judge E. P. Scott of ort Worth was spokesman for the isitors.

The Louisville and New Jersey specials were greeted at the depot, but as e trains were late, stops were very rief. The Salt Lake Elks went hrough without stopping.

Seven specials are due here between idnight and 4 o'clock tomorrow orning.

GOLF ATTIRE PLEASES.

CINCINNATI CLUB PARADES.

Dressed in golf attire, the marching lub of the Cincinnati Lodge paraded he downtown district before dusk ast evening and gave evidence of hat may be expected when all the est is here. It was essentially a Herrmann parade, for the big man rom the Queen City marched at the ead of the line beside John Galvin, ast Grand Exalted Ruler, and one of he most beloved members of the order.

The uniform of the club consists of lack shoes, green stockings, golf rousers of small black and white heck, red coats and caps and canes. The marchers got the "glad hand" everywhere they went.

Porter's Catalina Band headed the rocession and returned with it to the Herrmann headquarters for an evening concert.

The club first called on Grand Exalted Ruler Holland and then visited he headquarters of James U. Sammis, on the fourth floor of the Alexandria. As Herrmann and Sammis re rivals for the office of Grand Exalted Ruler, this visit was interesting. Herrmann marched in and shook ands with his Iowa opponent in riendly, cordial fashion. Then there as handshaking all around. The Sammis' headquarters were too small to old the whole club at once, so the members passed in and out, giving miles and cheers.

After the first formalities, John Galvin made a speech in which he said he Cincinnati Elks are for "Garry" Herrmann, but that they looked upon he contest as purely one of fraternal ivalry, and that the result of the lection, whatever it might be, would ot diminish their respect for Sammis nd the Iowa brethren.

Sammis, in reply, said he felt honored by the deference shown him and hat he, too, would abide by the decision and that whatever it was, the owa Elks would accept it in a fraternal spirit.

Upon leaving the hotel, the club went up and down Spring, Broadway nd Main streets and let everybody know that Cincinnati and "Garry" Herrmann possess enthusiasm and gy.

SALT LAKE PARTY IN.

BRINGS FIFTEEN DELEGATES.

Two hours late, the Salt Lake special train arrived at the Salt Lake tation last night at 10:15 o'clock with party of 130 Elks and their ladies, ostly from Salt Lake City. The trip was without special incident, and the party was given a hearty welcome by he White Squadron and band, which marched from the Santa Fé station fter receiving the Louisville visitors.

A. J. Davis heads the Salt Lake delegation, and fifteen delegates to the rand Lodge were with him on the rain.

Harry Walter, Past Exalted Ruler f Philadelphia Lodge No. 2, was a member of the party. He is a candidate for the office of Grand Esteemed ecturing Knight, but it is not to be upposed that he was doing politics n the Salt Lake special. He simply anted to enjoy the company of good ellows.

Maurice Scheck of the Philadelphia orth American and M. R. Fitzgerald f the Salt Lake Tribune, both Elks, ccompanied the party. The Salt Lake eople are quartered at Hotel Angelus.

KENTUCKIANS HERE.

OUTHERN SONGS WIN CHEERS.

The Louisville special train arrived t La Grande station at 8:10 o'clock ast night, after a five days' journey hat was full of pleasure and unmarred by accident. The train carried 02 passengers, of whom ninety-nine ere ladies.

A large delegation of the White Squadron, with its band, was lined p at the station to extend greetings o the newcomers, and "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Dixie," played y the band and sung by the local Elks, were received by the travelers with wild applause.

The special was in charge of R. S. Brown, general agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Mr. Brown eft the party at the Grand Cañon, and hurried on to Los Angeles to look after arrangements for the comfort of his charges, but found that everything had been done for him.

Special cars of the Los Angeles Pacific were run to La Grande station for the Kentuckians and they were taken directly to their headquarters at Hotel Hollywood, Hollywood.

A dance will be given at this hotel in honor of the visitors tomorrow night.

ARIZONA OUT FOR BIG SHOW.

IMMENSE COPPER KETTLE ITS FLOAT IN PARADE.

Advance Guard of Territorial Elks Already Here and Many More Expected on Special Trains Today, When Headquarters Will Open. Going to Show They're on Earth.

While the main body of the Arizona delegations to the Grand Lodge will not arrive in Los Angeles before 8 o'clock this morning, Territorial brethren, exhibiting the most salient characteristic of Arizonans, have been "straggling in ahead of time" as one of the number put it yesterday, and the lobby, rooms, parlors and approaches of the Hollenbeck Hotel already are jammed.

Elks have been coming in through the week, first in ones and twos, then in bunches of growing importance, numerically, and headquarters were comfortably filled early yesterday. But the special trains are to arrive this morning, and the Executive Committee, the members of which have been on the ground for several days, are busy preparing to open their headquarters immediately after their arrival.

As a matter of fact, it is a bit of inside information that preparations for the Los Angeles Grand Lodge and reunion were begun in Arizona as soon as word was received from the Dallas convention last year, that Los Angeles had been selected as the next meeting place. On the desert and in the mountains, word was passed along the trails, around the rich ranches of the valleys and down in the mines, that this was the opportunity of Arizona to show to the outside world what manner of men these were who had been denied the full rights of citizenship for so long a time, and who had been compelled to live in a Territory, with no voice—or, at least, no very loud voice, in the management of the affairs of the nation.

Immediately, every lodge in the Territory began getting ready. Every Arizona Elk at once answered the call and a vigorous campaign for new members was initiated, while the dues were raised, together with the initiation fee, so that, when the time arrived, every member who could get away would find himself in the position of having already paid for all the expenses of both the special trains and hotel accommodations in Los Angeles during the convention. The Hollenbeck was reserved solid for the Territorial delegation.

The Executive Committee of the B. P.O.E. in Arizona has been taking time by the forelock. The members are Selim Michelsen of Phoenix, chairman; F. W. Spiers of Bisbee, secretary; Dr. E. S. Miller of Phoenix, Jack Jaeger of Prescott, Elliott Evans of Phoenix, E. G. Mustain of Douglas, Patrick Rose of Globe and Mulford Winsor of Yuma. They have selected five rooms on the second floor of the Hollenbeck for their headquarters, and these apartments have been gorgeously decorated in the colors of the order, represented by flowers, the Arizonans having decided that bunting and flags have become too commonplace.

In these rooms two registers will be kept, one for Elks from the Territory and the other for those from other parts of the country, and the Reception Committee, which is to be composed at all times of one or more brethren and ladies from each of the ten Territorial lodges, hopes that the visitors of both descriptions will be many. Light refreshments—nothing stronger than punch or lemonade—will be served, and though the committee will exert itself every day to please and do honpr to its visitors, a special reception day programme has been arranged for Thursday.

The Arizonans have spent all of $12,000 in their preparations for entertainment. Of this amount about $3000 has gone into the preparation of the big Arizona float, which is to be entered in the big parade.

The float consists of a huge bowl of solid copper, about ten feet high and eight feet in diameter, artistically wrought, with broad bands of the many-colored copper ores incrusted into it, like great claws. Among these ores will be the exquisitely-colored peacock ores, the dark green and light blues of the heavy ores, the azures, amethyst and emerald tints of the silicates, and all the shades of the many copper-bearing quartzes, making a picture which no brush could paint.

About this bowl will stand four gigantic elk, representing the order whose members have taken so active a part in the wonderful development of the Territory.

This float will be accompanied by about 300 Elks from the Territory in uniform, in addition to whom there will be about 1000 members of the order in the city through the convention. The Arizona delegation will be headed in the parade by the crack Indian Band from the Phoenix Indian School, numbering fifty pieces, and the lodges represented in the line of march, enumerated alphabetically, will be Bisbee, Douglas, Flagstaff, Globe, Kingman, Phoenix, Prescott, Tucson, Winslow and Yuma.

Thousands of Arizona booklets will be distributed at headquarters, and everything will be done to show to the convention crowds what can be done in the big Territory.

ELKS' PARADE TANGLE.

ESQUIRE WANTS TO KNOW.

Raymond Benjamin, Grand Esquire, and Gen. Robert Wankowski, his chief of staff, are having a task to arrange the Elks' parade. Not many of the lodges have reported the number they will have in line, whether they will have a drill team or a band and other details necessary to building a parade perspective. Consequently Benjamin has sent out a summons to all lodges to furnish the necessary information to him at once at his headquarters, parlor D, Alexandria Hotel.

The parade must be arranged by the numerical order of the lodges and in making the divisions the Esquire must know whether a division will have 100 men in line or 1000. The summons sent out by Benjamin calls on the Esquires or representatives of all visiting lodges to visit him without delay. Otherwise all the parade features are in splenddi shape.

CORNSTALK WELCOME.

ILLINOIS WILL GIVE IT.

Illinois Elks coming to Los Angeles this week will be received by members of the Illinois Association of Southern California, in a cornstalk bowered booth at No. 531 South Spring street. Writing material, reference guides and information concerning Southern California, lists of hotels and rooming houses are there for the use of the guests.

W. E. M. Cole, formerly of Peoria, is the host in charge of the booth. Assisting him this week will be G. K. Barrere, A. W. Brode, G. H. Moore, J. W. Cochran, J. E. Murray, M. D. Hurley, W. I. Kelly, A. B. Case, C. E. Snively, Jr., F. W. Blair, C. D. Magee, W. T. Osterholt, B. L. Brown, Dr. W. C. B. Jaynes, F. W. Stith, F. H. Mouser, G. B. Easton, J. K. Kornlik, W. W. Dennis, W. E. Warden, F. W. Blair and Ruth Everett Snively and Miss Carrie Warden.

HAIL TO CHIEF.

EXALTED RULER AND PARTY IN.

LOCAL ELKS FONDLY WELCOME RUSH L. HOLLAND.

He's Tickled at the Greeting by White Squadron and Officials, But Delays on the Road, Which Put Him in Here a Day Late, Cause Him to Say Some Things.

Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks of the United States, Rush L. Holland, arrived with his party on a special train on the Salt Lake line at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, while the city, half smothered under heavy decorations for the event, lay comparatively lifeless in the gray coolness of a foggy summer morning. Yet at that hour there were plenty of people, both residents and visitors, abroad to welcome the distinguished party.

Members John E. Brink and Thomas Darmody of the Committee for Entertainment of Grand Lodge Officers, and Frank Bryson, Leo V. Youngworth, Will Stephens, M. J. McGarry, John S. Underwood, Martin Marsh, Walter Goldsmith and others of the general reception committee were on hand with a band and the White Squadron to extend a welcome. Right well did the band and squadron acquit themselves, notwithstanding the fact that most of the members had been up all night awaiting the arrival of "Garry" Herrmann and his party.

This is what the visitors heard from the White Squadron vocalists as the train entered the station at low speed:

"Welcome, welcome, everywhere;
Throw off your troubles, throw off your care,
We're the entertainers,
That's where we shine,
You never will forget
The boys of ninety-nine—
California!"

When the Grand Exalted Ruler appeared on the platform of his car he was given a wildly enthusiastic greeting. Immediately afterward he and Grand Exalted Secretary Fred C. Robinson, with other officers, were taken in their automobiles to their headquarters at the Alexandria, escorted by the White Squadron, which went through numerous evolutions on the way.

In the rotunda of the hotel, the drill corps came to "parade rest," while the Grand Exalted Ruler addressed them at length, thanking them for their services, and saying that every moment of the journey of his party had increased the anxiety to reach Los Angeles and see the faces and shake the hands of those whom they were to meet.

"I know well," he said, "the strenuous work you have already done in preparation for the convention, and what you must still do to carry it to a successful conclusion, as well as the comparatively sleepless night you have had, and on that account I appreciate all the more your courtesy in coming out at this time to welcome us to your beautiful city and its hospitable people generally. I have been busy and I shall still be busy while I am here, but I will yet have time to thank you, every one, personally."

"We deserved a good ending to that trip, I think," said Holland as he sat at ease looking the picture of health, in his headquarters. "We certainly had trouble enough at the beginning, and for some time afterward. As you know, we were not a hundred miles out of Denver, our starting point, before it began. We would not have felt it so much, nor would it have been so bad, had not the railroad surordinate officials repeatedly misled us as to the time at which they could move us out of Cañon City, where the landslide first delayed us. Like any American community, which we were in a small way, we were at first patient, then belligerent, and at last resourceful.

"After we had been misled five or six times, we began to send telegrams, then to hold meetings, and at last resorted to the great American right of petition. When we had put it up to the general manager personally, we secured action. A few hours after he appeared on the scene we were under way; but we were than over forty-eight hours late, when the company should have known in the first place that it could not remove the obstruction without the probability of a long delay, and should have moved us out of there, as they finally did, over another line of railroad, to another part of their own, within a few hours.

"But even then our troubles were not at an end. The unusual water that we had to take in set our engines to leaking, and at one place they went dead on us from that cause on a hill and in a tunnel. At another, one of the two engines was completely disabled by leaking, and the remaining engine hauled the train of eight heavy coaches and the dead engine up a grade. From Salt Lake to Los Angeles we had no difficulty.

"There were two special parties of us: The officials of the Salt Lake line, General Traffic Manager Wann, Douglas White, Passenger Agent Peck and Purchasing Agent Foster, and our party of Elks, including F. C. Robinson, the secretary of the Grand Lodge; Mrs. Mary L. Fox, a cousin of mine; Miss Emma Scholl, my stenographer; Mr. Payne, secretary to Mr. Robinson; Moses P. O'Brien, my secretary; my brother, P. A. Holland, and myself.

"The ending of our trip was made more pleasant by a dinner given in my honor, by General Traffic Manager Fred A. Wann, our host, last evening, about 8 o'clock, while the train was rushing us forward to the general reunion."

AUTOS WANTED TODAY.

TO SHOW VISITORS SIGHTS.

Chairman Flint and members of the Executive Committee of Los Angeles Lodge No. 99 issued another appeal yesterday to automobile owners to join today in the plan to give visiting Elks and the ladies of their parties a sightseeing trip through and around Los Angeles. Several thousand visitors have been given to understand that they will be extended this courtesy, and it looked last night as if there would not be enough machines to supply the demand.

Autos are desired at the Alexandria Hotel at 9 o'clock this morning, or as soon thereafter as is convenient. Members of the Executive Committee will be on hand to direct the dispatching of the machines.

All Iowans Called.

F. H. Nicholls, secretary of the Los Angeles Iowa Society, which has thousands of members, has asked all of them to go to the Salt Lake station today about noon to welcome the special trains carrying 400 Iowa Elks, who are coming to help the Sammis campaign. The visitors will be accompanied by the National Guard Band of Ottumwa and it is hoped to demonstrate that "Iowa is it" by the large number at the station.

First Patient.

The emergency hospital established on the second floor of the general headquarters for Elks had its first patient yesterday morning. A visiting brother appeared with a swelled eye, strained, he said, from looking at all the pretty girls on Los Angeles streets.

Desert Elks Coming.

From the extreme southeastern county of California, and the State's newest one, Imperial, comes a delegation of a score of Elks. Old-time members of the order have been stirring up enthusiasm therefor, and as a result, they recently took to Redlands a company of twenty Imperial Valley young men, and had them initiated into the order. These men are now in Los Angeles to enjoy the gayeties of Elks' Week, and to spread the glories of Imperial Valley. They all come pledged as "boosters" for that region.

Postoffice for Elks.

The branch postoffice for the accommodation of the visiting Elks was opened yesterday morning in the general headquarters, Franklin and North Spring streets. Assistant Superintendent F. P. Purdy is in charge, and all mail for visiting Elks will be turned over directly to this station. When the office opened yesterday morning several hundred letters were awaiting delivery, and late mails brought in a large bulk of messages for the visitors.

Central Reviewing Stand.

The Executive Committee of Los Angeles Lodge No. 99, after a consultation with Chief of Police Dishman, settled upon the hours in which access may be had to those holding proper credentials to the reviewing stand in front of the City Hall. For the Elks' parade on Thursday morning the gates will open at 10:30 o'clock, and for the floral and allegorical parade of Friday at [illegible].

What About Flowers?

While the tearooms at the Elks' headquarters have been tastefully decorated, the ladies presiding over this feature of the welcome to visiting Elks are anxious to have more flowers for the walls of greenery used to divide the tea parlors. "We call California the land of fruits and flowers," remarked Mrs. A. L. Schofield, who is assisting Mrs. Will Stephens in the tearooms, yesterday, "and it seems a little unfortunate that there are no natural flowers in the decorations here."

El Paso Lodge Meeting.

George E. Wallace, Exalted Ruler of El Paso Lodge No. 187, has issued a call to all members of that lodge to meet in the rotunda of the Alexandria Hotel at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. He desires to have a large number of members in the parade, and as many of them came to Los Angeles in advance of the regular party, he has found it necessary to call them all together on Monday for the purpose of outlining plans.

Georgia Delegates.

Athens (Georgia) Lodge, No. 790, will send a delegation of fifteen. M. G. Michael, P.E.R., and George H. Palmer, secretary, are already here, and are registered at the Chickasaw Hotel. The other delegates will arrive Monday.

Grand Trustee Ill.

In his mail yesterday morning, Grand Exalted Ruler Holland received notice that Alfred T. Holly of Hackensack, N. J., member of the Board of Grand Trustees, had been taken suddenly ill with appendicitis, and would not be able to be present at the convention.

LANGFORD AFTER MONEY.

Crack Darky Boxer Wants His Share of Purse Raised or He Will Not Fight Ketchel.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BOSTON, July 10.—Willis Britt, manager for Stanley Ketchel, will have to increase his offer to Sam Langford by $5000 or the match arranged between the two middleweights for the championship at Ely, Nev., September 16, will be all off, according to Manager Woodman, who represents Langford.

Woodman received the articles from Ketchel tonight and said that he would insist on an additional $5000 for his share, or a total of $12,500 for Langford before he would sign, Ketchel to take the balance of the $25,000 purse.

The Mission Club of San Francisco, the National Club of Pittsburgh and the National Club of Philadelphia, according to Manager Woodman, have offered practically the same purse to Ketchel as Ely and with a better offer for Langford.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD.

Strang Cuts Almost One Minute from Former Mark for Fifty Miles on Circular Track.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before nearly 10,000 people who gathered to see the automobile races given under the auspices of the Springfield Automobile Association at Illinois State fair grounds track this afternoon, Lewis Strang, driving Louis Chevrolet's Buick, broke the fifty-mile circular track world's record of 53m., 45s., made by himself at Columbus, O. The new mark set today is 52m., 48s. The fastest mile was made in 1:01. Two separate miles were made in this time.

In the five-mile race between Strang and Chevrolet, the latter won in 5m., 4s. The best mile was 1:04.

SCANDAL IN PHILADELPHIA.

Dawson Hoopes of Well-Known Family Files Sensational Suit for Divorce.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Dawson Hoopes, a member of a well-known Philadelphia family, who has figured in the public prints during the last few days, today began divorce proceedings against his wife, Katie Eleanor Hoopes, now in London, naming as co-respondent Charles A. Newhall, also a member of a prominent local family, and a cricketer of international reputation.

Mr. Hoopes in his suit makes many sensational allegations against his wife, and also files a bill in equity in which he declares he was induced to sign an agreement in consequence of proceedings brought by his wife to have him declared a habitual drunkard. He asks that it be set aside as fraudulent.

Four-Oared Griefer Crew Is Beaten Three Lengths by Vancouver Team While Vaughn Loses by Ten Lengths in Special Event With Laing of British Columbia.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—Vancouver captured all but one event in today's races in the rowing regatta on Lake Washington. The only race which the British Columbians failed to take was the senior doubles, which was won by Portland, in 8:22 1-5, with a lead of two lengths.

In the senior singles, Laing of Vancouver defeated Des Brascy of Nelson, B. C., by ten lengths, in 10:29.

Vancouver also won the senior fours by seven lengths, making the course in 7:49 2-5. This remarkably low time is said to be due to a course 100 yards short. Portland finished second and Victoria third.

Following the senior events, the winning four met the four-oared crew of San Diego in a special race. Vancouver won by three lengths, in 8:15.

Laing of Vancouver also defeated Vaughn of San Diego in the special singles, winning by ten lengths. No time was taken on this race.

Two motor boat races were also run today. A handicap free-for-all was won by the Lawanna of Buffalo, N. Y., which made the twenty miles in 43.04 4-5. The time of the Pacer of Seattle was 39:37 1-5, and of the Wolff II of Portland, 39:37 4-5. The Lawanna was allowed four minutes and twelve seconds over the Pacer, and five minutes and 22 seconds over the Wolff II. The Wolff II won the sixty-mile endurance race in 2:02:43. The Pacer, the only other entry, broke down on the third lap.

M'CARREN BIG BOSS.

New Leader Rivals Tweed, Croker and New York Czars—Sweeping Indictment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pat McCarren, now outranks "Boss" Tweed, Dick Croker, John Kelly, and all other political czars who have dominated New York, according to the "committee of one hundred," which has just ended an "investigation" of Brooklyn. It has discovered that the Brooklyn Senator controls the powerful arm of the courts and dictates the administration of magistrates and tribunals.

His indictment by the committee of one hundred today is done in powerful detail. The document enumerates courts where McCarren leaders sit at the right hand of the Mayor-appointed magistrates and dictate the positions of cases.

The committee asserts that defective complaints are constantly drawn; that accused persons, paroled in custody of counsel, have frequently disappeared; that the District Attorney has been handicapped by defective returns from these courts, and that disorderly houses have not been hampered in exclusive districts.

HONOR SUNFLOWER STATE.

SEATTLE, July 10.—Kansas Day was celebrated at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition by many Kansans and former Kansans. Bishop A. P. Quayle of the Methodist Episcopal church, was the orator at the exercises in the World's Fair auditorium, his subject being "The Kansas Microbe."

Many delegates to the international convention of the Epworth League, of which Bishop Quayle is president, attended, and all the Kansas delegates were present. A party of Kansas State Agricultural College students and alumni came to Seattle in their own special car and added to the noise and gayety of the day. In the fireworks tonight a blazing sunflower of prodigious size will be the principal piece, in honor of the day.

BUYS TWO ROADS.

RALEIGH (N. C.) July 10.—John B. Lenning of Philadelphia today bought two railways, one the Egypt, eight miles long, from Colon to the Cumnock coal mines, under court decree, for $25,000, and the other, the Raleigh and Western, of which about thirty miles is graded, but no track laid. Lenning owns the Durham and Charlotte Railroad, of which forty miles is in operation from Egypt to Troy.

WHOLESALE JEWELRY STOCK!

—TO BE SACRIFICED AT MFRS. PRICES.

J. P. TRAFTON CO. (SO. CALIFORNIA'S PIONEER WHOLESALE JEWELERS 424 SO. BROADWAY) RETIRE FROM BUSINESS=

Tomorrow morning retail jewelers and the general public will participate in the buying of a $200,000.00 stock of jewelry, diamonds, watches, etc., which will be sold at BED-ROCK MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. California's pioneer wholesale jewelry house—J. P. Trafton Company, retires permanently from business. For the first time in the history of the trade a retail house—The Geneva Watch & Optical Company—takes over the entire stock and throws it flat on the market at MANUFACTURERS' PRICES—for quick disposition. It MUST GO QUICKLY. The amount involved is enormous. Few jewelry houses in the country would care to tie up so much money—even temporarily. Of course, the size of the purchase enabled us to get a magnificent stock of goods at an attractive figure. The public and retail jewelers will benefit. Naturally we get something, too—but it is still a question with us whether the job will be worth the work, time and responsibility, in addition to our regular business. However, there's no retrenching now. Remember—as long as the goods last you get the highest grade of jewelry in the world at PRICES LOWER THAN RETAIL JEWELERS CAN ORDINARILY BUY IT.

The retailers pay jobbers' prices. Tomorrow (for the first time) YOU and all Western retailers get in on this stock at MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. This is not to be confused with an ordinary jewelry sale. This is a jewelry buying event that might never occur again in a hundred years. It never has occurred before as far as we can ascertain. Allusions as to the genuineness of this sale are almost superfluous. The Geneva Watch & Optical Company and the J. P. Trafton Company are Los Angeles institutions that have grown up with the Southwest. Ask any jeweler or banker in the city.

Keenly realizing the enormous rush that will be upon us as soon as our doors are opened tomorrow morning—we have attempted as well as we are able to prepare for it. We've refitted and enlarged our store space and have employed a large force of carefully selected expert salesmen. Just glance at a few representative bargains—you'll find 20,000 others here tomorrow.

Diamond Brooches, $2 to $1150—reductions of 50 per cent.—less than the retail jewels pay for them.

Solid Gold Cuff Buttons, $1 to $75—hundreds of them at 50 per cent. less than you could buy them at any other jewelry house in Los Angeles. Solid Gold Stick Pins—50 cents to $150—at 50 per cent. less than regular retail prices.

Thousands of Solid Gold Rings, 75 cents to $600—the price the manufacturer sells them to the jobber—the retailer pays 25 per cent. more. A sale like this comes once in a lifetime.

Hundreds of Watches—solid gold cases (14k) Waltham or Elgin movements—$16 and up—retail jewelers would ordinarily have to pay $20 and the public $25 to $30.

Solid Gold Elks' charms—dozens of varieties and values—at 50 per cent. less than retail prices.
Thousands of Solid Gold Lockets, $2 to $100—equal reductions.
Gold Filled Jewelry at the same sweeping reductions.
Ribbon Fobs, 50 cents to $3.00.
Gold Filled Cuff Buttons, 50 cents to $1.25.
Gold Filled Stick Pins, 25 cents to $1.00.
Gold Filled Brooches, 25 cents to $2.00.
Gold Filled Hatpins, 50 cents to $2.00.
Lavillers, $1.00 to $10.00.
Watch Charms, 50 cents to $5.00.
It is folly to attempt to enumerate any more of these bargains. There are thousands upon thousands here. A $200,000 stock will be turned in a few days at prices the public never had access to before.

ANOTHER FLING AT MATRIMONY.

SWIFT'S FORMER WIFE IS NOW A THIRD TIME BRIDE.

Mrs. Lutie Murray Swift Hartmann, Who Divorced the Chicago Meat King After a Sensational Marriage, to Espouse Jewish Musician, Is Now Married Again.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A cable from Berlin announced the marriage of Mrs. Lutie Murray Hartmann to Hans C. Kindermann. The bride is the former wife of Charles H. Swift, the Chicago packer, from whom she was divorced in 1903. Later she married Arthur Hartmann, a Jewish musician.

The marriage marks another epoch in the romantic life of Lutie Murray, a young girl whose adventures and social triumphs have interested Chicago society on at least three occasions.

Lutie Murray was the daughter of a boarding-house keeper, whose home was in Michigan avenue, near Thirtieth street, Chicago. In 1894 society was stirred by the announcement of her engagement to Bert Swift, a son of the millionaire packer, and almost before it recovered from that shock it was thrown into another flurry by the announcement that the engagement was broken, and then a third time astounded to learn that she was engaged to Charles H. Swift. The marriage of Charles H. Swift took place in 1894.

On April 5, 1903, Chicago society again was startled by the filing of a divorce petition in the name of Lutie Murray Swift, who charged her husband with cruelty. Mrs. Swift was then in Europe, and met Arthur Hartmann, the Boston violinist, in Berlin.

WOULD SURPRISE FULTON.

Replica of the Famous Inventor's First Steamer Launched at Staten Island Yard.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—The strange-looking little craft, which is a replica of Robert Fulton's Hudson River steamboat, the Clermont, was launched today, under the auspices of the Hudson-Fulton celebration commission at the Mariners' Harbor yards of the Staten Island shipbuilding company.

Next fall, during the Hudson-Fulton celebration, the Clermont replica will be a central figure in a great flotilla of warships of all nations, which will accompany her over the same course on the Hudson from New York to Albany, which Fulton took in the original on August 17, 1807.

The replica is as nearly the duplicate of the original as the commission could build from plans and dimensions noted in some of Fulton's own letters. She will be equipped with a replica of the old engine and make her trip under her own steam.

PUEBLO DAY.

PUEBLO (Colo.) July 10.—Because the City Fathers cannot agree upon the list of favored ones who are to receive liquor licenses for the coming year, Pueblo today is "dry" for the first time in its history. Every saloon was ordered closed at midnight last night, and today drawn blinds and closed doors greet the thirsty wayfarer.

Under the new city ordinance, not more than 100 saloons may be licensed. The Councilmen have been unable to agree upon the favored ones in their respective wards, and since July 1, all saloons have been running without licenses. A special meeting of the Council will probably be called to relieve the drouth.

On Saturday, July 17th, The Times will print in a separate sheet, all the complete illustrated accounts of all the important events of the week. It will be delivered to regular subscribers as well as mailed to every subscription given for the ELKS' WEEK papers.

FEARS HUSBAND'S SLAYERS.

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Marie Mohrle, widow of Fred H. Mohrle, was told today by City Hospital physicians she would recover from a wound fourteen inches long below the heart, self-inflicted, she wept hysterically because the bullet had not pierced a vital part.

"I hoped to cheat the gang from killing me, as they did my husband," she declared. She shot herself late last night.

"I want to be with him," the woman said, gazing at Mohrle's picture, in explanation of her deed.

A series of letters, written in the form of a diary, was found by the police. They show that Mrs. Mohrle, 31 years old, feared she would be killed by the "gang" that pursued her husband, or would be driven insane by worry.

Mohrle and William Wright formerly were ward workers and henchmen of Constable Sam Young. They went over to the Republicans during the last campaign and a feud began.

AFTER a lapse of just one day, Miss Constance Hood again marches at the head of the procession in The Times scholarship contest. The Italian flag has been furled and sent back two paces toward the rear, along with its proud bearer, Frank Maine. Miss Hood, presiding officer of the young people's Christian Endeavor Society of the Magnolia Avenue Christian Church, and daughter of Milk Inspector George W. Hood, again treads the Milky Way as queen of the contest. She first attained this exalted position last Sunday morning and has held it ever since, with the exception of Saturday when Frank Maine set her back to second place.

There was a sensational shake-up among the "High Five" yesterday, resulting in a realignment all around, not one of the quintette holding the same position today as yesterday. The "Big Four," now consisting of Constance Hood, Raymond Austin, Frank Maine and Dorothy Scherer, are closely bunched and all nearing the century mark in credit points. The first three have over 90,000 points each and Miss Scherer has over 88,000. She lacks only a little over 7000 to be abreast with the leader.

DOROTHY LARGEST GAINER.

Miss Scherer registered the largest gain in actual points yesterday, 33,060, but lost several thousand through back charges, on account of some of the subscriptions formerly voted in her favor as new ones failing to stand the test. A number of other contestants also lost a considerable number of points on this account. In order to secure the large amount of extra points allowed on new subscriptions, they must be really new in the sense that they increase the circulation of The Times to the extent of at least one copy. A mere change of name or address does not constitute a new subscription.

Miss Scherer spent the last few days at Azusa, where she made most of her gain. She is one of the most popular young ladies in the contest, and also one of the best workers. She is after the $500 cash prize, and although she has not yet succeeded in reaching first place, she will not give up trying. There is plenty of time yet for her to get to the top, and "Daring Dorothy" is just as likely to be there with the goods at the finish as any one.

Miss Hattie Sargent,
American girl, who intends to work her way through college.

AUSTIN MOVES UP.

Raymond Austin, the accomplished young violinist of Pasadena, has somewhat recovered from his long motorcycle run, and is again gathering in the big subscriptions in first-class style. He registered a gain of 24,019 points Saturday, and moved up from third to second place. Austin began his musical career when but 4 years old. At that early age he played the piano. At 7 he began his violin lessons, and for the last few years has been playing in the orchestras of Pasadena's leading hotels and theaters. He frequently has taken the place of the leading violinist at Hotel Maryland in the height of the tourist season, and won much applause for his fine playing. While much of his time is devoted to his music, he is also of great assistance to his father in the baking business. He is a splendid young business man, as well as musician, and his modest and gentlemanly bearing makes him a prime favorite in Pasadena. It will be hard for any one to beat a candidate for first prize who has so many admirable qualities as Raymond Austin.

PRINCESS GOES DOWN.

"Princess Alice" Capron, the other popular Pasadena contestant, has lost fourth place to Miss Scherer, but is still among the "High Five." As she lives on the outskirts of Alhambra, and that town has no other representative in the contest, the "Princess" expects a good deal of support from Alhambra, as well as Pasadena. She hopes to do at least as well this year as last, when she finished in third place and won a scholarship in the Verdi School of Singing and $125 in cash. She profited largely by her scholarship, and is eager to continue her studies in vocal music under the same efficient instructor, Signor Pietro Buzzi.

SIXTEEN HIGHER UPS.

Sixteen contestants joined the "Higher Ups" yesterday. In addition to Miss Hood, Raymond Austin and Miss Scherer, the following climbed farther up the ladder:

David Boardman from No. 16 to 12; Emma Blortz, 15 to 13; Helen Wilson, 18 to 17; Amos Colborn, 19 to 18; Lillian Waite, 21 to 20; Edwina Lloyd, 23 to 22; Ruth Ferguson, 24 to 23; Ernest Furrer, 25 to 24; Hattie Sargent, 28 to 27; Kessler Bros., 30 to 28; Guy Barnhart, 31 to 29; Florence Barlow, 34 to 33; David H. Hughes, 44 to 34.

ARIZONAN'S JUMP.

The Arizona recruit, David H. Hughes, the last to enter the contest, made the biggest jump of all, ten numbers. His application to enter the contest was only received last Thursday, and the announcement of his candidacy made on Friday, but his friends in Los Angeles have already commenced voting for him. Many Arizonans are here attending the Elks' festivities and to spend the summer in California. Many of these will no doubt help out the son of an old Arizona pioneer in his effort to win a scholarship.

HELP FOR MISS BLORTZ.

Miss Emma Blortz moved up from fifteenth to thirteenth place, and is glad to be among the "Higher Ups," even though she has the position that some consider unlucky—No. 13. There is not a girl in the contest who is battling against greater odds, owing to the fact that she is an orphan and has a very limited acquaintance in Los Angeles. People who know her speak of her in the very highest terms, and she makes a very agreeable impression upon all whom she meets. The following letter is given space as it shows the interest taken in this homeless girl by some of the good people of Los Angeles:

Los Angeles (Cal.) July 9, 1909.

Scholarship Manager, Times Office—Dear Sir: Inclosed you will find coupons in favor of Miss Emma Blortz. I have taken an interest in her, and hope she may win her desired scholarship. I am sure she is worthy of such, being highly recommended by Mrs. Hanrihan, and old resident of the East Side. Miss Emma may rest assured I will assist her in every way possible.

Very respectfully,
MRS. R. CONKLIN,
née Goldie Linck.

JUST AN AMERICAN GIRL.

Miss Hattie Sargent of Garden Grove, Orange county, in writing to the contest manager, modestly says:

"I haven't much to tell you about myself. I am only an ordinary American girl, but that's something to be proud of.

"I am not especially bright in my studies at school, but I intend to keep on trying. I am in the second year of the High School, and I intend to go to college when I finish High School. I am trying for a business college scholarship, for then I can work my way through college. I was 16 the 14th of June."

ELKS MAY VOTE.

Scholarship Points Will Be Allowed on Subscriptions to Mail "The Times" to Distant Friends.

Here is a chance for scholarship contestants to gain many extra points during the next few days:

During the forthcoming Elks' convention The Times proposes to put forth every effort to issue an unusually attractive paper every day. Special colored supplements will be printed; there will be many handsome illustrations of the splendid floats and decorations, and the "doings" generally will be described in the most entertaining and fetching manner. Los Angeles' unexcelled method of entertaining her visitors will be properly exploited.

This subscription, including one Sunday and a special edition, may be mailed to any address in the United States, Mexico and Canada for 25 cents, postage prepaid. Your friends, whether they are Elks or not, will be much pleased to receive this subscription. It also presents a splendid opportunity to give some good publicity to this country.

Scholarship contestants will be allowed to solicit orders to mail The Times to any part of the United States, Mexico or Canada during Elks' week. Fifty (50) points will be allowed on each 25-cent order taken. The cash must accompany the order in order to make the votes good.

DEAN WRIGHT IN YOSEMITE.

GAINING BOTH RECUPERATION AND INSPIRATION.

Popular Head of College of Oratory of U.S.C. Says "Times" Scholarship Winners Make Good Pupils. Important Addition to the Faculty Just Announced.

Miss Beulah Wright, dean of the College of Oratory of Southern California, and her sister, Miss Winifred Wright, have gone to the Yosemite Valley to attend the Chautauqua Assembly, which is being held in nature's grandest wonderland, this summer.

Dean Wright is on the assembly programme for four readings, and will give close attention to all the sessions, besides spending much time in sightseeing and enjoying the beauties of the Yosemite. Thus she expects to gain both recuperation and inspiration for the resumption of her important work at the university at the opening of the fall term.

There is no department of the university that has made more progress or gained more in efficiency and popularity than the College of Oratory during the four or five years that Miss Wright has officiated as dean. She not only is highly accomplished as a teacher of oratory, and expression, but has a most pleasing personality which endears her to the students and inspires them to higher efforts in order to please her.

The U.S.C. College of Oratory scholarships are always eagerly competed for by the young people participating in The Times educational contests. Miss Anna Elliston of Gardena won this valuable scholarship last year, and Miss Wright states that she has proved a very apt and satisfactory pupil. Miss Elliston has enjoyed her work at the university so well that she will remain for at least another year.

Miss Virginia Stivers, Miss Helen Pitner and Miss Rose Leonett are other Times contestants of former years who have profited by the U.S.C. College of Law scholarships. Dean Wright says all of these girls acquitted themselves creditably as students. Miss Leonett was rather young for so advanced a course, but nevertheless did very nicely.

The U.S.C. College of Oratory is best for pupils who are pretty well grounded in the elementary branches, especially in English, history, literature, etc. Pupils who have finished the High School, or at least the grammar school grades, are most fit to profit by a scholarship in the College of Oratory. There are a number of such candidates in this year's contest, and one of them will be fortunate in getting this very desirable scholarship, which is valued at $130.

A very important addition to the faculty of the U.S.C. College of Oratory has just been announced. The new member is Miss Edna June Terry, who will come here from the University of Wisconsin. She is a graduate of the Cumnock School of Oratory of Northwestern University, Chicago, and is one of the most sought after readers at Eastern Chautauquas. Miss Terry is a very accomplished whistler as well as reader, and is said to have few equals as an entertainer and teacher.

Cure Your Rheumatism

Costs Nothing to Try

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Pain in the back have been cured, in the real meaning of the word, by a little Stillingia, Iodide of Potassium, Poke Root, Guaiac Resin and Sarsaparilla. Any one, even a young child, can take these remedies in any reasonable amount with perfect safety, and the results have been found to be astonishing. It has been proven that this combination makes up the best rheumatism remedy in existence, having actually cured many stubborn cases of over 30 and 40 years' standing—even in persons of old age.

The five ingredients mentioned above prepared with great accuracy and skill not only in regard to proportion, but also in selecting the best material, have been put up in compressed tablet form, and are called "Gloria Tonic."

If you suffer from any form of uric acid in the blood, and have Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, this is the way to drive it out of your system in quick time.

Test this great remedy for yourself free, by sending for a trial package to John A. Smith, 5227 Smith Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis. Send this notice with your name and address on a slip of paper and you will receive a trial package by return mail absolutely free. It is only in "Gloria Tonic" that you can get the above combination ready for use.

For sale and recommended in Los Angeles by Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring st., 5th and Broadway, 625 South Broadway.

Etiwanda Vineyards

Own A Profit Producing Vineyard
Without Leaving Your Present Occupation

My Etiwanda plan enables you to do it. Select your vineyard, five acres or more. Pay me $2.50 per acre cash and $2.50 per acre monthly. I will cultivate and care for your vines free of charge for three years, until they come into good bearing, with a full stand of vines guaranteed. You can select land already planted to Muscat Grapes, a profitable variety, or choose unplanted land which we will set out to the variety of vines you prefer. Study the prices! Consider the terms! You never had such a chance before.

Level Land--Water Piped to Every Five Acres

$200 to $250 An Acre $2.50 Per Acre Cash, $2.50 Monthly

Etiwanda is located in the famous San Gabriel Valley. It's only a short ride from Los Angeles, with wonderfully successful vineyards right in the vicinity of our property. Thriving cities and towns, with good school facilities and modern conveniences, all around Etiwanda. It's a well-settled community, the pioneer work done years ago. The main line of the Santa Fe runs through Etiwanda, thus giving excellent shipping facilities.

And the land is right for grapes, as well as fruit trees, field crops and poultry. Growers at Etiwanda—men of long experience—state that an annual net income of 20 per cent. or more can be reasonably relied upon from a matured vineyard there. A Government Report on the Grape industry says: "The profits from an acre vary from $50 to $500—a fair average being from $125 to $150."

I want to give you all the details about Etiwanda Vineyards. For a home place or for a profitable investment this property, sold under my plan, is an opportunity of the most genuine kind. Come in and see me, or send for information, and don't wait. Now is the time to start! Excursions daily.

Lively Presentment of the Day's Interesting Happenings in Los Angeles County

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

HUNGERS FOR WORK ON HIGH.

DIRECTOR OF THE MT. WILSON OBSERVATORY RETURNS.

Receives Unusual Honors on His Tour Abroad—Chinese Vegetable Peddler Falls Asleep and Tumbles Off His Wagon, Which Makes His Team Run Away.

Office of The Times, No. 24 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, July 11.—Dr. George E. Hale, director of the Mt. Wilson Solar Observatory, returned to Pasadena on the Santa Fé Limited last evening, after an eventful European trip on which he went as a delegate of the National Academy of Sciences of America. He returns in splendid health and as he says, "hungry for work at the best spot on earth for work, Mt. Wilson."

Dr. Hale delivered a number of notable addresses, in London, Paris and other points, and was accorded unusual complimentary attention wherever he went. In England he received the signal honor of being elected a "foreign member" of the Royal Society of England, the foreign membership of which is limited to fifty. He also received a doctorate degree from Oxford and attended the celebration at Cambridge of the hundredth anniversary of Darwin's birth. He left Pasadena early in April, and during the early part of his trip was accompanied by Dr. James A. B. Scherer, president of Throop Polytechnic Institute.

TWO EMERGENCY CASES.

A Mexican named Dalfonze, employed by Contractor Crowell on the Greater Throop building, fell from a hoist and landed across a wheelbarrow yesterday afternoon. At the emergency hospital it was found that three ribs had been shattered by the fall.

"Ach" Louie, a Chinese vegetable peddler, fell asleep on his wagon on Madison avenue yesterday afternoon and fell still further, landing on his head on the ground. His fall frightened his drowsy horses, and they ran wildly through the streets until stopped far up on North El Molino avenue by a street car conductor named Crew. "Ach" Louie was unconscious for ten minutes, and an ambulance call was turned in.

Both cases were treated by Dr. Williams, assistant police surgeon.

MORE FOURTH OF JULY.

Francisco Cruz, 9 years old, and Mariano Cruz, 7 years old, sons of Mrs. Alfred Cruz, of No. 41 Pico street, are suffering from Fourth of July injuries and awaiting the arrival of two new sets of trousers. The former carried giant caps in his hip pocket; they rubbed together, and the explosion did the rest. He is suffering from blood poisoning as a result of the injury, and will be confined at the Pasadena Hospital for a month. The latter deposited a bunch of firecrackers in his hip pocket, and in some way they became ignited. A dinner plate would hardly cover the seared hip, or the hole that was burned in his nether garments.

EXPERT TENNIS.

Miss May Sutton, whose engagement to Frank Ham of the City of Mexico was recently announced, received a whole-hearted ovation when she made her appearance on the Valley Hunt tennis court yesterday afternoon in a spirited match with Win Mace as her partner in doubles against Miss Florence Sutton and C. B. Herd.

The sidelines were thronged with society people, assembled to witness the match and participate in an al fresco supper, followed by an informal dance. W. H. Barnes umpired the tennis with proper dignity and accuracy. The plaudits of the onlookers kept the place ringing with enthusiasm.

Miss May and her gallant partner took the first two sets with a rush at 6-0, 6-1. In the third their opponents struck a winning gait, and Miss May, who so seldom loses, strive as she would, saw the set slip away by a score of 3-6. A fourth set was contested and was won by the little champion, handily, at 6-2.

FOR GEORGE PATTEN.

Miss Pattie Phillips was hostess Friday evening at a charmingly appointed dinner in honor of George Patten, who was recently graduated from West Point, and is home on a short furlough before taking his post.

The place cards were jolly little Dutch girls, which the hostess brought from Holland on her recent visit there. Crimson dahlias were used in the decorations.

The guests, a number of whom have been away from Pasadena for some time, were of the younger society set, and included Miss Gladys Percy, now living at the beach and house guest of Miss Phillips, Misses Jane Rowland and Kate Fowler, who have just returned from a trip abroad, Miss Annie Patten of Alhambra and Messrs. Patten, Phillips, Harvey Bissell, Sylvanus Marston and John K. Dotten.

POSTAL INCREASES.

Postmaster Wood and Deputy Postmaster Ramel have completed their report for the fiscal year ended June 30. It shows an excess in business of practically $10,000 over the preceding year, which is estimated to be an increase of 10.8 per cent., and indicates a substantial gain in the population of the Crown City. A comparison of the month of June for 1908 and 1909 shows a gain of 19.9 per cent. Pasadena's population is now estimated to be 33,500 people.

COUNCIL TO PRUNE.

The expense budget for the city for the next fiscal year calls for $80,000 more than the one of last year. The present estimate is $418,888, as against about $337,000 for the year just closed. The City Council intends to do as much cutting and pruning as possible, although it is believed that the full amount is really needed.

Items of the budget are: For the general fund, $121,560; executive fund, $139,168; commissioners (estimated,) $101,300; lighting department (estimated,) $56,860, and for the police department (estimated,) $31,000. The last-named department wants $8000 more than was asked for last year.

PASADENA NEWS NOTES.

The funeral of William Hornsby, who died from a hemorrhage in Los Angeles yesterday, will be held at the undertaking establishment of Pierce Bros. on Lincoln avenue this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of the Alexandra Lodge of the Sons of St. George, of which he was a member, will attend in a body. Interment will be in Mt. View Cemetery.

James W. Van Cleave, for three years president of the National Manufacturers' Association, is here from Seattle, and is visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. Hazard Halstead. He was a guest at the Valley Hunt Club last evening.

PLAYA DEL REY.

DESERT STORE FOR THE BEACH.

HAMBURGER'S EMPLOYEES HAVE DELIGHTFUL OUTING.

After Luncheon at Great Establishment's Cafe, the Party, Numbering Sixteen Hundred, Goes to Seashore in Special Cars—Fine Programme of Sports, Followed by Dance.

PLAYA DEL REY, July 10.—With the system peculiar to the great Hamburger department store, the third annual seaside outing of its employés was brought to a highly successful conclusion at this popular playground this afternoon. The store was closed promptly at 12:30 o'clock, and then luncheon was served in the café on the fourth floor. This was concluded at 1 o'clock, and seventeen minutes later, the employés and their families and friends, to the number of 1600, were aboard Los Angeles-Pacific special cars and en route to tidewater.

Immediately upon arrival at the strand an interesting programme of sports was presented, with results as follows:

Fifty-yard dash for boys, won by Russell Borehn; time 8s.

Thirty-yard dash for girls, won by Frances Rose; time 5s.

Obstacle races, won by John Brennan and Floyd Malone.

Thirty-yard dash for women, Miss A. Weston.

Seventy-five-yard dash for men, Earl Kalt, 11s.

Three-legged race for boys, George Wyllie and Philip Kempster.

Sack race for boys, Philip Kempster.

Potato race for women, Miss Frances Rose, first; Adela Cross, second.

Fat men's race, W. J. Fitzpatrick.

In the tug of war, the single men defeated the married ones, and in a second contest, the floor walkers conquered the employés of the receiving department.

The pie-eating contest was won by Jacob Morsiff.

Boxing contest—bantam weight, three rounds, Philip Kempster defeated Jean Ford; in the featherweight class, three rounds, draw between M. A. Frasier and Ray Fourney.

J. Finney was the winner of the boat race.

The judges of the sports were M. A. Hamburger, W. E. Chamberlain and W. N. Bailee. Mr. Hamburger also acetd as umpire of the baseball game between the "fats" and the "slats." There was almost a riot but the umpire's life was saved, although players on both sides, as well as spectators found fault with the decisions. The only thing that saved the umpire was the general belief of the employés that his body was covered with a special accident policy, to be paid out of the funds of Hamburger Employés' Benevolent Association, in case he should sustain injuries as a result of his connection with the national game. Surgeons and an ambulance were in constant attendance throughout the game, while the Playa del Rey police and fire departments were ready at a moment's notice to respond to a riot call.

All who attended the annual picnic were admonished to leave dull care behind. "Forget your troubles and have a good time," read the brochure announcing the event, and this everybody did "to the limit." During the afternoon, many of the pleasure seekers took a trolley jaunt to Santa Monica to see the automobile road race, but all returned to the playground for the evening's entertainment, which consisted of dancing. A brass band was in attendance during the afternoon, and bathing, fishing and boating were indulged by those who felt so inclined.

The outing was the second one to be conducted under the auspices of the Hamburger Employes' Benevolent Society. This organization plans to make the outings an annual event, for the purpose of bringing the co-workers into closer social touch. They are banded together for mutual protection and benefit, having during the past year paid to members more than $3000 in benefits.

Much of the success of the day's entertainment was due to the untiring efforts of W. J. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the Picnic and Transportation Committee. Eugene Cohn was chairman of the Committee on Dancing, and C. E. Adams looked after the sporting end of the programme.

TWO HURT BY AUTOS.

Girl Victim While Riding Bicycle and Deaf Man Also Suffers Bruises.

OCEAN PARK, July 10.—Lena Tarault, 11 years of age, was hit by an automobile, this afternoon, while riding a bicycle on Main street and sustained injury to her knee and wrist.

J. Knox of Bay street was also slightly injured by an auto. He is deaf and did not hear the machine as it approached.

MONROVIA.

CITIZENS ARE IN REBELLION.

MAY ESTABLISH THEIR OWN GAS AND ELECTRIC PLANTS.

Charges of Edison Company Considered Exorbitant by Many and Petition for Bond Election First Step Toward Municipal Ownership. High School Staff Elected.

MONROVIA, July 10.—A movement is afoot to establish municipal gas and electric plants capable of supplying a population of 10,000 with light, power and fuel. A petition requesting the Trustees to call an election to vote on a proposed $50,000 bond issue was put in circulation this morning and in a short time was signed by half the registered voters. It is claimed that 90 per cent. of the citizens favor the plan and it is probable the election will be held in November.

This movement is a rebellion against what are considered the exorbitant charges of the Edison company, which controls both the gas and electric supply. Complaints as to the quality of gas furnished are also numerous.

A majority of the Trustees are said to advocate municipal gas and electric plants and a committee was appointed, some months ago, to investigate such establishments in Southern California. The report of the committee has never been submitted but it is understood to be favorable.

Improvements at the city's Chapman well pumping plant have been made in anticipation of just such a contingency as the present one. The boilers installed are adequate for all the power needed both for the water system and for an electric plant should the latter be installed. The conservation of mountain water places at the city's command power which may be adequate to maintain day electric service the year around. It is deemed possible, too, to store storm water enough to furnish power for both day and night service.

TEACHERS ELECTED.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Education today, Prof. E. E. Knepper was elected principal of the High School; Miss Blanche Graham, vice-principal and teacher of English; Miss Nell Hoag, teacher of Latin and Greek; Miss Florence Hallam, teacher of science; Sophie Soloman, teacher of music and drawing; Miss Bessie Hoag, teacher of history and German; Miss Clara Roksby, teacher of mathematics and Prof. Julius Behnke, teacher of French and Spanish.

Miss Harriet Hutchins, who for the past five years has been secretary of the library board, has resigned owing to the press of other duties. The vacancy has not yet been filled.

Coronado Tent City now open.

NOT ONE ACCIDENT.

Neither Was There Drunkenness, Despite Great Crowd at Santa Monica—Rush for Food.

SANTA MONICA, July 10.—Despite the enormous crowd that invaded this city, today, to see the road races, there was not an accident, and if there was any drunkenness, or other infractions of the law, they were not observed by the half hundred Pinkertons, the special patrolmen from Los Angeles, or the 250 one-day members of the local police force.

The pangs of hunger pinched so many thousand empty stomachs at the same hour, that the city's scant facilities to accommodate were immediately swamped. People sufficiently strong in number to form a city of considerable size had eaten an early breakfast, and all developed a seaside appetite. Venice and Ocean Park eating houses were resorted to by an immense overflow, and only the presence along the course of a varied assortment of sandwitch wagons, cook wagons from the bean ranches and improvised lunch counters prevented actual suffering. Soft drink shops were also generously patronized, and North Santa Monica's lone saloon will not soon forget the rush that overcame it to supply the demand for the brew of the hop.

The races, today, have demonstrated to the satisfaction of Santa Monica the fact that her system of oiled roads is a success. The prediction was freely made that after the two races, the oil-tamped highways would be so badly cut up that they would have to be rebuilt. This is, fortunately, not the case. After the ten days of practice and when the four hundred miles of racing had been completed by the last of the small cars, Mayor Dudley went over the entire course. He said the road had not been injured. There are no bad cuts, and the repair work that will be required will cost only a few dollars.

CLERGYMAN SELLS GROVE.

Orange Orchard Near Pomona Goes at a Price of Over a Thousand Dollars Per Acre.

POMONA, July 10.—Rev. E. C. Jacka of this city has sold his ten-acre orange grove on San Bernardino avenue west of Mountain avenue to G. E. Moore of this city for $13,500, through the agency of E. E. Gillen & Co.

Principal Musician Munden of Los Angeles, has been appointed drum major of the Seventh Regiment Band, N.G.C.

Prof. F. P. Brackett and family of Pomona College are enjoying their annual outing at Catalina.

Mrs. John Leadingham has returned from Long Beach, where she has been visiting her daughter.

GLENDORA.

GLENDORA, July 10.—Dr. A. E. Englehardt has purchased a twenty-acre tract improved with ten-room two-story house. The land is set solid to bearing orange trees. B. Staggers was the vendor; consideration not stated.

E. L. Eyer has sold his six-room residence and two lots fronting on Minnehaha avenue, to E. W. Hawkins, consideration $2200.

J. A. Lewis has sold his six-room cottage and lot fronting North Bennett avenue to Rev. M. Dexter of Gilroy, consideration not stated. The new owner expects to take possession at the close of the present conference year.

The Odd Fellows' Lodge, No. 404, gave an open installation service and a banquet at the Glendora Operahouse Thursday evening. A special feature was a beautiful drill given by Canton No. 17, Covina Lodge.

PALMS.

PALMS, July 10.—The Chamber of Commerce will meet Monday night to take the initial steps toward securing an election to bond the district for the purpose of establishing an electric-lighting plant.

FIRE AT ONTARIO.

Frame House Partially Destroyed. New Water Schedule Causing Much Discussion.

ONTARIO, July 10.—A frame house at the corner of B street and Lemon avenue was partially destroyed by fire this morning. E. Jones and family occupied one-half of it and lost all their possessions. Mrs. Brown, who lived in the other half, saved some of her furniture and clothing.

CITIZENS TAKING NOTICE.

Ontario has a new domestic water schedule in force outside the one-half mile square served by the city system. It reads: Family use, $1; baths, 10 cents each; toilets, 5 cents each; lawns, 2 cents per 100 square feet; horses, 10 cents each; cows, 5 cents each; boarding-houses and Japanese camps, 10 cents per person. The schedule is causing much discussion.

The automobile races drew a large number of enthusiasts from here to Santa Monica.

LONG BEACH BOAT IS NEAR A COLLISION.

Act of Steering Toward Big Steamer Instead of Away from Her Is Followed by Change of Captains of Smaller Pleasure Craft—Arrangements for Cotton States Special.

LONG BEACH, July 10.—Twenty passengers on the launch Nellie held their breath for a few moments last night, and some of them have not fully recovered from the shock of a near collision with a big ocean steamer at the entrance of San Pedro harbor.

The Nellie with her load was en route to San Pedro and the steamer was just leaving. For some reason the captain appeared to have lost his head and steered directly for the big boat and ran within a yard of the bow before he recovered his wits and sheered off.

So close was the impending collision that one of the crew ripped off the wood strip holding the life preservers and began handing them out. The Nellie returned to Long Beach at midnight. Today a new captain, Roy Van Orman, is in charge.

"COTTON STATES" SPECIAL.

The "Cotton States Elks Special" containing eight coaches and a diner will be parked on the Seaside Park tracks of the Pacific Electric tomorrow morning and will remain during the Los Angeles reunion. The special comes from Meridian, Miss., and is in charge of Col. Allen McCants, United States District Attorney for Mississippi. Special Pacific Electric cars will take the Missippians to Los Angeles every day, returning them in the evening. Telephone booths were erected along the tracks today and sanitary arrangements were made for the visitors during their stay.

The Cincinnati Elks, in charge of the Long Beach Reception Committee, arrived at 4 o'clock this morning and were given quarters on the fifth floor of the Virginia. They were tired but happy and a few hours' sleep put them all to the good.

TO STOP EROSION.

To prevent the washing out of the sand along the west side of the ocean entrance and between the jetty and the bascule bridge a row of sheet piling was driven today by the Mercereau pile driver which came over from San Pedro by way of the Cerritos slough. The sand was being washed out by the sweep of the tide through the entrance. The electric dredger, which has been receiving new cutter knives, resumed its work this afternoon.

One hundred and sixty men and women, members of the International Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which has been in session in Los Angeles, spent today at Long Beach, picnicking in the Auditorium. The municipal band gave them a concert during the dinner hour. Most of the party remained over tonight to dance.

A district school meeting of the voters in the territory will be held Monday evening at the High School to instruct the school board what to do relative to establishing and maintaining a school building north of Signal Hill. C. W. Casaboom has donated a site and the school board has the old Burnett structure available, but cannot take action without authority from the district residents. There is no apparent objections and the necessary instructions will probably be given.

Justice Hart last night united in marriage Jesus A. Costaysias and Gertrude Suniga, both of middle age.

Mrs. Malone, living at No. 742 American avenue, fell last evening down a flight of stairs, sustaining a fracture of the left arm.

FLASH IN AIR.

USE HEAVENS TO GREET ELKS.

WIRELESS JOY MESSAGE SENT FROM AVALON.

Sea Will Also Be Pressed Into Service to Make Pleasant the Visit of the Brethren Next Saturday. Fifteen Hundred Pounds of Fish to Be Barbecued.

AVALON, July 10.—The powers of the air were pressed into service today to convey to the visiting Elks in Los Angeles a salutation from Santa Catalina Island. "Cordial greetings. The golden key to this magic isle awaits all visiting Elks. It is yours."

This was the message from the Executive Committee on the island ticked out by wireless to the incoming herds.

"Avalon for the Elks" is the cry. The streets of the town are gaily decked. Every Elk who steps off a steamer will pass beneath a triumphal arch with the mystic signs of the order thereon, and adorned with fresh flowers.

The sea, as well as the air, will be called upon to minister to the guests. Fishermen will drag the deep for 1500 pounds of barracuda, to be barbecued for next Saturday's feast to the general officers of the Elks. The visitors will learn the meaning of abalone chowder and other distinctive dishes.

Special boat service was started today with four trips each way between the island and the mainland, to continue to the 19th inst., inclusive.

OPENS SUMMER HOME.

Mrs. Hancock Banning opened her summer home in Descanso Cañon this week, for the first time in two years, and it promises to be a veritable paradise for a youthful set this season. Hancock Banning, Jr., who has been attending Thatcher School, in Nordhoff, and little Miss Eleanor from Marlborough School, are here for the vacation, and a merry party of young friends has been their house guests for several days. They include: Miss Marian Fitzhugh of San Francisco, Douglas Van Dyke and Elton Brown of Los Angeles.

Miss Louise Roberts, a piquant little beauty from San Bernardino, is with Mrs. J. B. Mhoon and Miss Marjorie Mhoon of Pasadena at the Metropole.

Mrs. Flora G. Bland is established at the hotel with her two daughters, Miss Bland and Mrs. F. D. Parker, and the Crown City is also represented by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Morehaus and Mrs. E. H. Gronendyke.

Capt. and Mrs. C. M. Goodall and their pretty young daughter, Miss Helen, from Oakland, arrived yesterday to spend their ninth season on the island. They are at the Metropole.

The president of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, W. H. Garrett, and family, from Baltimore, are among the summer visitors, and a familiar figure at the hotel is Hon. Walter Davis of El Paso, Tex.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips of Los Angeles are located at the Metropole, and other Los Angeleños are: Mrs. D. M. Warnock, Carroll Allen and Master Gynne Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lippincott of Los Angeles are enjoying an outing of a few weeks here, and are located in a quiet cottage near the golf club. Miss Rose Lippincott and Master Joseph are with them, and Miss Marie Vallely is a guest.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hupp of Los Angeles have opened their cottage.

SHE GETS BIG ONE.

"I believe I have a big one," said Mrs. D. F. Warnock of Los Angeles yesterday, as she pulled in the huge yellowtail off San Clemente, which won for her the silver button of the Light Tackle Club. The fish was a beauty, and tipped the scales at thirty and three-fourths pounds, after shrinkage. The two men in the party, Judge J. R. Hampton of Clifton, Ariz., and Frank Hudson of Los Angeles, qualified for the bronze button, and in all ten yellowtail weighing over twenty-six pounds each were caught.

Mrs. Warnock is a handsome, dark-eyed disciple of Isaac Walton, who has a wonderful record in the fishing world. A gold medal was presented to her several years ago for a tuna caught near the island. Only two other women, Mrs. Conner and Mrs. Dickinson, have had the good fortune to pull from the water the elusive tuna, but Mrs. Warnock's was the largest. The fair fisherwoman is one of the regular summer sojourners at Catalina. Last year she spent the season in Europe, and missed the annual fishing. She intends to start early in September for China and Japan, and will spend six months in the Orient.

R. C. Manley of Lawrence, Kan., won a gold button in the Light Tackle Club today. He was fishing in the launch "Clover" off San Clemente, and drew in a magnificent yellowtail weighing forty-four and one-fourth pounds.

Edwin Winfield of Los Angeles caught the largest rock bass since 1905 yesterday off Ship Rock at the Isthmus. The fish weighed nine and one-half pounds, and three-six tackle was used.

FUNERAL SERVICE.

Funeral services for Advid Shiel, who died in Avalon on Tuesday morning, were held in the Congregational Church. Many floral offerings attested to the respect and esteem in which he was held. He leaves a mother. Advid Shiel was born in Brussels, Ontario, Can., September 19, 1870, and was educated at Upper Canada College and Toronto University. He was an electric engineer, having been eight years in the Westinghouse Electric Company. Since 1891 he had lived in California.

OLD WELL DEVELOPED.

Soldiers' Home Water Supply Materially Increased—Storehouse to Be Built.

SOLDIERS' HOME, July 10.—Experimenting on an abandoned well in a gravel bed about twenty feet north of the quartermaster's storehouse, resulted in adding 52,000 gallons to the Home's daily water supply.

Hundreds of people in automobiles, and several thousand on foot found vantage places in the Home park, today, from which to watch the road race.

Bids were opened, today, for construction of a commissary storehouse. The lowest bid—by Cruikshank and Sommers—was $17,887.

RECENT DEATHS.

John A. Pingree, late Co. I, Tenth Ohio Infantry, a native of Maine, admitted from Los Angeles in 1905, died July 8, aged 76.

passed an act submitting to the people of the State the question of bonding the State for $18,000,000 with which to build such a system of highways as I have mentioned. This question will be voted at the next general election, and unless I mistake the signs manifested everywhere it will carry by a large majority.

"It will then be the duty of the next Legislature to enact laws necessary to carry out this great project so that the best results may be secured. I favor the bringing to this State of the most expert road builders of the country, so that the roads, when built, will not be experiments merely, but will be constructed along scientific lines, so our people will get the best for their money.

"Where the road passes over a highway already constructed by the county, which is up to the standard adopted by the engineer of the State, then the State should take it over as a State highway, and refund to the county what the road would have reasonably cost the State had it built it in the first instance. The law passed last winter provides for this.

"With the building of State highways traversing California, and with the construction of lateral roads by the counties connecting therewith, this State will have a system of roads that no other has, and we will have done that which will greatly add to the wealth of our people and increase wonderfully our population. The increased wealth of the State directly caused by the construction of such a system will pay, and more than pay, the bonded indebtedness incurred and our people will never know that such a debt exists.

"The debt is nothing; the building up of our State is everything. We are here to do our part, and let us do it fearlessly and well. This commonwealth will be, in time to come, an empire great in population and rich in treasure. It is to be built by those who live here, and who come to make their homes here. We have our part to perform, and your share, I know, will be cheerfully done. The internal improvements of a nation make it great, and this is equally true of a State. Many things are necessary to insure the future greatness of our State, but nothing is more important than good roads, and nothing is more greatly to be desired."

TRUSTEES ORGANIZE.

The first board of trustees of the new Normal School of Sloyd and Home Economies perfected organization here today by electing Clio Lloyd, Santa Barbara, president; M. B. McDuffie, Santa Barbara, secretary, and Maj. Driffill, Oxnard, vice-president. Of seven trustees, including Gov. Gillett, four were present. The remainder of the day was spent inspecting sites offered for the first school of its kind to be established in the West.

RAILROAD COMMISSION.

The State Railroad Commission held its first session in Santa Barbara today, under the new law, which provides fourteen places for semi-annual meetings. No matters of importance came up and the commission left this afternoon for the south. They will meet in San Diego Monday and in Los Angeles Tuesday to hear complaints, if any.

Coronado cool and comfortable.

AUTO GOES OVER BLUFF.

Occupants Escape Injury in Accident at Ventura—Costly Repairs Near Punta Gorda.

VENTURA, July 10.—An automobile, driven by James Roth, of the local branch of J. K. Armsby & Co., who had as guests a son of J. K. Armsby, and Paul de Arman, skidded and went off the bluff at the Gosnell turn, in Ventura avenue, late yesterday afternoon. The machine turned over the foot of the hill but no one of the occupants was injured. The car was wrecked.

At the scene of last winter's washout on the Coast line near Punta Gorda, the Southern Pacific is using thousands of tons of rock to construct an embankment to hold back the sea and to prevent the mountain coming down to cover the roadbed. Incidentally, the railroad company is making provision for the country road between here and Rincon. The quarries at Camarillo and near Simi are being worked, after months of idleness.

LOW RATE TO CHAUTAUQUA.

The Southern Pacific, Salt Lake and Santa Fe roads have made a round trip rate of a fare and one-third from all Southern California points to the Ventura Chautauqua, which opens July 23 and continues for ten days.

The Supervisors have set aside the special road district in which is to be constructed the petrolithic boulevard from the western limit of this town throughout the whole length of the Casitas Pass to the Santa Barbara county line.

The Southern Pacific has let the contract for paving the local depot grounds by the petrolithic process.

Superior Judge Clarke, of this county, will be one of the speakers at the Native Sons' celebration at Santa Barbara on September 9.

Coronado has best climate.

HEMET REALTY ACTIVE.

HEMET, July 10.—Fire at Relief Hot Springs this morning destroyed the cottage occupied by the hotel servants, who lost all their effects.

The Hemet Land Company has sold to William G. Beihler ten acres east of Saboba street for $2000, and to H. B. Daniel of New Jersey ten acres on Stetson avenue, for $2000.

W. F. Whittier has sold to E. P. Burnham a lot for $350, and to Burdteet Raynor thirty-seven feet on Carmalita street, for $400.

J. A. Binkley has sold to Ada M. Hogue a lot in the Burnham subdivision on Acacia avenue for $300, and to H. L. Thompson two lots in the same subdivision for $600.

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, July 10.—A contract has been let for sinking an oil well on the Dierksen property, three miles east of town. Ten-inch casing will be used. It is believed oil will be found at a depth of less than 1000 feet. Oil sand was found in a water well in that district several months ago. Los Angeles capitalists will put down the well. If oil is found it will mean the opening of a new field in Orange county.

EVIL PEN WORK.

ACT AT MECCA HIS UNDOING.

BAD CHECK MAN GOES TO THE PENITENTIARY.

Superior Judge of Riverside County Sends Him to San Quentin for Three Years—Young Prima Donna to Return to Scenes of Her Successes.

RIVERSIDE, July 10.—J. E. Chapin, Jr., a young man who came to California but three weeks ago from New York City, was sentenced by Judge Densmore today to serve three years in San Quentin for having passed a fraudulent check on the First National Bank of Los Angeles last Saturday at Mecca.

Chapin wrote out a check for $35.85, and gave it to E. L. Hill of Mecca. As soon as it became known that he had no funds in the bank to meet the payment of the check, he was placed under arrest and brought to the County Jail at Riverside. He pleaded guilty this morning, and sentence was pronounced at once.

SINGER AT OLD HOME.

Miss Marcia Craft, the young prima donna who has been visiting Riverside friends for the past six weeks, will leave with her mother Monday on her return to Germany. Early in the autumn she will begin a five years' engagement as leading soprano in the Royal Operahouse at Munich. She will introduce "Madame Butterfly," giving it as her initial performance in that city. She will also sing in the leading classic and light opera roles as well.

During her stay at her old home town, Miss Craft has received much social attention. This is her first visit to Riverside since going abroad, twelve years ago, to study for grand opera.

COURT VACATION.

The vacation of the Superior Court will begin Monday, to continue for two months. The only business to be done in the court in that time will be the calling of the probate calender July 31 and August 21. Judge Densmore will pass his vacation at Seattle and other northern points.

Round trip to Coronado only $4.

CORONA.

CORONA, July 10.—A $9000 contract for a two-story 50x86-foot Sunday-school building for the Methodist Church was awarded to A. M. Reichard of Corona last evening.

The building, which is to be an addition to the main church, is to be completed by November 1 and will accommodate 400 scholars. With furnishings it will cost $10,000.

The Methodists at the quarterly conference last evening requested the return of their pastor, Rev. George B. Cliff, with his salary increased $200, making a total of $1600, with parsonage.

SAN BERNARDINO.

BRAVE DRIVER SAVES LIVES.

DELIBERATELY TURNS HORSES INTO A TREE.

His Action Prevents Collision. Team Makes Frightful Dash Down Grade on Lytle Creek Road. Knights of Columbus Candidates Will Go to Los Angeles.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 10.—John Davidson saved the lives of two civil engineers on the Lytle Creek grade this morning by deliberately turning his team of runaway horses, attached to a big mountain wagon, into a tree. The horses had taken fright at a burro two miles above the tree, and after a frightful dash down the grade were about to plunge into the rear of a buggy occupied by the engineers.

Davidson's two small children were with him on the seat of the wagon when his horses ran away. They climbed into the wagon bed and escaped without injury. The wagon was wrecked and both horses were badly injured, and Davidson was tossed fifty feet, but escaped with nothing more than a severe jolting.

INITIATION TONIGHT.

A big party of Knights of Columbus will go to Los Angeles Sunday to participate in the initiation of a class of candidates. The initiation was to have occurred at Ontario, but owing to the Elks' gathering at Los Angeles that city was chosen. The candidates from this section are: W. C. Kavanaugh, H. G. Root, O. W. Reddy, F. F. Grinn, all of San Bernardino; J. H. Dudley and J. M. Henneberger, Redlands.

WILL OPEN BIDS.

Monday night the Mayor and City Council will open bids for a large amount of street work. Already five contracting firms have submitted bids, and others have asked for blanks. Under these contracts paving will be done on Thurd street, from G street to the Santa Fé station, asphalt macadam being specified; oiled macadam will be used on Third street, between C and D; on Base Line from C to Waterman, oiled macadam will be used, and the same work also done on First street from Mount Vernon west to the city limits.

COLTON.

COLTON, July 10.—Miss Maud G. Graham Hanna, daughter of Mrs. H. B. Hanna, and Robert Emery, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Emery, were married this morning at the home of the bride's mother, on H street, Justice Thomas of San Bernardino performing the ceremony. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Emery left today for Los Angeles. They expect to visit all beach towns. After the 1st of August the young couple will be at home to friends at their residence in East Colton.

William Morrison Cheatham, aged 13 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Cheatham, died at the family residence on Ninth street yesterday afternoon. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the First Methodist Church. Rev. E. L. B. McClellan will officiate. Interment will be at Hermosa Cemetery.

PROVES SUCCESSFUL.

Santa Ana's New Way of Making People Pay for Dogs Results in Larger Collection.

SANTA ANA, July 10.—The city's new system of collecting dog licenses has proven successful. Last year a dog catcher from Los Angeles was hired to round up the delinquents, and the usual unpleasant scenes and bitterness occurred. The Trustees authorized a change in system. This year dogs were assessed at $2 per head. The City Marshal has almost completed the work of collecting under the assessment plan without the assistance of a dog catcher, and has taken in 10 per cent. more money than was obtained last year. Next week twenty dogs will be killed, the owners preferring to have the animals slain rather than pay $2 to keep them alive.

The Richland Walnut Growers' Association of Orange today awarded a contract to George Kuchel for building a new packing-house. The price is $2200. This is the association's first year in business.

Co. L of this city will go to the Seventh Regiment encampment at Bay City July 20 with over fifty men. The company had a slump last winter and mustering out was threatened. A new captain, N. A. Ulm, was elected, and under his leadership it has gotten into first-class shape.

ONTARIO.

ONTARIO, July 10.—About 10 o'clock Thursday night two masked men held up a citizen named Navez. They demanded his money, and finding he had none, beat him with a club. When he escaped he went home, procured a gun and went in pursuit of his assailants, but did not find them.

The local contingent of Elks who hold membership in the Pomona Lodge will leave for their headquarters at the Hayward Hotel in Los Angeles today. They have decorated their quarters, and will keep open house, as all good Elks should.

BAY CITY.

BAY CITY, July 10.—Garvanza Methodist Sunday-school pupils arrived early this morning in two special cars.

Ground is being broken today for the camp of the National Guard. Eight hundred men will assemble on July 20.

Miss Pauline Howard of Los Angeles returned to Los Angeles today after spending several days with her sister, Mrs. Charles Keane.

LOSES FORTUNE.

MINER'S GOLDEN BARGE IS UPSET, TREASURE SINKS.

NEEDLES, July 10.—H. Fletcher Harris, who despite the aristocratic manner in which he signs his name, is a thrifty miner, of the horny-handed type, is mourning the loss of a cargo of gold, which represented the labor of several weeks, his loss being the result of a heavy storm on the Colorado river.

Fletcher loaded at Searchlight eight tons of high grade ore on a barge, which he was floating down the river to the smelter here. In mid-stream, six miles below Eldorado Cañon, his craft encountered a storm. The heavy waves, laden with silt, struck the boat and in a twinkling upset it, all the ore sliding into the water.

It is estimated that the ore would have averaged $450 to the ton, and Harris claims his total loss at $3600. In the same storm an Indian craft was upset, and one of the occupants, a squaw, was drowned.

Drs. SHORES GREAT OFFER EXTENDED to ELKS' WEEK VISITORS

$3 A Month

ANY CURABLE CHRONIC DISEASE

$3 A Month

Of Whatever Name or Nature Treated Until Cured—All Medicines Free

Hundreds of people have written us from all over Southern California that they were coming to Los Angeles during Elks' Week, and asked that we extend our $3-a-month rate so they could apply in person for examination and first treatments, that they might be successfully treated at home later.

To grant this request DRS. SHORES throw down the bars to all who apply this week for treatment—and say frankly that many can be cured in a month—and that you will be CURED TO STAY CURED.

BEWARE OF STEERERS AND FAKIRS

On every street corner you meet what are known as steerers trying to induce people to go to this Doctor or that Doctor. We warn the public that these are "bunco" men trying to steer them into some fakir's office, who splits the fee with them. If you need the services of a physician go to one of known reliability. Drs. Shores & Shores can refer you to hundreds of cured patients. Make no mistake.

WHY LOW FEES

Drs. Shores & Shores are not experimenters. They know to a certainty every symptom of disease and how to treat it successfully. Neither are they exorbitant in their charges—they know that every dollar is most valuable to people who are sick and deprived wholly or partly from earning a living. The fee of $3 a month covers every charge or expense.

$3 THIS SPECIAL RATE APPLIES TO ALL who have Catarrh, Asthma, Deafness, Lung Trouble, Catarrh of the Stomach, Kidneys, Liver, Bladder—or any Complication of Catarrhal Diseases; or other Chronic Blood or Nervous Diseases (that are curable); but you must apply before July 17. $3

What Well-Known Evangelists Say

Read the testimonials of Evangelist H. D. Kennedy and wife. They are well and favorably known from one end of the Pacific Coast to the other. They have tried Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment for catarrh and recommend it to others. Their home address is 444 South Grand avenue, Los Angeles.

MRS. H. D. KENNEDY.

Mrs. Kennedy says: "I have been greatly distressed with catarrhal troubles for a good many years, it having badly affected one of my tonsils, and I had all the usual symptoms that go with catarrhal trouble. I can truthfully say that after using Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment a little over a month I am greatly benefited. My voice is gradually improved and I feel better in every way."

H. D. KENNEDY.

Mr. Kennedy says: "Being a public speaker, my catarrhal trouble naturally affected my throat, having huskiness of the voice and other troublesome symptoms in the way of mucus dropping in the throat, with irritation and dryness. I applied to Drs. Shores & Shores for relief, and after one month's treatment I can truthfully say I am greatly benefited in every way, and I can recommend the treatment to any one in need of the same.

(Signed) "H. D. KENNEDY."

ORIGIN

Of a Famous Human Food.

The story of great discoveries or inventions is always of interest.

An active brain worker who found himself hampered by lack of bodily strength and vigor and could not carry out the plans and enterprises he knew how to conduct, was led to study various foods and their effects upon the human system. In other words, before he could carry out his plans he had to find a food that would carry him along and renew his physical and mental strength.

He knew that a food which was a brain and nerve builder, (rather than a mere fat maker) was universally needed. He knew that meat with the average man does not accomplish the desired results. He knew that the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centers is made from Albumen and Phosphate of Potash obtained from food. Then he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts, the now famous food. It contains the brain and nerve building food elements in condition for easy digestion.

The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked sturdiness and activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry on the daily duties without fatigue or exhaustion.

Grape-Nuts food is in no sense a stimulant, but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily waste of brain and nerves.

Its flavor is charming and being fully and thoroughly cooked at the factory it is served instantly with cream.

The signature of the brain worker spoken of, C. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts.

BREVITIES.

To "Liner" Advertisers: Dating from June 1st, classified advertising in the Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1¼c Sunday. Close calculations covering a period of several months develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1st. Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it. The present "want" ad rate has been in effect, for many years, though the circulation of the paper now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad service. The Times-Mirror Company.

Remember the slogan: "Buy and Boost Home Products." For daily references, see page 11, Part II, of The Times, containing list of wide-awake manufacturers, under the heading "Made in Southern California." WEALTHY CHINESE HOST.

George Lem opened his handsome Peking Café last night at No. 419 South Main street, by giving a dinner of oriental make-up and proportions, to a large party of gentlemen representing the official and newspaper life of the city. The thirteen courses were strictly Chinese dishes, prepared and served by Chinese help. Mr. Lem has profited by the example of restaurateurs of the city and has fixed up a very handsome establishment, with the idea of making it a place where ladies and gentlemen may go and get genuine Chinese cookery. He made an address of welcome to his guests last night, in good English, and frankly asked them to "pass it along." But Mr. Lem is not solely a sordid moneymaker. He is a benefactor of his race, and among his benevolences is the education of a large number of Chinese students in a Chicago school, paying all their expenses from his private means. He is generally known among the business men of this city and is highly respected.

HONOR RAILROAD MAN.

Friends of Promoted One Tender a Banquet to Him and Also Present a Gift.

W. D. Stubbs, for two or three years traveling freight nad passenger agent for the Wabash system under General Agent Ross C. Cline, was tendered a jolly banquet by the railroad boys last night at the Hayward. He was also presented with a handsome silver toilet set in token of the general gratification with which his promotion to be general agent in the northwest territory has brought to his brother railroad men.

Mr. Stubbs was formerly with the Southern Pacific, and the banquet last night was attended by J. B. Stubbs, assistant general freight and passenger agent for the Southern Pacific at San Francisco; Ralph Stubbs, assistant general freight and passenger agent for the Southern Pacific at Tucson, Ariz.; Donald Stubbs of the legal department of the Southern Pacific at Chicago; Ross Nagle, freight agent of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company at Seattle, and a number of other men well known in railway circles, among whom was T. Fitzgerald, who acted as toastmaster.

In the course of the evening's festivities, Mr. Cline announced that J. E. Holton, who has been with the Wabash system for several years, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Stubbs in Los Angeles as traveling freight and passenger agent.

The two men promoted are highly esteemed among the railroad men of Southern California, as well as among those who have had occasion to transact business with them.

CURRY SIGHTSEEING.

Secretary of State Says He's Not Campaigning; Simply Here to Witness the Elks' "Doings."

Secretary of State Charles F. Curry, who, it is reported from Sacramento, has already started his campaign for Governor, reached Los Angeles yesterday from San Bernardino and registered at the Hollenbeck. He stated last evening that he had not come here for the purpose of inaugurating his campaign; in fact, he said that he is not yet certain that he will enter the race.

"I came down to spend the week at the reunion of the Elks, of which I am a member," said Mr. Curry, "and, even if I were to be a candidate for Governor, I should not engage in any political activity at this time."

Mr. Curry will not enter the race if Gov. Gillett should evince a desire to succeed himself. If the Governor wishes to run again it is pretty certain that he will have no opposition from any of his friends, and Curry is one of them. But it has been stated on many occasions that the Governor has no desire for a second term. If this be so, it may be accepted as a certainty that Curry will be a candidate. He would have a great advantage throughout the State, under the direct primary law, because of his wide acquaintance.

STEALING CHARITY'S CLOAK.

Associated Charities Issues Warning Against So-called "Humanity Industrial Mission."

According to the Associated Charities, another fake "mission" has been unearthed, and the public is warned against the promoters. There are a number of well-known and worthy institutions of the kind in the city and people should be on their guard.

It is operating under the name: "Humanity Industrial Mission," and solicits clothing, magazines, household goods and other cast-off articles. Secretary Sewell writes of it: "We find that they are gathering together such articles as they can get and selling them for their own profit; that the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association has absolutely refused to indorse these people. Therefore, believing them to be impostors, by using the cloak of charity to cover their personal gains, I am instructed to warn the public against them."

BAKERSFIELD PICNIC.

All former residents of Bakersfield and visitors from that city are to attend a picnic to be held at Point Firmin, San Pedro, on August 8. The committee in charge of arrangements includes Dr. L. S. and Dora B. Rogers. Each guest is asked to come early and "bring a basket, if convenient."

CHICAGO PREACHER TODAY.

Rev. Dr. Ray Harker of Chicago will preach morning and evening in the First Methodist Church today, during the absence of Dr. Charles Edward Locke. The services have the support of a large choir which renders exceptionally fine music.

SUCCESS

ALWAYS TELLS A TRUE STORY.

Behind the career of the individual who succeeds in any walk in life will be found genuine merit with untiring industry and persevering zeal.

Success is not accidental; neither is it accidental that the volume of classified "Liners" printed in the Los Angeles Times exceeds the volume printed in any other newspaper in the United States. This tremendous mass of advertising comes because back of it is true merit in the form of character and circulation—the steady patronage of the solid classes who are regular readers of The Times. They peruse its news columns daily because they have been made to know by years of experience that it prints the most news—as well as the most reliable news—that from its columns are barred revolting crimes and all the "yellow" and immoral stuff which is made the leading feature of so many daily newspapers.

Thus it happens that the readers of The Times, being men of affairs, men of character, brains, standing, and with the wherewithal to "make the wheels go round," render the tens of thousand of business annoucements appearing monthly in its "Liner" pages valuable to the advertiser, thus leading all who wish to make announcements to the business men of this community straight to the "Liner" columns of The Times.

LOS ANGELES PUTS ON RICHEST OF GALA GARB FOR GRAND RECEPTION OF THE VISITING ELKS.

Quarter-Million Dollars Expended in Decorations of Streets and Buildings in Business Section—Flags and Pennants Wave in Gorgeous Lanes of Beauty, and Myriad Lights Glow at Night.

FROM skyline to sidewalk for mile upon mile, Los Angeles is agleam, aglow, a-flutter and a-glimmer for the Elks now here and coming. The last flags were raised yesterday, and the last bit of purple and white bunting was tacked in place; all the figures of elks and elks' heads, bears, eagles and other national birds and animals that the decorators could manufacture out of papier mache have been corralled on store and hotel fronts, and every bit of available "juice" is ready for the grand flash of electric illumination tomorrow night.

More than a quarter of a million dollars has been spent in dressing the city in gala garb for the Elks. Decorations of buildings and streets never before were so general nor so effective. If the effect fails to please the visitors, it will not be the fault of the earnest thousands who have labored for weeks to make a handsome display. But no one has heard yet of any complaint of a lack of color or light anywhere.

In all the West, declare those who know, there never before has been so elaborate a decoration of streets and buildings for day and night show—a dazzling, brilliant, harmonious scheme.

The Times Building Bedecked for the Festive Week.

For street illumination alone the Elks' General Committee has used fully 20,000 lights in addition to the regular lighting system. Central Park's trees are to glow like one great Christmas tree, and intermingled with the foliage are strands of white and purple lights, 1500 of them. The last of the wiring will be finished early this morning, and tonight the complete system will be ready.

Another 20,000 lights, approximately, have been used by downtown merchants in their decorative effects. While this great demand for electric current has been made on the electric companies, it is said by officials of these concerns that they expect the "load" on their wires will not be far above normal, because of the fact that nightly hundreds of residences all over the city will be closed and dark while the occupants are participating in the festivities.

All this gorgeous effect has not been the work of a few days. It is the culmination of months of thought and patient endeavor. W. P. Chase & Co., who have been the most extensive decorators during this carnival, began their labors last January. Eighty men have been busy at this company's yards and factory, creating the paper maché designs so freely used, and for three months this firm has had a large force of men engaged in construction of floats and set pieces for displays on buildings. James Lang & Co., who decorated Elks' headquarters and many other buildings, also had many men at work

An idea of the work which the decorating firms have so successfully undertaken may be gleaned by the fact that the Chase company filled contracts for the decoration of 136 large buildings, beside lesser establishments. It has carried 250 men on its pay roll.

PILLARS OF FIRE.

Among the most notable of the decorations, and the most extensive design undertaken, is that of the Hamburger building at Eighth street and Broadway. A peculiar point in this decorative scheme is that the beautiful building stands forth untouched by the mark of streamer or festoon, and the adornment, which is on the walks around the three sides of this mammoth building, serves to set forth its beauty.

A series of towers, connected with festoons, is the motif of this scheme of adornment. From each of the three corners of the building on the street lines, and at the extreme outside edge of the sidewalk, arise stately white towers. They are 14x14 feet at their base, and arise to a height of fifty-eight feet.

In graceful lines the towers diminish in size until at the capital an airy balustrade encloses the four sides of a space from which arises a large star, outlined in small electric lights and from the center of the column extends upward a slender flagstaff, the crown of which is a ball of fire, composed of many electric lights.

Masses of purple lights are placed on the corners of the balustrade with charming effect. Between the three main towers has been placed a series of lesser shafts, each 7x8 feet at the base and rising thirty feet. Each of these lesser columns is surmounted by golden urns on stands of bronze, and each column is outlined with small electric lights. Between these and the main corner towers are swung double festoons of white and purple Japanese lanterns covering electric lights.

The building itself stands forth in the center of this exquisite decorative scheme, outlined from ground floor line to cornice with hundreds of electric globes. A thirty-six-foot flag pole arises from the building floating a mammoth flag.

It is estimated that this decorative effect has required an outlay of more than $5000. It was the work of James Lang & Company.

ELKS' HEADQUARTERS.

The Long company also transformed the old Phillips building, at Franklin and North Spring streets, from a dismal rookery into a place of beauty that is one of the striking features of the downtown streets. A description and picture of this building was given in The Times of last Wednesday.

The Elks' building at Olive and Third streets is beautified in a general scheme similar to that of headquarters. Streamers of the Elks' colors, filmy festoons of paper lace and

"THE TIMES" ELKS' WEEK.

This issue of The Times is the first of a series of special and brilliant Elks' Numbers to continue seven days.

Beginning Monday, The Times will print the narratives and illustrations of the doings of the antlered herds on paper tinted a royal purple, the color of the Elks' order.

Next Saturday morning's Times will be a huge sheet containing all the complete illustrated reports of the week in serial arrangement. It will be the "Whole Story of Elks' Week" edition, the best single newspaper of all to send back home.

The Daily Times for the whole week (seven issues) will be sent to any address in the Postal Union for 25 cents, postage paid.

Send in your orders for the Biggest Paper On Earth, to be mailed to your eastern friends for the week.

Money In Music During Elks Week

It is estimated that the Elks will leave between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 in Los Angeles and vicinity. Are you going to get your share of this money?

The Elks will go where they are best amused. If you have music in your cafe, moving picture show, cigar store or restaurant, you will get the business. Put in a "Peerless" or a "Berry-Wood" Electric Piano—the music will draw the crowds and the nickel-in-the-slot device will help you to pay for the piano. Prices $550 up. TERMS. WE CAN DELIVER NOW.

VICTOR EDISON

You will certainly need a Victor when the Elks are here. Buy one now—it's a simple matter to own one. Pay $3.75 cash for ten selections, then $1.00 or so weekly. Prices $10 to $250. Same general terms on Edison phonographs. No matter where you buy, the prices on Victors and Edisons are the same. The advantage of buying here is because we offer superior service. See us tomorrow.

CORRECT CLOTHES for Men Who Dress Well

The man who dresses well knows he can do it only with the aid of a master tailor. Then he gets clothes made for HIM alone—the weave and pattern which satisfy his taste, the general style that fits his individuality, and careful consideration of his physical build. These to the well-dressed man are "correct" clothes—combining style, elegance, individuality. We satisfy many well-dressed men, and, indeed, we guarantee this satisfaction, as our knowledge and experience in the best tailoring methods enable us to do. We'll be glad to show you our latest fabrics.

MELODY FROM FORTY BANDS.

Twelve Hundred Musicians in Elks' Demonstration.

Many Lodges Bringing Their Own Organizations.

Small Fortune Expended for This One Feature.

Forty bands, with a total of probably 1200 musicians, in uniform, not to mention a bunch of drum majors, that in the gorgeousness of their garb and the austerity of their poses will put kings and other potentates to the blush, will be a tremendous hit of Elks' week. Some of the finest musical organizations of the United States are on their way to Los Angeles with various lodges to take part in the various parades, and every accomplished musician in this vicinity has been engaged for nearly the entire week.

It is the belief of George Goldsmith, who is the king-pin of the Committee on Bands and Music, of which A. F. Frankenstein is chairman and Percy Hammon another member, that a finer showing will be made by Los Angeles in the matter of bands than was made at Philadelphia two years ago, when, in this respect, all other grand lodge meetings were eclipsed.

FORTUNE FOR MUSIC.

The estimate is made than the total cost for music for the occasion will be more than $150,000, this including the wages of the musicians, their railroad fare and their hotel expenses.

Some indication of the expense is given by the fact that the Los Angeles lodge will expend $7000 for the band of eighty pieces engaged to attend the celebrated White Squadron on all its meanderings, day and night. "Garry" Herrmann, candidate for Grand Exalted Ruler, has engaged Porter's Band for a week, at a cost of $5000. The same amount will be expended by his rival, J. U. Sammis of Iowa, whose musical aggregation will arrive with the Hawkeye State train today.

Many lodges are bringing their own melody, at immense cost in railroad fare and other expenses, while the local musicians engaged will represent an outlay that will amount into a small fortune.

MANY WILL COMPETE.

The great musical competition for the $1250 first prize and $500 second prize will number from twenty to thirty organizations. Visiting bands only will take part. The contest will take place on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons. All visiting organizations, and most of the local ones, will participate in all the parades, but the greatest showing will be in the great massed band march, followed by the floral parade of Friday.

The White Squadron Band, eighty-one men, will head the procession. H. P. Moore is conductor, George Goldsmith managing director, and H. B. Ford drum major.

The Salt Lake City Elks will be represented by one of the best musical organizations available, Held's Band of sixty musicians. They hope to win the first prize in the competition.

The Montana Elks on Monday will bring with them the celebrated Boston-Montana Band of sixty-four pieces. This organization is looked upon as one of the strongest contestants. It will have two drum majors, who, the Elks say, are, respectively, the tallest and the shortest in the United States. They are father and son—one 6ft. 6in. and the other 2ft. 6in. in height.

A prominent feature of the parade will be the Indian musicians of Arizona. This band of fifty pieces is composed principally of Apaches. They will appear in as natty form as their white brothers, however, and have won considerable fame for the Indian school at Phoenix, from whose pupils the members are drawn.

Bakersfield Elks will have an organization composed of sixty amateurs of marked ability.

Iowa Elks, boosting J. U. Sammis for Grand Exalted Ruler, will bring with them the famous Fifty-fourth Regiment Band of Ottumwa (Iowa.) This will be one of the largest in the parade, numbering fifty-five musicians.

FINE TEXAS BAND.

The Fourth Regiment Band of the Texas National Guard, one of the finest musical organizations in the country, will accompany the Lone Star Elks. This organization comes from Weatherford, Tex., and its reputation is even more than State-wide. It has traveled throughout the entire Southwest on various occasions and has been a tremendous drawing card wherever it has gone. A photograph of the members of the band is shown on page 7 of Part VIII of this issue of The Times. It numbers forty pieces and its drum major is something wonderful to look upon. A. Harris is director of the band.

Elks from the Sunflower State will bring the Kansas State Band of sixty-four men.

Goldfield, Nev., will have a unique musical representation—Cook's Fife and Drum Corps of Denver, an organization of fifty men. Denver Elks have engaged the Catalina Band of forty-one pieces.

Cincinnati, O., supporting "Garry" Herrmann, will be represented by Porter's Band of forty pieces, which the Buckeye citizens hope will carry off the $1250 prize. Philadelphia has engaged the Schonemann-Blanchard musicians of Los Angeles. Pittsburgh will be accompanied by the Colton Citizens' Band, thirty instruments.

Detroit is another lodge to depend on California for its musicians, having engaged the City Guard organization of San Diego, directed by Peter J. Frank. New Orleans has engaged the Greater Los Angeles Band, forty pieces.

FORTY FROM BOSTON.

Boston Elks will bring forty musicians belonging to a well-known organization of the Hub.

California lodges will be well represented musically in the celebration. Sacramento will have Greer's Band. Berkeley will bring forty musicians. Riverside, Redands, San Bernardino and Pomona Elks unite in engaging the Seventh Regiment Band of Pomona and thirty players from Riverside. Santa Ana will have thirty musicians from Fullerton. Long Beach Elks will march with John Wyllie's Band of forty pieces.

Oakland will encourage their newly-organized drill corps in their first Grand Lodge drill with a band under the direction of Col. J. K. Ritter.

San Diego will bring Ohlmeyer's Coronado Tent City musicians, sixty strong.

In addition to the organizations named there will be many others in the parade. Among the lodges which have not promised to bring musical organizations, but which, it is thought, will probably have them, are Spokane, Seattle, San Francisco, Fort Worth and El Paso.

In Friday's parade there will be many other local musicians, including the Letter Carriers' Band, E. Grahn, leader; Rykert's and the Los Angeles Military Band.

In all of the parades except that of Friday, the musical features will be in charge of Grand Esquire Raymond Benjamin. On Friday the local Band Committee will have direction of the bands.

Oakland Elks will bring a band of trumpeters, forty strong, who will afford a unique treat, so large a body of this class of musicians seldom appearing at one time in any celebration.

Kansas Headquarters.

L. M. Fall and H. H. Huntsberger president and secretary of the Kansas Society of Los Angeles, have opened State headquarters for visitors in a suite of rooms on the third floor of the Frost building, Second street and Broadway. All Kansans will be asked to register, giving their home address and city stopping place. The headquarters will be supplied with the daily papers from every city in Kansas where Elks' lodges are instituted.

Trade That Pays.

Young men to learn to operate the linotype machine; a good trade that pays above the average. The Merganthaler Linotype Company is installing over one hundred linotype machines per month. That means just so many positions to be filled at good wages.

The Los Angeles Times has installed a large auxiliary plant and has placed in charge an expert machinist and operator, making it possible for students who so desire to learn either trade (linotype machinist or operator) in shortest possible time, in six weeks' course, eight hours per day or night, $50. TAFT LANCERS' GOLDEN SHOW.

Sunshine and Oranges in the Riders' Costumes.

First Public Appearance to Be This Week.

Notable Mounts to Be Seen in Procession.

Magnificently uniformed and mounted, the Taft Lancers of the Out West Riding Club of Southern California will make their first public appearance at the head of the equestrian division of the Elks' parade to be held next Friday.

This troop of lancers is one of the most unique organizations of the kind in the United States. The troopers and officers are all members of the Out West Club. The troop ranks with the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, the Cleveland Blues of Cleveland, Batter A of St. Louis and the Philadelphia Guards.

The uniforms, which will smack something of the Royal Lancers of India, have been designed by members of the club. New York supply houses were called on for the equipment, while Los Angeles tailors made up the cloth.

Symbolic of the glorious sunshine and orange groves of Southern California are the great horsehair plumes of gold to be worn on the snow-white East Indian helmets. A gold standard from the helmet top supports this and a golden sun blazes from the helmet front. Gold chin straps complete the head gear.

MILITARY STYLE.

The uniform is of steel gray, military cut shirt and trousers, setting to a black military legging. Silver spurs, ornamented, will be worn by the officers and military silver spurs by the troopers. The shirt is set off by a shield or breast piece of light gray velvet fastened with silver buttons and ornamented with a golden sun. Silver shoulder chains are worn and white aguillettes by the officers and yellow by the men. Black army belts, black holsters and side arms, swords, carried by the officers, and lances by the men, and great white British army gloves complete the equipment.

Fair leather stock saddles will be used by the troopers and black leather saddles, highly decorated and ornamented with silver and gold, will be worn by the officers. Bridles, bit chains, martingales and saddle blankets will have silver trimmings.

Maj. Robert S. Howland will lead the Lancers. His staff officers are Adjt. George von Weber, Lieuts. E. P. Wood, W. W. Keim, A. B. Dodge, Andrew Brydon, W. A. Connoly, F. E. Davis, who will carry the national colors; R. M. Yost, Jr., with the troop flag, and Lieut. H. E. Howard.

Capt. John S. Hendrickson will lead the troop, with First Lieut. Fred Hamer, a veteran officer of the South African War, and Second Lieut. T. J. Aldrich. The first sergeant is J. B. McLaughlin, and the second sergeant is H. B. Mansfield, a veteran of South Africa and Indian campaigns.

WITH TRAINED HORSES.

The troop has been thoroughly drilled and the horses, some of them being the finest stock in the Southwest, have been taught the proper evolutions of the drill.

Among the members of the troop are the following-named: Sergt. Jack Tehen, A. P. Richardson, Dr. J. R. Ross, Corp. R. Laux, Robert A. Brown, B. C. Kendrick, H. Wernecke, Corp. B. K. Richardson, Sergt. Roy Stanton, F. D. Lutz, George B. Weidler, Corp. C. A. March, J. M. Lenone, J. G. McGaugh, W. A. Vick and Corp. J. C. Johnson, Couriers T. Cooper and Percy Howland. K. M. Dougall is the troop trumpeter.

The troop and riders of the Out West Club will assemble on Hope street between Eighth and Ninth streets on Friday morning at 8 o'clock sharp.

The display of fine horseflesh in the Out West Club division will be remarkable. W. H. Grosscup in the gaited horse division will ride a sister of the famous Mabel Rex, a beautiful black mare whose education has cost more than an ordinary college course. The pick of the West will be under saddle. Most of the animals are owned by their riders and have appeared in the show ring many times.

The first division of gaited horses will be ridden by gentlemen, this class to be known as the American Gentlemen Division. The next division will have gaited thoroughbreds, with stock or English saddles, floral decorations and ribbons.

COWBOYS—AND GIRLS, TOO.

As usual the cowboy division will be a glory of sparkling colors, fiery horses, elegant trappings, beautifully carved stock saddles and all the equipment of the range. Cow girls and cowboys will ride to show the easterners the spirit of the old western frontier.

The famous Horace Greeley stage coach, in which the editor made his trip through California, will be in a division by itself, with an escort of cowboys and cow girls. Lewis Stone, actor and former frontiersman, will be in this division.

Another division will be composed of Elks' ladies, wearing white waists and black skirts, white hats with purple bands. Their saddle blankets will be of purple, white and gold to conform to the colors of the Elks and the Out West Club.

Members of the Out West Club in caballero costume will be Grand Marshal Hammel

PATRIARCH.

OLDEST LIVING ELK COMING FOR THE GRAND REUNION.

Charles C. Clusker, of San Diego, ninety-nine years of age, and the "oldest living Elk."

CHARLES C. CLUSKER of San Diego, 99 years old and still active in business life, who claims without dispute the distinction of being the oldest living Elk, will be a familiar figure in Los Angeles during Grand Lodge week. He has attended [illegible] national gatherings of Elks and has announced his intention of coming here for several days of en[illegible] with the "boys."

Clusker, who was born in Kentucky in [illegible], is a charter member of San Bernardino Lodge No. 836, and, while he has not been in the organization nearly so long as W. Lloyd Bowron, "No. 1 of No. 1," who now is a resident of Los Angeles, he has passed many more years on earth than has any other one of the "Best People."

This patriarch Elk is engaged in the cigar business at San Diego, whither he removed from San Bernardino four years ago. He rises early each day and usually retires between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening, though on special occasions he holds his own with brother Elks in the matter of late hours.

Though a permanent resident of San Diego, and affiliating with the lodge of that city, Clusker retains his membership in San Bernardino lodge.

DECORATIONS.

([illegible] From First Page.)

[illegible] appearance of golden elks' [illegible] with the generous placing of [illegible] lights produce an effect that [illegible] easily be forgotten.

WISTARIA RUNS RIOT.

[illegible] with the hands thereof [illegible] to 11 o'clock—the "hour of [illegible]"—find a prominent place in [illegible] decorations of the Fifth Street [illegible] Store. Variety is given [illegible] effect along the street by [illegible] use of perpendicular stream[illegible] of the popular colors extending [illegible] the cornice to the top of the first [illegible] and a frieze of American flags [illegible] white and purple pampas grass [illegible] the line for the second-story [illegible]

[illegible] Brothers' tall building on [illegible] has an effective back[illegible] of white on which the Elks' [illegible] are massed with skill. This is [illegible] the most effective designs [illegible] street. Six tiers of large [illegible] and purple half-rosettes are [illegible] from the various stories, [illegible] a crown of American flags is [illegible] the center of each rosette. [illegible] tall flagstaff hang six strings [illegible] white and purple Elks' pen[illegible] from the top of the staff [illegible] the breezes a twenty-five-[illegible] fashioned as a hollow [illegible] that it is kept filled with [illegible]

Sing Fat Company presents a typical oriental design, two tall pillars of white, with base of red and yellow. Of course, the Elks' colors are given place effectively.

"OLD GLORY" AT TOP.

The decorations of The Times building attract much attention. Over the main portal, at First street and Broadway, appears a large Union shield, supported on one side by an elk and on the other by a bear rampant. From the base of this shield fall the folds of a graceful half-rosette of white and purple.

The windows of the First-street frontage are curtained with white and purple, and "Old Glory" is given the place of honor along the cornice and on the flag-staff, while many white and purple lanterns covering electric lights form festoons from the top of the first story to the roof. Elks' pennants and shields are also used in the design.

On the Broadway frontage a series of green shields bearing the heads of elks are used effectively in the spaces between each window, and these shields are embowered in masses of white and purple pampas plumes. Long strips of red, white and blue, alternating with the Elks' colors, form an hour-glass figure on the taller section of the building, and the center of this design is a large Union shield. Stars and Stripes are used to cover each pillar and window support on the first story. Many lanterns covered with Elks' colors are also used in the decorations of the Broadway frontage. The Chase company designed and executed the decoration.

CANOPY OF PURPLE.

Brock and Feagans have produced a rich effect in their placing of a canopy of heavy purple, fringed with gold, over the sidewalk before the entrance to their Broadway store.

The stories above are profusely adorned with banners and flags and golden elk heads, and flags are suspended from every window of the building.

ARCADE STATION.

First view of Los Angeles decorations is had by the visitor at the Arcade Station, and this decoration is one of the best in the entire city. Long streamers of white and purple extend from the roof downward until they form an archway on the center of the section fronting on Fifth street. Corners of the building are converted into pillars of white and purple, and cross streamers cover the portion not touched by the long banners, which bear the name of all the States represented by Elkdom.

"Welcome," in large letters of gold, on a background of purple, is given the prominent postion, and below this a mammoth elk's head and the letters B. P. O. E., finds space, while at the base of the design in gold and white is the wording "Los Angeles is Yours." The popular "Hello, Bill" designs are placed at each side entrance, and the dial showing the hour of 11 is used in each design.

MISSION AND CHIMES.

San Gabriel Mission has been transplanted to the center of the business district, and is one of the unique decorative schemes. This is the design of Cunningham, Curtis & Welch of Spring street and was originated by Joe E. Bellue. The construction took the time of five men nine weeks, and the miniature mission was all arranged in sections.

The design is a close reproduction of the walls of San Gabriel Mission, 56x22 feet, and 19 feet high. It extends out over the sidewalk space, and has five arches through which the throngs of people pass. The six bell-spaces have within them antique-appearing bells of papier-maché, with clappers tied with rope as in the days of old. Beginning on Monday, these clappers will move every fifteen minutes, and chimes will be heard.

The walls faithfully reproduced the old plaster and faded brick, and the interior ceiling shows the cracks and breaks as did the old mission before its restoration a few years ago. The artist who secured such pleasing effect is Francisco Conti. One hundred and seventy-five electric lights are used in this design.

"HELLO" THAT WINKS.

A winking letter in the salute of "Hello Bill," on the frontage of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company building on South Hill street is making a great hit. Occasionally the "O" darkens and the effect is laughable. The building is outlined with electric globes, and from a five-pointed star in the center of the frontage extends a mammoth elk's head, with collar and horns adorned with tiny lights. This star and its frame of lights reaches from the base of the second story to the cornice of the building.

LARGEST CLOCK.

Immense clock dials of paper machle, thirty-five feet in height, form the striking feature of the display on Bullock's building. One of these appears on the Spring-street front, and one on Seventh street. The dial covers three stories of this large building. Its figures, with the hands pointing to the hour of 11 are of electric lights. In the center is an elk's head of heroic proportions and the letters, "B. P. O. E." Purple and white are used exclusively in the dial and the elk is of bronze and gold. The entire building is outlined in alternate white and purple lights. The dials, it is said, are the largest single pieces of papier-maché work ever placed in decorative work, and were manufactured in this city.

JULY SNOWSTORM.

An elk standing in the midst of a wood scene, while snowflakes sift down in constant motion is the design presented in the large windows of the Lyon-McKinney-Smith Company on Sixth street, between Spring and Broadway. It is a charming picture.

Harris & Frank use a large dial as their centerpiece, and from this broad streamers of Elks' colors extend to the top of the building. Elks' heads and festoons of white and purple form the base for each window of the entire frontage and American flags adorn the corners.

Variety is given the general street scene by J. R. Lane & Co.'s design of a canopy over the main entrance, formed by strands of small white and purple pennants. At the base of the canopy are used as a fringe a series of larger pennants on which appear the words "Welcome B.P.O.E."

Panels of plaited cloth in Elks' colors form the base of the design carried out by the Ville de Paris, and from this rise long streamers of bunting of the same colors, interspersed with American flags.

ELECTRIC FOUNTAIN.

An electric fountain finds place in the adornment provided by the Boston Store. It is done in electric lights of red and purple, and flanking this striking display are six large dials and elks' heads, with smaller figures filling in the lesser spaces. Columns of asparagus plumosus convert the entire first story frontage into living green.

Jacoby Bros. present a glowing "Welcome" to the Elks. The lettering is picked out in colored lights, and they shine forth from festoons of American flags and pennants of the visiting order. From the center of the building's frontage extends a papier-maché elk's head of mammoth size, outlined in small lights. This is the largest elk's head in the city.

Coulter's long frontage on Broadway has a panel of the American colors forming the centerpiece and extending from the top of the first story to the cornice. From this on either side extend decorations of white and purple, consisting mainly of broad strips of bunting reaching upward to the roof, and masses of white and purple pampas plumes at all of the fire escapes.

The Chamber of Commerce has combined in effective manner the national colors and the colors of Elkdom in the adornment of its entire frontage. Broad strips of purple and white are used, falling from the top story to the main entrance. Elk heads and dials are used for smaller groupings.

A background of evergreens is effective for the placing of a mammoth elk at the Pacific Electric building, the front of which is adorned with many flags.

One of the striking night attractions is the "Hello Bill" which shines forth in huge letters from the tower of the Courthouse.

BOOSTS FOR EXPOSITION.

Commissioner from Seattle Expects to Carry Trainload of Elks to Northwest Fair.

Norman M. Vaughan, special commissioner to boost for "Elks' Day," (July 28.) at the exposition at Seattle, is engaged in arranging for the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific float that will appear in the floral and allegorical parade next Friday. This float, on which three young women will have seats, is to represent the development of the Pacific Northwest, and will be drawn by four gray horses.

"On 'Elks' Day' at the exposition," Mr. Vaughan said, "the management proposes to do things. The 'Pay Streak' has been converted into a department of mystics, and what an Elk won't see on a trip down the line will hardly be worth mentioning.

"The management extends to all Elks visiting California, and to their wives, sweethearts and friends, a cordial invitation to visit the great Alaska-Yukon-Pacific show.

"A great big, cleanly exposition is the general verdict of those who have visited Seattle since the fair began. Ably managed, it is doing much to exploit the countries represented by exhibits and displays."

Mr. Vaughan announces that he will have at least 200 Elks on his special train when it starts for the exposition.

Last of the Elk.

Abraham Simon of Oakland, author of "The Last of Elk," is in Los Angeles with his book, which deals with the interesting herd of these animals found in Kern county near Buttonwillow and McKittrick on the Miller and Lux ranch. The history of these animals is interesting. Several attempts have been made to remove them, and a few years ago the government undertook to provide them another home in Sequoia Park. To get them there was quite another question. When it was attempted to load them in cars there was a wild stampede, ending fatally for twenty of the herd. Total failure resulted and the effort was abandoned. The elk still remain at large on the plains, the only large herd of their kind.

RING RIDERS.

SPANISH SPORTS SEASHORE PLAN.

SANTA MONICA TO HAVE YACHT RACES ALSO.

Elks Who Visit There Tuesday Will Have Enough Diversions to Keep Them Happily Occupied from Morning Till Late at Night—Ten Thousand Lunch Boxes.

Yachts gliding over summer seas in contests of speed and a programme of sports of the old Spanish days will provide entertainment for the many visiting Elks Tuesday on Santa Monica Bay Day. The arrangements, as planned by the Santa Monica lodge of Elks, are calculated to keep the visitors moving from morning till far into the night.

A fund of $6000 has been raised to provide for the amusements, refreshments and accommodations. In this the Elks of the Santa Monica lodge have worked in harmony. The jurisdiction includes Ocean Park, Venice and Sawtelle, as well as Santa Monica, and everything has been done regardless of arbitrary lines or municipal boundaries.

For six months operas and entertainments have been given at frequent intervals for the purpose of adding to the entertainment fund, and the membership of the lodge has at the same time been making regular monthly contributions toward the fund. The "Booster Committee" has not had an idle moment since it was known that there was to be a Santa Monica day.

The activity will begin at 9 o'clock a.m. Tuesday, when the Elks within the Santa Monica jurisdiction are asked to gather at the clubhouse on Arizona and Ocean avenues to meet and greet all incoming Elks, as they arrive by trolley car. The guests will then be taken to the grand stand in the Palisades, in front of which there will be a programme of native Spanish and Mexican sports from 10 until 12. These will be conducted under the direction of J. J. Carillo.

First there will be a ring tourna-

HELLO, BILL!

Here you are! Glad to see you. Make yourself at home and enjoy every moment of the time. If there is anything you see that looks good, take it. If you do not see it, call for it.

Be patient and tolerant with us. We are a somewhat peculiar people in a peculiar land. No doubt you think we have a fine city here, and a pretty good country around it. If you like our brand of climate that is about all we ask. Say so and you will be popular. Men will shake hands with you and stop the clock to talk to you. The girls will beam on you and stop the clock to do that, too. Besides, you will save us the trouble of telling you how choice the climate is and save yourselves the trouble of listening to an oft-told tale. We are modest here about everything except the wonderful country and the glorious climate. You must not say you have as good a country or as fair skies, for you will be set down as of the Ananias Club at once, and we shall not like you.

If you do not "come through" and tell us what a beautiful city we have, what a fine country and charming climate, we shall set you down as lacking in taste, intelligence and eloquence. We shall proceed to tell you, and that will be the worse for you.

Do not wonder too much at our ebullient enthusiasm. You are new to this. It has not had time to soak in. Your attention has not been called to it. The treatment has not taken yet. It will in time. Notice that the older we are the more we break out in paeans of our greatness and glory. If you find an old cock who does not crow, he is a tenderfoot; if a woman who does not sing the praises of Los Angeles, she is one of your crowd. The frosts of the Northwest are still in her bronchial tubes; she has a frog in her throat. After a while the ice will melt clear down to her heart, the sun will kill the bugs in her voice and she will sing. If she looks gloomy she is from Oregon; wait a few days and the beams will radiate from every feature. Everything here sings or shines. The sun does it. No cloud hangs over our seas. Hence they are blue, sparkling, shining. The hillsides burst into bloom in spite of themselves. The mocking-birds work overtime and without pay. Singing is its own reward. And when night involves the skies, still to the pale moonlight or twinkling stars the birds sing. They must do it. If they shut their bills, their gray throats would burst.

So we all get the habits of the flowers and the birds. We must bloom and whistle. Look at our girls. Did you ever see peaches, roses or anything else to match their cheeks? The red blood is full of the sunshine of this wonderful sky and the heart is full of the joy of just living. Our men do things, are brave and venturesome. They cannot help that, either. The sunlight gets into their brains and it must go as a steam engine when the lever is pulled open. The wine of life from the wind-kissed hills gets into their hearts and they throb like a trip-hammer. It is not exactly a habit. That is only second nature. This is the real thing at first hand.

You must make the best of it. You must not stop it, or rather stop us. You are in our power as helplessly as the Ancient Mariner, and listen you must. If you stay long enough you will get the habit yourself. You might as well try to fill up on our California wine and not feel jolly as to absorb our climate and not feel full of life. The more climate you imbibe the more life you get into your system, and once in, it never comes out. It is the fastest color you ever wore. Moreover, you will not desire to get it out. It might be cut out, but the operation would be fatal and you would fight a corral full of wildcats to keep it in. Why, the mules we import from Missouri learn to sing after the first night they are in the country. Mules are the only product we cannot have home grown! Everything here is thoroughbred, and if it got too much climate aboard a mule would kick the stars down. So we get mild ones from Missouri and work them hard to keep down friskiness.

If you have any business, or property, or family ties, or a sweetheart back there in the East, do not stay too long with us. If you do you will never go back. We tremble to think of the fate of the delicate girl you are abandoning in the bottoms of the Kaw or in the woods of Wisconsin. We would not have the blood of innocent orphans on our hands. They need you back there. If you have little or nothing, if your disposition is bad or you are very old and likely to die soon, hurry home. Our girls are particular. The real estate men are even more fastidious.

Remember, if it would cause a tear to fall from a bright blue eye, or a pang to pierce a tender heart, if the baby would lack bread or the boy candy, do not linger. If this climate ever gets time to lay good hold of you you might as well try to break away from a live wire carrying 5000 volts. You cannot do it. It will hold you and here you will stay. You will not die here unless you are quick about it. There are some cemeteries here, with a few graves in them, filled with tenderfeet too far gone to wait for the climate to get in its work. There are men here sent out from the East in the decrepitude of a consumptive and early youth to die. If they had been left at home the dying would have been done years ago, while yet they were fit for a better world. Here they linger on the stage at 70, 75, 80 and up to 100. But they are perfectly content to disobey their doctors' orders. The climate has sunk into their souls. The sunlight has exercised its spell on their hearts; the flowers have caught their eyes. They do not long for a better world, and are persuaded there is none brighter. Take comfort. That may be your happy fate.

Hello, Bill! Do you catch that? How do you feel now?

WHERE'S THE GLOOM?

Marked improvement is noted in our transportation, manufactures and building activities, according to the regular reports received by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The coke output and shipments show a continuous improvement in answer to the larger demands of the iron furnaces. Increased takings of cotton and wool indicate a greater activity in the textile industry, while larger shipments of boots and shoes from the chief distributing centers may serve as an index of more regular industrial employment. The building activity in the larger cities of the country was unusually heavy. Traffic operations of the railroads, to judge by the total number of freight cars handled and the number of idle cars reported, compared with May, 1908, figures, show a considerable improvement for all sections of the country.

May receipts of southern pine at New York were 45,555,919 feet, as compared with 32,707,824 feet in May, 1907, and 24,731,172 feet in May, 1908. Lumber receipts at Boston in May of this year were 20,232,695 feet, as against 18,847,444 feet in May of last year. Lumber shipments by lake, 137,382,000 feet, were 50,000,000 feet in excess of May, 1908. Pine lumber shipments during the month from Mississippi and Wisconsin valleys, 82,758,237, were 10,000,000 feet greater than the May, 1908, shipments. The May receipts of pine and fir at California points, 106,169,357 feet, were larger than the May, 1908, receipts, and the same is true of the California receipts of redwood for the month, 30,732,142 feet.

Anthracite coal shipments for the five months ending May, 27,046,872 gross tons, were the largest reported from eastern producing territory for the period in the annals of the industry. Lake shipments of soft coal during the month, 1,181,893 net tons, were more than double the May, 1908, figures, while the lake shipments of hard coal, 447,846 net tons, also show an increase of 13,350 tons. The shipments of bituminous coal over eight of the leading eastern coal carrying roads, 7,548,622 tons, compare favorably with the May, 1908, total of 6,015,708 tons.

Coke shipments during the month over the same roads, 1,712,987 tons, show an ever greater comparative improvement over the May, 1908, figures. The Connellsville coke production, during the four weeks of May, 1,060,359 net tons, was 58 per cent. larger than the corresponding 1908 production, the improvement being the most notable during the last two weeks of the month.

Pig iron production in May, 1,880,098 gross tons, was over 60 per cent. in excess of the May, 1908, output. Production for the first five months of the year, 8,960,069 gross tons, shows an almost equal improvement over the corresponding 1908 figures.

Cotton takings by American, including Canadian, spinners, during the month aggregated 344,974 bales, as against 322,307 bales in May of last year. Wool receipts at Boston in May totaled 33,826,498 pounds, compared with only 14,358,492 pounds for May, 1908. The increase was due both to larger receipts of the domestic article, as well as to heavier importations. Shipments of boots and shoes from Boston in May were 292,483 cases, as against 423,273 cases in May, 1908.

Building operations in 114 of the larger American cities show a splendid gain. The value of building permits granted in these cities during May ($94,599,004) was about $10,000,000 larger than for April, and 75.7 per cent. in excess of the May, 1908, total. More building means more business in very many other lines—a wider distribution than perhaps in any other industry.

Freight cars handled in May by thirty-four car service associations and demurrage bureaus, in various parts of the country were 2,472,685, about 23 per cent. more than in May, 1908. The American Railway Association reports 273,890 idle cars on May 26, 1909, as against 381,904 on May 27, 1908, a decrease of 108,014. Now, brother, do you see any gloom in these uniformly glowing facts?

MAN THE GUNS!

Would that every fair-minded American who believes in the form of government we have, and who loves his country, could have heard the words of warning and advice which James W. Van Cleave, chairman of the National Council of Industrial Defense, and James A. Emery, general counsel for the association, pronounced here Friday evening before a gathering of business men assembled upon invitation of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles.

Mr. Van Cleave dealt with the history of the movement, and Mr. Emery spoke of the legal bearing of the conflict between a closely-organized, small but aggressive minority of working people and all the other 34,000,000 of us who must also make a living or perish.

The moderation and fairness of the plea made was fully equal to the clear way in which the case was stated. No privilege was demanded for any class that was not conceded to all; no restraint was asked for to keep any man or body of men in check that was not conceded to be obligatory on all. Absolutely fair play was the keynote of every utterance, and American equality in the eyes of the law was the principle laid down to secure the personal independence of each man under these just laws to make his living in his own way, without interference with the fundamental rights of others—the only basis on which society can rest, and make progress for the good of our race.

Could these perfectly fair and radically necessary principles be laid before us all in so clear and reasonable a manner, there would be no further strife of any account in the industrial world. The American people are intelligent and reasonable. Lay before them right principles and they will see the propriety of them and will follow them to the end, beating down all factious opposition. Personal liberty under law, an equal opportunity to all, the right of each man to conduct his business as he thinks best, yet according to law which safeguards the rights of others, are the purposes for which our government was upreared and for which it has been maintained. Lay these principles clearly before the American people so that they may clearly understand them, and they will not only abide by them for themselves, but they will, now, as heretofore, fight for them against any opposition that can be raised. There is not a real American in a thousand who cannot see the propriety and justice of these fundamental laws of progress and civilization, and who will not die in their defense today as our forefathers died at Lexington, Bunker Hill and all the way to Yorktown; as they died from Bull Run to Gettysburg and all the way to Richmond. Free and just citizens love these just principles as much in industrial progress as in the government of the country, and will die in their defense against a mob as willingly as on the battlefield fronting a foreign foe.

And what are the arrogant, unjust, tyrannous organizations which oppose these principles but a foreign foe? How many true Americans are there among those who went out to destroy life and property under Eugene Debs in 1894, or who now uphold Samuel Gompers in his attempt to set at naught the decisions of the highest courts? They are, with unimportant exceptions, a foreign foe, hostile to all that is truly American, and if they have their way they will, in the end, destroy this government and drag this nation down in ruin as surely as the British Hessians would have done. Is this not so? Mr. Emery quoted Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell to the effect that whenever a court decision seems to them wrong, they will disobey the orders of a court. Who is the government? What is the court of final appeal? Is the United States sovereign, or is it under bondage to a shallow, impudent foreign upstart and his followers? Do the courts of this country interpret its statutes, or is Gompers invested with power to review its decrees and reverse its judgments? If he, why not another? And where is the end? If each man is his own Supreme Court, then what is anarchy?

John C. Calhoun with his nullification act, by which South Carolina was to override an act of Congress, was a child playing with a toy compared to Samuel Gompers with his dynamite to blow the whole fabric of government to atoms.

Mr. Van Cleave is head of a great organization. It exists by virtue of the laws of this land. He is too sensible, too just, to attack the right of any other body of men to organize for their own advancement, their own protection, if that is necessary. But Mr. Van Cleave's organization has never had recourse to any weapon of defense excepting the laws of the United States. The Council of National Industrial Defense is never unwarrantably aggressive. It is quiescent until the rights of its members are attacked, their business illegally threatened, or their lives menaced by violent mobs. Then it interposes between itself and the danger that threatens the broad aegis of American law. So long as labor unions observe the same just self-restraint and remain within the safe pale of just laws, so long are its members safe from assault in any way, so long they are at liberty to shape their course as they see fit, so long they may consult and counsel for the good of the members of their organization, and no man can, shall or will say them nay.

The proposition is fair. It treats all alike. The programme is not for the benefit or protection of employers any more than for employés. Where there are a few millions who buy labor there are many millions who sell it. The Council of Industrial Defense is for the protection of all, and when it shields one employer from wrong it covers ten employés.

The Times gave its readers on Saturday morning a full report of the addresses of these leaders in the conflict for industrial independence, peace and progress; yet no printed report could give the full force, spirit, logic and eloquence of the spoken words. We hope the splendid utterances will be long treasured by our 50,000 subscribers as a precious document from which to draw inspiration.

OVER THE BLUE BAY.

If any of the old-timers who have departed to a brighter world than this, if any such there be, were flitting over Santa Monica on Saturday morning they must have blinked their eyes in unrestrained wonder.

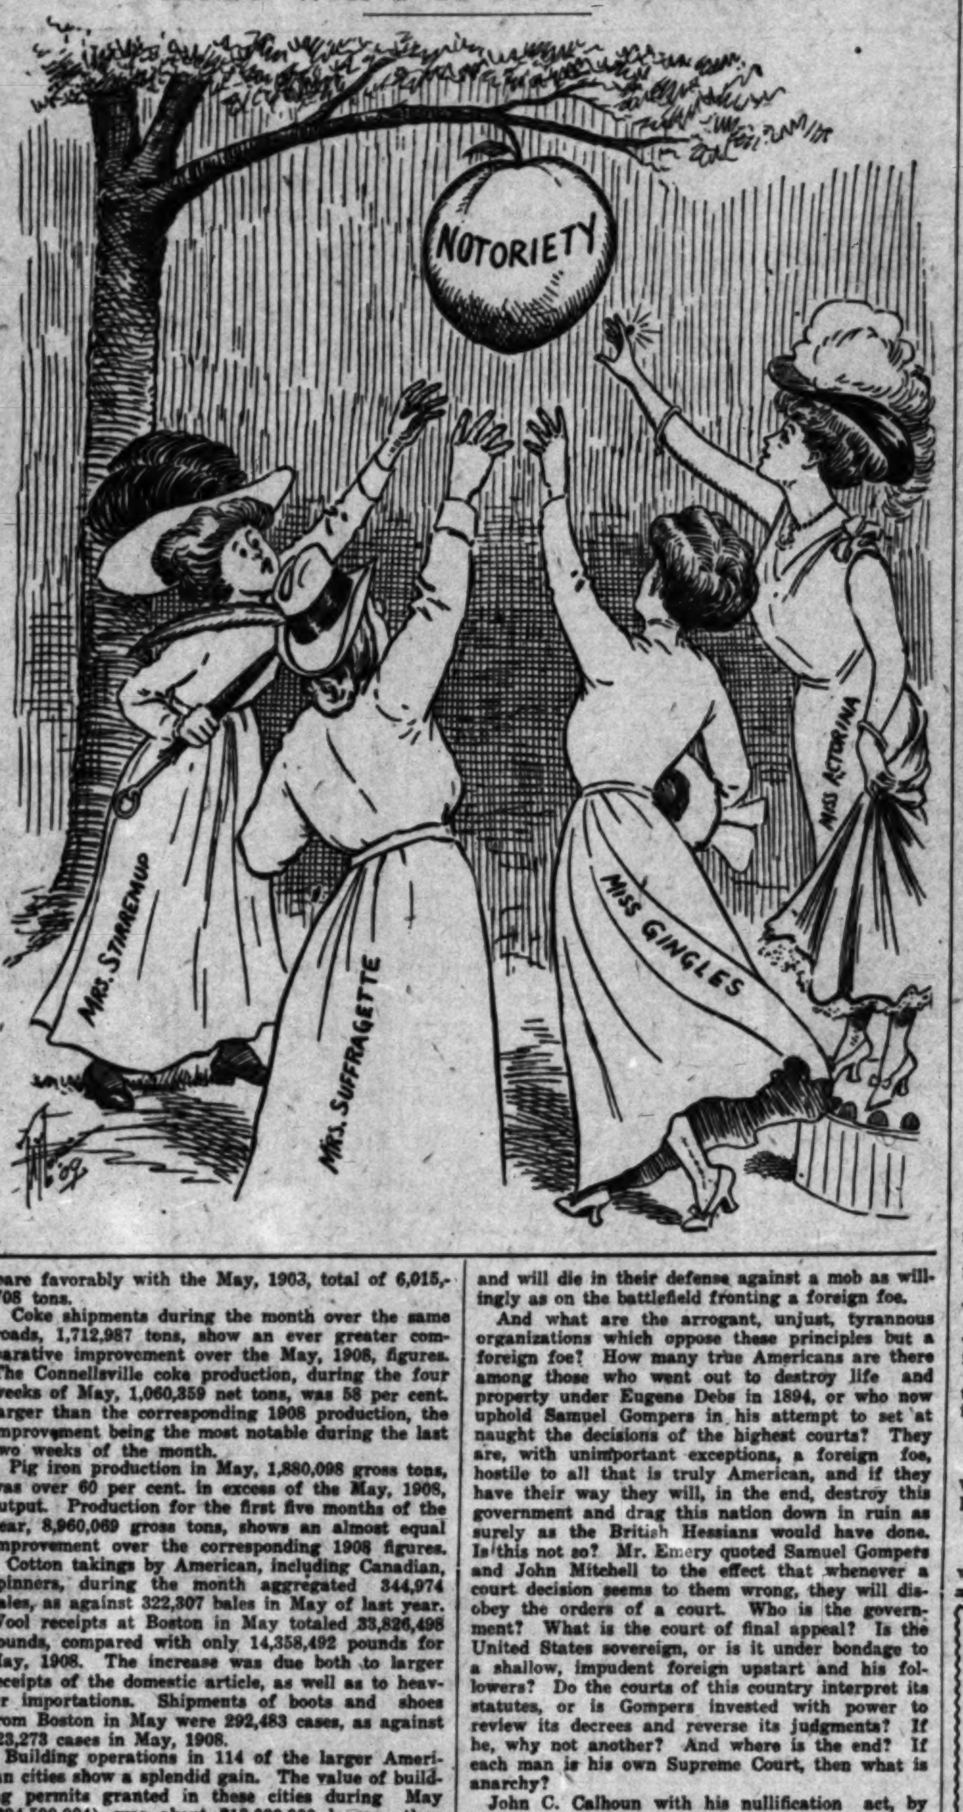
Santa Monica, with its beautiful heights overlooking the blue bay, was the first beach resort which attracted the attention of the old-timers. For half a century it was practically the only beach where the small population of Los Angeles disported itself either in the surf along the strand or upon the bluff. As long as a quarter of a century ago the Southern Pacific, then the only railroad operating in this section of the country, often took down 5000 or 6000 people on a Sunday to old Santa Monica. Long trainloads of flat cars with rough seats laid across them were often the only accommodation to be had.

Santa Monica Cañon was the scene of many a carousal in those old days, some gay, some tragic. The cañon is still beautiful and still a favorite resort, but as there are a score of resorts stretching along 250 miles of coast, Santa Monica is far from being the "only pebble on the beach" in Southern California in these days. There are many delightful spots that compete with the old cañon, and as there are grand pavilions at some of the new competitors, the cañon is less sought after by the population of the city now than formerly by the people that were here.

Santa Monica has grown to be a city of erable pretensions. The hills away back Palisades are crowned with residences of the sion type occupied by people of great wealth. city itself has hotels and banks, large houses, and really has a right to make

On Saturday at the road race, when automobiles cut the air at a pace of miles an hour, the hills all around from to the Soldiers' Home were thronged with people. Time was when that would number all the residents south of Tehachepi and that not so exceedingly long ago. Santa ica in those days was a sleepy little seaside all the year except during the summer Sunday. The country between Los Angeles the coast was scarcely inhabited at all. The was all occupied as pasture or grain fields. roads were bad and an automobile race would been impossible in Los Angeles or Santa Monica between the two places. A crowd of 50,000 ings is a pretty big one, even for Southern California. One who remembers the days that are thinks of those who have departed from forever naturally became a bit pensive and question was irresistible: "What would timers think if they were hovering over the and the blue bay and could see that mob of manity gathered along the heights?"

THEY WANT IT AT ANY COST.



A CHARM THAT WORKS.

The Florida orange growers have been denly awakened to the value of advertising investigation of the methods of the California Exchange, and they are about to arrange bureau of publicity and promotion for oranges. They are alarmed at the inroads made by the California growers in markets for years were theirs, almost without the As an instance of what may be accomplished modern business methods to fruit raising, the of Sioux City is cited. That place consumed carloads of California fruit in one year advertising inducements; but the next year, the persuasion of skillfully managed publicity, carloads were marketed there. The same can be made to work for California's and California dried fruits. The magician of ern business is the printer, after all.

THE LANCER.

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY is certainly contributing her share to the hilarity of nations. Prof. Foster's book on "The Function of Religion and Man's Struggle for Existence," is the latest and most recent outbreak from the Windy City's college.

Now, this wise professor's book contains Pantheism, denies the personality of God and the existence of the soul, is skeptical about the reliability of the Bible, and quotes Lucretius.

For such un-Baptist remarks, his fellow-clergymen of Chicago assembled in angry conclave and demanded that the Rev. Foster yield up his ordination papers—a sensible and justifiable proceeding.

Suppose a groceryman discovered that a clerk of his was knocking the store, circulating adverse reports, advising his customers to buy other brands of goods and quoting his competitors' words in substantiation, would not the grocer be justified in firing his clerk?

This is just the case of the reverend Mr. Foster. He was a Baptist minister, paid to promulgate, inculcate, and uphold and boost the Baptist faith. If he did not like the institution or agree with its doctrines, he should have gotten out, gone, left, vamosed, shaken it, completely dissociated himself from it. Then he could have said with propriety what he pleased about it.

As it was, his fellow-ministers were justified in requesting him to vacate—not because he was wrong, or because they were right, but because he deliberately knocked an institution which he was paid to serve.

In a recent editorial, a little weekly called Fiona McLeod as a great "woman writer." When The Times called attention to the fact that Fiona McLeod was William Sharp, here is the puerility offered in explanation: "For years, until after William Sharp's death, the feminine quality, the tender charm of the poetry of Fiona McLeod deceived even the most intimate friends of the author, until every one familiar with his exquisite poetry naturally associated it with a woman. It was, therefore, most natural that the form of William Sharp was not the mental picture when we summed in rapid review the achievements of the opposite sex."

For shame! Dost think, little hebdomadal one, that such rhetorical fog can obscure thy ignorance? . . . Own up like a little man, and cease thy nebulous remarks about "bodily forms" and "mental pictures." All literary dilettanti make breaks occasionally. Even we of The Times do. Yes, yes, alack and alas! But, after all, who would expect you to know who Fiona McLeod was, when you omitted the name of George Sand from your list of great women writers? You know, George Sand wasn't a man.

Tipping Barbers.

Within the last few years an invidious and unexplainable custom has sprung up—that of tipping barbers. The nature of this particular phase of the duty, shaving, is such that, however it would mean temporary inconvenience to the shavee and probable loss of blood to reform these "tonsorial artists." For these gentlemen of the razor and strop are in a position to force tips from the tender-skinned and pachydermatous alike by hacking, slashing and rough treatment.

The first shave one gets from these Delilahs is fairly good, and if the tip (in addition to the fee) is satisfactory, the second shave is good. But omit the tip on number one, and shave number two will be more in the nature of a mangle. Each gash of shave number two is a gentle and permanent reminder that the wielder of the lather needs the money, and is willing to take tips. The reminder works, inasmuch as self-preservation is one of nature's first laws.

So much a part of the shaving business has the tipping become, and so generally is the extortion money expected by barbers, that when one proffers a tip (like the burnt offerings to Baal, lest he should visit his wrath on the people) it is taken as a matter of course, generally with an insulting grin, or with an air of ignorant superiority because it was not more.

Without going into the matter of whether tipping waiters and porters is right or wrong, the Lancer wishes to say with emphasis that the necessity for tipping barbers is an outrage. Waiters and porters are employed at meager wages, so that tips are often necessary for their livelihood. They are unable to regulate their wages or the prices of the foods on the menus; hence something is to be said in their favor. The blame here is at least blameable on the employer.

But barbers are their own bosses. They do not work on salaries. They are in business for themselves. They set their own price on their commodity. Then, when they have received their price, by contemptible means they force arbitrary perquisites from their patrons.

[illegible] for Sinners?

Despite the enterprise of Col. Eddy in placing a brilliant searchlight on the Angel's Flight tower; but The Lancer was thinking, as he walked up Third street from Broadway, and had a blinding light flashed in his eyes, that there is something inconsistent in a City Council that denies the right of moving picture men to employ barkers, forbids electric signs above the sidewalk, and then allows a man to advertise his business by annoying passers-by with an immense searchlight.

Perhaps, the most charitable motive that has led the colonel to hoist the light to his tower. He may have meant it to guide up the tortuous steps of Angel's Way the company who cannot afford to

A Case of Pettymindedness.

In a self-patting announcement, Collier's tells of one of its recent business deals. A firm whose integrity, reliability and honor, Collier's says, is well known and can be denied nowhere, sent an advertisement to this weekly which refused to insert it because it contained the word "cure." There is no reason why "cure" should not have appeared, admits the weekly, except for a rule in their office to accept advertisements containing the word. The copy was returned.

And Collier's claims to be broadminded! Its editorial structure is brobdingnagian; the word narrow is not in it. And it boasts of the above.

Do you not know, my seraphic contemporary, that petty rules are for petty minds? Are you so afraid to rely on your judgment that you need regulations to keep you straight? Don't you know that cut-and-dried rules, which are made to fit every case, whether applicable or not, are the "hobgoblins of little minds"—a sort of kindergarten for the mediocre?

The advertisement was refused; you refuse to publish it; ergo, you are a fool.

Next, you would snigger at the sensibilities of the old temperance lady who, at a dinner, refused to pass the wine jelly to her neighbor—eh?

Literary Trespassing.

When George Bernard Shaw got hold of Mr. Roosevelt's article on "Socialism," which appeared recently in the Outlook, the wild Irishman lost no time in expressing an opinion. So febrile was his haste that he used a postal instead of note paper, and here is what was said:

> "A serious reply to Mr. Roosevelt's article on 'Socialism' in the Outlook cannot be written in this country. In England the article is only the noodles' orator up to date. Its sentiments would be proper and suitable for the sheriff of a district on the pioneering edge of a territory of the United States, but, coming as it does from the pen of one who has been President for nearly eight years, it is a staggering revelation of how little an American President may know about his own business. He might almost as well be a king. Are you sure that Theodore is not pulling your leg in the first flush of high spirits following his release from the White House?"

While remaining non-partisan in regard to the merits of this particular case, the Lancer must admit that any one writing on Socialism, no matter who he is, is trespassing on territory which belongs by literary right to Mr. Shaw. George B. is the final word on things sociological today, and, knowing this, it naturally rubs his socialistic fur the wrong way to have any infringers on his precinct. Of course, if Mr. Roosevelt should write a treatise on how to capture the okapi, and other giraffoid ruminants in Africa, Mr. Shaw would not complain. But Socialism! The term has become synonymous with Shawism. . . . Why? Because Mr. Shaw in the course of his promulgation of ideas, has fused his iconoclasm with inimitable wit.

Socialism (even the Shawvian variety) has three drawbacks—first, it starts out with false premises; second, it uses illogical syllogisms, and third, it arrives at erroneous conclusions. Otherwise it is all right. These things, however, do not detract from Mr. Shaw's literary charm, and it really makes little difference what cult he chooses to champion. Were he a Voodoo, a geonancist, a suffragette, or an otyognomist, he would still be the kingpin because of his wit. But as long as he is the boss socialist, it is well to let him run the circus.

Only, it is to be regretted that he was not something else, for there is far more opportunity to poke fun at the purblind socialist than at the individualist.

A Sane Fourth.

"This has been a very sane Fourth," remarked an elderly gentleman on a street car a few days ago. "There were only forty-five children killed; last year there were 183."

Sane? With forty-five children dead, and 4000 injured or maimed for life, and thousands of dollars lost in fires?

It depends on what one considers sanity. These figures are on the debit side of the register. Let's see what is on the credit side—noise, dirty streets, and frazzled nerves. Such a purchase, at such a price, may be sane.

The idea of patriotism is lost sight of in the frantic celebration. It does not make the youngsters better citizens or inspire in them a respect for their country. It only cripples, blinds, wrecks, burns and kills by terrible agony thousands of children, and wears out and brutalizes the balance. When we passed immigration laws prohibiting the Chinese from our shores, we did so for a reason. They brought here the bubonic plague. But while keeping out the "yellow peril," with their disease, we throw our doors open to something far more dangerous than bubonic microbes—we even send large sums of money to China to get into our country the most fiendish manifestation of the Chinese, the firecracker.

The bubonic plague breaks out once in a great many years. We invite the firecracker plague to our midst annually.

It might be wiser to remove the prohibitive law from the Chinese, and put it on their diabolic firecrackers.

Was Worth a Dollar.

Chief Justice John Marshall was returning one afternoon from his farm near Richmond, Va., to his home in that city, when the hub of his wheel caught on a small sapling growing by the roadside. After striving insuccessfully to extricate the wheel, he heard the sound of an ax in the woods and then saw a negro man approaching. Hailing him, he said: "If you will get that ax and cut down this tree, I'll give you a dollar." "I c'n git yer by 'thout no ax, ef dat's all yer want." "Yes, that's all," said the judge. The man simply backed the horse until the wheel was clear of the sapling, and then brought the vehicle safely around it. BY COZETTE.

Uranus dubiously marks unknown ways,
But fortunate Jupiter sends brilliant rays.

On this 192nd day Uranus is in opposition to the Sun. It will be well to avoid anything unusual or eccentric if it involves any hazard of wealth or health.

Jupiter is in trine and benefic aspect with the Moon, promising well for all ordinary pursuits, short journeys, visits, entertainments and outings.

A good sign is over merchants, bankers, clergymen, professors, clothiers, woolen-dealers and manufacturers and travellers.

Important activities by armies and navies are foretold by European astrologers during the next 60 days.

The coming lunations falls in a time when the conjunction of the planets is such that they indicate the death of some great one of the earth.

In its present position Jupiter rules today and the coming period as the great fortunate planet, influencing splendidly in the direction of honesty, benevolence and generosity. It inspires good reasoning faculties and afflicts meanness, selfishness and treachery with a dire menace.

The extravagant or dissipated must put a strong curb on their inclinations today.

Women and men with this birthdate are under stars indicating a generally prosperous twelvemonth. They must avoid speculation and quarrel. Those in employment must beware against office disputes.

Children are born today under planets promising favor and wealth.

Bad Debts.

Credit is the beginning of progress, prosperity and bad debts, but especially of bad debts. Front implies foolishness, and bad debts are the fruitage.

Bad debts are an exception to the law whereby cold contracts and heat expands. They are contracted or expanded simultaneously, and in all seasons alike.

Bad debts are eventually paid by good people. They are the inheritance tax which the meek have to pony up before coming into their own, for the earth falls to no man until he has been cheated out of at least three times as much as it is worth, in proof of his humility.

Bad debts have brought motoring within reach of the masses, not to mention the lesser blessings of peace and plenty, with nothing to give up for these but the fanciful comfort of a clear conscience.—[Puck.

Rescue Work in Mines.

Since the colliery explosions at Courrieres, in France, and the more recent disasters in the United States and elsewhere, a public demand has been awakened in Europe for some kind of organized rescue work in connection with mines. In Austria and France provision of rescue apparatus in mines is made compulsory. In Germany it is optional, but has been voluntarily adopted. In Russia where over fifty men are employed in one mine it is provided that "every colliery must have a rescue corps trained to work in irrespirable gases," that "the number of men in each corps must be equivalent to 4 per cent. of those engaged in the largest pit or shaftwork" and "that the number of completely equipped sets of breathing apparatus at each colliery must not be less than three."—[Exchange.

Birthplace of Chimneys.

Chimneys are modern; that is, chimneys with fireplaces and flues. None of the Roman ruins show chimneys like ours. There is none in the restored buildings in Herculaneum and Pompeii. Roman architects complainedthat their decorations were smoked up. A kitchen in Rome was always sooty. Braziers were used in the living rooms. The chimney of antiquity consisted of a hole in the roof. The wealthy Romans used carefully dried wood, which would burn in the room without soot. The modern chimney was first used in Europe in the fourteenth century. The oldest certain account of a chimney places it in Venice in 1347.—[Exchange.

THE PROCESSION OF THE YEARS.

Low the western sun is falling
Past the blue-veiled hilltops' crest
And the twilight calm is calling
Nature's carefree brood to rest,
But I sit within the shadows,
While my heart-springs overflow,
Thinking on the battles royal
In the days of long ago;
And the years, a stern procession,
Pass before me in review,
And the mighty of the ages
Troop before mine eyes anew.

There in all the flush of glory
Rides the hero of the day,
While his captives bruised and gory
Witness to the deadly fray;
And the cry is, "Imperator,
Salve! Honor be thy meed,"
But the tears of wives and mothers
Fall to expiate his greed;
And I see the fond heart broken
That a coffer may be filled,
And the orphan in his tatters
Weeps a sire in battle killed.

There the haughty monarch walketh,
Clad in purple rich with gold,
And with high demeanor stalketh
Through the crowds of young and old,
For the times are dire with famine
And the rabble cry for bread,
But a crust to give the living
Strength to lay away the dead;
And adown the years there quivers
On my ear a stifled groan,
And the world-old breezes carry
On their wings a wail and moan.

There the miser views his treasure
Heaped in piles of hoarded gold,
Counts his increase and the measure
Of the wealth his cellars hold;
Out across his fruitful acres
Casts a proud, exulant eye,
Glories in the waving yellow
Of the ripened wheat and rye;
But each ducat that his usury
Has amassed through tireless years
Tells a tale of mortal anguish,
Bears the taint of blood and tears.

There unmoved, uncompromising
Sits the framer of the laws,
All the wretchedness despising
That his codes and tables cause;
And the far-blown, white-winged trader
Bears the record of his fame,
While throughout a thousand cycles
Ring the praises of his name;
But I shrink in sickening horror
From the right that ruled of yore,
To behold eternal justice
Penned and sealed in human gore!
There with gentle step and slowly
Moves among the jostling throng
He who lived to raise the lowly,
Heal the sick and guide the strong;
E'en the touching of His garment
Fills the heart with hope afresh,
And His smile in benediction
Soothes the quivering, pain-racked flesh;
Stronger than the sword or scepter
Reigns the conquering power of love,
Mightier than bonds or statutes
Binds man's faith to God above.

A Health-Giving Fish.

Maj. Hodder is an Englishman who has been wondering why the Barbados, alone of the Antilles, are free from malaria. He thinks it must be because the Barbados, alone of the Antilles, are free from gnats. But why no gnats? Because of the wild and beneficent profusion of fish called "millions." The millions eat the gnats while they're still larvae. Acting on Maj. Hodder's theory, the Jamacians, the people of Colon and the colonists of British Guiana imported millions and the gnats vanished. In Africa, where rage the most deadly swamp fevers, millions are employed with immense success. The same means has been adopted by the Italian government to rid the Roman Campagna of its insect foes.—[Exchange.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Mayor yesterday vetoed the ordinance passed by the City Council granting a twenty-one-year franchise for a spur track from the Southern Pacific Railroad to the new market-house.

Ralph Johnson, as assignor of F. M. Parker, brought an action, yesterday, in the Superior Court, to recover $500, balance alleged to be due on a contract to lobby through the Legislature a bill regulating the practice of natureopathy.

The case of Harper E. Bennett, charged with wife murder, was transferred to Department Eleven of the Superior Court, yesterday, for an early trial, and Judge Willis will fix the date of the hearing tomorrow morning.

Hartley Shaw, Chief Deputy District Attorney, informed the Supervisors, yesterday, that they have no authority to adopt an ordinance granting the privilege to dump garbage outside the city limits.

AT THE CITY HALL.

MAYOR FILES VETO MESSAGE.

SAYS SIMPSON SPUR IS FREIGHT-CARRYING FRANCHISE.

Some People Say He Is "Doing Politics," and Would Be Pleased to See Council Take Responsibility. Applicant Is a Prominent Member of "Our Set."

Mayor Alexander, just before leaving the office yesterday at noon, filed with the City Clerk his message vetoing the ordinance granting a spur-track privilege to the Frank Simpson Fruit Company, for a period of twenty-one years. In reality, the privilege would have been to the Southern Pacific railroad, and was designed to reach the new market house at Ninth and San Pedro streets, from the main tracks on Alameda street. In his message the Mayor says:

"This franchise cannot be other than a freight-carrying franchise. There are no restrictions provided therein as to the kind of cars that may be used, nor as to the time of day when such freight may be carried.

"If this franchise be granted, a freight-carrying franchise could not consistently be refused for the electric lines upon which this spur must depend to make it effective.

"While there may be many reasons why, under proper restrictions and with provision for adequate compensation to the city for the privilege, it might be well to grant to the railways the right to carry freight over our streets, we must remember that our citizens have the final say as to the use of our streets, and at the last charter amendment election proposed amendment No. 26, granting to the Council the right to pass freight-carrying franchises to street railways, was defeated by a vote of 8425 to 6138."

Some of those persons who favored the franchise were unkind enough to say that Uncle Aleck is "doing politics," and that the City Council will pass it over the veto. Others intimated that His Honor would be pleased if the Council did that very thing for his recall friend, Simpson, and the veto would still make him appear "agin' the corporations."

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

FOR SERVICES AS LOBBYIST.

COMPENSATION NOW ASKED FOR "STEERING" BILL.

Echo of Last Session of Legislature Heard in Suit Against Disciples of Naturopathic Treatment. Claimed Only Half of Price Agreed Upon Has Been Paid.

An echo of the last session of the California General Assembly was heard yesterday, when a suit was filed in the Superior Court for compensation for lobbying a bill through the Legislature.

Ralph Johnson, as assignor, is plaintiff in the case and Ellen and Carl Schultz, well-known in this city as disciples of the naturopathic treatment are the defendants. It is alleged in the petition that F. M. Parker, between December, 1908, and March, 1909, was engaged in presenting to the Legislature of California, and in securing the passage of, the statute recognizing and regulating the practice of naturopathy. It is further claimed that the agreed price for the work was $1000, and that of this amount only $500 has been paid. Judgment is asked for the balance.

As a second cause of action, through the same assignor, it is claimed that F. M. Parker and George L. Sanders performed legal services in behalf of the defendants, and for this judgment for $3000 is asked.

MAY DUMP GARBAGE.

OUTSIDE THE CITY LIMITS.

Some time ago the Cudahy Packing Company asked the Supervisors that an ordinance be passed authorizing the dumping of garbage outside the city limits. The board was inclined to accede to the wishes of the company, but an opinion rendered yesterday by Hartley Shaw, Chief Deputy District Attorney, seems to make the measure impossible.

He thought regulating the depositing of garbage through an ordinance would be an arbitrary use of power. If those using the countryside for such a purpose should make the garbage a nuisance, action would lie against such offenders, but it is the view of Mr. Shaw that there are many places in the country where the deposit of offal and garbage, instead of being an evil, would be a positive advantage.

BENNETT HEARING.

TRANSFERRED TO WILLIS.

In the interest of an early hearing of the case of Harper F. Bennett, charged with the murder of his wife, Eugenie T. Bennett, Judge Davis yesterday transferred the matter to Department eleven, Judge Willis presiding. The court in making the change said that the crowded condition of his calendar precluded the possibility of hearing the case until October, and he thought that as a matter of justice to Bennett that a speedier trial should be had. He had conferred with Judge Willis, and it would be possible to have the case disposed of at a much earlier date.

This arrangement was perfectly satisfactory to Bennett and his attorneys, and it was agreed that the motion to admit Bennett to bail should be presented to Judge Willis. The date for the trial of the case will be set in that department tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. At that time the transcript of the evidence taken at the preliminary hearing will be given the court with a view of determining whether from the evidence, Bennett should be allowed to go out on bail, provided he can furnish the amount that may be fixed. The move will be vigorously opposed by the District Attorney's office.

CONSOLIDATED AFFAIRS.

DIVIDEND TO BE DECLARED.

Judge James will take action on the affairs of the Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles, as shown by the report of Receiver Evan Lewis, next Friday. If there are any objectors to the showing of the officer of the court, they will be heard at that time. It is understanding that a dividend of 20 per cent. will be ordered paid, but to protect the receiver from future litigation, the court will order that dividends go only to depositors having their pass-books, or to others who may have assignments from the original owners of the books showing their accounts with the bank.

The report of Receiver Lewis indicates that $7,681.40, the amount of money received when the receivership took effect April 1, covered the entire assets of the bank, barring what may be recovered on suits instituted against borrowers, who seemed to have no trouble in securing funds in most cases without any security.

According to the president of the concern, W. H. Carlson, borrowed almost the entire deposits, with security in the shape of the various Carlson enterprises, which may be worth something.

One of the first duties of the receiver, after the approval of the report and the order of the distribution, will be to ascertain, if possible whether the security given by Carlson to obtain money from his own bank, is of any value. Judgments will be taken in any event.

CALLING THEM.

BROADHEAD CASE WITNESSES.

Subpoennes for about thirty witnesses were issued out of Judge Davis' court yesterday, to testify in behalf of the defense in the Broadhead and Schenck bribery cases, booked for July 26, in that court. In the list are the names of the Chief of Police and two detectives of San Diego in addition to a number of witnesses from Riverside and San Bernardino.

The defense yesterday arranged to secure a transcript of the evidence taken in the hearing of the motion testing the sufficiency of the indictments against the accused, and the bill for the manuscript was $416. Efforts were made to have the county stand the expense for the transcript, but Judge Davis would not allow such an arrangement.

OFFERED FOR PROBATE.

WILL DISPOSING OF MONEY.

Because Edward Richards, who recently died in Salt Lake, Utah, had on deposit in the German American Bank of this city $13,281.19, a certified copy of his will was filed in the probate court, yesterday. Richards disposes of an estate valued at $85,000, of which $75,000 is in personal property and $10,000 in real estate. Under the will Charles Edward Richards is given $2000, Gertrude L. Richards, $5000, and Delia Janet Parker, a daughter, $5000. The balance of the property of every character is given to the wife, Margaret R. Richards, and the latter is to be executrix without bond.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

Judge Monroe yesterday, on motion of attorney for the defense, allowed a non-suit in the action brought by Sophia Simons against the Pacific Electric Railay Company for $10,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained at Watts, through the negligence of employés of the defendant. The court held that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence.

INCORPORATIONS. Papers in the following incorporations were filed in the office of the clerk, yesterday; Universal Protective Union, by L. T. Young, M. L. Hudson, A. G. Young, A. B. Newkirk, J. F. Simons, C. T. Hoffman and G. A. Moore; Anti-Juggernaut Auto Club, by Edward L. Hutchison, O. F. Welch, Warren H. Eddy, Elmer L. Bishop and Frank N. Newnham; Sunset Plaster and Cement Company, capital stock, $200,000, by Timothy Mahoney, S. F. Thede and A. C. Mahoney; Union Building Company, capital stock, $200,000 by Lincoln J. Davis, Enos Miller, Alberta C. Davis, James S. Jarrett and Robert A. Jarrett.

WILL PLEAD. In Judge Davis' court yesterday Rafael Cerrato and Juan Silvas, charged with burglary, were arraigned and given until Monday to plead to the complaint.

DESIRE TO ADOPT. L. W. and Floy Conrad filed a petition in the Superior Court yesterday, for permission to adopt Sybil Evelyn Hash, whose mother is dead and whose father deserted her. The baby is one year old.

GIVEN TIME TO PAY. In Justice Ling's court, yesterday, Peter Martinez was fined $15 for cruelty to animals, and the court gave the accused until August 15 to pay the money.

CASES DISMISSED. In Judge Bordwell's court yesterday the damage cases of Eliza Thomas and Samuel Kirkpatrick, against the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company, for injuries alleged to have been received January 12, last, by reason of a gas explosion on East Fifth street, were dismissed. The action brought by W. H. Thomas against the same defendants resulted in favor of the defendants, and by stipulation the same evidence was offered in the other two actions.

SMALL ESTATE. A petition for the filing of the will of J. N. Norton was filed in the Probate Court yesterday. The document disposes of an estate valued at $8500.

DECISION AFFIRMED. Judge Wilbur affirmed the decision of the justice court in Santa Monica, fining L. L. Oakley $10 and costs for assaulting Albert Peterson, January 17. Oakley is a patrolman along the beach, and was accosted by Peterson with the kindly greeting, "How do you do, Mr. Policeman," whereupon Oakley proceeded to knock him down. The higher court could see no error in the proceeding and Oakley must pay the fine.

KANSAS PICNIC.

August 7 has been set as the date for the Kansas annual picnic, and it will be held at Sycamore Grove. It is expected that many visiting Elks will remain in the city until that time, and some of this number will be among the speakers. The arrangements are in the hands of L. M. Fell, president, and H. H. Huntsberger, secretary.

HER SIX YEARS IN EFFEMINATE PERSIA.

BY MARY A. CLARKE COLQUHOUN.

Notwithstanding the gravity of the political situation in Persia and the fact that I have personal friends both among the Persians and the foreigners in every important city of the country, I can scarcely read of the trouble now going on there without a smile of amusement at the thought of a Persian soldier actually engaged in warfare.

The military profession in the land of the Shah is looked upon today with but little respect. In the early days of the empire Cyrus the Great had the Persian youth taught to ride a horse, to bend the bow and to speak the truth. These young men he himself led in victorious conquests through the Grecian colonies of Asia Minor, and with their aid a little later the whole of Egypt was conquered in a single battle. Truth-telling as a branch of education is now entirely unknown to the descendants of these sturdy old warriors, while riding and hunting are indulged in merely as gentlemanly sports.

In the time of Darius the Great, when Persia was at the height of her power, her people were wont to boast that they needed not to toil, since by their skill in arms they could command the products of every other land. But since then the Persians have deteriorated physically, until today they are an effeminate race.

This physical deterioration and its accompanying moral deterioration began in the reign of Zerxes. Art remains are often our chief source of information regarding the history of ancient nations, and a bit of history is revealed in the decorations of the palaces of Darius and Zerxes, the ruins of which are still to be seen at Persepolis. The sculptures in the palace of Darius show that that king was fond of hunting, and often represent him as engaged in such sport, or as in combat with mythological monsters. Nowhere are such scenes represented in the palace of the son of Darius There we find servants bringing articles for the toilet or the table. A tone of mere sensual enjoyment is thus given to the palace of Zerxes, which is far from characterizing the older edifice. We scarcely need written history to tell us that Darius was a manly, warlike king, and Zerxes more effeminate; for the decline of character and morals at the court, which history indicates as rapid about that time, is seen to have stamped itself on the national art.

Zerxes had enough of the blood of his forebears in his veins to lead him to accompany his soldiers to Greece, and to watch their engagements from a safe distance, but the decline in courage and virtue went on until a few years ago the Minister of War, a son of the Shah reigning at that time, could say, "I never go to see the soldiers drill because the dust blows in my eyes."

And so it happens that today most of the standing army is made up, not of the effeminate Persians, but of the more hardy Turks, of whom there are many in the western part of the country, the part which is the chief scene of the present difficulty between the Royalists and the Constitutionalists.

Mohammedanism teaches belief in "kismat" (fate,) and this makes its adherents obedient soldiers, but even the hardy Turks do not take readily to the life of the army. An American gentleman once met in the Koordish Mountains a company of men chained together and being driven along like cattle. He asked, "Who are these men?"

"It is a volunteer regiment," was the reply.

Each soldier is obliged to spend a few months every few years in Teheran for the purpose of military drill. The city has a fine dril square, second in size only to that of Peking, but all the soldiers seem to belong to the "awkward squad," and they are the despair of their European drill masters. I have frequently seen a regiment accompanying the Shah through the streets, and I verily believe no two of them kept step together.

Soldiers receive only $3 or $4 a month from the government, so while they are in the capital they are permitted to do certain kinds of work during their leisure hours, and to keep what they earn. Many of them become gatekeepers for foreign residents. During the six years that I spent in Teheran, for the munificent sum of $4 a month, I employed a member of the Persian standing army who was constantly at my beck and call, though the most difficult task that he had to perform was that of accompanying me, in the capacity of protector, when I went on the street. Although I have been for more than a decade in "the land of the free," I sometimes even now hear the loose sandals of my soldier-escort go flip-flap behind me.

One summer I was in a mountain village when a new man came into my service. As he slept in a tent, he asked permission to put his gun in a corner of my room. I looked at it suspiciously and asked, "Is it loaded?" He laughed and said, "No." In telling an American gentleman about thus I remarked, "My new escort is much less stupid than any other Persian soldier I have ever seen. Why, he laughed at me just as an American young man would have done under the circumstances. "But," my friend said, "he was not laughing at your woman-like fear of firearms, he was amused at the idea that a Persian soldier should have ammunition."

What a blessed thing it is that we do not know all that goes on around us! At least on one day ignorance was bliss for the inhabitants of Teheran. During a few hours of that day the houses of all the foreigners and many important public places in the city were guarded by the last persons in the world that we would have chosen for the purpose. Since the soldiers must spend some time each day in drilling, people hire two men as gate-keepers, with the understanding that one of them shall always be on hand. On the particular day of which I speak the drill master had some reason for wishing to make an imposing display of his troops. He therefore ordered every soldier to be present on parade, and in order to make this possible, criminals were let out of the jails, dressed in soldiers' clothes and placed on duty at the gates.

Azusa, July 9.

UPLAND'S WATER PROBLEM.

Citizens Think Supply Should Be Better Protected from Pollution. Harvesting Apricots.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UPLAND, July 10.—The agitation of the water question in this vicinity, it is hoped, may result in the securing of some method of handling the domestic supply for this city and Ontario that will reduce the chance for contamination to a minimum. The present system of unlocked sand-boxes, open ditches, etc., is highly unsatisfactory. This city has one of the finest sources of water supply in all Southern California, and residents think it should be better protected from pollution.

The management at Camp Baldy is very careful and most of our people claim there is little, if any, danger from that source, yet there was a great deal of opposition among members of the water company, to opening the resort to campers again this year.

Jacob Charles, of this city, who came so near death in Santa Ana River on July 5, is convalescing.

Thursday has been fixed as the day for this section to furnish flowers for the Elks at Los Angeles. Local members of the order are making arrangements and it is hoped to send an array of posies which will do much to advertise Upland. Incidentally, too, there will be considerable literature relative to this city distributed, in the hope that we may "land" at least a few of the many Elks who will decide to return to California to live.

BURNED BUT HUSTLING.

Amos Colborn, the Upland contestant for a Times scholarship, has been nursing a severely burned leg since July 5. His injuries were caused by a giant cracker. He is "hustling" for coupons and subscriptions, however.

Ontario's Trustees are to call an election at an early date to vote upon the question of the disincorporation of a part of the territory of that city, which adjoins Upland. The strip involved is that portion of Ontario lying north of the Santa Fe tracks and west of Euclid avenue.

The work of caring for the large apricot crops in the vicinity of Cucamonga, Etiwanda and Ioamosa is occupying the time and attention of growers at present. The price at the canneries is not at all satisfactory, being about $14 per ton, and the growers are preparing to pit, cut and dry the fruit themselves. The price for the dried fruit is about 7 cents per pound. There are not enough laborers.

VINTAGE COMPANY BUILDING.

The California Vintage Company has begun work on its new buildings at North Cucamonga. They are to be of concrete, and will be convenient and modern in every respect.

Dr. W. H. Craig, and Miss Amoret Craig, of this city, and Mrs. Stephen Craig, of Los Angeles, accompanied the body of their mother, Mrs. Angeline Craig, to Freedom, Pa., the old home of the family, for interment. A short funeral service was held at the Draper chapel in Ontario.

Rev. James Vernon, of Henderson, Ky., is the guest of his son, Trustee T. K. Vernon, of Sixteenth street. The minister is to occupy the pulpit of the Christian church at Ontario, tomorrow morning. He is pastor of the church of that denomination in his home city.

The Upland Men's Club is considering the possibility of locating in this city a factory for the manufacture of an improved water filter.

Edward S. Mails, of Placentia, was here, Thursday, looking after the welfare of his brother, H. W. Mails, who has been ill with typhoid fever at San Antonio Hospital for several days, but who is reported to be recovering.

"Colonial--Ragstyle" Rugs are Most Appropriate and Popular for Summer Use

They are a revival of the weaves and styles used in the days of our grandmothers--expanded into new forms of design and colorings, which show the marked advancement of modern weaving skill.

Being made entirely of cotton materials they are much cooler, lighter, more sanitary—and in every way more practical for summer use than rugs of wool texture. The colorings too, are daintier and more restful and harmonize with the cretonnes and taffetas---so much used nowa-days in summer furnishing.

Our collection of these rugs consists of faithful copies of the old Colonial styles such as the---"Old Homestead," "Raglin," "Betsy Ross," "Martha Washington," "Colonial Dames" and "Peggy Shippen" rugs—and the latest novelty—Colonial Poster rugs. These show modern poster scenic designs in the end border—the bodies being in plain restful shades.

The sizes range from 27x54 inches at $1.50 to 36x72 inches at $2.50 and on up to the large room size rugs at $25.00 and $30.00.

And to complete the summer furnishing, we have all the new ideas in dainty summer draperies and upholstery stuffs—and the most desirable and practical summer furniture for the home, the porch and the lawn.

While the styles and designs you will find here are distinctive and above the ordinary—actual comparison of prices will prove that our values are not excelled in the city. We invite you to come and see this interesting and unusual collection of Colonial rugs and summer furnishings.

Some very attractive designs in the new Colonial Poster rugs are shown in one of our windows.

SIDELIGHTS ON PUBLIC MEN.

Senator Clark Understood.

Former Gov. Sam Hauser, the Grand Od Man of Montana, was one of the witnesses in the investigation held by the United States Senate to find out whether the mining millionaire, William A. Clark, was entitled to his seat.

"What did you do, Mr. Hauser?" the late Senator Hoar asked.

"I went to see Mr. Clark."

"Where did you see him?"

"In Butte City."

"At his house?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did you say to him?"

"I told him if he would loosen up he might have a chance to be elected to the Senate."

"Loosen up?" said Senator Hoar. "Loosen up? I don't understand what you mean."

"Maybe you don't," snapped Hauser, "but Clark did."—[Denver Post.

La Follette's Timekeeper.

When Senator La Follette is on his lecture tours during the summers he always takes his son, Bob, along as general manager. It is Bob's duty to provide the necessary ice water, which the fighting Senator imbibes in great quantities, and to call his father off when he has spoken long enough. For Senator La Follette, being the champion, generally speaks three or four hours on ordinary, not to say perfunctory, occasions, and would be perfectly willing to go on a couple more. Along about 11 o'clock each night, when he sees some of the audience looking sleepy, Bob generally gets close to his father and tells him to quit. The Senator looks at his watch and tells the boy to sit down. After ten or fifteen minutes more Bob again calls time. This, too, is not generally heeded. The third and last "call down" comes about 11:30, and even Senator La Follette knows it is better not to provoke young Bob any further, and he quits.—[Washington Letter, New York American.

McEnery's Politeness.

Senator McEnery of Louisiana is rather hard of hearinfg, but is very polite. He tenaciously held his seat in the Senate while Senator Aldrich delivered a speech.

"I noticed you listened to Senator Aldrich very attentively," said a friend after adjournment.

"That reminds me of the story of the Creole down in Louisiana," said Senator McEnery. "He met a northern man named Brown in the hotel. Brown was ill. My Creole friend sympathized with him, and when he left told Brown when he felt better to send around to his house and get his horse and carriage for a drive.

"In a few days Brown had recovered. He sent a boy around for the Creole's rig. 'Why, I haven't any horse or carriage,' said the Creole. 'But you told Mr. Brown to send around for them when he got well enough to drive out,' protested the boy.

"'Oh, that was politeness!' responder my Creole friend.

Shocking Ignorance.

Merrill E. Gates, secretary of the Board of Indian Commissioners, was describing in Washington the splendid work that his board is doing to wipe out the tuberculosis scourge which at one time threatened to make the American Indian extinct.

"But the Indian," said Mr. Gates, "needs to be educated in sanitation. He is shockingly ignorant there. In fact, he is as ignorant as an old farmer I used to know in Warsaw.

"A friend dropped in on this old farmer as he was frying a bit of bacon.

"'Grand bacon, that,' said the friend, sniffing affably.

"'Grand bacon! Well, I guess it is grand bacon,' said the old man, turning the slices in the pan. 'And it's none o' yer murdered stuff, neither. That pig died a natural death!'"—[Exchange.

Rapid Talking Money.

The flaying of Senator Root by Senator Money of Mississippi warrants the statement that the quiet Mississippian is one of the ablest men in the Senate. When he gets up to make a speech in the Senate the official reporters want to take to the tall timber.

The fastest man in sight is put on the job of making stenography keep pace with Senator Money's tongue. It is not an easy job. He is accounted the hardest man in the Senate to report. For this there are several reasons. One of them is that he talks rapidly. Another is that Money has a vocabulary that reaches all the way from Sanscrit to Esperanto, and would have made old Noah Webster conclude his dictionary was sadly abridged and incomplete. Moreover, Money uses his vocabulary with ease, grace, facility and abandon, and when he speaks is as apt to employ allusions to Greek mythology as to contemporary historical lore.

Despite the fact that he has long suffered from defective eyesight, Senator Money is probably the best read man in the Senate. When taking notes the Senate stenographers always sit down close to him and proceed to earn their salaries and then some.

Another rapid talker, who is not easy to report, is Senator Rayner of Maryland, who has a habit of employing a liberal vocabulary and sentences of no parsimonious length. Senator Owen of Oklahoma is a rapid talker, and so is his colleague, Gore.

One of the easiest men in the Senate to report is Senator Hale, who speaks with great deliberation and distinctness. Probably the hardest men to report who has been in Congress in recent years was Littlefield of Maine, when he sat in the House. When Littlefield got wrought up he poured forth a perfect torrent of language. The sentences dropped from his lips so fast as to fairly fall over each other, and he was the terror of the House stenographers.—[Exchange.

A Beveridge Story.

Senator Beveridge was criticising the ludicrous speeches of a certain upright but hot-headed Congressman:

"He does make queer blunders, doesn't he?" said Senator Beveridge. "Have you heard about his latest?

"Well, it seems that a constituent, visiting him recently, complained of the shabbiness of a pair of ink-stained crash trousers that he had on.

"'A man of your position,' said the constituent, reproachfully, 'ought to wear handsomer trousers than those.'

"The Congressman, offended, answered reproachfully:

"'My trousers may be shabby, but they cover a warm and honest heart.'"—[Exchange.

ALCOHOL FOR NEURALGIA.

Large Percentage of Cases of Pain Banished by Cutaneous Injections of the Pure Article.

[New York World:] Remarkable results are announced from a series of experiments now in progress in this city to determine the effect of alcohol injections upon neuralgia, and especially upon that most dreaded type of the disease, tic douleureux, or facial neuralgia. Up to the present time, no cure has ever been found for neuralgia, despite the unusual incentive held out to investigators on account of the intense and continuous suffering of victims and their willingness to pay almost any price for permanent relief.

Many palliative measures have been tried, the one most generally adopted being a subcutaneous injection of osmic acid. Thiersch's plan is to tear out the nerves. Other operations involve peripheral resection of the nerve, cutting nerves inside the skull and gasser-ectomy. All these surgical operations are risky, the last two being frequently fatal. As most neuralgic patients are of a more or less highly developed neurotic constitution, the differential diagnosis between neuralgia and hysteria is not always very easy. No definite pathological changes have been found in the nerves or their sheaths affected by neuralgia, and investigations are thus without the usual clews to work on.

Now comes Dr. Kiliani of this city, who has been working on the problem in conjunction with Prof. Schloesser on a series of elaborate tests with a subcutaneous injection of an 80 per cent. solution of pure alcohol. The injections are made into the trunk or the roots of the three branches of the fifth nerve. In a report to the American Therapeutic Society, based on 190 cases of facial neuralgia subjected to alcohol injections since September, 1906, Dr. Kiliani says he has had only five failures. The other 185 patients were all entirely free from pain and of their anxiety over expecting it, sometimes nearly as bad as the pain itself. These results may be accomplished by any surgeon who masters the technique of the operation.

The 'Possum.

"There's this to say of the 'possum," writes a Georgia youngster to the Atlanta Constitution. "He ain't no bear cause he's always grinnin' like he was in a good humor with ever'body. It's just as if, when you tol' him you was goin' to kill hin, an' cook him, an' eat him for dinner he looked on it as a good joke—just took it far a laughin' matter. I don't know whether he is just good natured or was born grinnin'!"—[Exchange.

Skyrocket Mail Delivery.

The most remarkable method of delivering letters is that employed by steamers passing the islands of the Tonga group, in the Pacific. On account of many reefs, landing is extremely dangerous, and the few letters to be delivered are attached to large skyrockets, which are fired and reach the shore in safety.—London Spare Moments.

Parisians' Freak Photographs.

The freak photograph is the popular fad in Paris at present. Several photographers are making it a specialty, and turn out the humorous, grotesque and grewsome in large quantities. One of these received in this city recently shows a young woman, fashionably attired, carrying in her hand a hat of the peach-basket shape containing her head. Another represents a man contemplating his own smiling face. He holds the head as Hamlet was supposed to have held the skull of Yorick. Still another shows a young man in a coffin, smoking a cigarette, and supposedly listening to the funeral oration, which is being delivered by himself.—[New York Tribune.

A Barber's Double Work.

Two men were shaved at one time in one barber chair last night by Barber Wright. When he called "Next!" two men made for the chair and crowded into it together.

Without the least hesitation Wright slapped the lather on both faces, and while rubbing it in on one man's face started to shave the other man with his other hand.

Both men grasped the novelty of the situation, and allowed the work to continue.

Shaving each man with alternate strokes, he was soon combing one man's hair with his left hand, while the right hand was drying the other fellow's face. Both were satisfied.—[Philadelphia North American.

Steer Airship by Wireless.

Mr. Antony claims that he can do with a full sized airship what he has already done with his model—that is to say, steer it by means of wireless telegraphy. It is said: "Directed with absolute precision from miles away, the airship can be poised above an enemy's fort or ship, and at the will of a man clicking a little key, its cargo of explosives can be dropped by the electrical realease of a lever.—[Exchange.

Bird Nests in a Beehive.

A wagtail has built its nest in a beehive at West Ashby, near Horncastle, and is sitting on ten eggs, despite the bees busy at work below, says the London Evening Standard.

The bird enters by the roof of the hive through a small hole; it has carried quite a heap of hay and other material bit by bit through this hole. The bees are by no means disturbed by their lodger.

An O'er True Answer.

A Kentucky girl whose father was ar undertaker was sent to a fashionable New York boarding-house for a finishing term. One day one of the girls asked her what business her father was in, and, fearing she would lose caste if she told the truth, she carelessly answered: "Oh, my father's a Southern planter."—Lippincott's

Talks on Teeth
BY THE REX DENTAL CO.
(INCORPORATED)

Convincing Testimony for Alveolar Teeth

However eloquently we may sing our own praises of the wonderful results of the Alveolar Method of Teeth Restoration, our talk is but as sounding brass when compared with the simple statements of those who have spent their money with us, and are now enjoying Alveolar Teeth.

The strongest argument is the one which is backed by results.

By way of illustration, read this letter—the original being on file in our office:

DELIGHTED WITH THE WORK

Los Angeles, Cal., June 4, 1909.
The Rex Dental Co., Los Angeles, Cal.:

Gentlemen:—About two years ago I called upon your company to investigate your method of inserting teeth without plates and decided to have a full lower appliance.

I only had two teeth to attach to and had thought there was nothing for a man's mouth in that condition but plates. I was skeptical at first, but when the appliance was finally in place I was delighted, for they were as solid and comfortable as my own teeth had been and I was able to chew all sorts of food the same as when my mouth was in its natural perfect condition.

I have had no cause to change my opinion and am delighted to hand you this letter.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) ROBERT BARRY,
811 South Union avenue.

There is nothing of the miraculous about the Alveolar Method—no implantation, no surgery, no cutting or boring into the gums, with the attendant pain and risk.

All that we require is two or more teeth in either jaw to work from.

The method differs from ordinary bridge work and is infinitely superior—the absence of plates in the mouth is so great a blessing that it needs no argument.

We don't treat all cases alike—we diagnose carefully and then give the patient the proper treatment for his individual case—every man in our office is an expert.

No case too complicated, none too simple for us.

We invite you to come in for a free examination of your teeth.

If you can't call send for our free book. Tells you all about it.

SMOOTHING THE WAYS.

SHOW STRIDES ON THE ROADS.

Highway Commissioners File Their Report.

Statement of Progress for a Half-Year.

Figures Given on Expenses of Department.

An account of the progress of the county's good roads system is given in the report of the Los Angeles County Highway Commission for the six months ended June 30. The report shows the various activities in detail, tells what has been done in the way of surveys and subsequent work on the various roads to be improved and also presents a statement about rock quarries and supply of crushed rock. An interesting financial showing is also made.

The financial statement of expenditures for the six months shows for the commission salaries, $1905; expenses, $176.81; office, (including chauffeur and stenographer,) salaries, $1466.88; supplies, $598.17; expenses, $97.30; engineering department, salaries, $18,134.68; supplies, $3580.44; expenses, $1734.59; construction, $3858; rights of way purchased on Long Beach boulevard, $2674; on Harbor boulevard, $400. Most of the amount expended for supplies has been for articles of a permanent character, such as transits and other instruments, etc.

SURVEYS AND PLATS.

Summarized the report shows that complete location surveys have been made on 130.04 miles of the roads. Center line and right of way surveys have been completed on 17.05 miles, additional. Complete office work, including platting, profiling, cross-sectioning, establishing of grade lines and the designing of reinforced concrete bridges, pile trestles, reinforced concrete culverts, metal culverts and vitrified pipe culverts has been completed on 21.19 miles, and field notes have been platted in the office on 39.85 miles additional.

The detailed report of the progress on the various thoroughfares shows the following:

San Fernando Road. On 13.70 miles complete location survey has been made. Of this work five and three-fourths miles has been done, commencing about two miles this side of Newhall Pass and running north from that point across Newhall Pass over a difficult location. This section includes a 440-foot tunnel.

Wilshire boulevard, from Soldiers' Home to the Los Angeles city limits. This road is 7.73 miles long. Complete location survey has been made and all office work is done. Condemnation proceedings have been instituted for the acquisition of the third interest of the Rindge heirs in the property held jointly by them and the Clark and Sherman Land Company for the purpose of making the right of way 100 feet wide.

Harbor boulevard. Total length 11.38 miles. The contract for the part from Victoria street south to the north boundary of Wilmington has been let to W. N. Crandall & Co., for $17,430, and the work is to be completed within 100 days from June 17.

Long Beach Boulevard. This is 12.45 miles in length. Complete location survey has been made. Office work has been completed on five miles and notes have been platted on the remainder. One 320-foot reinforced concrete pile bridge and three wooden pile trestles have been designed. This bridge is to cross the Los Angeles river and the trestles are to span sloughs on each side of the river.

El Monte Road runs from the east city limits of Los Angeles to the west city limits of Alhambra. Contract has been let to Frank Gillespie for $227,740. Distance is 2.45 miles.

The report shows progress on the following roads: Sunset Boulevard Hollywood to Wilshire; Los Angeles and Redondo, Manhattan Beach, Redondo and Wilmington; Gardena Road, from Harbor Boulevard west to Los Angeles shoestring strip; Los Angeles and Watts, Compton avenue, Long Beach and Naples; Valley Boulevard; Whittier Road, from Los Angeles city limits to the Orange county line; Monterey Pass road, El Monte and Spadra Road, El Monte and Covina Road, Covina and Lordsburg Road, San Dimas avenue, Foothill Boulevard, Sierra Madre avenue, Altadena Drive, La Cañada-Verdugo Road, Eagle Rock Road, Mountain avenue—Avenue 64, Glendale and Hollywood, Sunset Boulevard and Vermont avenue.

FOR ROCK CRUSHERS.

Specifications have been prepared for the installation of two rock-crushing plants on property belonging to the county, situated near Pacima. One of these is to have a minimum capacity of 1000 tons per eight-hour day and one of 500 tons for a corresponding day. These have been advertised for bids.

The specifications and proposal for furnishing crushed rock f. o. b. at contractor's quarry or point of delivery in separate quantities of 800,000 tons of class A rock, 400,000 tons of class A rock and 200,000 tons of class B rock and 100,000 tons of class B rock have been prepared and a notice for receiving bids for furnishing the same is now being advertised.

In conclusion the report says: "The commission has held fifty meetings in the six months, with all members present with but few exceptions. There has been unanimity of opinion and action upon all subjects and there is no record of a dissenting vote made upon the minutes of the commission."

BERLIN'S HOTEL PORTERS.

Are Regular "First Nighters" and Able to Send Tourists to Right Theaters.

[Berlin Letter to New York Herald:] "Did you go to that first performance at the Royal Belustigung Theater?" asked the hotel door porter.

I replied that I had inadvertently missed it, and he explained that I was the loser, as it was a good show, worthy of the patronage of all the hotel clients.

"How's that?" I asked. "Are you a barker for the theater manager?"

"Not at all," he said. "You see, it's like this. I attend all the premieres, I form an accurate judgment of the merits of the play, so that I can give reliable advice to the people stopping in this hotel. Every day somebody asks about the various plays or operas, and we must not remain in ignorance. Accordingly all such questions are referred to me, as I am the official 'first nighter.' By using the right kind of discrimination I can direct the different persons to the kind of shows they will like the best, according to their nationalities and their particular degree of intelligence. I send most of the New Yorkers to the music halls, because, not understanding the language very well, they can get their money's worth by hearing the songs and seeing the dances or acrobatic stunts. I usually send the Bavarians to hear 'King Lear' in German, and I recommend to the Frenchmen a performance of 'Faust,' because I know they never get a chance to hear it in Paris as it ought to be. I sent two Persians to hear 'Occupe-toi d'Amelie' a few nights ago, and they told me afterward that it was the limit, and that the censor in Paris never would stand for the Berlin version."

LONG STOCKINGS.

CROWN WEARERS ARE THRIFTY.

KEEP LARGE DEPOSITS OUTSIDE THEIR OWN COUNTRY.

Bank of England Is a Favorite Place for European Rulers to Place Deposits for Convenience in Case of Trouble in Their Own Country. The Czar Has "Small" Nest Egg.

[London Saturday Journal:] Whatever dignity there may be in wearing a crown and wielding a scepter, it is pretty evident that the kingly position is hardly more certain, say, than that of the average man who has to earn his living. Revolutions come and monarchs go, they get less than the usual month's notice, and in many cases are glad if they take their lives with them.

In such disastrous circumstances these exiled rulers are glad to fall back on the long stockings which they have been careful to fill in the days of their prosperity. Like ordinary mortals, they have prepared against the rainy day that comes in the life of kings as it does in that of coal-heavers.

CASTRO'S MILLION.

At the present moment Abdul Hamid has just left the throne of Turkey, and President Castro is wondering whether he will ever again defy Europe from the Cabinet of Venezuela. But in this lapse from power each ruler is comforted by the fact that "money is no object." Castro did not spend all he earned—or obtained—during his long reign. The story of large sums of gold buried in the ground at Caracas may be a myth, but it is well known that he laid up for himself treasures in the banks of Europe which will keep the wolf from his door so long as his life is prolonged. A round sum of a million is at the command of the ex-cattle drover whenever he calls for it.

Abdul is equally fortunate. Out of his official income of £800,000 a year, he managed to send a large sum to the Bank of France and the Bank of England, where it lies to his private credit. Immediately before the recent crisis a confidential agent of his paid a hurried visit to London, and collected a number of valuable securities lying in various banking houses, which he transferred to a safe deposit in the city against the time when his ex-Majesty might be free to use them.

And if the Sultan ever gets his liberty, it will probably be found that he did not go empty-handed when he left the Yildiz Kiosk. He was always prepared for emergencies of that kind. When the agitation against the Armenian massacres was on, and a private "tip" had come from the Turkish Embassy in London that flight would be advisable, Abdul crammed his pockets with loose jewels, and stuffed his belt with bonds for a considerable amount. If he had to leave he did not mean to leave empty-handed.

The Czar does his saving in a more systematic manner. He watches the money market as a cat watches a mouse, and invests in anything good that he fancies. Sometimes he is bitten, as when he plunged on some worthless mining shares; but it is not often, as in this case, that he goes beyond the £25,000 which he has set as the limit of his annual loss. More often than not he makes a big profit. He has not less than £1,500,000 locked up in American railway, coal and sugar stock, which would come in extremely handy if he had to vacate the throne of the Romanoffs.

THE CZAR'S LITTLE NEST EGG.

Moreover, there is a trifle of £3,000,000 odd in solid gold lying to his credit in the vaults of the Bank of England, and if Russia becomes "red" again it is not above possibility that His Majesty will find a good friend in the Old Lady of Threadneedle street. And one might add that the million pounds settled on the eldest daughter of the Czar at her birth was invested in British, French and American securities.

No one anticipates a revolution in Germany, but Kaiser Wilhelm is too shrewd to put all his eggs into the German basket. He has a trifle of three-quarters of a million sunk in American rails, and another million in New York real estate, although in the latter case his name never appears as the owner of the land. Another handy sum is the £100,000 bequeathed to him by the Baroness Oppenheim-Cohn.

The Spanish royal family, also, have always favored American securities, despite that little bit of fighting about eleven years ago. The Queen Regent, King Alfonso's mother, draws a good yearly income from the half-million odd which Uncle Sam holds on her account. When Queen Isabella had to leave Spain she carried off her crown and a large parcel of royal jewels. Prince del Drago, her grand-nephew, took the crown for sale to America, and actually sold it to Jay Gould's daughter for £25,000. When Isabella was wearing it at the height of her power, Jay Gould was trying to make a living as a book canvasser.

THE WEALTH OF THE POPE.

The Pope is not above laying up for himself some of the treasures of this earth. A certain proportion of the Papal revenues is regularly invested in foreign securities, and the aggregate savings brings him an income of about £250,000 a year. In his case, also, Threadneedle street is favored, and twice a year a trusted delegate leaves the Vatican to confer with certain financial magnates in London. On their advice the money held by His Holiness is laid out, chiefly in English and American bonds. What a nice little nest egg it would be if an upheaval, such as has happened in Turkey, compelled the Pope to pass beyond the prison-like walls of the Vatican. It is hardly too much to say that he would have enough to establish his kingdom elsewhere in much of its ancient dignity and splendor.

To Sell Railroad.

ST. PAUL, July 10.—Federal Judge Sam Bern today issued a decree authorizing the special master in chancery to sell at public auction the properties of the Chicago Great Western, which has been in the hands of receivers since January, 1904. The lowest bid accepted will be $12,000,000.

RAWHIDE DOINGS.

Grutt Balloon Hill a Center of Attraction on Account of Strike.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RAWHIDE, Nev., July 8.—Grutt Balloon Hill is still the attraction of the camp. It has been doubled by opening a two and one-half foot vein in the shaft twenty-one feet below the 185 foot station. As far as can be determined the ore is in place and shows a highly silicified altered composition that pans in both native gold and silver, with gold predominating. The assays have not been received on account of the holiday season, and the value is variously estimated at $50 and upward.

Eight men have been added to the payroll on this now famous lease. Drifting is going forward with renewed energy in the three directions from the "hub" where the high-grade ore was encountered at the 185, south, southwest and southeast. The southwest drift shows eight inches of a lamination frozen against the hanging wall that is freely sprinkled with native silver. The lowest assay from this streak is $1126. This product is being stripped and a ton a day is being taken to the surface where it will be stored and saved with a view of making a carload shipment of this and the higher-grade from a smaller streak on the footwall which assays over $12,000. It is the intention to get together a carload that will exceed in value the famous $400,000 car of the Hayes-Monette lease at Goldfield.

Three shifts are sinking in the shaft and the hoist's present capacity is taxed to its utmost. The following equipment will be installed within the next forty days: A 40 H. P. Fairbanks engine, a 10 by 10 compressor and 4 machine drills with all their appurtenances. This plant will be placed at the point where the incline has been driven from the 120 foot point to the surface which is in Stingeree Gulch. Three shifts are at work in the incline at putting the shaft in shape for heavy work. This hole comes directly from the ore and the raise being broken at the 185 will connect with the winze sunk from the 120 which will mean that the ore will be handled but once which is 100 per cent. economy.

Controls from a thirty-five ton shipment now at the Hazen sampler give a net result of $156.00 per ton, making a settlement for this shipment of $5460.00. This is second class ore. This brings the net production from March 12th to the present time to $89,460.00 and there is not a stope broken as yet. This is from development alone.

The Lawyers' lease on the big Bethania estate is running the Grutt Balloon Hill a close second. A short drift run from the bottom of the shaft at the eighty foot point, opened the latter part of last week, shows a clean breast of solid quartz. Some very high grade specimens were taken out Saturday and pannings that stirred visitors to a high pitch of excitement taken from points across the entire breast. Sinking will be continued to the 110 foot point when drifts will be run north and south on the big shoot to define it at that depth and also to open stoping ground.

At the Bridges-Daniels lease on Bethania estate a 200 ton shipment is being completed. A fine grade of high-grade mill drift is being raised at the rate of five tons daily.

The Gold Reef Mining Company, operating blocks 1 and 2 of the Queen Bethania claim has installed a machine hoisting plant. This company begins sinking the early part of this week and great things are expected the first few feet of sinking, as the miners will begin directly on high-grade mill rock which covers the entire bottom of the shaft.

The management of the Queen estate has abandoned and leased Kearns 7 working to a San Francisco syndicate. The lease had been working on company account and the entire expense borne from royalties from the Grutt Balloon Hill lease. This shaft is at the 400 foot mark and in good mill dirt all the way. At the 200 it shows exceptional high-grade values. The lease is for three years with a royalty of 30 per cent. The Queen estate has no company workings.

The Mint lease started breaking a station at the 400 foot level late last week. The sulphide at the 400 foot point shows a shipping grade above $50.00 from every particle taken from the break. Stations are being cut in both sides of the shaft and everything in sight is ore. Sinking continues with three shifts and the shaft is nearing the 450 foot point.

Frank McKelvy, superintendent of the Victor lease, has opened four feet on the Yankee Girl ground four miles north of camp. Assays across this discovery from a sixteen foot depth show $36 in gold, silver and copper. This is virgin territory and the find extends the district in another direction.

A. A. Codd of the Gold Mines Company, operating the St. Ives lease on Queen estate, has been granted a five year lease, adjoins the Grutt Balloon Hill.

On the Big Four, in the north drift at the 200 foot station, there has been opened two and one-half feet between perfect walls that assays $29, while a streak of high-grade on the footwalls runs better than $500, silver predominating. This lease is now known as the Merritt Mining and Leasing Company.

A cleanup at the Murray Mill on Victor ore from a sixty-six ton run netted the company almost ten pounds of bullion. Three hundred tons more are on the way, and the mill is running steadily from the Victor's production.

Work on the big reduction plant of the National Ore Purchasing Company is being rushed, and the management sees no reason to change its estimate of the date set for the initial purchase of ore, July 15.

SOUTH PASADENA.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 10.—The second series of tent revival meetings which are being held by the Christian Church are attracting a great deal of interest and the audiences are steadily growing larger. Dr. S. Martin, who is conducting the meetings, is an eloquent speaker, and Prof. Hoggatt's singing is much enjoyed. Tomorrow morning, the sermon will be on "Rock and Sand." At 3 o'clock in the afternoon there will be an address for women only.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas, of No. 1111 Meridian avenue, are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a little daughter.

H. O. Martin, formerly of Idaho, is building a one and one-half story house on Electric avenue, just north of Huntington Drive, and will build a seven-room house on the adjoining lot for his nephew.

The weed question is again perplexing a great many property owners who not only keep their own yards clean but are anxious that the city as a whole shall present an attractive appearance. City Attorney Carson has been instructed to draw up a measure providing for cleaning uncared for lots, and charging the cost to the owners.

Mrs. Caroline W. Dobbins, of Garfield avenue, has gone to her mountain home in Bear Valley, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Humphries and their little son.

Dr. Henry Sherry, of No. 221 Fremont avenue, delivered an address on "American Patriots" in All Saints parish house, Pasadena, Thursday evening.

MRS. ROOSEVELT AT NAPLES.

NAPLES, July 10.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and three children arrived here today on the steamer Celtic. The Roosevelt party will go to the villa of Miss Carew, near Rome.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—Just $8,000,000 shy half a billion is the assessed valuation of property in this city. It ought to be enough to keep us from starving. Assessor Dodge apologizes for not making it an even $500,000,000, and promises to do better next year. Inasmuch as there is a gain of $38,000,000 over the assessment roll of last year, the Assessor is perfectly safe in his promise.

Now comes the vexed question of population. Everybody has a guess coming. The directory people estimate it over half a million. The school census just completed shows 110,090 children here. Most of them have papas and mammas, with a fair sprinkling of bachelor uncles and maiden aunts, so the school superintendent feels safe in saying that there are 450,000 people in San Francisco. Until the Federal census is taken anyone has a right to make a guess.

The President of the United States can play golf as much as he likes without fear of punishment, but Capt. Henry Stevens Kiersted of the medical corps of the army cannot do it. He played golf so much that he failed to pass a promotion examination and for that reason has been honorably discharged from the service.

The passing of the slot machines was accomplished without bloodshed and now that they have been gone a week the average citizen has forgotten that they ever existed. There is more money at home and the women of the house don't care if they never see a slot machine again.

Our ladies are not vindictive nor given to strong language, but they have a few things to say about Prof. Willett of the University of Chicago. He says that women are unscrupulous as well as extravagant and that the faults of society are due to their scramble for luxury.

A dashing blonde, plump and 30 years of age, has victimized many of our shopkeepers. She makes a small purchase, smiles winsomely at the salesman and then gives him a check for $14.50. He smiles in return, gallantly hands her the change and the article. The check is signed "Blanche Smith," but the bank officials do not know the signature and the police are looking for the lady to see whether she will smile on them.

James de la Montanya, divorced husband of the woman whose death is baffling the Coroner, explains to the police his refusal to visit at once the room where the body was lying. He said that it was midnight when he was notified and that he would not get out of bed at that time of night for any woman, particularly when it might have been a trap to have him "beaten up."

His name is Christian C. Johnson and he is 65 years of age, but he proudly admits that he is a bigamist and that his age is no handicap. So far seven women have been involved in his marital career. Four of these he married and three of them he didn't. The police are attending to his case and it looks as though his usefulness as a woman charmer is ended.

Without considering our feelings in the matter, the people of Berkeley, aided and abetted by men of science, are working overtime to drive the house fly from the town limits. We do not like flies of any kind, educated or uneducated, and the pesky things will be promptly shipped to Oakland when they come our way from the hostile regions of the State university.

Indifferent as to alimony, Pinao G. Watson, a buxom lady of Hawaiian extraction, prayed for a divorce from Alexander B. Watson, an employé of the Southern Pacific. She told the judge that "he just got up and left her without making any explanation." Because of this unusual act Judge Mogan granted the lady a divorce.

FANATIC HELD FOR MURDER.

Hindu Student Denies Right of Any English Court to Arrest or Try Him.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LONDON, July 10.—Madarlal Dhinagri, the Indian student who on July 1 shot and killed Col. William Hutt, Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Gawas Lacoaca, was today committed for trial at the Old Bailey for murder.

The prisoner denied the right of any English law court to arrest or sentence him.

"If it is patriotic for Englishmen to fight against Germans if they should occupy this country," he said, "then it is much more justifiable and more patriotic in my case to fight against the English. I hold the English responsible for the murder of 80,000,000 of my countrymen during the last fifty years, and that they are also responsible for taking from India £100,000,000 every year."

Conference of Unitarians Adjourns After Adopting Resolution of Commendation.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—The Pacific Coast Conference of Unitarian churches concluded its business today by hearing reports of meetings, electing directors and adopting resolutions.

Mrs. Mary B. Presser of San Francisco submitted the reports from the "Pacific Unitarian" and headquarters. Rev. Earl M. Wilbur of Berkeley, Cal., read the report on the Pacific Unitarian School for the Ministry. These directors were elected: Rev. Bradford Leavitt, San Francisco; W. P. Olds, Portland, Or.; W. H. Payson, Berkeley, Cal.; Pratt Carr, Seattle; Carl G. Rensdorff, Palo Alto, Cal.

The directors will meet in San Francisco on the second Monday in September and choose a secretary and treasurer.

The conference adopted resolutions of greeting to the Epworth League, now in convention here, and also adopted a resolution declaring that "We proudly take our stand by the side of the great Methodist church in indorsing its principles in relation to the social progress and welfare of mankind." After the close of the conference the members and their friends went on a steamer excursion to Bainbridge Island.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—A more ludicrous situation than the present one has never beset the political reformers of this town. Ordinarily, when these purists attempt the interesting feat of self-government, they tackle a system perfected, and to some extent, illuminated by the professionals; and thus they are able to produce results—not satisfactory results in all cases, perhaps, but, nevertheless, results.

At present, however, they are far adrift at sea. For many years, on behalf of the people, they have demanded a direct primary law; on the theory, probably, that it would enable them (with the aid of "the people") to carry the offices by storm. Now that they have such a law, things look to them more desperate than ever. Many hoped the Supreme Court would abolish it, but it has been declared constitutional, and they are prevented from denouncing it as a fraud, which many of them think it is.

A great deal of space would be required to describe how the reformers of this city have maneuvered to get themselves into this scrape. The idea that winning and holding offices for themselves would be easy the moment "the people" were empowered to make nominations, they are now discovering, was a species of demagogy that should not have deceived anybody. As a matter of fact, the direct primary—at least in this town—is just what the bosses wanted to make their control permanent.

Never was organization more necessary; never were nominations more dependent on practical effort, and never were results further from the reach of the professional reformer and demagogue.

In justice to "Jimmy" Phelan and "Rudy" Spreckels, however, it must be said that they neither promoted nor desired the direct primary law. Phelan, especially, opposed it, mainly on the ground that it would make politics expensive. As Mr. Phelan has always won his fights by contributing liberally to the campaign fund, his opposition was based on experience. Spreckels has not had much experience as a politician, and in all that has been and is now being done here he is a stalking horse for Phelan. When I say, therefore, that Phelan has disapproved direct primary legislation, that includes "Me, too" Spreckels.

One of the first results of this method of nominating candidates has been the wrecking of the Good Government League. The owners of this league are Rudolph Spreckels, who pays its expenses; Isador Jacobs, who manages its business, and George Baker Anderson, a Los Angeles importation, who "does" its politics. The other day these worthies sent a letter to each voter in the city asking for a return expression on Mayor and Supervisors. For Mayor, the voter was requested to choose between James D. Phelan, William A. Magee and Walter A. McArthur, and for Supervisors from among thirty well-known reformers, office holders and seekers.

The purpose of that letter has been variously surmised. Some think it was a scheme to disqualify jurors in the Calhoun trials; others a scheme to poll the labor vote on Mayor; others a job to promote in some way Heney's candidacy for District Attorney. But it is probable that it was designed to lay the foundation for a campaign for Phelan for Mayor. Spreckels, Jacobs and Anderson worship "Jimmy" and believe he can be elected. What more likely than that their faith produced the letter?

All would have been well, however, had not George Baker Anderson of Los Angeles attempted something "practical"—something that never should be attempted by a "reformer." He marked under each stamp of the return letter the initial and register number of the voter to whom it was addressed. His purpose plainly was to identify the answers in cases where the voter refused or neglected to give his name. Purist Anderson's trick was essentially "practical" and smelled strongly of "reform." Neither Jacobs nor Anderson has satisfactorily explained it, and the roasting they have received from the newspapers has about broken the back of the league. Among others who have deserted them in consequence of the exposure is John D. Spreckels, brother of "Rudy," whose newspaper, the Call, has heretofore swallowed everything the graft prosecution politicians have set before it.

Anderson, the erstwhile purist-editor from Los Angeles, is entitled to the credit of this remarkable bit of strategy. He busted the people's lobby at Sacramento, and has now busted the Good Government League here. As an angel trickster, he is evidently an irreparable loss to the Angel City.

Besides this, the direct primary has probably disposed of Heney's aspirations for District Attorney. Prior to the decision of the Supreme Court the Election Commissioners—at the special instance of Phelan himself—ruled that there was nothing in the law to prevent a candidate running for as many nominations as he thought he could get. True, the statute says this cannot be done, but Phelan always tramples on the law when it obstructs his political plans. So Heney's personal "club" and the Good Government League got ready to run him for District Attorney on the Republican and Democratic tickets—a la Langdon two years ago.

But suddenly the Supreme Court intervened. Not only was the law found to be constitutional as a whole, but its parts were also. The test oath of party affiliations was declared to be valid, and duplicate nominations were forbidden. The idea of the graft reformers was that the court would emasculate the statute to suit their purposes. But the court refused to legislate. Having previously applauded the direct primary system, the Spreckles crowd is now compelled to join with the machines in yelling "Vive le Supreme Court," while in fact they feel like shouting that the judges were paid by the Southern Pacific political bureau to knock them out.

So Heney cannot have two nominations. The decision has forced Fickert, the Union Labor candidate, into the Republican fight, and half a dozen other strong politicians will contest that honor with him. The great "prosecutor" is now at Seattle searching for a stronger lime light than he has recently been getting here, and from there we note that he has defied the Supreme Court and the primary law; he will "run for District Attorney as an independent and win!"

But this is an irridescent dream. Heney can never make headway as an independent. If the McNab Democrats put him on their ticket—which is doubtful—he will face a three-cornered contest and run on the shortest section of the triangle. The McNab Democrats have not polled 7000 votes at any election since the advent of Mayor Schmitz, eight years ago. Whenever they have elected anybody, the candidate has had a nomination on the Union Labor ticket.

So the achievements of the direct primary in this town to date are truly remarkable. The political reformers and demagogues have not in a score of years devised a reform instrument so deadly as this. Indeed, many of them have already begun to deny responsibility for it. A worker who has lately been out soliciting signatures to a petition for the nomination of a reform Supervisor the other day said to me:

"Asking a citizen to sign one of these petitions is like requesting him to indorse your note. You have to explain everything—the law, its effect, the results to him personally, etc., etc. Many men refuse point blank to sign on the ground of ignorance. Others have "friends" for whom they intend to sign. The delay and consequent expense is maddening. I think an ordinary petition for a place on the ticket will cost a thousand dollars. Men in offices have an advantage, however; they can send their deputies out at the public expense."

In one of his books the late Charles Darwin, the renowned English beetle hunter, laid it down as a principle of evolution, that whenever a species becomes scarce, it is on the high road to extinction. Applying this rule to the Lincoln-Roosevelt League and reform generally in this town, it is apparent, not only that the blatherskites of the graft prosecution are approaching the end, but that they are already extinct. One rarely hears the name of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League mentioned nowadays. As for Spreckels, he is a joke. The Good Government League, its allied "League of Justice," and other office-seeking devices, are no longer figured into the calculations of the political bosses. The machinery of government is now out of the hands of all these organizations and in the hands of "the people"—where the practical politicians can handle it without interference from the newspapers, the demagogues, the stage or the pulpit.

As for Heney, he is rapidly becoming a municipal comique. He has ceased to be an object of speculation or conversation, and his efforts to maintain himself in the lime light are of interest only to his press agent.

FRENCH FOURTH OF JULY.

Anniversary of Fall of Bastile to Be Observed With Interesting Programme.

The one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the fall of the Bastile, observed by French people throughout the world, will be celebrated in Los Angeles on July 14 at the Chutes Park. There will be sports in the morning, speeches and music in the afternoon, and in the evening a ball.

The president of honor for the day will be M. Durand, the French Consular Agent in this city, and the vice-presidents of honor, Mrs. L. J. Christopher and Leon Loeb. The Executive Committee includes Louis Sentous, Jr., Leon Curtet, F. Mirassou-Casteig and Joseph Filhol. P. Puissegur is chairman of the Ball Committee.

"France" and the "Goddess of Liberty are to be impersonated by Miss Helen Theobald and Miss E. Fleur, respectively.

The programme in the afternoon will open with an address of welcome by M. Durand. Mayor Alexander will also speak, and former Judge Trask will be the English orator of the day. M. H. Alliot will deliver an oration in French. Miss Antoinette Ballade will sing the "Star Spangled Banner," and Andre Rouseyrol, the French national anthem, "La Marseillaise."

The Countess A. de Courlon will read a French poem; a violin duet will be played by the Misses Darfeuille and Orquodi, accompanied by Miss Normandie, and a rapier duel will be fought by H. Hyttenhove of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and Alfred Beaudry. August Blanchard, Jr., and J. Lescoulie will present a one-act comedy.

CAPTURED ON RUN.

Man Charged With Embezzlement Is Taken by Detective After Hot Chase.

After an exciting chase of two blocks Detective Chapman yesterday afternoon arrested A. Cowan, a typewriter supply salesman, who is wanted for embezzlement by the local police.

Cowan is charged with taking $5 from Lem Bronson, who has offices in the Jeffries building on Winston street, for the purpose of making change, and "forgetting" to return with the money.

Yesterday afternoon the detective was in an office building at Eighth and Spring streets when Cowan entered and attempted to make a sale. Chapman questioned the young man and secured his card. Cowan suddenly became suspicious, dashed out the door, down the stairway and into the street, with Chapman in pursuit.

The chase continued across Main and nearly to Los Angeles street before the officer overtook his quarry. At the Police Station Cowan refused to talk.

LETTER FROM AFRICA.

Impressions of Locally-Known Travelers Cleverly Expressed—Compliments for Roosevelt.

The letter printed below was written by Mrs. Northrup Macmillan. Her husband is the famous owner of a magnificent plantation in East Africa and is one of the only, if not absolutely the only, American operating in that country on a large scale. Some months ago The Times published in its Magazine a very interesting article about this American and his operations in East Africa by Frank G. Carpenter.

The letter was sent by Mrs. Macmillan to Mrs. Clark, who, with her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. L. Stetson, was traveling in India, where they met the Macmillans and became quite intimate. Mrs. Stetson is the wife of A. L. Stetson, a well-known business man of Los Angeles, Mrs. Clark being Mr. Stetson's own sister. Mrs. Clark thought the letter so interesting that she sent a copy of it to her brother, and from him The Times procured it by solicitation. Here it is:

"We were in the saddle all day, or most of the time. We made several trips to Una Hill Farm, the new place which Northrop has given to me (as lovely a spot as any one could wish,) and we had a good many people with us first and last, and when the Roosevelt party came, there was no time to be dull. They left us on Thursday, we rode into Nairobi on Friday; came to Mombasa on Saturday and sailed Monday night. The week or more that we had with the Roosevelt party was most interesting, and to know him well (or even a little,) is a liberal education. He is disappointing at first, because of an ultra-emphatic, effusive, distinctly political manner, it smacks of the limelight, and is almost too cordial to be dignified, considering his position. But, when one gets beyond that manner, he is the most intensely interesting personality I have ever met, the greatest mind and the widest intelligence. In a word, we were all completely captivated with the man, he is so alive, so vividly human and alert in his sympathies and understandings, so in touch with every phase of life from king to peasant, so judicial, and above all, so modest of his own abilities and attainments. Now, imagine any one thinking the "great Teddy" modest, to judge from the press, but he is, astonishingly so. And, he is kind, thoughtful, and considerate to a degree I have rarely seen equaled. He possesses a marvelous memory and is amazingly well read, one minute he will be telling of some intricate and almost unknown detail in ancient history, the next telling you some tale of early cowboy days, until one's sides ache with laughing, the next giving you some insight into political questions, etc., etc., until one is fairly bewildered by his marvelous scope and the magnetism with which he carries you from one subject to another. And the deference and attention with which he listens to other people. But I must not bore you by writing too much. You may suspect from what I have said that from being somewhat prejudiced against him, I have become one of his warmest admirers, and you won't be far wrong. Northrop the same, while he and Mr. Bulpet got on beautifully, much to my pleasure. Kermit is a nice boy, very well educated, clever, simple and natural. He looks about 16, but his mind is far beyond his years.

They had fair luck shooting at Jrja—got a hippo, rhino, leopard, and several buck that they had not got before. We didn't try for lions, as he had already got seven, and ours are both difficult and dangerous of pursuit, as the ground is honey-combed with caves, it is often a waste of time to try for them.

They had an exciting time with the leopard, and he caught one of the boys and there was hand to hand fighting before the leopard was dispatched. The boy was badly bitten and mauled, but is recovering, as most natives do. Mr. Roosevelt also wounded a python, which promptly charged straight at him, much to the terror of Judd, our safari manager, who was with him that day. Mr. Roosevelt did not know there was danger, so he stood his ground quite calmly and shot it through the head, about four feet away. I never thought a python would be dangerous, but it seems they are.

The morning after Mr. Roosevelt left us he got two fine buffalo bulls on the neighboring ranch, so he has quite a splendid bag so far. The three scientific men with him were all agreeable, and as Louise had a very sharp attack of fever that week, I was thankful for the presence of a Doctor. She was very bad indeed. There has been a great deal of sickness in British East Africa this year, among humans and animals. An epidemic of small-pox (several cases among our own boys), fever, horse sickness, swine fever, and cattle disease have all ravaged the country, and a famine threatens on account of lack of rain.

I am sending home my two favorite ponies, have on the boat with me six dogs, two tame cheetahs, and a monkey, and we are giving to the Washington Zoo (through these scientific men) all our collection of wild animals, five lions, a gorgeous leopard (half tame) a wart hog, baboon, and several gazelles and birds, so we are leaving very little at the farm."

ROBBERS ON WHEELS.

A. C. Kaiser of No. 266 South Burlington street reported to the police that as he was approaching his home early yesterday morning he was stopped by two masked men, who rode up on bicycles and covered him with pistols and took $6 in money from his pockets. Owing to the darkness, Kaiser could give no description of the highwaymen.

ELKS TO FEAST IN PASADENA ON TONS OF BARBECUED BEEF.

Crown City's Hosts to the Visiting Elks Tomorrow.

Officers and committeemen of Pasadena Lodge, No. 672, B.P.O.E., who are to entertain with a full day of sport at Tournament Park.

A RIGHT hearty "Hello, Bill," a tingling handshake and a feast with savory barbecued beef and chilis and other appetizers—these are some of the items in the welcome that Pasadena will extend to the visiting Elks tomorrow. To the Crown of the Valley is given the distinction of extending the first day's entertainment to the welcome throng invading Southern California.

Perhaps never in the history of Pasadena will its transportation facilities be taxed as in the evening tomorrow, when a great number of people will desire to return to Los Angeles from Tournament Park between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock. As the Grand Lodge will open at 8 o'clock, all transportation facilities will be utilized to their maximum capacity, and even then it is believed that many Elks will be compelled to remain in Pasadena over night. This is the only problem which has not been mastered by those in charge of the big day's demonstration.

Tournament Park will be open at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, and from then until 11 o'clock the Bryan Band of Los Angeles will give a concert.

Arrangements have been made for an automobile ride between the hours of 9 and 11 for members of the Grand Lodge only.

FROM SAVORY PIT.

At 11 o'clock John Breiner, the oldest man in the business in Pasadena, as chairman of the committee and chief butcher, will open the barbecue which will continue until 1 o'clock. Five thousand pounds of beef will be placed in the pit Sunday, and, steamed all night, it should be tender and well done by 10 o'clock the following morning. The feast will also include beans, of which 10,000 orders have been contracted for, chili sauce, bread and butter, coffee and milk.

At 1:30 o'clock the sports will be heralded. A new feature added to the programme yesterday will be an exhibition by the Elks Drill Corps of Oakland.

The first event in the programme of sports will be a novelty race. The four contestants are William Biedebach, Roy Vale, Eugene Flournoy and Robert Zimmerman. Following this will be the first heat of the Roman chariot race, for which a $1000 cash first prize and $500 cash second prize are offered.

The first half of the push-ball contest between the Circle Stars and the Black Cross teams will take place at 1:55 o'clock; riders for the Circle Stars are C. E. Post, captain; William Biedebach, E. L. Whitmore and William Schneider. The Black Cross team is made up of William Tate, Eugene Flournoy, Lincoln Lusher and C. D. Rhodes. In this contest the mounted men try to force a leather-covered ball six feet in diameter between winning goal posts.

The horses are trained to the sport and enter into the spirit of it with as much zest as the horsemen. The knees and breasts of the horses do the pushing of the big ball. Dr. C. W. Barrett, a veterinary, will referee this event.

Then comes a burro chariot race, which is intended to be a burlesque of the real Roman sport. The four contestants in the novelty race will at 2:35 o'clock match their horsemanship in an umbrella race. This will be followed by the second heat of the Roman chariot race. At 3 o'clock the second half of the push-ball contest will be started, followed by a relay change race. Flournoy and Riedebach will be the contestants, and four changes of mount will be made in the race.

The programme will conclude with the third heat of the Roman chariot race; a salute to the victorious charioteer and a salute to the defeated charioteer.

RESIDENTS ARE EXCLUDED.

T. D. Nestor of the Executive Committee and chairman of the Press Committee of the Pasadena lodge is known as the "master booster."

"This is our first opportunity to show our strength and abilities as a lodge," said Nestor yesterday. "We have worked night and day to make Pasadena's welcome to the grand lodge convention complete in every detail. We seriously regret the exclusion from Tournament Park of local residents, but it was made necessary, not only by an arrangement with the directors of the Tournament of Roses Association, to whom we are indebted for the Park, but also by reason of the fact that the capacity of the grounds will be taxed to their limit by the Elks' delegation of visitors.

"Notwithstanding our inability to extend an invitation to all of Pasadena, generous donations and support have been received from the entire city, and we are very grateful to the merchants and residents who have thus aided us.

"While we are a democratic organization and devoid of all snobbery, the Elks do take exception to the fake badges, watch fobs, and other Elk insignia that are being sold. Of course, anybody can buy purple, but it does seem to us that purple hat bands at this particular time and other such wearing apparel should only be worn by Elks."

BRING QUARTETTE.

SPOKANE ELKS ARRIVE.

The Spokane Elks party, ninety-two strong, arrived at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Washingtonians were welcomed at the Arcade Depot by the White Squadron and band and escorted to their headquarters at the Chapman Hotel at Fifth and Wall streets. The visitors were in charge of Exalted Ruler Alexander M. Hogg of Spokane Lodge No. 228, who was assisted in looking after the welfare of the party by Secretary W. Connor, J. H. Travers, chairman of the Grand Lodge Committee, and Joseph B. Lindsay, special representative. These were thirty-five ladies in the company.

At every stop on the trip down from the north, local lodges exerted every effort to provide entertainment for the travelers. At Portland and Ashland, in Oregon, and at San Francisco, Oakland and Paso Robles the Spokane delegation was shown the most lavish hospitality.

After the White Squadron had escorted the party to headquarters, providing automobiles for the ladies, an impromptu concert was given and hearty cheers were exchanged. The visitors expressed themselves as highly delighted with the cordiality of their reception.

The Spokane lodge brought an excellent quartette to contribute to the general entertainment here. Its members are "Charley" Eaton, first tenor; "Bill" Clark, second tenor; "Jake" Hill, first bass, and George Chant, second bass. They have an extensive repertoire, of which the principal number is an original song, "Sunny Old Spokane." The first verse and chorus are:

"There is a city beautiful,
Far away in the great Northwest,
Kissed by the last rays of the sun
As it sinks inthe seas to rest
'Tis locked 'midst the beryled hills
Just below the Cascade Span,
And that's the city that's home to me,
Dear sunny old Spokane.

CHORUS.

I love all your fertile valleys,
I love all your rocks and rills,
I love all your noble pine trees,
I love all your grand old hills
Your river that's dashing and splashing,
That's paradise to man,
'Neath your blue sky let me sleep when I die,
In Sunny old Spokane."

The words were written by Frank Finnel Finney; the air by W. Dorsey.

SEASHORE PLANS.

ment. In this five men mounted on horses and armed with spears will catch rings on the spears while the horses are being run at full speed. There will be lassoing of wild horses by the neck and front and hind feet. Mounted vaqueros will pick up coins from the ground while racing their horses at top speed. There will be riding of wild broncos brought from the Malibu ranch.

From 12 to 1 o'clock luncheon will be served to the visitors, arrangements having been made for the distribution of 10,000 lunch boxes. These will be handed out at three central stations: Clubhouse, Pier avenue and Venice.

The afternoon attraction will be the annual regatta of the South Coast Yacht Club. These races will be for three classes of yachts and will be sailed for the Nat Goodwin, the Dudley and the Elks cups. The start will be made from near the deep-sea end of the new municipal pier. The course will be a triangular one, with the finish and start in plain view of the bluff. Yachts from San Diego, San Pedro and other southern cities are entering for the contests. Among the starters will be the Gretchen, Estrella, Mackay, Trilby, Eolus, Wasp, Venus, Mischief I, Mischief II, Columbine, Makpe and Skidoo.

Between the hours of 1 and 6 in the afternoon the guests will have the privileges of the Venice and Ocean Park bathhouses. During the afternoon there will be band concerts in Linda Vista Park, at Pier avenue and Venice, and in the evening there will be informal balls in the dancing pavilion at Venice and at the auditorium on Pier avenue.

Headquarters, rest rooms and information bureaus will be maintained during the week at the clubhouse, Hotel Savoy and Ship Cabrillo.

The evening of Saturday, the 17th, will be celebrated as Venice night, and for this occasion an attractive programme of music and fireworks and carnival ball has been arranged. There will be a spectacular exhibition of high and fire dives at the Venice plunge and this will be followed by salutes, set pieces and a pyrotechnic programme consisting of thirty-one alluring numbers.

Incidental to the entertainment arranged for the week, there will be boxing matches at Venice and swimming races in the sea, and a bench show on land.

FOR PUBLIC SAFETY.

EVERY PROVISION MADE.

In the history of the Elks the forty-fifth Grand Lodge will be unique in the care exercised to prevent accidents during the parades. Not only will platoons of police be on hand to prevent interference with the processions but also surgeons will be ready to give first aid to the injured if necessary, and big touring cars will be stationed on the principal streets to precede the marching squadrons and clear the way. There is a committee of public safety, of which George Goldsmith is chairman. The other members are former Sheriff White, Frank D. Hudson and Byron Erkenbrecher. Every member is more than six feet tall.

George Goldsmith will have general charge of the public's safety during parade. Byron Erkenbrecher will patrol Main street in an automobile to keep people off the thoroughfare. He will be accompanied by a lieutenant of police to enforce his authority, and by a physician, who will have an emergency kit with him. While it is hoped the parades will not be marred by accidents, it has been decided to leave nothing to chance.

On Broadway, Frank D. Hudson will perform a similar mission. He will have the same equipment of automobile, lieutenant of police, and a physician. Former Sheriff White will be in charge on Spring street, also with an officer and a physician.

The Elks and police are coöperating that there may be no delay in the moving of the processions.

Hot Mexican Beverages.

"There is very little drunkenness in Mexico," said Henry T. Hyer, a Chicago mining engineer, "and yet there is no country under the sun where the native drinks are so fiercely ardent. The common people drink pulque, which can be manufactured and sold for not exceeding 3 cents a quart. It is distilled from the maguey or century plant, and it will make 'drunk come' very quickly unless copiously diluted. Another beverage is known as tequila, a white liquor, made from the roots of a plant, and which has the pulque faded as a producer of speedy intoxication. The taste of this is particularly villainous, being something like a blend of raw alcohol and kerosene. A couple of ponies of the stuff would knock out a mule.

"About on a par with tequila is a drink known as sotol, which for results, beats any of the tanglefoot or kill-me-quick decoctions known in the United States. Sotol is an extract from roots also, and its superlative brimstone qualities caused the recent prohibition of its manufacture in one of the Mexican States. Considering the uncommonly fiery and devilish nature of these southern liquids, it is a remarkable tribute to the people of Mexico that drunkenness is not a national vice.—[Baltimore American.

Tattooing in Cuba.

The finger print system is used with good results, although in Cuba tattooing is almost sure to mark a man. The Cuban prisoner is a study, for nearly every one has more or less tattooing on his body or arms. One man has the Cuban coat of arms on his back, another has the upper part of his arm decorated with a tattooed likeness of Gov. Magoon, while another has a remarkable crucifix extending down the center of his back. Fantastic figures of women, animals and reptiles mark these men for life.—[Leslie's Weekly.

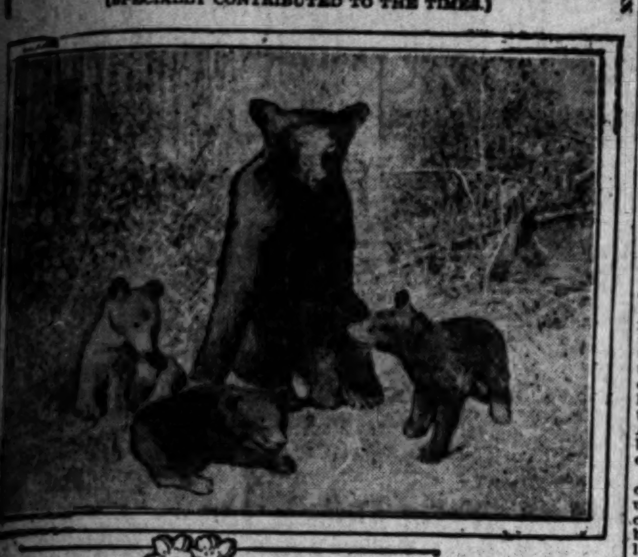
Fur and Feather Farming.

SCARCITY OF WILD ANIMALS COMPELS THE SUBSTITUTION OF INFERIOR PELTS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]



'A happy family "at home."

THAT sounds like something new, isn't it? It's an experiment now being inaugurated near Denver to rear beaver, silver foxes, blue foxes and other fur-bearing animals for the sake of their pelts; to raise deer, elk, antelope, Rocky Mountain sheep and goats, and perhaps even bears for the double purpose of obtaining their hides and marketing their meat; to introduce fur-producing animals of other countries having climatic conditions similar to those of Colorado, and raise them for profit just as other farmers raise goats, sheep, pigs and cattle.

As a matter of fact the proposition is not as new and untried as might be thought. So far as known, it is the first attempt at what might be called diversified fur farming ever made in the world's history; but specialized fur farming—the rearing of animals for their furs—is a long-standing industry that in some localities is of great importance.

The division of greatest importance is the rearing of Astrakhan and Persian lamb—which are true furs, even though they come off the backs of sheep. These sheep of the Orient, although kept on vast farms and tended by herders, are almost as wild as the goats of the Rockies. Persian lambs (including Shiraz, or half-Persian, and Tibet lamb) supply about [illegible] skins annually for the fur trade. The Astrakhan sheep of the [illegible] of Russian, and the Crimmer [illegible] erroneously called gray Persian lamb, and largely used for children's coats) of the Crimea, supply at least 750,000 pelts to the fur trade of Europe and America. Experts state that the skins of not less than [illegible] sheep and lambs reach the world's markets every year, including the common sheep of the farms and ranges, which give up their wool for textile manufacture and their skins for leather making (or both for [illegible]) and the more valuable sheep of [illegible] and Central Asia, which yield [illegible] and beautiful furs. The figures are incredible, but their approximate [illegible] is vouched for by the authorities of the fur trade.

Next to sheep raising, the most important branch of the fur farming industry is fox farming. Thousands of foxes are reared in captivity for their furs, the largest farm of this kind in the world being located on a [illegible] island off the coast of Labrador, [illegible] to the Revillon brothers of [illegible] the world's greatest fur farmers. On their Labrador fox farm they raise thousands of silver foxes, and on the plains of Bokhara they raise thousands of Persian lambs, to supply the fastidious trade that looks [illegible] for their finest and most [illegible] of fashion's trappings.

On one of the Aleutian Islands is a blue fox farm, where the blue fox is raised extensively. In Maine and West Virginia are smaller fox farms—and doubtless there are others which I have been unable to learn. Skunk farms have been started at [illegible] places in the West, some of which have given fair financial returns. Beaver farming was tried on an extensive scale a few years ago, [illegible] of Lake Superior, but proved a failure. However, this does not prove that beaver farming is impracticable. Few industries have ever gained a footing until after some failures [illegible]. Then Holland has a [illegible] and peculiar "fur farming" industry in the rearing of black cats, the skins of which are used in making [illegible] chinchilla—the finest fur of South America.

When the proposition of "feather farming" was first advanced, it was [illegible] as wild and visionary. Yet Cawston and others have made [illegible] ostriches in California and [illegible] an important and remunerative industry. Alligator farming—raising the ugly saurians of the [illegible] and rivers of the South for [illegible] for their hides to be used in [illegible] making—has been a financial [illegible] at Palm Beach and by H. I. [illegible] at Hot Springs and Los Angeles. "Buffalo Jones," Col. W. F. Cody and the Miller brothers have raised the buffalo on a scale that [illegible] that a paying industry could be built up in this particular branch [illegible] ranching—the hides, the horns and meat all commanding fancy [illegible]. Even the big gray wolf has [illegible] domesticated as a household pet. The supply of venison is inadequate to [illegible] a tenth of the demand. Mr. [illegible], chief of the Biological Survey, in a bulletin of the Department [illegible] said that deer farming [illegible] be made profitable alike to the [illegible] and the individuals engaged [illegible]. "The raising of venison is as [illegible] a business as the growing of beef and mutton." What is true of [illegible] is equally true of elk, antelope [illegible] species.

With a knowledge of these and [illegible] to the same purport that W. H. Kendrick of Denver [illegible] the American Game Association for the purpose of rearing [illegible] and foreign game birds and animals, water fowl and fur bearing animals [illegible] a plain business proposition. Mr. Kendrick has lived in the Rocky [illegible] region for a third of a century [illegible] has made a life study of the [illegible]ilities and economic possibilities of fur-bearing and game animals [illegible] or bird will be reared [illegible] profit can be made by so doing [illegible] through the sale of the [illegible] to parks, menageries, [illegible] preserves, game associations, [illegible] individuals, or by the sale [illegible] hides, or furs, or by the sale [illegible]. Nevertheless, sentiment [illegible] part in the inauguration [illegible] enterprise. The promoters [illegible] to make more money at [illegible], but they are true [illegible] desire to save at least [illegible] game animals of America [illegible] extinction which now [illegible] them. They realize [illegible] large profits to be derived from rearing beaver, Rocky Mountain sheep and goats, buffalo, deer, elk and antelope, there will be no lack of men to engage in these new lines of stock raising. Overproduction of furs, of venison and other game, is quite impossible, and high prices are forever insured. Game farming and fur farming are recommended and encouraged by the Department of Agriculture, as legitimate and promising lines of endeavor. It only remains for some one to start the ball rolling by a practical demonstration, on a large scale, of adequate profits. To give such a demonstration is the object of the American Game Association. Therefore, its experiment must be regarded as an enterprise of more than ordinary public interest.

The game preserves, or rather rearing grounds, are located only nine miles from the State House, close to the town of Littleton, comprising 1200 acres of farm and grazing lands. The South Platte River flows through the property, giving ideal conditions for the rearing of beaver in their natural environment; and a fifty-acre lake supplies a natural breeding place for wild ducks, wild geese and other water fowl. Mr. Hendrick has long conducted the largest pheasant farm on the Western Hemisphere, and has made a large initial collection of game and fur-bearing animals. Most of the latter are kept in the Denver City Park, but many will be removed thence to the game reserves for breeding purposes.

The State of Massachusetts appropriated money several years ago for breeding white-tailed deer, for stocking the forests of the State with this species of game. This State enterprise is said to have demonstrated that, at the prevailing prices for venison for the hotel and restaurant trade, more money can be made raising deer than by producing and marketing pork, beef and mutton. As a result of his own experience, Mr. Kendrick says that it costs no more to raise a deer than it does a mutton sheep, and no more to raise a buffalo than a cow; that elk meat can be produced at less cost per pound than beef or mutton; that beaver can be grown at a cost of from $5 to $10 each, and silver foxes at a fraction of the value of their pelts.

That men are at last compelled to contemplate fur farming as the only means of keeping the supply of fur equal to the demand is a curious illustration of the amazing change wrought during the past quarter of a century. The human races have traveled a long distance to reach this point. A report of the Division of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture contains the following significant statements: "As civilization encroaches upon the breeding grounds of wild animals, the supply of fur diminishes, and the prices correspondingly advance. If furs as articles of use and adornment are not soon to disappear from general use, methods must be devised for rearing fur-bearing animals in confinement." That official forecast presages the early passing of man's oldest activity. For, long before the first farmers scratched the virgin soil, their remote forbears had hunted wild beasts in order to obtain their flesh for food and their skins for material with which to clothe their shivering bodies.

The extent of the world's fur trade cannot be estimated with even the remotest chance of correctness. Canada alone supplies not less than $6,000,000 worth of raw furs annually; but the quota supplied by the United States, or by Mexico, or by South America, or Russia, or Africa, or any other fur-producing region, defies even a rational guess. It amounts high into the hundreds of millions in the aggregate.

Moreover, the fur trappers and fur traders have often pioneered the way for the Empire Builders who came after—laying the real foundations of history for communities, commonwealths and nations. It was the trade in beaver skins that gave to the Dutch settlements along the Hudson, and to the English colonies on the Connecticut, and to the French colonies on the St. Lawrence their initial importance. It was the pursuit of the beaver that carried the English across the Appalachian chain to the Ohio Valley; and the French up the St. Lawrence, throughout the chain of the Great Lakes, on to the Rockies, and down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico. Later, it carried the American trappers into every nook and corner of the Western wilderness, from the Yellowstone and Columbia to the Rio Grande and Colorado, long before the Indians had been subdued or the first gold discovery heralded. Strange, isn't it?—that this little maker of history must now find a refuge in a fur farm, where it is to be reared for slaughter like the plebeian pig or sheep that men domesticated uncomputed ages ago.

While the people of an earlier age prized furs solely on account of their warmth and durability (as the Esquimaux and Aleuts do to this day,) they are desired by civilized and cultured races mainly because of their beauty and rarity. Although their utility is not entirely lost sight of, yet they are employed chiefly for adornment. Consequently fur-bearing animals are hunted as remorselessly and with as little thought of future requirements, as are birds of beautiful plumage. The buffalo have been exterminated, excepting for the few that are kept in parks and game preserves; and the beaver is practically extinct in most of the States. Sea otter used to yield more than 100,000 pelts annually, but the trade now receives not more than 200 or 300 each season. A third of a century ago, the Alaskan fur seal herd was estimated to number not less than 5,000,000. There are now not more than 150,000. Not many years ago, about 100,000 seal skins were marketed annually. Now the number is hardly one-tenth as many; and international [illegible] the depredations of poachers that the speedy extinction of the fur seal, for purposes of commerce, is in sight.

The failing supply of furs, in the face of a constantly-increasing demand, is a condition that fur dealers can meet only by substitution. To imitate fine furs by means of manufactured products is not possible; but to dye and otherwise doctor inferior furs into passable imitations of those of more costly character is not very difficult. Accordingly the fur trade today is sustained to a large extent by millions of furs of species that were once despised. Some of these inferior furs are sold on their merits, but many are foisted upon uninformed buyers at prices out of all proportion to their actual value. New Jersey and Delaware are said to yield 2,000,000 muskrat pelts annually; and how many millions are obtained from other portions of the country it is impossible to estimate. From Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio and a few other States come 600,000 pelts of the skunk or polecat—a number entirely inadequate to supply the demand. From Australia it is said that 20,000,000 rabbit skins are shipped annually to the London market; and, as already mentioned, Holland has built up an industry of considerable magnitude in the rearing of black cats for their skins. The cheap imitations of ermine (the finest fur of the Yakutsk River region of Russia and of the Mackenzie River basin of North America) are made of the white rabbit fur, with black spots dyed thereon.

It is evident, then, that the field open to the fur farmers is practically unlimited. With the demonstrations of its practicability that have already been made, it seems reasonable to believe that both "fur farming" and "game farming" have come to stay.

JOHN L. COWAN.

COURT REBUKES RAIDERS.

Arrest of Women Who Are Not Known by the Officers Results in Judicial Censure.

Police Justice Chambers yesterday morning from his bench uttered a scathing denunciation of the methods employed by plain clothes police in making raids upon alleged evil doers, dwelling especially on the wrong of failing to secure tangible evidence before arrests are made.

The outburst came when five women were brought before him charged with vagrancy. They were arrested in a raid early yesterday morning on the Wetzel rooming-house at No. 818 South Spring street conducted by "Butch" Tilley.

Three of the women were known to the police. Questioning by the court revealed that the other two young women were strangers to the arresting officers. When the court asked the officers why the two women were arrested the officers answered that they were in the house when the raid was made.

One of the women was handsomely gowned and beautiful. The magistrate asked the officers if they had ever seen her before or knew her to be notorious. The officers admitted they did not. Then by questions put to the girl the court learned that she arrived in the city last Thursday from Denver, took apartments at the house for Elks week and intended to go to Seattle afterward. She stated that the rooming-house had been recommended to her as respectable. She gave relatives and friends in Downey as references.

The court immediately dismissed the charge against the young woman and the other whom the police did not know. At the same time he charged the officers with having overstepped their rights to arrest and that harm and humiliation had come to innocent persons by being placed in jail. The raid was made by four plain clothes officers under orders from Captain of Police Dixon.

It is the third instance in several weeks in which Capt. Dixon and his men have been censured for their police methods. A superior court judge first ordered Capt. Dixon and his officers should not use paroled prisoners as stool pigeons. This ruling was concurred in by the Police Commission. The latter body also deplored trapping drug store proprietors with stool pigeons who played on the proprietor's sympathy by feigning illness to procure liquor or drugs.

AUTO CRACKS SKULL.

East Highland Orange Grower Perhaps Fatally Injured in Accident at Bairdstown.

William H. Cram, an orange grower of East Highland, received injuries which may prove fatal when an automobile he was driving turned turtle near Bairdstown about 6 o'clock yesterday morning. He is at the Hospital of the Good Samaritan suffering from a fracture of the skull over the left eye.

Cram left his home at 3 o'clock yesterday morning in his auto for Santa Monica to see the races. In the car with him were his brothers, Robert and Ed Cram. In an accompanying automobile were his brothers Frank and J. E. Cram, the former's son, Fred, and the latter's son, Gordon, and Frank Kohl, also of East Highland.

As the electric railway crossing at Bairdstown was approached, Cram turned his machine to the side of the road to pass another auto.

The left front wheel struck a soft spot and crushed like an egg shell. Because of the high speed at which the car was traveling it turned twice over before it landed in a heap, a total wreck. Cram was caught under the wreckage. His three brothers were thrown clear as the car whirled through the air and escaped with only slight bruises and shock.

The brothers assisted by other automobilists lifted the wrecked car from the injured man and brought him to the city in an ambulance. The brothers were brought to town in other machines. Cram was treated at the hospital by Dr. P. V. K. Johnson.

THROWN AND HURT.

H. B. Scoville, 63 years of age, residing at No. 913 South Figueroa street, was painfully injured about the head yesterday afternoon by a runaway accident on Seventh street between Olive and Hill. Scoville was driving in a light buggy when his horse became frightened and dashed down the street, colliding with a mail wagon. Scoville was thrown headlong to the pavement. A woman standing on the sidewalk was knocked down when the mail wagon was hurled against her but was not injured. Scoville was treated at the Receiving Hospital.

CHAUFFEUR DIES SUDDENLY.

While cranking a taxicab on Fifth street, between Spring and Broadway yesterday morning, William Hornsby, a professional chauffeur, suffered a hemorrhage of the lungs and died in an ambulance while being taken to the Crocker-street Hospital. Hornsby was 45 years of age. He resided at No. 96 West Green street, Pasadena. He leaves a wife and grown son.

A Magnet's Daily Saving.

In the shipping department of a big plant hundreds of nails are daily recovered from the sweepings by means of a little lifting electric magnet, says a writer in System. The magnet is connected with the nearest electric socket by a long flexible cord. There is a push button on the handle, which when it is pressed energizes the magnet so that it will pick up any magnetic substance. When the button is released the nails, chips or filings drop from the magnet into bins [illegible] future use.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

PARAFFIN OIL NEAR KRAMER?

Very Small Quantity Found and Analyzed.

Down Three Thousand Feet, With Much Gas.

Eight Years' Work and Perseverance May Win.

According to reports from Barstow, the Kramer Consolidated, that has been drilling with more or less regularity for eight years on the desert near Kramer, is in a better way to succeed than ever before. Very small quantities of a very light oil have been obtained and Dr. Frederick Salathe, a chemist of high standing, has declared it to be paraffin, a truly great discovery if there be a sufficient quantity. There is gas in large amounts. Nothing but time and work will give any clue to the extent of the oil, its value, exact location or depth.

The drill is at 2930 feet. It has gone through 400 feet of the hardest kind of formation, bearing some resemblance to granite, but not granite. The experience as to formation seems to be somewhat like the Standard's in Monterey county. Both concerns have persevered.

At this time work is in a soft shale that has caved in and is delaying work. Under this is a layer of hard formation like a capping similar to that through which the drill has gone. When the cave-in is fixed this will be penetrated.

The work is on the north half of 11-10-5, the south half of 2-10-5 and the southeast quarter of 3-10-5, all contiguous and forming a tract of 800 acres.

Ten or twelve miles to the east a San Francisco company, whose manager is a Mr. Bush, located at Barstow, is erecting buildings on its land preparatory to drilling. Another company has a rig erected about the same distance to the southeast from the Consolidated.

The Consolidated's officers and directors are: A. N. Hamilton, president; F. S. Daugherty; vice-president, D. F. Wilson, secretary; J. T. Knapp, treasurer; O. Hovel, Edward Mathie, L. M. Woodmansee, P. T. Ludwick, W. E. Ax and F. F. Merrill. The stock is practically all held in Los Angeles.

Columbia's Fine Property.

The Columbia has brought in its No. 16 at 3800 feet at Fullerton, and it is good for 500 barrels daily. Its No. 14 is doing about the same and No. 15 a little less. Number 17 is down 3000 and No. 18 is 2700. The gusher, No. 13, came in for 1000 a day and has held up well. Its number is far from a hoodoo, although it also came in on the 13th of the month. When Nos. 17 and 18 are completed the company expects an average production of 60,000 to 70,000 barrels a month and to be able to pay 1½ cents a month dividends. Now it pays sometimes 1 and sometimes but ½ a cent a month.

Devil's Den Locations.

Within twenty-four hours on Thursday last ten locations, each for a quarter section, in the Devil's Den country, were recorded at Bakersfield by a group consisting of J. O. Bangrover, W. L. Fry, E. C. Fry, A. Presley, John Hagler, W. F. Lowe, F. M. Worthington, J. V. Garcia, J. M. Hallum, S. M. Speak, Clarence Anway, J. H. Dodds, H. S. Kinch, C. F. Daugherty, W. Daugherty and C. Hutchins. The lands covered are all of 33-27-19, the east half of 31-27-19 and all of 32-27-19.

A. B. Carpenter, B. H. Carpenter, S. Norman, M. W. Norman, H. S. McCallum, F. G. and L. J. Downey have filed locations on the west half of 21-25-20.

Standard's June Runs.

The total June runs of the Standard were 1,015,990 barrels, an increase of 43,210 over May's. The figures follow:

Districts.	June.	May.	Increase.
Coalinga	523,712	523,612	100
Kern River	125,030	108,516	16,514
Newhall	5,977	5,507	470
Midway	157,255	119,262	37,993
Santa Maria	204,016	215,883	.....
Total	1,015,990	972,780

The decline in Santa Maria was 11,867 barrels. The huge increase at Midway is the feature of the month.

Associated Lets Contract.

The Associated has let the contract for laying its Coalinga-Port Costa pipe line to Mahoney Bros. of San Francisco. It will be 120 miles long.

Standard's Drilling.

The Standard is down about 1670 feet in one and 1600 in the other hole in the Rapheto hills east of the city. Very slow progress is being made. W. R. Roland's well near-by is down 1745.

In Monterey county three strings are working, one on the Topo, one on the Landrum at Peachtree and one on the Powell ranch near Bradley. None have oil. The Landrum is having the easiest formation, free from the white hard material encountered in the others, declared by some to be granite, although the Standard says it is not and is going on drilling. Three days ago the depths were: Topo, 2520; Peachtree, 2930; Powell, 875.

At the same time the Lonoak was down 1850 feet and preparing to shut water off. The company believes it has light oil.

Two other Salinas companies, known as the Alvarez and the Salinas, have located near the Lonoak, but so far as known here have not drilled yet.

COLUMBIA PARK BOYS.

Well-Known Organization of San Francisco en Route Here on Foot. Will Give Entertainment.

Forty-five members of the Columbia Park Boys' Club of San Francisco are now at Santa Barbara, en route to this city on foot. They have made these long walking trips for the past eight years, giving theatrical performances on the route to pay their expenses, and to make money for supporting a boys' summer camp at Cloverdale. Another section of the club is now on a trip to Australia. The boys will arrive in this city, in charge of Eustace M. Peixotto, and will give a performance in the People's Theater on Saturday evening, July 24. It will be a variety of musical, acrobatic and dramatic numbers. They will also visit the beach cities.

"The Times," Elks' Week.

On Saturday, July 17th, The Times will print in a separate sheet, all the complete illustrated accounts of all the important events of the week. It will be delivered to regular subscribers as well as mailed to every subscription given for the ELKS' WEEK papers.

SWEATED—RELEASED.

Man Applying at the Receiving Hospital for Treatment for Wound Is Sharply Questioned.

Stanley Winchester, residing at No. 1454 East Sixth street, was given a sweating by the police yesterday because he applied at the Receiving Hospital for treatment for a gunshot wound in the left hip. The police believed Winchester might be one of the burglars who were fired on Thursday night by Mrs. G. S. Hunter of No. 1860 Avon street or W. H. Walze of No. 1101 Orange street.

Winchester said that he was shot Thursday night in a scuffle with highwaymen at Goshen Junction, between Bakersfield and Fresno. He said he came to Los Angeles as quickly as he could after being shot. After the sweating Winchester was released.

SAFETY POINTS.

SOME DON'TS FOR EVERYBODY.

HINTS TO MINIMIZE DANGER OF FIRE AND INJURY.

Police Chief Offers Suggestions for Conduct of Citizens During Elks' Week—Lock Your Houses, Beware of Pickpockets and Consider the "Other Fellow."

Here are a few suggestions as to conduct during Elks' week which have been approved by Chief of Police Dishman:

Don't leave your residence windows or doors open. Lock them securely before you start down town. Secrete all silverware and valuables.

Don't encourage pickpockets and thieves by displaying watches, pins, brooches or other jewelry fastened lightly to the clothing.

Don't throw lighted cigars, cigarettes or matches from windows of down town buildings. They might fall in the decorations or on women's hats and cause fire or damage.

Don't resist, or argue with a police officer when he gives you an order. He will be busy and has his special instruction for controlling the crowd.

Don't complain to the Police Commissioners if an officer does not show you favoritism. He is instructed to treat all persons alike.

Don't try to work the old trick of bringing your auto down town and then having your chauffeur "disappear," thus hoping to secure a special vantage point. Police automobiles will tow your car beyond all possibility of a view of the parade and prosecution for obstructing the street will follow.

Don't become a hoodlum because the big crowds will give the opportunity. The police will not tolerate rowdyism.

Don't annoy with feather dusters and other nuisances. The police will distroy all such trouble-making contrivances at first complaint of annoyance, and will arrest offender.

Don't attempt to drive commercial vehicles after 8 o'clock, or other other vehicles after 9 o'clock, or until 2 o'clock on parade days in the district bounded by Temple, Seventh, Hill and Los Angeles streets. Police will turn all rigs back.

Don't drive on First, Third or Fifth street any day during the week if you can use other thoroughfares. The police intend to keep these cross streets clear for the passing of ambulances, patrol and fire wagons.

Don't call for private ambulances in case of accident. Call either Sunset 'Phone Main 8110 or Home 10431. All ambulances in the city will be controlled from those telephone numbers under the direction of the police.

Don't wait for late cars when you are coming into town on parade days. Cars on all lines will be turned back at the boundaries of the congested districts after 9:30 o'clock.

Don't throw confetti. Don't discharge fireworks or fire arms. Arrests will follow immediately for violation of these regulations.

Don't attempt to crowd past the sidewalk ropes into the street on parade days. Police have their instructions to keep all persons without passes off the streets.

Don't ask the Chief of Police for passes. He will not grant your request. All persons entitled to passes will be provided with them.

Don't crowd the two or three central down town blocks. The parade will cover a route of four miles and may be seen as well at Eighth and Broadway as at the City Hall

Don't plan to drive your auto into a side street and view the parades from your machine. Cars will not be allowed to enter the parade district between 9 and 2 o'clock.

Don't attempt to sell badges or other trinkets on the streets. No licenses will be issued. Licenses will only be granted for established places, or booths.

Don't forget that "the other fellow" is entitled to some consideration.

Don't forget that these suggestions are given to allow all persons to see the parades to the greatest advantage and with the minimun of danger and discomfort.

"KIDS" ARE HAPPY NOW.

Young Folks' Bath-house Opened at Santa Barbara—Boys' League Cleaning City.

SANTA BARBARA, July 10.—The children's bath-house was formally opened this morning by Superintendent of Playgrounds Post and the members of his newly-formed Junior Civic League. Superior Judge Crow was master of ceremonies, and Mayor Boeseke one of the speakers.

The bath-house, a modest affair, near Los Banos del Mar, is wholly Mr. Post's idea, as is also the Junior Civic League, and both have taken form within the month. The bath-house, which will accommodate 100, was largely built by the boys. Mr. Post felt that a place where the poorer children of the city could bathe would add not only joy but health to their lot. He raised a little cash and much enthusiasm and sailed in. There are dressing-rooms for boys and girls, with a man and a woman, each capable swimmers, in attendance.

While the Junior Civic League is no more pretentious than the bath-house it seems likely to be quiet as useful. Its purpose is to clean up things in general, and the beach in particular. Whoever wants to hire the league can do so by paying each member 10 cents per hour.

The first "stunt" the boys did was to clean the beach from Castle Rock to Stearns wharf, removing the accumulation of stuff that had long been an eyesore. The park board and the car company pay the boys for the "beach shampoo," but it is planned to have the league's activities extend all over town.

A superintendent will be chosen at the next meeting, and there will be a timekeeper to keep track of the work and grade the boys according to their fitness. Charles Woods was chosen president at the initial meeting, and Jules Vissaen treasurer.

The boys will be paid off weekly. There will be no dues and no assessments.

STAGE FOLKS.

Charles Rousselière returns to the Opera next month for a engagement of six weeks, after [illegible] absence. It will be as the [illegible] tenor on the French [illegible] will be paid $500 a night. [illegible] erstwhile blacksmith should [illegible] thus—however little the [illegible] signify as compared with [illegible] standards—may surprise [illegible] heard him at the Metropolitan [illegible] ago, when he made a [illegible] impression. His singing [illegible] by the French music [illegible] unqualified Gallic superiority [illegible] approaching return to [illegible] as an event of extraordinary significance to that institution [illegible] public. But let it not be [illegible] in Paris they consider [illegible] guest of importance. [illegible] is gradually acquiring [illegible] heroic tenor roles, [illegible] and Siegfried, as [illegible] revival of the late Er[illegible] "Salammbo," next month. [illegible] the smallness of the subvention [illegible] will be no opera this [illegible] Buenos Ayres Opera[illegible] was scheduled to open [illegible] consequence the singers [illegible] been notified that [illegible] needed. This is the [illegible] institution in South [illegible] now conducting [illegible] Operahouse, was [illegible] this spring, but feeling that his major duty was here, he canceled the South American contract. Bonetti, manager of the Buenos Ayres Operahouse, was dismayed at this, and the plan of stimulating subscriptions suffered in consequence. So meager was that list that Bonetti has abandoned all idea of giving opera this year in the Argentine capital, and has cabled the news of the discontinuance to Zenatello, Pasquale Amato, Adamo Didur, Parelli, Segurola and Maria Gay of the Metropolitan and Manhattan forces. The season at the Colon Operahouse, in the same city, however, will take place, and Alessandro Bonci and Constantino will take part. The latter operahouse started a few years ago in opposition to the older house.

The latest work of Eleanor Everett Freer, the composer, is the translation into English of six of the best modern Italian dramas, of which an authority writes: "We are enthusiastic over the accuracy and quality of this work." Mrs. Freer states that this is merely a diversion on her part, not a change in her plan of work.

Miss Clara Lipman, who has been devoting herself to writing since her retirement from the stage, last week disposed of two one-act plays of her own making. One called "Bingo," is to be played in London by Lena Ashwell. There are three characters in the piece—a woman, a man-servant and a dog, and the dog, although the real protagonist of the little piece, does not appear in view of the audience.

STUNG.

THE TRAGEDY OF DOCTOR F. MACE.

DESPAIR IN LOVE DROVE DENTIST TO THE STAGE.

From Being Prosperous Molar Extractor and Village Tenor He Was Forced by Cupid's Wantonry to a Dime Museum, Where He Sang Thirty-six Songs a Day.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

This is the slow-music tragedy of one F. Mace, D.D.S.

As for the present comedy, lightsome quip and merry laugh, 'twas not ever thus.

Crooly woisted in love, Fred Mace sought the seclusion of the spotlight, and in that quiet retreat known as the center of the stage he forgets his woes, or drowns them in glorious draughts of that exhilarating stage wine—cold tea.

Mr. Mace was a dentist. He told me so himself, and as he did a graceful song-and-dance on purely professional terms, with prophylactic punctuation, I have no reason to doubt his word. His statement is true, though much of his work may have been false.

Further, without any recourse to the third degree, I wrung from him the confession that he had once been the village tenor.

He was also a traveling salesman. Here we will conclude the book of sins of omission and commission, and ring in the Romeo-and-Juliet chapter of Mr. Mace's lilylike young life.

The actor was making up the other evening as he told me this, and as he wrung the words from his bleeding heart his face grew as sad as Eddie Foy's always is.

"I finished school, dubbed around New York a little, and then took over the practice of the most prominent dentist in Erie, Pa., just deceased. When I landed in the town I wore a high hat and a frock coat, and as the eminent practitioner was not buried yet the inhabitants mistook me for the undertaker, called in to officiate at the last rites.

"My silk hat gave me an uppish reputation in the community, which I found it hard to eradicate at first. I took the silk hat off and put on a cap, but people remembered that I had once worn it, and they sniffed as they thought my bills would probably be as high as my tile.

"Salvation came as I was on my last legs. The janitor and others had possibly heard me warble, or wobble, as I waited for the patients that didn't come, and one afternoon as I was lingering lonesomely around my neglected office the baritone of the church choir came in.

"He was very timid, but he asked me if I could sing the tenor part in the Sunday services. The tenor had been taken ill, and the choir was in extremis. I was in the financial condition where I would have taken a prima-donna part, if necessary, so I told him that I would be glad to help them—and would he please lead me to rehearsal?

"We went to a hurriedly-called 'practice,' and I discovered that my solo was an adaptation of a Latin service that I had once heard burlesqued in vaudeville. The vaudeville thing made a hit with me, and the air was mine before the organist had finished playing it.

"To be brief, I scored with the congregation, and the next day young and old, rich and poor, flocked to my drawing parlors to have their aching grinders yanked or plugged.

"And their fate overtook me, for I became enamored—considering what followed, perhaps 'enameled' would be better—of a demure young thing who tore out my heart as easily and as remorselessly as I lifted other people's teeth.

"She was going to college, and as her parents were poor I began to foot the bills, looking for the final accounting at a rose-embowered altar.

"And then I got mine.

"I flattered myself that I had rescued her from the clutches of a measly, mercenary skunk whose idea of a wife was a drudge and a household servant. As I was going along in this exalted frame of mind, an old college mate met me on the street and slipped me the truth.

" 'Kid,' he said, 'ye're going' to hand it to me, but I gotta tell ye. Yer girl, up in Philadelphia, is ringing' you fer the money, and givin' her old acquaintance all the love and kisses.'

" 'Sir,' I answered, in my best Henry Irving manner, 'leave meh! Don't ever speak to me again!' I didn't try to wallop him, because he had been a terrible thing on the football team, and I knew it.

"He was a tough guy. 'I knew ye'd be mad, Kid! I knew it! But I've tipped ye. Now yer a damphool if ye don't get wise! See?' And he was gone, and I was left alone with my tumultuous thoughts.

"I thought it over, and the more I thought, the more uneasy I became. So I made up my mind to go up to Philadelphia, just to prove this mutt a liar.

"I got into the city in the evening. I went to the girl's boarding-house, met a lodger coming out, and slipped in before he had time to lock the door. From over the transom I could see a light burning dimly in the parlor, and with my heart beating tumultuously I stood at the door. There were voices, soft, crooning, goo-gooey voices—one a male voice, and the other the voice of my beloved.

"I turned the knob and stepped in, quickly. The door was old, and would not lock.

"There were two persons in the room—my rival and my soul-mate.

"They occupied but one piece of furniture, however, as she was nestling in his lap, while his long, yellow, scrawny hand quietly fondled the damask cheek that I had been wont to call mine own. He evinced a desire to crawl under the overburdened sofa, while she swallowed her voice.

"I shook my finger at him. 'You poor, thin, tubercular son of a gun!' I shouted; 'it would be a shame to hit you. And as for you Madame Deception, back to the kindergarten and find another sucker!'

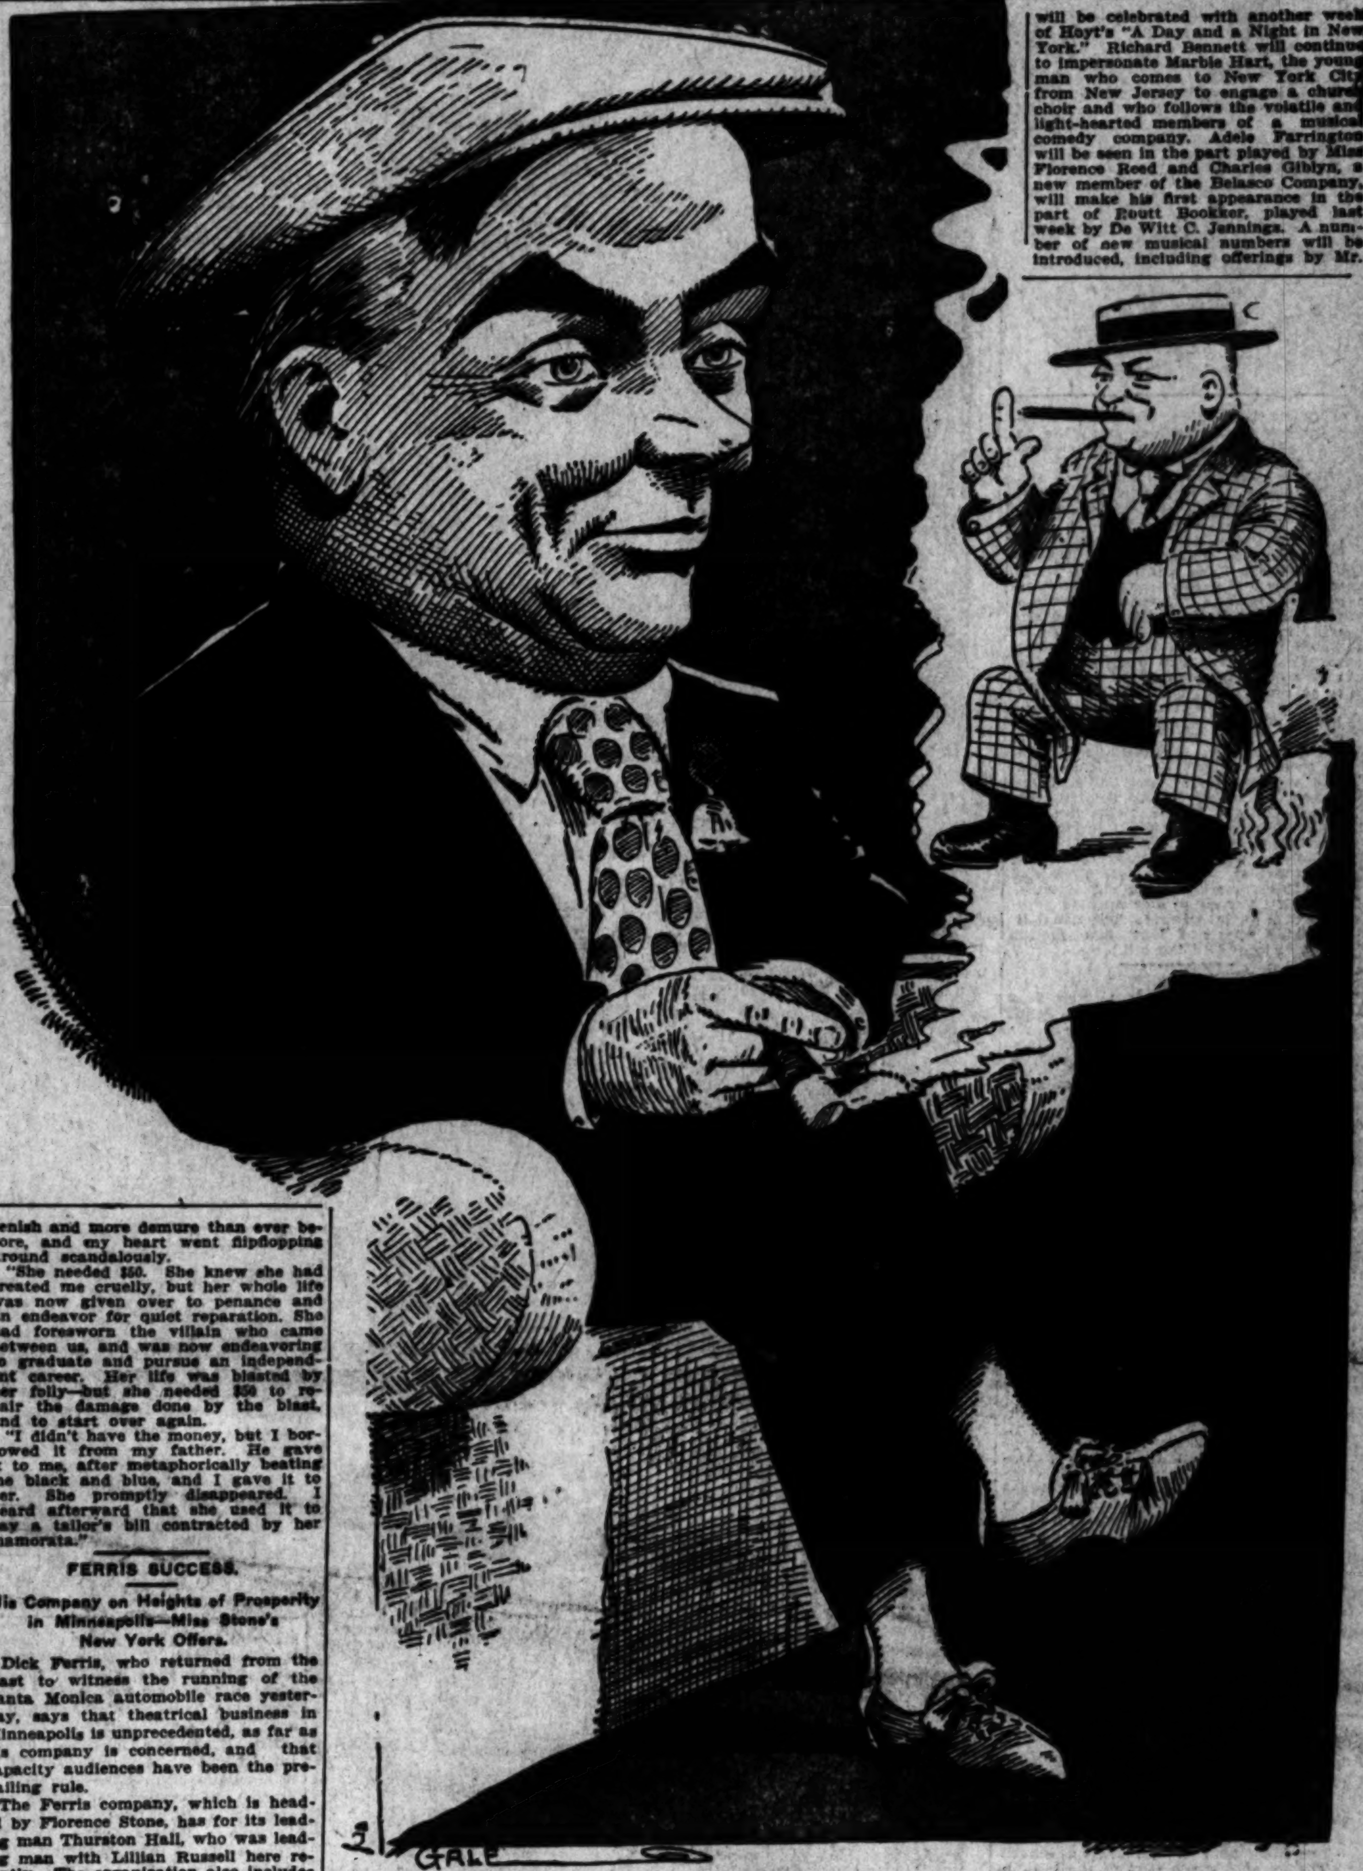
"I went out into the night. The heavens were spinning around and the road seemed to be doing a cake-walk.

"How I got back to that accursed Erie I don't know, but I virtually abandoned my office, with $3000 worth of furnishings, and went to New York. There, determined to forever forsake the cold lure of science, I got a job in a dime museum, to sing three songs three times a day—but they made me sing twelve times a day, or a total of thirty-six songs per twelve hours, which was the time I worked. Even during the short term of my engagement some of my Caruso tones got very rusty at this arduous drill.

"The girl? Well, I met her again, and again I fell for her con game. I had gotten a little above the dime museum, into cheap vaudeville, and one day I ran fairly into her in the streets of Philadelphia. She was kittenish and more demure than ever before, and my heart went flipflopping around scandalously.

"She needed $50. She knew she had treated me cruelly, but her whole life was now given over to penance and an endeavor for quiet reparation. She had foresworn the villain who came between us, and was now endeavoring to graduate and pursue an independent career. Her life was blasted by her folly—but she needed $50 to repair the damage done by the blast, and to start over again.

"I didn't have the money, but I borrowed it from my father. He gave it to me, after metaphorically beating me black and blue, and I gave it to her. She promptly disappeared. I heard afterward that she used it to pay a tailor's bill contracted by her inamorata."



Doctor Mace,

driven by wounded love from a career of science to the quiet seclusion of the spotlight; also, in brief, Uncle Sam Loverich, Dr. Mace's official papa.

FERRIS SUCCESS.

His Company on Heights of Prosperity in Minneapolis—Miss Stone's New York Offers.

Dick Ferris, who returned from the East to witness the running of the Santa Monica automobile race yesterday, says that theatrical business in Minneapolis is unprecedented, as far as his company is concerned, and that capacity audiences have been the prevailing rule.

The Ferris company, which is headed by Florence Stone, has for its leading man Thurston Hall, who was leading man with Lillian Russell here recently. The organization also includes several other players known to local audiences. Among the members of the company are Lewis J. Cody, Frank Pieriot, Ainsworth Arnold, William G. Slider, Jack Belgrave, Inez Regan, and Florence Johnstone.

"The Great Ruby" was the opening bill, followed by "A Stranger in New York," "Brown of Harvard," "The Girl With the Green Eyes," "Glittering Gloria," and "The College Widow," which is now on, with Miss Stone in the title part and Mr. Hall as Billy Bolton.

Miss Stone has received several New York offers, for the fall, but the lure of Los Angeles is great, according to her husband, and she will probably return here for the winter.

This Ferris season, which is announced as a positive finale to Minneapolis, will conclude about September 1.

A number of important new plays will probably be produced by Mr. Ferris before the season closes.

There is a strong possibility that he may direct though not actively participate in, a theatrical enterprise here next winter.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Drama, pictorial drama, comedy drama and just a few shades of melodrama, will supplant musical comedy at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night, in the Frederic Thompson production of Margaret Mayo's "Polly of the Circus," which ran for upwards of one year at the Liberty Theater, New York, and which is now upon its first western tour.

According to advance promises, the author has endeavored in this piece to avoid the stereotyped high-sounding dissertations on love, marriage and divorce, as well as any acute analysis of emotions, and has endeavored to present merely a simple study of an ignorant girl, reared in the garish life of the circus, thrown by accident into the home of the young village clergyman, and then awakening to the realities of knowledge, religion and love.

Ida St. Leon, a beautiful young girl who graduated from a circus family into the ranks of legitimate actors, is playing the part of Polly. Though only 17 years of age, Miss St. Leon's acrobatic training has given her a splendid physique, as well as poise and maturity.

A good production is promised, including several unusual features, among which are the inside of a circus dressing tent, and the removal of the caravan from the grounds after the show, in the dead of night.

"The Lottery of Love," Augustin Daly's fine old comedy, which has not been seen on a local stage in several years, will be revived at the Burbank this week. The play was adapted by Mr. Daly from the French, and was produced originally in Daly's Theater in New York, when that playhouse was the home of the best stock company ever organized in this country. In its original cast were such distinguished players as John Drew, James Lewis, Frederick Bond, then playing juveniles, Mrs. Gilbert and Ada Rehan.

The comedy concerns itself with the matrimonial misadventures of Adolphus Doubledot, a young musician, whose marriage is made unbearable through the meddlesome interference of a strong-minded mother-in-law, and who finally is driven to secure a divorce in South Dakota. After a short interval Doubledot marries again, choosing as his second wife a young woman whose mother is dead, but who brings him a father-in-law. Once his daughter is settled in life the old gentleman begins to look about for himself. He meets and marries Doubledot's first wife, and ignorant of their former relationship, takes his bride and her mother to his son-in-law's home. The resulting complications may be readily imagined.

In the Burbank revival William Desmond will play the old John Drew part of the much mother-in-lawed Doubledot; Miss Louise Royce will be his persecutor, the part created by Mrs. Gilbert; Blanche Hall his second wife; Lovell Alice Taylor, his first, and John W. Burton, his father-in-law. Others concerned include Harry Mestayer, in the role of Tom Dangerous, H. S. Duffield and Margo Duffet.

Heading the new Orpheum bill for the week will be "Adelaide," erstwhile known as "La Petite," but now attaining grown-up dignity. She has a little company of dancers, and presents a dancing act of refined nature.

Elizabeth Murray is a well-known feature of Orpheum bills, and her songs are gems of unique personality. She will offer Irish and negro melodies in their own distinct way. She has some rare gowns which are said to be brand new importations.

Mildred Warren, Bert Lyons and Louise Meyers appear in another musical conceit, "When Dreams Come True," impersonating respectively a prima-donna, her sweetheart and her maid. They have song numbers in plenty, comedy and clever dancing.

The sisters Gasch are European imports, and are said to be feminine gymnasts of tremendous prowess. They have never before toured America, but have been featured in several New York productions.

Holding over are "A Night at the Circus," Cheridah Simpson, "A Spotless Reputation," and the Novelty Dancing Four.

The Princess Theater Company will remain in Los Angeles during the celebration in honor of the antlered herd. Starting with a matinée this afternoon, this musical comedy organization moves from the Mason Operahouse to the Grand Operahouse. Two of the best bills in the Princess repertoire will be offered at the temple of melodrama, which ceases to be melodrama for the Elks' stay only. "The Rounders," a musical potpourri of Frenchy atmosphere, starts things agoing and will hold the boards this afternoon and tonight, and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and a special matinée Tuesday. It is a musical comedy that scored when originally given by Dan Daly at the Casino Theater in New York, and served to introduce Fred Mace and the present Princess organization to San Francisco a few months since. Mace follows Daly capably in the leading comedy role and the San Francisco critics agreed that his unctious comedy brought forth as many, if not more, laughs than the funnyisms of Daly himself. May Boley will play "Thea," the principal actress of the Theatre des Varieties in Paris. Ed. Emery will be Maginnis Pasha. Jim Stevens, Bud Ross, Zoe Barnett, Helen Darling and the other Princess people are in the cast.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and the second Sunday nights of Elks' Week, and the afternoons of Saturday and Sunday, are reserved for a revival of the "Umpire."

The newly-organized Morosco Musical Comedy Company has made good with its audiences to such an extent that "Sergeant Kitty," the company's opening bill, will be repeated through a second week. The comedy has been revised somewhat since its opening, about twenty minutes having been cut from the dialogue, and now moves with celerity and breeziness.

The production for the coming week will show one or two novelties. To begin with a new set of chorus costumes have been prepared in honor of the city's guests and in the first act all of the "Sergeant Kitty" chorus girls will wear purple and white, the Elks' colors. Miss Louise Royce has been recalled to the Burbank and her place in the "Sergeant Kitty" cast will be taken by Miss Maude Beatty.

"A Runaway Girl" is announced to follow "Sergeant Kitty," with Agnes Caine-Brown in the title role; Henry Stockbridge as Flipper and others of the company in congenial roles.

Elks' Week at the Belasco Theater will be celebrated with another week of Hoyt's "A Day and a Night in New York." Richard Bennett will continue to impersonate Marble Hart, the young man who comes to New York City from New Jersey to engage a church choir and who follows the volatile and light-hearted members of a musical comedy company. Adele Farrington will be seen in the part played by Miss Florence Reed and Charles Giblyn, a new member of the Belasco Company, will make his first appearance in the part of Routt Bookker, played last week by De Witt C. Jennings. A number of new musical numbers will be introduced, including offerings by Mr. Giblyn and George Field, formerly a member of the Montgomery and Stone Red Mill Company.

Tuesday and Wednesday night's performance have been reserved by the Executive Committee of the Elks' Grand Lodge Reunion for the exclusive use of the local and visiting Elks. On these two nights there will be no tickets sold to the public.

Following this week's performance of "A Day and a Night in New York," the Belasco Company will give "The College Widow," in which Miss Helen Holmes, who will play the feminine leads at the Belasco Theater during the summer months, will be seen for the first time in the name part.

The Los Angeles Theater programme for Elks' Week indicates a continuance of that theater's standard of vaudeville, and will contain six new acts, with no holdovers.

The headliner will be Mabel McKinley, one of the most popular American girls in vaudeville, who is well-known to the theatergoers of Los Angeles. Miss McKinley was the favorite niece of the late President McKinley. She is the possessor of a beautiful soprano voice, lyric in quality and sings with fine expression.

Another attractive feature of this week's programme will be the appearance of Francesca Redding and her company, who will play the one-act comedy, "Her Friend From Texas." Miss Redding is a well-known and versatile character actress and is supported by a capable company in this sketch.

Cooke and Rothert will stage their version of the sensational Parisian novelty, "L'Amour De L'Apache." This act is said to be a genuinely artistic effort and quite unlike those attempted under the same title by other people. Toma Hanlon promises to win favor for a clever display of male types such as Bobby Barry in "Little Johnny Jones," etc.

Petroff, the Russian violinist, and new comedy pictures will complete the programme.

As Manager Pieper of the Walker Theater is an Elk, he feels that he knows just what sort of show the herd likes, and he has arranged his week's bill accordingly.

Stella Adams will offer a comedy character act, with a line of special new features for the "Bills." Joe Egan, who programmes himself "The Handicap Comedian," promises a bunch of new ones. Madeline Rowe has proven her versatility before Walker audiences, and can be counted upon to give something good. Joseph Manley has a new song, and the same may be said of Jessie Lea. Mlle. Forsythe brings a dancing number, which is said to be unusual in terpsichorean technique and very fine as to costume.

The Walkerscope will show new pictures, there will be a new travellette, and an interesting orchestral concert.

By request, Kelly and Violette will remain at the head of the Unique vaudeville bill for another week, and will offer an entire change of programme, both as to song and costume.

Hentz and Zallee have engaged another act for Elks' Week, the name of which they will not divulge, but they promise that the act is of first order, and will be something of a surprise to patrons.

James Kelly will offer the Unique Musical Company in a very appropriate comedy, "Hello Bill." The piece is really vaudeville, as every member will be seen in a stunt of some kind. The plot revolves about one Bill King, whose better half decides to give private theatricals, and engages an old "ham" actor to prepare the production. The usual complications ensue.

Kelly will have the part of King, Miss Massey will play his wife, and Jack Martin will be the old actor.

A great variety of new musical numbers will be introduced. The usual illustrated song and first run motion pictures complete the bill.

In the Spotlight.

Miss Marie Dressler is to play four weeks in vaudeville this summer, receiving $2000 weekly.

Only seven of Chicago's thirty theaters remain open. All but one of the variety houses have made the summer surrender.

Miss Valerie Bergere has produced a new sketch called "The Sultan's Favorite." Edgar Allen Woolf wrote it. He was guilty of "The Vampire."

May de Sousa has been engaged by Klaw & Erlanger to appear early next season in a musical comedy by Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith.

Martin Harvey's London venture in the Nirdinger version of "El Gran Goleoto" ("The World and His Wife") failed. He undertook the play at a series of special matinées.

Edward Abeles is to have the Arnold Daly role in a revival of "The Strong People," which will be given under its old title of "The Pickpockets."

Dazie, the noted American dancer, is to appear in J. M. Barrie's playlet, "Pantaloon." There is plenty of opportunity for dancing in this pantomimic piece.

Hamilton Revelle has been engaged to create the principal male role in "The Coast of Chance," which will be staged under the direction of its author, Eugene Presbrey, next season.

Paderewski is an expert at billiards, an accomplishment belonging also to his teacher, Leschetizky, who imparts to his favorite pupil much information and advice during the progress of this fascinating diversion.

Cesar Thomson, the great Belgian violinist, who comes here next season for a tour, claims mathematics as his pet hobby. During his leisure hours he enjoys solving the most intricate problems for the benefit merely of mental calisthenics.

After a month's stay at their Michigan farm, Frank Adams and Will Hough have finished the libretto of "The Goddess of Liberty," a musical comedy which Mortimer H. Singer will produce at the Princess Theater the early part of the coming season. The authors wrote part of the book in California.

Rehearsals begin soon for "The Love Cure," another Viennese comic opera, which Henry W. Savage will produce early in August in Atlantic City and a week later will take to New York He has completed the selection of the large cast, which will be headed by Miss Annie Dirkins, who played in the original production in Vienna, and Charles J. Ross.

George M. Cohan is negotiating for the rights of a play by Isaac Landman, a rabbi of Philadelphia. The piece is entitled "A Man of Honor," and its theme relates to the solidarity of the family. Thomas E. Shea, one of Cohan & Harris's stars, produced the play in Toronto recently and with results that encourage his managers to give it a regular production in the fall.

Booked under her family name of Kiskadden, Miss Maude Adams departed for Europe last week on the Lusitania. It was said that she hoped to slip away quietly for a few weeks' rest in Ireland after her hard work in producing "Joan of Arc" at the Harvard Stadium. Another passenger on the Lusitania was Mrs. N. C. Goodwin (Miss Edna Goodrich.)

Mario Sammarco, one of the most popular artists now in London, no longer is the sole artist of his family. His nine-year-old daughter, Anna, made her début in Milan on May 31 as a pianist at a concert given at the Villa Reale. She played Beethoven's Sonata, opus 49, and several small pieces with a sureness and finish worthy of a mature performer and her father's daughter.

Belle Applegate, the Louisville mezzo-soprano of the Stadt Theater in Cologne, indulges in the eccentricity of never being photographed except in operatic character. She does not believe that an artist belongs to the public except in the roles she portrays on the stage, and consequently may be found as Ortrud, Carmen, Brangaene and other roles in the shop windows, but not as Miss Applegate.

Shakespeare's connection with Southwark Cathedral, at the foot of London Bridge, is to be commemorated by a recumbent figure of the poet in alabaster, with Tudor Gothic canopy and screen, which is to be erected in a recess in the south aisle, where it will form a pendant to the tomb of Gower opposite. Shakespeare was a parishioner of St. Saviour's for over fifteen years, and the cathedral, as St. Saviour's is now called, is the one building remaining in London with which he was associated.

Laura Nelson Hall has written a play. It is called "The Meddlers," and it is to be produced in Cleveland with Miss Hall in the leading part, and Leslie Kenyon has gone to that city to assist in the production. Miss Hall said the play was read to David Belasco, who pronounced it an interesting drama. The story has not been divulged.

Another celebrated English actor has been knighted by the King. He is Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the manager of His Majesty's Theater. Mr. Tree took his company to Germany a year ago, and received a decoration from the German Emperor. King Edward followed suit and conferred upon him the honor of knighthood, which was enjoyed by the late Henry Irving and we now have a Sir John Hare and a Sir Charles Wyndham. Arthur Wing Pinero, the well-known dramatist, was also knighted in recognition of what he had done for the English stage.

Sir Edward Elgar is spending the summer in Italy. The success of his first symphony, played here last season by the New York Symphony Orchestra, at the Hub by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and in the West by various orchestras, lends interest to the fact that the greatest living English composer is at work on a second symphony. "Israfel" writes of Elgar's works in this way: "To me, Elgar's orchestration suggests a mosaic of rare polished stones—jade, jaspar, lapis lazuli—such as one sees inlaid on the white walls of Mogul palaces and tombs. It holds a dark, continual flow of ever-changing color, but few brilliant tones. When he paints the sea, for instance, he shows us no southern sapphire, but the somber green and purple of the north; indeed, he gives the scent and sound of the sea rather than its living colors."

Confidential reports state that any circus which overlooks "An Englishman's Home" as a rare find for the sideshow passes one of the greatest of present-day freaks. But, on the other hand, our own Richmond Pearson Merrimac Hobson thinks it is a great play and one that contains warnings worthy of serious consideration. If it does, it has it on Richmond forty ways.

William Faversham will go to Europe this summer in order to gather material for his production of "Herod." It will be recalled that a magnificent revival of Stephen Phillips's play was made in London a few seasons ago by Beerbohm Tree. Mr. Faversham will offer it in New York next October.

Mlle. Dazie, in "The Follies of 1908," takes 200 consecutive steps on her toes in her dance directoire—but one of her several numbers—and, it is said, smiles sweetly all the time, which recalls Patricia O'Brien's sage comment: "The smile is the hard part of a dance. It's hard to stand on one toe, with the other pointing up at a quarter to 6, and look like the cat that just et the canary." Probably, if you try it, you will look about as cheerful as the canary.

When Jack Norworth sought to win the hand of Nora Bayes, he set his proposal to music and sang it to her. Miss Bayes, thinking that "The Wise Old Owl" was joking, jestingly replied, "You Will Have to Sing an Irish Song If You Want to Marry Me." Norworth either made good with a Hibernian ditty, or Miss Bayes changed her tune to "Don't Go Away," because they were "M-a-double r-i-e-d" over "Where the Bright Lights Shine" and have been "Honeymooners" ever shine. "That's Some Love."

Disquieting reports concerning the health of Cosima Wagner have reached Germany from the Italian Riviera, where the Widow of Bayreuth has been spending the late winter and early spring weeks. A prominent Munich specialist was called in consultation a few days ago. This distinguished woman seems to be in the same plight as Cécile Chaminade, who confided to an American reporter last fall that she has "only a little piece of health."

In the minstrel and vaudeville tour for the benefit of the Lamb's Club Augustus Thomas and De Wolf Hopper will alternate in the minstrel part as interlocutors, and the end men will include William H. Crane, William Collier and Jefferson De Angelis. Victor Herbert is to have charge of the orchestra, Thomas Wise is to be stage director, and Joseph Brooks will have charge of the Publicity Committee, which will include many prominent press agents. Eugene Cowles will be one of the ballad singers in the first part.

If anyone has believed Richard Strauss devoid of a keen sense of humor a story that appeared in the Liverpool Courier the other day should convert him. On one of the composer's visits to London he was the guest of honor at a dinner to which all of the leading music reviewers were invited. One of these critics gave the finishing touch to a long, eulogistic speech with the remark: "Richard Strauss knows all; he is the Buddha of composers." Amid the applause that followed the guest was heard to observe in an undertone: "If I am a musical Buddha that critic is a musical Pest."

TONE

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

By Julian Johnson.

L. E. Behymer is still in the land of hotness and music, but he expects to return not later than August 1.

Modest Altschuler recently gave a dinner in his honor at the Hotel Astor, R. E. Johnson tendered him a luncheon at the Waldorf the next day, and Mme. Jomelli gave an invitation affair for him at the Belle Claire.

Mr. Behymer has made many engagements for Pacific Coast music during his New York stay.

Grand opera possibilities, especially concerning Hammerstein's enterprise, had much more to do with Mr. Behymer's recent New York visit than the engagement of a group of concert singers.

On this point he says: "Oscar Hammerstein is back, and the Manhattan's board of directors (a box of cigars) does business on the rear porch of the Victoria each night. Hammerstein has some great schemes, but I think most of them are practical. His educational opera I am sure will be a success. It will be a great help to the cause of music in general, for it will popularize the classics—a consummation greatly to be desired.

"And as one thing leads to another, I have been talking a western tour of Hammerstein. We are agreed that it would be possible for his tremendous organization to make a successful trip up and down the Pacific Coast—but the great journey from Chicago to Salt Lake sticks us.

"Mr. Hammerstein has shown me conclusively what I already felt, intuitively, that the Middle West, the corn-and-oats West, does not care for grand opera at the prices that must be charged for the world's most famous singers.

"Now in order to get across this artistic desert, I must give him an absolute, bonded guarantee of six weeks on the Pacific Coast, when he will let the Middle States take care of themselves, and make what might be termed a direct jump, with a very heavy special train of people and productions.

"I know that Los Angeles, at the present size and several-year dearth of really great opera, will take Hammerstein for a week, while San Francisco is good for two weeks. But there is only half the time! As to the willingness of the other cities to stand their pro-rata I am not sure.

"I haven't abandoned the idea, but I am doing some very hard thinking."

Ferdinand Dunkley of New Orleans will give an organ recital at the Auditorium this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mr. Dunkley's programme will include the Bach Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor, Lemare's "Chanson d'Eté," Wolstenholme's "Caprice" and "Finale," a Hollins Intermezzo, the Largo from Dvorak's "New World" symphony and a Dubois Toccata.

An afternoon musicale was given by Mrs. J. H. Bensinger at residence, No. 2211 Juliet street, on Saturday last.

An interesting programme was given by Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Durkee, Mrs. Flint, Miss Rowena Hall, Miss Nora McPherson and Miss Maud H. Miller. The two last named gave the cycles, "Elliand," by Von Fielitz, and "The Wandering One," by Roma, in excellent artistic style.

An interesting recital was given at the Von Stein Academy on Thursday, at which Students Bates, Fitzsimmons, Payson, Newkirk, Cassidy, Swearingen, Brown, Brigham, Skelton, Russakov, Verones and Schouten participated.

Miss Louise Schmidt, head of the Louise Schmidt operatic trio, has returned from a successful tour of the Orpheum circuit, and will rest at her home here until September, when she will take up another Orpheum engagement.

The Birdsall School of Music, No. 837 Alvarado street, has just concluded a prosperous year, and reports a number of strong additions to its faculty for next season, among them Mrs. Russell-Duncan, formerly of London.

ANOTHER CHILD-WONDER.

Pepito Arriola, Spanish Wonder Child, Astounding London by His Mature Powers.

Little Pepito Arriola, the Spanish wonder child pianist, is again amazing and delighting London audiences, and even the critics. It is three years since he made his London début—a 7-year-old, sturdy boy, with no suggestion of having been overworked to accomplish the marvelous results.

It was Maestro Campanini who first advised that the child study seriously the piano, says the London correspondent of Musical America, and it was Mme. Campanini who brought him to her husband's notice. The artist pair were then—some seven years ago—in Madrid, where the maestro directed the opera, and his wife was first dramatic soprano. The proprietor of the hotel where they were staying told her of a remarkable child not yet three years old who played the piano amazingly, and asked if she would not like to hear him. But the prima donna was something skeptical. She had heard of and met too many of these wunderkinde who so frequently failed to justify their friends' boasts. But the proprietor said so much that finally she mentioned the child to her husband and he said, "let us have the child here and see what he can do."

So one day little Pepito came with his mother. He marched into the room quite unabashed, and demanded of the maestro: "Am I here to play for you?"

Campanini, much amused, said yes. Thereupon the child climbed up on the piano stool and played something. When he had finished the maestro asked:

"Why don't you play something else? Is that all you know?"

He was curious to see what this self-possessed midget would reply. The answer came promptly enough:

"But I am only a little boy. How could I know many pieces?" Then he added: "You play something for me, and afterwards I will play it for you."

Signor Campanini, highly amused complied with the request, the boy standing close beside him, listening intently, his brows contracted in a droll frown of absorption. When the maestro finished: "Play it again," said the child. Campanini complied, and then Pepito took his place and played by ear, of course, but with absolute accuracy as to melody the piece that he had heard for the first time that day. His tiny hands could grasp but the simplest chords.

"It was droll to see him," said Mme. Campanini, in speaking of it recently. "He would play one note with the fifth finger of his left hand and then carefully reach for the third and fifth above it and strike them together."

Signor Campanini declared that the child undoubtedly had decided musical talent, and questioned his mother about him. She was a piano teacher. Her first intimation that she had of the boy's gift was one day when he was about 2 years old. She was alone in her apartment with the child and a maid. She had not noticed that the boy had left her room when from the adjoining room came the sound of piano playing.

"Who is in the drawing-room?" she asked of the maid who was with her.

"No one, madame."

"Certainly there is some one, do you not hear the piano?"

"Madame, there is no one in the apartment but Pepito and ourselves."

The mother went softly to the door, and peeped in. There was Pepito standing on a stool by the piano and carefully supplying bass notes to a melody heard somewhere, and which he was playing with his right hand. "You should teach the boy," said Campinini, when he heard that these attempts were the tiny child's chief diversion. "Not regular lessons, but one day show him a scale, another day another." The mother explained that she had been afraid of impairing his health. But she took the maestro's advice, and the results were remarkable. The Campininis left Madrid soon after, but not many months later Arthur Nikisch came on a concert tour. He, too, heard the boy, and was so impressed that he offered to superintend his musical education if his mother would let little Pepito come to Germany. Through the kindness of the Dowager Queen of Spain, who was also much interested in the child, and had received him and his mother several times, and of the Princess of the Asturias, an allowance was made the mother sufficient to enable her to leave her lessons in Madrid and accompany her gifted child to Germany.

Pepito is a sturdy, healthy child, and when he is not practicing on his beloved piano—an instrument made especially for him, for his hands are still

Some Notable Festivities Incident to Society During the Past Week.

Mrs. C. Fisher,

of Pittsburgh, who will soon return to her home after a winter's visit in this city.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

[illegible] a courtesy to her daughters, Mrs. George French Hamilton and Mrs. John Hastings Howard, Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, of No. 867 Magnolia avenue, will give a luncheon at the Los Angeles Country Club tomorrow. Covers will be laid for Miss Florence Si[illegible], Miss Annis Van Nuys, Miss Lucy Clark, Miss Mollie Adelia Brown, Miss Mary Clark, Miss Katherine Clark, [illegible] Miller, Miss Inez Clark, Mrs. [illegible] Allen, Mrs. Jefferson Chandler, Mrs. Bert Harmon Merchant, Mrs. Walter Miller Clark, Mrs. Thomas Lee, Mrs. Hugh Stewart, Mrs. W. L. Green Jr., Miss Edith Herron, Miss [illegible], Miss Anne Patton and Miss [illegible] Wigemore.

For Miss Herron.

[illegible] honor of Miss Edith Herron, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Rufus H. Herron of No. 2700 Severance street, whose wedding to Lieut. William Hamilton Toaz, U.S.N., will be one of the notable events of this month, Miss [illegible] Patton of San Gabriel will entertain Tuesday, with a luncheon at the California Club. Miss Marguerettta [illegible] of Montecito, a cousin of the bride-to-be, and who will assist as [illegible] at the wedding, is the house guest of Col. and Mrs. Herron. Lieut. and Mrs. F. L. Graham of Mare Island will also be guests at the Herron home, as will also Dr. and Mrs. [illegible] C. Park of Montecito, until after the nuptials.

[illegible] for Friends.

As a great surprise to their friends will come the announcement of the betrothal of Miss Sarah Tebbs Pepper to Leon H. Hurtt, formerly of New York City, but now of Los Angeles. The betrothal is made known by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Enoch Pepper of No. 847 South Flower street. The wedding, which will be solemnized [illegible], will be marked by extreme simplicity on account of a recent bereavement in the family. Miss Pepper is well known in club and society circles and is a general favorite. For his bride, Mr. Hurtt will adorn his home with rare paintings and other treasures collected on tours through Europe and the Orient.

[illegible] Luncheon.

Mrs. R. J. Price of No. 2627 Severance street, entertained with a luncheon at Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, Tuesday, in compliment to Miss Virginia Whitcomb of Glendora, who is soon to be married. Covers were laid for Mrs. Walter Dolzell, Mrs. Roth Hamilton, Mrs. Sealy Mudd, Mrs. David Emery Bradley, Mrs. Creamer, Miss Elizabeth Whitcomb, Miss Diane Goedon and Miss Helen Sallsbury.

For Their Son.

A delightful affair was given recently by Maj. and Mrs. Elon F. Willcox at their home, No. 2857 Halldale avenue, in honor of their son, Farnsworth. Fireworks provided entertainment in the earlier part of the evening, and later supper was served in the garage, which was beautifully decorated with flags of many nations, gathered by Maj. and Mrs. Willcox on their recent European tour. Fancy lanterns were used for lighting and tiny flags and candy firecrackers were given as favors. Among the guests were Mrs. C. Erdt, Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Erdt, Mrs. Wellington Burke, Mrs. Grace Comegys and Miss Ruth Burke.

Visiting in East.

Miss Ev[illegible]n Hazard, who went East in March, will spend a month in Boston. Miss Louise Hazard, who has been visiting in New York, will leave soon for a two months' tour through Holland and France.

In Kentucky.

$5.00 to $20.00 Gossard Corsets $3.50

Sounds preposterous, but it is an absolute fact. Not outlawed models either—all in models now worn by the best dressed women in America. Possibly two-thirds of the nine hundred are in materials that the makers have decided to discontinue. To make their clearance speedy, and at the same time increase the popularity of the Gossard Corset in the Southwest, they let us have the whole nine hundred at a price which permits selling at $3.50. No question about finding your size in your favorite model. None will be fitted on day of sale, but on any day next week you will find expert corsetieres at your service.

Kind Hearts--Good Deeds

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan is Lady Bountiful for the village of Suffern, Md. She has already shown her interest in the welfare of the village by the erection of the Sacred Heart Church and the purchase of the land and buildings that make Suffern Hospital. She was the first to equip hose carts for the Suffern fire department, and made possible the formation of the department. Mrs. Ryan's latest philanthropic plan was announced Tuesday by Rev. Father Cullum of Sacred Heart Church. Of late years the foreign population of the village has increased greatly. Nearly all of the men are unable to speak the English language. Mrs. Ryan has decided to engage rooms and install interpreters and teachers and have the foreigners educated. A sewing school for girls will be connected with the school and the girls will be taught to be self-supporting.

Mrs. Hermann Reichert of New York slipped on the sidewalk in front of her home and was taken to the hospital suffering from internal hemorrhage. The only possible chance of saving her life was declared by the surgeons to be by a transfusion of blood.

"She is the mother of nine children and I would give the last drop of my life for her. Here's my arm," said her husband, rolling up the sleeve. The surgeon made the incisions and bound the arms of husband and wife together. Reichert insisted on the continuance of the operation until the physician felt that its prolongation was not justifiable.

Mrs. Reichert rallied a little after the operation, but did not survive.

Sheriff Rhodda of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is made of the right material. A few days ago five children, the oldest 14 and the youngest 5, walked into his office. Each was washed clean, wore ragged clothes, was very hungry and had walked five miles. "I want to see the Sheriff, please," said the oldest.

Sheriff Rhodda went to them and the oldest boy stammered out:

"Mr. Sheriff, I want you to get my father out of jail. They put him in a week ago and we've eaten up everything in the house. I've worked and bought some bread and meat, but that's all gone. We ain't had nothing to eat since last night and we want father to come home. I washed and dressed the children and we all walked here from Fort Griffith to ask you to let him out."

The father was John Rummage, a mine worker, in jail in default of bail on the charge of threats and assault and battery. The mother is dead.

Sheriff Rhodda dropped all other business to attend to the children and a few hours later the father was released on bail by his efforts. Meanwhile the children had been fed and their pockets had been filled with firecrackers for the Fourth.

BITS OF VERSE.

Choice.

Not what we have, but what we use,
Not what we see, but what we choose;
These are the things that mar, or bless
The sum of human happiness.

The thing near-by, not that afar;
Not what we seem, but what we are;
These are the things that make or break,
That give the heart its joy or ache.

Not what seems fair, but what is true;
Not what we dream, but good we do;
These are the things that shine like gems,
Like stars in fortune's diadems.

Not as we take, but as we give,
Not as we pray, but as we live;
These are the things that make for peace
Both now and after time shall cease.
—[The Outlook.

The Optimist at Home.

Let skies be black above me—
Let storms of sorrow roll!
Here's home—and one to love me
And sunshine in the soul!

("John, here's the man come for the rent—
The groceries, too, and not a cent!
And here's the bill for gas and coal:
Let's try that sunshine of your soul!")

Let Fortune sad deceive me—
No beggar I shall roam;
Though Fortune's smiles should leave me,
My riches are—at home!

("John, here's the wood and laundry bill,
And not a penny in the till!
We'll all be sued—without a doubt;
I wish you'd trot your riches out!")
—[Frank L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

The Music of Erin of Old.

Sweet as the sound of far-away bells,
Ringing and chiming over the dells,
Deep in the heart of memory dwells
The music of Erin of old!
A smile and a tear, a zephyr of June,
An evening of love, a wreath and a rune,
Soul of a song and life of a tune,
Rose and shamrock, girdled in gold—
The music of Erin of old!

Strong as the roar of thundering seas,
Soft as the rustle of leaves in the breeze,
Light as the wind over blossoming leas—
The music of Erin of old!
Voice of a hero and prattle of child,
Gentle and fierce as the wail of the wild,
Flashing and crooning, caressing and mild,
True and tender, pleading and bold—
The music of Erin of old!
—[Munsey's Magazine.

The Soul's Test.

As breezes lure a faint, melodious strain,
Long-drawn and wistful from a golden string,
The gusts of life that sweep the childhood spring
Fan from its heart a good or ill refrain;
And by the sound the gentle winds obtain
The harpist knows what melody will ring,
As God but knows the deeds the child will bring
When to the harp the worldly hand is lain.

Some strings may break beneath the world's rude beat
Of life's delusions and uncertain joy,
And all will make a strained and vibrant tone
Until the strings to sober chords retreat;
Then shall the ones ne'er fraught with sin's alloy
Give sweetest music while the rest shall moan.
—[Sonnet by George Keppel Thomas.

The Wife.

The little dreams of maidenhood—
I put them all away
As tenderly as mother would
The toys of yesterday,
When little children grow to men
Too overwise for play.

The little dreams I put aside—
I loved them, every one,
And yet, since moonblown buds must hide
Before the noonday sun,
I close them wistfully away,
And give the key to none.

O little dreams of maidenhood—
Lie quietly, nor care
If some day in an idle mood
I, searching unaware
Through some closed corner of my heart,
Should laugh to find you there.
—[Theodosia Garrison, in Harper's Bazar.

A Dream.

I dreamed of passages obscure and dim,
Whose walls of stone held neither door nor key;
With groping hands I fell—and lo, the rim
Of the blue, boundless, everlasting sea!
—[Margaret Sherwood, in Scribner's Magazine.

The Change of Time.

Thingumbob: So they say, and I can't understand it. I knew her when she was a little girl.

McJigger: Well?

Thingumbob: Well, it was merely plaited then.—[Philadelphia Press.

SHOPPING IN NEW YORK.

Problem Raised by the Grocer as to the Quantity of Sugar His Customer Wanted.

[New York Sun:] The housekeeper was gossiping: "You know I've been baking cake both yesterday and today," she said. "Well, yesterday I bought sugar at the grocer's, but I wasn't sure that I didn't need more for the cake I had to bake today, so this morning I went back to the grocery and said to the man, 'Now,' I says, 'I want as much sugar again of the same kind.'

"'Well, you had a pound yesterday,' says the grocer. 'You must mean you want again as much.' So he weighed me out again as much as I got yesterday. When I came to look at it it didn't seem enough to me.

"'Give me again,' I says, 'as much.'

"'Again as much?' says the man. 'Well, now, do you mean a pound again, again as much, or as much again? Do you mean once as much again or once again as much? Or do you mean again as much more, or as much again more, or as much more again?'

"'Give me,' says I getting roiled, 'as much again.'

"So he weighed out as much again as the last lot. Now you see, when I think of the package I bought yesterday this doesn't look as large again as the one I bought before, though maybe it is really again as large; but the groceryman said that the pound I bought yesterday took less time and trouble by again as much or as much again as to weigh out as much sugar again as I first bought. If he hadn't made such a fuss about it I might have bought half again as much or half again as much more—perhaps half as much again or half as much again more; but now I wouldn't go to that grocery again for anything. Another time I may need again as much as I bought today, or I may again need as much again, and then again just suppose I should need as much again as that."

This is rather more worry than an earnest seeker for precision in the use of our dear old simple speech likes to bear alone. Perhaps some comfort lies in the fact that it might be twice again as much, twice as much again, double again as much or double as much again; or even twice or double again as much more, or twice or double as much more again—think of it.

How much is there in each "again?"

Wear Red Clothing.

According to a Spanish physician, white clothing is unsuitable for use under a blazing tropical sun. He declares that people should wear red-colored clothing to keep cool. The disturbance of the nerves of the spinal column by excessive actinic rays reacts upon the stomach, he says, upsetting digestion as well as causing sunstroke. The remedy is a non-actinic covering for the skin, and a red lining for wearing apparel and helmet gives instant relief to the troubles from a torrid sun and enables a workman to stand severe exposure with comfort.—[Exchange.

London's New Joke.

London is holding its sides because of a wonderful new joke. It's rather a shame to tell it to you Sunday morning, when your thoughts should be serious, but it's too good to keep. The first Englishman asked the second: "Why is Melba like a Dutch oyster?" Get ready, now; it's coming. "Because she is an Australian." Isn't that the acme of wit? An "oyster alien!" And people dare to say the English are not humorous.—[Springfield Republican.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

PURIFIES as well as Beautifies the Skin. No other cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy-Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Elk Stationery and Souvenir Elk Leather Goods

¶ Distinctive Elk's stationery in the official Elk's purple—with single initial, two-letter monogram or the Elk's emblem skillfully embossed in white is the latest innovation of our Department of Stationery. In correspondence—white ink is used thus carrying out the desired color scheme—and producing a very unusual and harmonious effect.

¶ Useful and uncommon Elk Souvenirs in leather goods are also shown in this department. The collection comprises such pieces as card cases, hip cases, letter cases, bill books, memorandum books and match cases. They may be had in white leather with the Elk's emblem stamped in purple, or in purple leather with gold stamping and gold may be mounted in either sterling silver or solid gold.

The illustration shows one of the novel and fitting Elk souvenirs we have prepared—in hand painted China plates. The decorations are Elk's heads and are cleverly executed.

ICE CUSTOMER (under the old service)—"That looks like a pretty small fifty pounds of ice! I wonder, now——"
ICE DRIVER (the old kind)—"The lady seems to be interested. I wonder why!"

Under former conditions, you faced a question mark every time you looked at the block of ice the driver left you. You didn't know whether you were getting full weight ice or not. The only way you could tell was by actually weighing the heavy, slippery block of ice. This was a hard task—and few families have scales suitable for weighing ice.

Our new ice service, from the "Orange Wagons," has changed all that. We guarantee our customers full weight ice, and supply them with a simple method of checking us up.

We give to every customer desiring them a Free Measuring Rule and Table of Weights. All you need to do to ascertain the weight of ice delivered is to measure the ice and cast up its correct weight by means of the Table. The process is easy and simple. It enables you to KNOW just how many pounds of ice you receive.

Besides a surety of Full Weight Ice, service from the "Orange Wagons" is superior in another way. It is a courteous service. Our Drivers are anxious to please customers—you'll note this as you take ice of us.

They will supply you with the Rule and Table of Weights, mentioned above, or we will send you both upon telephone request, whether you are one of our customers or not.

Make it a point to ask for them. And let us serve you with ice, too. Our product is pure, delivery prompt and satisfactory, and full weight—don't forget that. LOS ANGELES ICE AND COLD STORAGE CO.

PHOTOGRAPH OF AEROPLANE OF BRITISH ARMY AT ALDERSHOT AFTER ITS RECENT READJUSTMENT.

LONDON, July 1.—While so much attention is being given to the invasion of England by the naval forces of an enemy, we must not in our scheme of defenses omit to provide for the possibilities of attack from aërial fleets also, says the London Sphere.

That airships will play an important part in any raid on or invasion of England is being gradually admitted, even by that section of the British public which has only just begun to accept the airship as a fact. In France and Germany, on the other hand, the idea has been long entertained, though it has been generally felt that the over-sea passage would set up special conditions which so far have not been carefuly studied.

No dirigible balloon or aëroplane has yet crossed the Channel, and save the Zeppelin, no airship is specially fitted for work over water. But the distance equivalent to that separating England and France has already been covered many times by dirigibles and flying machines, while the bee line distance from Germany to England has been traversed by French and German dirigibles. It is worthy of note that England has never had an airship which could be relied upon to journey even from London to the south or east coast.

For the nonce we must dismiss the aëroplane as a practicable instrument of invasion, since no nation has a sufficiency of machines or men for the task, even if all other conditions were favorable.

The problem thus for the present turns to the dirigible balloons, and here the difficulties are not so great. Each vessel could carry one or two tons of explosives, and the task of firing these from a dirigible would not be so difficult as from an aëroplane, as the former vessel could be brought to a standstill in the air without changing its altitude, while the aëroplane would perforce have to circle at fair speed over its objective.

Ten dirigibles would do the raiding work that would necessitate several thousand modern aëroplanes, and with far more prospect of success. A start could be made quite secretly by night, and only a comparatively small number of trained military men would be required. Both France and Germany already possess types of dirigibles which could attempt such work if required, and the trained crews are available also. But if the advantage now lies in the dirigible balloon, the conditions may rapidly change, and then be all in favor of the flying machine.

At any time, however, we need not seriously fear actual invasion by airship, no more than we should anticipate any enemy being able to transport a sufficiency of men and stores by sea ships while the naval forces of the world stand in the present ratio. But we can look with much apprehension to the growing danger of aërial raids as a preliminary to naval attacks, which will cover the advance of an invading force.

If airships are quite unsuitable for the transport of the large number of men, horses, guns and ammunition requisite for an invading army, they can fulfill another important purpose by conducting secret raids by night on our naval bases and fleets, and thus, by crippling some section of our first line of defense, permit of an opening by which a great navel invasion may be pushed home. Sheerness, Dover and Portsmouth would all stand in grave danger of night attacks, and there would be nothing to prevent London being dominated.

In effect, England's aërial frontier is practically defenseless now, and as airships can travel over land and sea this circumstance means that both our navy and army are in danger of crippling raids until we have an aërial fleet to meet the new conditions.

Investigate Cause of Tuberculosis.

REPORT MADE TO THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AT STOCKHOLM ON THE INFECTION OF CHILDREN BY MILK FROM TUBERCULOUS COWS.

STOCKHOLM (Sweden) June 20.—American investigations of the responsibility of bovine tuberculosis for the persistent spread of the disease among human beings, particularly children, will be officially reported to the eighth International Tuberculosis Conference, in session here, by Nathan Straus.

The paper by the New York philanthropist will be presented by Dr. Arthur Randolph Green, medical director of the Straus pasteurized milk work, and one of the American delegates. It disclosed for the first time the overwhelming evidence gathered by the American investigators to show the responsibility of milk from tuberculous cows for the infection of human beings with tuberculosis.

Mr. Straus's report was as follows: The topic assigned for discussion, the protection of healthy children from tuberculosis, suggests two important and imperative lines of action:

(1.) That their association, in families or otherwise, with tuberculous patients be safeguarded by sanitary measures.

(2.) That their infection with bovine tuberculosis be prevented by forbidding the sale or use of milk unless it comes from tuberculin-tested cows, or unless it has been properly pasteurized.

Overwhelming proof of the necessity of stopping the use of tuberculous milk has been supplied, particularly within the past year, by the definite tracing of a large number of cases of human tuberculosis to its bovine origin.

The "Journal of the American Medical Association, in a leading editorial on May 20, pointed out that in over 300 cases investigated bacilli of the bovine type had been found in more than sixty cases, a little more than 20 per cent., and this highest authority among the medical publications of America declared: "Bovine tuberculosis is a source of danger to man sufficiently great to demand rigorous precautionary measures against it."

DR. PARK'S INVESTIGATIONS.

Quickly following this unanswerable summing up of the situation came the disclosure in the same month of the investigations conducted by Dr. William H. Park, director of the research laboratory of the New York Health Department. Dr. Park reported to the Association of American Physicians that of seventeen fatal cases of generalized tubercolosis in infants, five were found to be due to bacilli of bovine type. Two cases of abdominal tuberculosis were examined and both were due to the bovine bacillus. In five cases of tuberculosis of the bones and joints and four cases of pulmonary tuberculosis among babies, the bacilli were of the human type. Of twenty-nine cases of tuberculosis of the lymph glands of the neck nine disclosed bacilli of the bovine type. Dr. Park observed: "Bovine infection is certainly a considerable factor in the tuberculosis of children."

Dr. M. P. Ravenel of the University of Wisconsin, as early as 1902 refuted the Koch error of 1901 by isolating the bacilli of bovine type in the tissues of a child who died from tuberculosis. Dr. Theobald Smith of Harvard, found the bovine germ in four cases. Febiger and Jensen of Copenhagen, proved that seven of twelve children who died from tuberculosis had been infected by milk, tracing the disease back to tuberculous cows.

The German Imperial Commission, appointed to vindicate Koch, investigated eighty-four cases of tuberculosis in children and found twenty-one, or 25 per cent. of bovine origin. The British Royal Commission established that fourteen out of sixty cases, or 25 per cent., were due to the bovine bacillus.

DISEASE IN DAIRY HERDS.

Besides the indisputable evidence that bovine tuberculosis is transmitted to human beings, particularly to children, we have to recognize the fact of the extent of tuberculosis among the dairy herds. Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the American Bureau of Animal Industry, in his last annual report showed that more than 10 per cent. of the dairy cattle were tuberculous. "The disease is undoubtedly on the increase," he said. Dr. Moore, of Cornell University, found tuberculosis in 302 out of 421 herds examined in New York State, about one-third of the animals being diseased.

It is to be remembered in this connection that Dr. E. C. Schroeder has proved that tuberculous cows, even though but slightly affected, give off tubercle bacilli in their feces, and that the mere presence of a tuberculous cow in a dairy herd may result in the infection of the entire milk supply of that dairy. Dr. Schroeder's conclusions were amply verified and confirmed by the British Royal Commission.

TUBERCLE BACILLI IN MILK.

Then we have evidence of the undoubted presence of tubercle bacilli in milk offered for sale in our cities. Wherever examinations have been made living, virulent germs of tuberculosis have been found in a considerable number of the samples taken from the milk dealers.

The most important and thorough investigation of this sort was that made by Dr. John F. Anderson, assistant director of the United States Hygienic Laboratory. After years of work on the part of the Agricultural Department had vastly improved, the conditions as to health of the dairy herds supplying the city of Washington, Dr. Anderson gathered 272 samples of milk from 104 dairies, the largest number ever examined in one investigation. He obtained indisputable results from 223 of these samples, finding 15, or 6.72 per cent. to contain virulent tubercle bacilli, and that this tuberculous milk came from eleven different dairies.

And of the tubercle bacilli in milk, it must be remembered, as Dr. Schroeder points out, that their lodgment in human bodies is not left to chance, as in the case of germs in dust or sputum, but that they are inevitably consumed in large quantities and enter human bodies live and virulent. Wherefore, Dr. G. Sims Woodhead of the British Royal Commission, says: "Every tuberculous cow is either an actual or potential center of infection."

ELIMINATE GERMS FROM MILK.

Obviously, therefore, the efficient protection of human beings, and particularly children, from tuberculosis, requires that a summary stop be put to the almost universal practice of using milk of doubtful origin in the raw state. This was the position I took in 1895, almost at the beginning of my work, and this was the conclusion reached in 1908 by the United States Public Health Service, after the most thorough investigation of the milk problem ever made.

By means of the tuberculin test the diseased cows can be weeded out, but this will be a work of years. Through the activity of medical milk commissions in America a supply of milk from tuberculin tested cows has been secured, but this milk is costly and the total output is only about 40,000 quarts a day, or one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the quantity daily used in the United States.

For the other 99.9 per cent. we need measures that will eliminate the tubercle bacilli and other germs and prevent the milk setting up infections in the human body. The measures that are recommended by the United States Bureau of Animal Industry are the tuberculin test and pasteurization, the recommendation being that pasteurization be required in the case of all milk not produced from tuberculin tested herds.

Summing up the results of the milk investigation Surgeon-General Walter Wyman writes: "The important subject of pasteurization has been carefully studied by Dr. Rosenau, who points out its advantages and discusses its inconveniences. He recommends 60 degrees centigrade (140 degrees Fahrenheit) as the best temperature to use in pasteurizing milk, as this degree of heat is sufficient to destroy the pathogenic micro-organisms without devitalizing the milk itself. Pasteurization is forced upon us by present conditions. It prevents much sickness and saves many lives."

And Dr. Schroeder writes: "It is a simple matter to destroy tubercle bacilli in milk and cream by pasteurization. It is necessary to educate men to a realization that tuberculosis is so common among dairy cows that many years must pass before we can reasonably hope to eradicate it, and that in the meantime pasteurization is absolutely necessary for the protection of public health."

Dr. Rosenau, director of the United States Hygienic laboratory, after a thorough study of the amount of heat necessary to kill the tubercle bacilli, decided that the milk should be heated to at least 60 degrees centigrade, and kept at that temperature for twenty minutes.

VINDICATION OF THE METHOD.

The proof of the correctness of pasteurization of milk as a life-saving measure has been rounded out by Dr. Joseph H. Kastle, chief of the division of chemistry of the hygienic laboratory, who has shown that the process, as recommended by the United States Public Health service, does not impair the ferments or enzymes contained in fresh milk, does not alter the chemical composition of the milk, does not lessen its food value, either as to nutrition or digestibility, and does not alter its taste or physical qualities.

This method of destroying the tubercle bacilli in milk, so thoroughly proved and justified by science, has been practically vindicated by my eighteen years' experience in supplying pasteurized milk for the babies in New York and other cities in America and abroad. The result has been that wherever pasteurization has been introduced in cities having excessive infantile death rates, the mortality among the babies has been reduced one-half.

In view of all these facts that I have briefly summarized, the tuberculosis problem resolves itself largely into a milk problem, and the milk problem is not what to do, but how to get it done.

The prevention of the infection of healthy children by tuberculous patients is largely the work of the doctors, and they are quite able to cope with this duty.

THE DIGNIFIED COURT.

Solemn and Stately Ceremonial at the Opening of the Supreme Court Sessions.

[Kansas City Star:] The solemn and oppressively conservative United States Supreme Court occasionally sanctions or tolerates some innovation in its environment which jolts sticklers for ancient ritual. Lately that has been added to the fixtures of the court what the frivolous and irreverent call "the red-light" section. It lends a bit of color to the ceremonies, nothing more. It is a red electric light, the purpose of which is to warn persons in the court that the judges are approaching and that every one must maintain respectful silence.

The red electric bulb is placed immediately over the door through which the judges make their entrance. The moment it flashes red it is a signal for every one to rise and remain standing until the nine black-robed figures have taken their places. This business of taking their seats in the court as performed by the justices is mighty impressive. It might be termed a function.

The jurists form in line in the little room reserved for their use, with Chief Justice Fuller at the head of the procession. Then follow his associates in the order of seniority—Harlan, Brewer, White, Peckham, McKenna, Holmes, Day and Moody. When they reach the outer corridor leading to the courtroom a page touches a button and the red bulb glows. With slow ultra-dignified tread the justices enter the courtroom and file behind the row of pillars in the rear of their seats. The Chief Justice, Mr. Harlan and Mr. Brewer step behind their respective chairs and stand motionless. When Judges Peckham, Holmes and Moody have reached their places to the left, and White, McKenna and Day on the right, the Chief Justice steps forward. The others do the same, and then as one man they sink into their seats.

The justices' lunch hour is fixed by the stars and moon and the clock at the National Observatory. At 2 o'clock, to the second, the Chief Justice announces: "We will suspend here." There is no appeal from that decision. At 2:30 o'clock, not one second before or after, the justices return to the courtroom and the hearing is resumed.

LARGE LEGAL FEES.

Large Money Paid Attorneys in Several Important Transactions.

Former Ambassador Choate and Edward Lauterbach, the lawyer and first lieutenant to ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt in the palmy days of his Republican leadership, were associate counsel in a corporate legal case of some magnitude not long since. At the close of the trial, which they had lost, Mr. Choate requested Mr. Lauterbach to make out the bill for their services and drop in at his office with it at his convenience so that he could vise it, says the New York Times.

A few days later Mr. Lauterbach called at Mr. Choate's offices with the bill. He had decided that $1500 was a conservative fee for the legal work they had done, and did not want to appear to his co-counsel to be over-grasping. Mr. Choate looked at the bill carefully for a minute, then picking up a pen added a third "0" to the $1500, making the fee just ten times as much.

Mr. Lauterbach contemplated the former Ambassador to the Court of St. James's for a moment, admiration depicted in every feature, and then exclaimed:

"Why, Mr. Choate, you almost persuade me to become a Christian!"

George B. Wickersham, Attorney-General of the United States, who, as one of the attorneys in the litigation between the city of Chicago and the Chicago Traction Company, was paid a fee of $200,000, did not receive as much, relatively, as Elihu Root, who topped every fee ever paid to any lawyer in the world considered from the view of services performed, says the New York Herald.

James B. Hill, now a judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals in New Jersey, was paid $1,000,000 for patching up the bitter differences between Andrew Carnegie and Henry C. Frick. This took months of labor and the employment of many assistants in the search for records which were necessary in bringing about the reconciliation. It is, so far as the amount is concerned, the highest fee paid to a lawyer in the history of American jurisprudence. William D. Guthrie was paid $800,000 for breaking the will of Henry B. Plant, which involved many months of labor and frequent appearances in court.

After the death of Russell Sage, a legal snarl presented itself as to the distribution of the estate, variously estimated at from $140,000,000 to $200,000,000. Mrs. Sage, kindly, generous and just, wanted the legal questions settled quickly and by authority.

"I want you to see Mr. Elihu Root," she said to her adviser, "and say to him that I will consider it a distinct favor if he will pass upon this question and give to me his decision."

Communication was opened up at once with the then Secretary of War. A special messenger called upon him. He was too much engrossed with his official duties to give the request attention.

"Please say to Mrs. Sage," he said, "that it will be impossible for me to act. I am not practicing law now."

"But it is not a question of fee, Mr. Root," said the intermediary. "Mrs. Sage insists that you, and you only, shall advise in this matter."

"I repeat," replied the War Secretary, "that I do not wish to be retained, and you may say that nothing further need be suggested. My fee would be practically prohibitive, and I want it to be so regarded."

"And that fee would be"—

"Well, say $250,000," was the reply, in a tone intended to cut off further discussion.

That same day telegraphic communication with Mrs. Sage was opened. "Pay it," she said. Mr. Root was astounded when informed that his "prohibitive" fee was regarded as settled. He accomplished what he had to do in less than forty-eight hours, without appearing in court and without engaging additional aid, and Mrs. Sage was very well satisfied.

Japanese Taking to Milk.

The Japanese are beginning to like milk and butter. Twenty-five years ago not more than 1 or 2 per cent. of the people in Japan would touch butter, even if eating at a European restaurant. Now 40 or 50 per cent. eat it with a relish. Dairy farms have increased notably, but it is chiefly to milk that they look for their profit. Whereas thirty or forty years ago milk was abhorred and the average Japanese would not touch it, many households now consume one or two bottles a day. This is partly because people have come to like it, and partly because doctors have recommended it as a wholesome beverage.—[Exchange.

Ceylon's Great Mystery.

There is in Ceylon a valley of dry bones. This valley, near Talawakele, is said to be a vast underground tunnel, with numerous entrances and exits. According to English planters in Ceylon, when an elephant feels its last hour approaching it will, if permitted to do so, escape into the jungles and die. Once the sick elephant gets away it is never seen again. Where they go is a problem. As they vanish so mysteriously in the hour of death the tale is told by the natives that they die in an underground cave. The particular cave, however, has never been discovered, though numerous expeditions have sought for it. The person who finds this elephant sepulchre will probably reap a fortune.—[Exchange.

Hair Removers Are Dangerous

Ladies should be most particular in choosing a hair remover and learn first what reputable authorities know about it.

In treating superfluous hair it is of vital importance that the agent to be employed should be absolutely non-poisonous, antiseptic and germicidal, because if it is not so with frequent use it will produce eczema or blood poisoning.

De Miracle is the only hair remover that offers proof that it is harmless, safe and sure. Don't be deceived by startling statements made by fake FREE advertisers and others. De Miracle is sold by The Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring, Fifth and Broadway, 623 So. Broadway, and all other good stores, or booklet in plain sealed envelope by De Miracle Chem. Co., Desk H. 16, 1903 Park ave., New York.

Do You Weigh Too Much?

The Real Remedy and the Recipe

There are some stout people whom the above question does not seem to trouble very much. They are, however, wrong to be so careless, for obesity is a complaint which brings many evils in its train. There are others who have sought long and earnestly for a really reliable remedy for obesity, and to these the following prescription will be of absorbing interest, because it presents in a simple and harmless form and sure relief—a remely which is rapidly gaining a world-wide reputation. The reader may make up the prescription for himself (or herself) on getting the ingredients from the druggist—or the latter will do so willingly.

This is the full recipe: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water. Take a dose of one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

This admirable and quite harmless remedy will soon take off pounds of the offending fatty excess; and as, day by day, the weight decreases, strength and vigor will return in equal ratio; for, be it observed, there is no fasting or exercise required. Rest, good food, regular doses—these are all that is necessary to reduce weight to normal, increase the supply of pure blood, clear the skin, beautify the complexion, and restore energy and excellent spirits.

Just 50 New Fall Suits To Be Sold at Cost

A Sale Without a Parallel

On Monday we will sell exactly fifty new Fall Suits at just what it cost to put them on our racks—$19.50. And, of course, you want to know why. Here's the reason:

We are receiving new fall suits every day. We want you to know it. We want your neighbor to know it. We want to put fifty of these suits into use at once.

We are going to sell them at cost to accomplish this purpose. How can we afford it? What house can't afford to advertise? We think this selling plan is the most logical kind of business promotion. Whether we are right or wrong, the opportunity is before you. Will you take advantage of it?

The suits are absolutely the latest in design and material. The materials are homespuns and hard finished novelty weaves in the colors that are destined to be popular this fall. The coats are 42 inches long; semi-three-quarter and tight fitting. They are lined with Peau de Cygne and Skinner's satin. The skirts are pleated and gored.

Remember they are to go at cost and the price will be

HEREABOUTS.

THAT the giving over of the cattle ranges to the small farmer is resulting in a pronounced improvement in the breed of American cattle and an increase of the better grades at the stock pens, is the statement made by G. W. Ballentine of Denver, vice-president and general manager of the Denver Union Stock Yard Company. He is a guest at the Lankershim. "The cattle men have fought hard to maintain the big ranges," said he. "But it was inevitable that the small farmer should take up the land little by little. The threatened cutting off of the meat supply is proving vain. Not only is there a little more cattle available for the stock pens than there was, but this cattle is of a better grade. I don't think that a distinctive American breed of cattle will ever be produced—the Durham and two or three other short-horn breeds are, in the opinion of the authorities, already practically perfect, and the distribution of the cattle among so many small farmers gives the animal better attention and permits the raising of a better grade of meat for the market. The cost is greater than when the animals ranged over vast areas, where many of them died from the weather, or perished from lack of food or water. There are still many ranges left in some parts of the country, notably in the Southwest, but it may be expected that all this land will be given over to the farmers in due time, and then all the cattle in the stock pens will come from the farms. It will be better beef, and there will be more of it."

L. Viteboro of Paris, France, says Americans outstripped the French in the use of reinforced concrete as a building material and that he, a graduate of the Ecole Polytechnique in civil engineering, has come to the United States to study methods of using this material in this country. "France was the first country to use reinforced concrete," said Mr. Viteboro at the Angelus yesterday, "but Americans were quick to see the advantages of the new building material, which is destined to become exclusive, and numerous new features have been introduced in this country. In France they will sometimes take a year to put up a building, for the French are desirous, above all things, to build permanently. In America I have found that they build every bit as solidly, and with much more haste. The rush of the American is something which the European can never understand. In St. Louis, for instance, I have seen the entire framework of an eight-story building finished in a month, and the concrete work was done in equally marvelously quick time. The buildings in this country are put up as investments, and the owners are always in a hurry to see the returns begin to come in."

[illegible] Hunt, an attorney from Houston, Tex., reports that opposition to Senator Bailey is daily growing among the Texans, and that that well known man's political life appears to be rapidly drawing to a close. "The Bailey fight in Houston is going on all the time," declared Hunt yesterday. "The [illegible] is his strongest advocate, and the Chronicle is one of his most outspoken opponents. As nearly as I can figure, the opposition among the people both in Houston and throughout the State, is fast getting to outnumber Bailey's adherents. In addition to the old complaint against Bailey, there was that little matter where he [illegible] the charter of the Security [illegible] Company—he got $5000 for that [illegible] the company's attorneys had to do the work over again. And then there was that disgraceful fight with a newspaper man in Washington—Texans do not like that sort of business. Texans will fight as quickly as men from any other State, and they believe in standing up for their rights, but they do not like to see their [illegible] engaged in brawls that reflect discredit upon their State."

Hunt and his family are registered at the Lankershim.

"[illegible] again? Well, I don't think [illegible] come to think of it, I don't mind telling you that I will not," declared [illegible] A. Smith of Tucson, Ariz., at the Hollenbeck. "I guess I have had enough of politics, and will give my time to practicing law after this," he said. Smith was for seventeen years Territorial delegate in Congress. At the last election Ralph Cameron, a Republican from Cochise county, sprang a surprise on the stalwarts of the Territory by defeating the veteran Democrat by a handsome majority. "Cameron has not got statehood for Arizona yet," growled Smith, as he stepped into the Hollenbeck dining-room, "and he never will get it," he flung back over his shoulder.

[illegible] T. Martin of Paris, France, who is staying at the Van Nuys with Mrs. Martin, says French newspapers are rapidly adopting the ways of their American contemporaries, which, he says, are admitted to be the best [illegible] in the world. "I have noticed [illegible] that the newspapers are daily becoming more like the publications of the United States in their methods," said he. "They are going in more and more for the display head and the feature 'story,' dividing their [illegible] into departments, using the bulletin board for all it is worth, and vying with each other in conducting various contests and encouraging sports [illegible]. And these and other [illegible] tricks are taking immensely with the people, too. For one thing, though, I have not noticed any [illegible] crying for prohibition. The [illegible] is that they do not need prohibition in France. The Frenchman [illegible] how to drink. He will take [illegible] and much absinthe is being [illegible] any more. And the Frenchman will half-fill his wine glass with [illegible] he will then take his time [illegible] drinking it. He takes wine because he likes it, because he likes to [illegible] himself, but he never would [illegible] standing up in front of a [illegible] pouring whiskey down his [illegible] when he does not want it."

[illegible] whose home was formerly in [illegible] is interested in coal lands [illegible] and is enjoying a visit to Southern California after a business [illegible] the Northwest.

[illegible] of Fort Lapway, Idaho, is at the Westminster with [illegible] to Texas to invest [illegible] a full-blooded Nez Perce [illegible] cashier of the Fort Lapway bank. "Our bank," said [illegible] the first institution of its [illegible] by Indians, and I do not [illegible] there is any other Indian [illegible] in the United States. We started [illegible] months ago with a capital of $12,000, subscribed almost [illegible] by Indians, and our deposits [illegible] between $[illegible] and $[illegible]. [illegible] putting up our own bank [illegible] which will be unique in construction and appearance. The front [illegible] will be made like a tepee, [illegible] those in which our fathers [illegible], but the interior will be [illegible] establishment. All of the [illegible] of the bank are Indians. [illegible] are three Indians on the [illegible], together with two [illegible]. The Nez Perces are now [illegible] in ranching or commerce, [illegible] prospering."

[illegible] AUTHORS.

[illegible], a Hoosier painter, [illegible] spent much of his time [illegible] the past ten years with [illegible], and declares that they [illegible] people, and in this respect [illegible] of the white people. [illegible] the "sun dance" near [illegible], Wyo., last July, and [illegible] the scene. The dancers, [illegible] at midnight, and [illegible] without stop for three days and nights. In their constant gaze upon the flagpole they become self-hypnotized until they say they see beautiful maidens and rare trophies of the chase, amulets and charms pouring down the pole toward them.

Andrew O'Connor, the Irish-American sculptor, who has a studio in Paris, is preparing new designs for his statue of Commodore John Barry designed for the United States government for erection in Washington. He also writes that the French government will erect a bronze copy of the statue in the Luxembourg Museum in Paris.

Chevalier Moses Ezekiel, the Virginian sculptor, who has a studio at Rome, was recently honored by a visit from King Victor, who wished to see the sculptor's statue of "Napoleon at St. Helena." He arrived at the sculptor's studio at 8:30 a.m., but unfortunately did not see the object of his visit, as it was being cast in bronze. Ezekiel has finished a monument to Thomas Jefferson, a figure standing on a liberty bell with a deep red marble pedestal, which will be unveiled at the University of Virgina next year. The King pronounced this the most original monument that he had ever seen.

Rollin Lynde Hartt, author of "The People at Play," is a reformed reformer. His early studies of the Other Half and their amusements roused in him a quixotic desire to make them over. To this there succeeded a more tolerant mood. Instead of emphasizing their evil side he has seen that it is offset to a vast degree by motives clean and good.

Edgar Beecher Bronson whose "Reminiscences of a Ranchman" will be remembered by many, has recently returned to Chicago from a seven months' expedition in Africa through the same wild game regions in which Mr. Roosevelt is now finding exciting sport. At Nairobi he had the same shikarees, cooks, syces and mess boys that have been placed at Mr. Roosevelt's disposal. Mr. Bronson himself killed the third largest elephant on record, besides some of the largest rhinos and buffalo bulls ever taken. He brought back 137 trophies of his prowess.

STATESMEN, POLITICIANS.

SPEAKER CANNON, though 73 years of age, is about the most athletic person in Washington. He keeps in training, and his good physical condition accounts for not a little of his political success. Were he not physically strong, he could never campaign so strenuously, and if he did not campaign so strenuously there is no telling what would happen politically. At a political meeting in his district last fall he reached the platform by clearing five steps at a bound. That achievement in some sections would win more votes than much argument. Speaker Cannon can get up earlier, stay up later and get through more work and have more fun in one day than most men half his age. And he can touch the ground with the tips of his fingers without bending his knees.

A possible successor for Congressman Henry, of Connecticut, according to the Hartford Times, is State Senator E. Hart Fenn. Mr. Henry is as robust as a man of 50, but he is being reminded rather pointedly that "when a man reaches an age that is three years beyond the scriptural span he is fairly entitled to a rest from the exacting duties of a public position."

President Taft was a good Greek scholar himself at Yale, but the case of the Georgia boy convicted of stealing a 40-cent Greek text-book must have appealed to him as an extraordinary example of an appetite for classical learning. At any rate, the boy was pardoned.

Senator Burkett, of Nebraska, was a plowboy at 10, a student at college at 17, a graduate at 20, a school teacher, lawyer and member of the House at 30 and a United States Senator at 37.

Gov. Dawson, who has been selected by the President to head the corps of commercial agents in China, is said to be one of the hardest working men that ever occupied the executive chair in West Virginia. He is a student, a man of large experience, and one who has made the study of political economy and foreign commerce a specialty for several years. If any one can strengthen American trade in the Chinese empire the people of West Virginia believe it is Gov. Dawson.

THE EVER YOUNG.

JOSE GUADALOUPE ALFITD of Jalostitlan, State of Jalisco, Mexico, is said to be the oldest man in the world. The record of his birth as carried in the archives of the parish church shows that he was born in 1770. James Surret, a half-breed Cherokee Indian, who inhabits the mountains of Bland county, Va., is said to be 120 years old and the claim is believed to be correct. The oldest citizens vouch for the statement that he was a man far advanced in years even when they were children. In the course of his long life the Indian has had three wives and has reared many children. Even at this late day a brood may be seen playing about his cabin. Surret is able-bodied and active, and cultivates a thirty-acre farm. The cabin in which he has his habitat is a ramshackle affair with a dirt floor.

Dr. W. T. Finn, who lives near Pana, Ill., celebrated his 110th birthday anniversary on May 28 by giving a reception and entertainment to more than 1000 friends. He knew Lincoln and served as a surgeon in the Civil War.

George Clinton Payne, who is now making his headquarters in Newark, N. J., claims to be the oldest book agent in the world. As he is 98 years old and in active service, his claim to this distinction will probably not be disputed.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

M. B. MORRISSEY, who recently testified in a case on trial at Juneau, Alaska, probably received the largest mileage sum ever paid to a witness in an ordinary case. He was subpoenaed by the defense at Coldfoot, sixty-eight miles within the Arctic Circle and had a most hazardous journey to reach Juneau at the required time. From Coldfoot to Fort Gibson, a distance of about 700 miles, Morrissey, who is a boyish looking young fellow, apparently not out of his twenties, made the trip by dog team with an Indian guide, following the mail trail. They started out with seven dogs and arrived at Fort Gibson with four, and these four with their feet badly frozen. From Fort Gibson the route led to Fairbanks, thence to Valdez, and from Valdez to Juneau. Morrissey will be entitled to approximately $3000 in mileage fees alone, besides his fees as a witness.

Frederick Hoffman, a convict at San Quentin, has invented a machine which may put an end for all time to forgery and check raising. Hoffman was convicted of highway robbery two years ago, and sentenced to twenty years in San Quentin. While behind the bars Hoffman listened to the confidences of some of the convicts who had met their misfortune through expert penmanship and finally conceived the idea that a device for the prevention of forgery would win for the inventor fortune and freedom. For one year he worked on a model, which when finally completed he showed to Warden Hoyle, who gave him permission to have it patented.

W. J. Williams, sole owner of the palm-fringed isle of Teturoa in the Society group, has about 50,000 bearing cocoanut trees on his island. Soon after Williams took up the culture of cocoanuts he found that a pest was destroying the trees. He sent for an entomologist from California, Prof. R. W. Doane, who went to view the situation. He found a parasite in Tahiti that proved to be an enemy of the cocoanut scale.

Judge Van Nostrand of San Francisco, recently got even with James H. Doyle who was being sued by his wife for divorce. Doyle told the court that he did not know where he would buy his next meal and that he had no means of finding money to give his wife. The following day Judge Van Nostrand saw Doyle sitting in a $5 seat at the Nelson-Hyland fight. When the case came up again the judge wanted an explanation. Doyle asserted that he had been given a $2 ticket. This the judge refused to believe. "You pay your wife $75 by next Friday morning or else go to jail for contempt of court," ordered Judge Van Nostrand.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

REV. SAM. W. SMALL, erstwhile lawyer, preacher, evangelist, lecturer, author and traveler, recently made an unceremonious departure from Waterloo, Ia., where he has been making his residence and publishing the Golden West Magazine. Local capital was interested in the venture and editions were printed for April, May and June, when suddenly Small disappeared without leaving his address or denoting his destination. The magazine has consequently suspended publication.

Mrs. Taft has traveled more than the wife of any other President. She has almost as great a globe-trotting record as the President. She has crossed the Pacific half a dozen times, and has traveled in Japan, Manchuria, Siberia, China and other far eastern countries. She went to Cuba with her husband, and to Panama, and she has visited every corner of Europe with him.

Admiral Perez Gacitua, of the Chilian navy, who, with three other Chilian naval officers, is on a long tour, has been extended every courtesy by the Navy Department to inspect the various American navy yards.

Baroness Uriu, who is in the United States with Admiral Uriu, wears American-fashioned gowns and designs them herself. She wore a princess gown recently with wistaria vines climbing up the back and sleeves of silver embroidery that was much admired. At home she wears the Japanese costume, as she thinks that much more comfortable.

Capt. George Kimball of North Dubuque, Iowa, who is 76 years old, is the father of twenty-three children, the youngest of whom was presented May 27 by his fourth wife, who is 19 years old.

Prof. Austin Cary, who has become superintendent of the New York State forests, entered on his professional career in 1893 and has served Yale, Harvard, the State of Maine, and the Department of Agriculture. He knows the history of forestry in its European development as well as its rise in this country from a "council of perfection" of a few patriots to its present dimensions.

Prof. M. D. Learned of Philadelphia, in searching State archives throughout Germany for documents relating to America, unearthed a heap of diplomatic correspondence, which, he says, throws new light on many parts of American history where Germany is concerned. One feature of the find is proof that Germany for hundreds of years has been more interested in America than any one has believed. She had minute details of the revolution sent by her representatives in London.

OVER THE SEA.

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL ALEXANDROVITCH has been virtually banished by Emperor Nicholas by being assigned to the command of a mere ordinary regiment of the line at the garrison of Orel, the dull and dreary capital of one of the provinces of Central Russia. This punishment is the result of an intrigue with the wife of one of the officers of the Duke's regiment of the First Cuirassiers of the guard.

Princess Albert of Belgium is the happiest wife in the courts of Europe, it is asserted. With her husband and children she leads an ideal existence in the country, and as far as possible she escapes from the rigorous court routine. It is said by those who know her that when she comes to the throne with her husband there will be a quick end to the lax methods that have prevailed at court under sportive old Leopold.

Sir William Wallace, the resident-general of Northern Nigeria, has reported to the home government, on his return to Great Britain after a tour of the protectorate, that cannibal tribes owning hundreds of thousands of horses in Nigeria are being subdued by peaceful means, and that country contains perhaps the richest tin and copper fields in the world.

Lord Kitchener does not share in the general belief that Friday is an unlucky day. Many of the most important incidents in his lordship's career have happened on that day.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

CAPT. D. H. MAHAM, captain of the Puget Sound navy yard, has been placed on the retired list with the rank of commodore and three-fourths the pay of that grade. He has been captain of this yard for about two years and was expecting to be commissioned rear-admiral in September next.

Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the army, will soon make a personal inspection of the military posts and reservations in Alaska. It will be his first visit to that country. He will be accompanied by Capt. Fred W. Sladen, 14th United States Infantry, his military secretary, and expects to be absent from Washington about two months.

Col. George R. Smith, assistant paymaster general, has been relieved from duty as chief paymaster of the department of California and ordered to Washington for duty as post paymaster. We will relieve Col. Harry L. Rogers, assistant paymaster general, who, on the expiration of his leave of absence, will proceed to Manila for duty as chief paymaster to the division of the Philippines.

Life insurance officials have inaugurated a general campaign aginst the proposition for an additional Federal tax upon their business. Each is addressing the Senators from his State. They maintain that no other business in the country is taxed so heavily, unless it be the liquor business. The life insurance companies are taxed in practically all the States, the rates varying from 1 to 2½ per cent. on the premium income, and in addition are required to pay license fees in the other States in which they do business, and are frequently saddled with retaliatory taxes because of the laws of their home States.

SAVING A CATHEDRAL.

Divers Required for Renewal of the Original Foundations of Winchester.

[Exchange:] Under the walls of Winchester Cathedral stood a man in the garb of a deep sea diver. The man stepped down into a grave-like cavity where the spades had thrown up a heap of gravel, and a moment later he was gone.

Deep down one saw a dull sheet of water disturbed by a few bubbles.

No phantasy is this, but a daily reality at Winchester. For beneath the largest Gothic church in the world lies a wonderful subterranean lake soaking its very foundations. For three or four hours a day, as already announced, divers are working here, steadily clearing the lake of its slimy deposits, and substituting solid concrete.

Soon the Cathedral will stand for the first time in its nine centuries' story on solid rock, and then will have been completed the most remarkable engineering achievement in English ecclesiastical history.

The Dean of Winchester (the Rev. W. M. Furneaux,) who gave particulars of the marvelous engineering feat, estimates that the work, upon which over 100 men are engaged altogether, will not be completed until the end of 1909.

"If the necessary funds do not come in," he added, "we may have to shore up part of the building and leave it for a time, so that the end may be still farther off. But if we are as successful with the aransepts as with the rest of the building, the Cathedral will be safe for centuries.

"The wood we are removing is being turned to account for mementoes. We are having it made into bread trenchers, paper knives, boxes and fancy knick-knacks. It polishes very well, and the things have had a good sale."

The dean stated that the builders of the Cathedral in the eleventh century began with the west end, and there found a good solid bed of gravel, but as they went eastward they found the gravel gradually dropping, till at last it went under water. Those early builders had no appliances to deal with such a mass of water, and they laid trunks of beech trees along the lines of the walls.

Now the walls of the transepts were being under-pinned, and pumps were being worked to reduce the level of water. Divers had been sent down, for the first time in the history of church building, to clear out the gravel soil and do other work. Though the eastern portion of the work had not been completed, still they had made it safe for many centuries to come. The cost of repairing the southern transept was estimated at $435,000.

Under the new insurance law of New York the State Superintendent of Insurance is permitted to take control of any company whose solvency is doubted. As the National Fraternal Society has been losing money year after year, and now has only 300 members, Deputy Atty.-Gen. Prentice has petitioned the court to have Superintendent Hotchkiss assume charge of its affairs. Decision has been reserved.

GREAT RAILROADS CREATE EMPIRES.

President Brown of the New York Central Gives Timely and Enlightening Information.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

NEW YORK, July 5.—It was 9:30 o'clock in the morning, but I was not first among those who waited to see William C. Brown, president of the nine railroads which comprise the New York Central Lines. Shippers and others had been bustling in and then disappearing into the drab halls without for some time.

Mr. Brown scrutinized me over his crescent-shaped eyeglasses as I sat down at the side of his desk. He is a placid, blue-eyed, gray-haired, and singularly youthful-looking man. In dress, atmosphere, and demeanor, he might be compared in trimness, elegance, dignity, and impressiveness, to his swiftest and best limited train. His clothing was dark blue, and there was a carbuncle stickpin in his necktie. Leaning forward in his chair with the impassibility of a graven image, he waited for me to begin. The attitude was defensive, but not antagonistic.

Caution had been enjoined upon me in respect to the stimulating and entertaining details of his personal life. He was utterly weary, I was warned, with pen portraits of himself and with narratives of his battles for success. Still I ventured to ask: "When and what was your first employment on a railroad?"

"I went to work on a section in 1869," Mr. Brown tersely answered, and his tone carried neither pride nor regret. "I was 16 years old."

"And what were your wages by the day?"

"I don't know. My envelope contained $27.60 at the end of the month when the pay car came down the line."

HAD INTERESTING CAREER.

The bridge over the years since then I made no hazard to pass. Telegrapher, train dispatcher, and general manager of great railroads in the West would have made a capital human interest story as Mr. Brown alone could have related it. Then there was Parley Brown, his great-great-grandfather, fighting behind the intrenchments on Bunker Hill, whence he carried a wounded brother on his back after all the rebel powder had been shot and the limping colonists were in victorious retreat. I should have liked to ask him, also, about his father, a Baptist missionary preacher on the prairie of Iowa, in whose Sunday-school class, among other barefooted country boys, was John Forrest Dillon, afterward a United States judge, and now general counsel for the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Western Union Telegraph Company.

In the blood and birth of the youthful section hand, as will be seen, were the generic qualities which explain his management of 12,282 miles of railway carrying a large share of the immense commerce between Boston and New York in the East, and St. Louis and Chicago, the two giant gateways of the enormously rich empire in the West.

"Has rebating stopped?" I asked, starting the interview with a question which I hoped would open other matters of value and interest.

"Absolutely," Mr. Brown replied with emphasis. "The practice has become one of the unpleasant and obsolete customs of the past. Now as to the question in its historic aspect, the public should recollect that whenever the hand of a railroad went out with a rebate the hand of a shipper was extended to receive the rebate. The operation was mutual and simultaneous.

REBATES A NATURAL SEQUENCE.

"Eighty years ago there were no railways. The building of scattered and primitive roads once begun, it became, time, energy, and, all things considered, the most tremendous business movement in history. Old trades and professions have gradually formulated their codes of ethics. The builders and managers of railroads, pressing onward in their energy and marvelous development, did not disassociate themselves in their principles or their theories from other men of business. They failed to perceive at first the public character and obligation of their service. Rebates were demanded and given in conformity with one of the ancient and daily rules of buying and selling.

"A man, for instance, asked the price for transporting 1000 cars of wheat. He was given, in an honest belief that quantity should be considered, the wholesale price, which was less, of course, than the retail price, or the rate, for example, on a single car of wheat. In other words, the usual and understood standards governing the purchase of anything in large amounts were applied to transportation. Any tailor, I suppose, will give a discount if one buys three suits of clothes.

"However, during the evolution of the railroad business, convictions began to form in the minds of the men operating our transportation systems. Before a law of Congress made the matter plain it was coming to be understood that railways are not like stores and factories. A merchant through some personal idiosyncrasy or because he doesn't like the looks of a customer may refuse within his right to sell at any price, or he may double the price or cut it in two for some one else.

"Before any statutory definition was offered railroad officers realized that transportation companies were common carriers, and that all shippers, in sound morals and the principles of fair business, ought to be treated exactly alike; that wholesale prices and retail prices had neither an ethical nor a legal place in the hauling of freight. Furthermore, it was clear if the big companies and the big men were given preferential rates on their products, there would be no earthly opportunity for the growth of the little companies and the little men engaged in similar lines of business.

NOT OPPOSED TO LAW.

"The regulatory laws now on the Federal statute books are the expressions, therefore, of the enlightened spirit and knowledge of the day in which, and with which, I do not hesitate to say, railroad owners and managers and Legislators have shared and wrought alike in the interest of the people of the United States. The virtue and the patriotism of the nation, you understand, are never centered in any one particular class. As a matter of history, as well as justice, the public should get and hold the right idea concerning the genesis and evolution of the railroad question.

"In the noisy and unscrupulous campaign undertaken against railroad corporations by professional demagogues and muck-rakers the average man, busy with his own affairs, failed to remember that the transportation companies of the country are really the partners of every farmer and of every person engaged in business. If there were no railroads, it is self-evident there would be no prosperity in numberless interior regions which are now filled with highly profitable farms and thriving cities.

"When John Quincy Adams was President of the United States the cost of transporting freight from Buffalo to Albany, in the State of New York, was from $100 to $112 a ton. Land beyond the Allegheny Mountains was practically worthless. Grain and produce were without markets. I read a letter recently that was written by a farmer in Iowa as late as the year 1856. 'Wheat,' he said, 'must be hauled 110 miles to the river, and will bring only from 35 to 40 cents per bushel. The trip takes from eight to ten days, and is a hard one. Feed must be carried for the team and provender for the driver, in order to have anything left with which to buy sugar, coffee, salt, and the few articles which we must have. If tavern bills and feed for teams were counted, the expenses would more than eat up the load of wheat.'

TRIP TAKES NINETEEN DAYS.

"Sixty-seven years ago," Mr. Brown went on to say, "my father and mother emigrated from Herkimer county, N. Y., to Iowa. It took them seven days to go from Utica to Buffalo in a canal boat; the same journey can now be made on one of our fast trains in four hours and thirty-seven minutes. They were also seven days in going from Buffalo to Chicago, and five more days were spent in a lumber wagon going from Chicago to the forks of the Maquoketa River, in Iowa. I made practically the same trip this year in about twenty-four hours.

"The Erie Canal was the first important transportation enterprise of the East. It joined the Great Lakes with the Hudson River, and thus brought much of the country on this side of Chicago to the Atlantic Ocean. The price of transporting freight fell from about $100 per ton to about $14 a ton. In less than ten years five short railroads were built along the canal. Later they were consolidated and made into a through line. Within five years the consolidated road, crude and almost ridiculous when compared with the best railways of today, threatened to put the Erie Canal out of business. Indeed, serious efforts were made by a political party to compel the railroad to increase its rates for carrying freight. I have said in my public addresses that the average price of carrying a ton of freight from Buffalo to Albany is fifty times less than it was before the construction of the Erie Canal, and ten times less than it was by the canal before the five little railroads were made into a single and continuous line. The public must reflect upon such facts as I am giving for a full and accurate comprehension of the economic bearing of the railroads upon the lives of the American people.

"Thirty years after the completion of the Erie Canal corn and oats in Iowa sold at from 6 to 10 cents a bushel, and pork for 1 cent a pound. Nearly every farmer was in debt, and the Sheriff was a common visitor at the humble homes of the struggling pioneers. I remember that farmers in Northern Iowa, as late as 1860, hauled the products of their farms seventy-five miles to the village of McGregor, on the Mississippi River. When the bill was up in Congress donating land to the projectors of a railroad from Cairo to Chicago, it was stated by such men as Henry Clay, Stephen A. Douglas, and Thomas H. Benton that the lands had been on the market for twenty-three years at $1.25 an acre, but that no one wanted them at any price, because, as Clay and Douglas said, 'they are far distant from a market.' Benton called them refuse lands, and declared that in some instances they were 'jungles for wild beasts that prey upon the flocks and herds of the few scattered settlers.'

PAYS WELL FOR GRANTS.

"We still hear now and then," Mr. Brown continued to say, "about the iniquities involved in the early grants of lands to railroad corporations. The grant to the Illinois Central, favored by Clay, Douglas and Benton, amounted to 2,604,000 acres, and was valued at $3,250,000. In consideration of the grant the railroad was required to pay 7 per cent. of its gross earnings each year, for all time to come, into the treasury of the State of Illinois. Down to the year 1908 the total sum so paid was $27,000,000. The payment in 1907 alone was $1,200,000; in 1908 it was even more; this year it will be greater still, and the increase will continue with the growth of business until the end of time. I speak of land donations simply to show that they were willingly given, and that they were not only of immense benefit to the people because they made the building of railroads possible, but that the bargains of Congress were neither contrary to the rules of good business nor the public interest.

"Worthless lands, with the building of railroads, became valuable and, therefore, immediately salable. Oats in Iowa ceased to bring but 6 cents a bushel and pork was worth considerably more than a penny a pound. In the amazing development of the greatest country on the globe and in all history can be attributed very largely to a splendid system of railway transportation. Macaulay, the English historian and essayist, truly said that 'of all inventions, the alphabet and printing press alone excepted, those inventions that abridge distance have done most for the civilization of our species,' and no other instrumentality approaches the railroads in the abridging or annihilation of distance.

ALL IN ONE DAY.

"The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, as it is now called, was begun in 1852, the year before I was born. Practically, therefore, I and thousands of other men engaged in business have lived throughout the entire period of active railroad construction west of Chicago. We have seen the West unlocked and opened to the sea. Great cities, in our brief lives, have sprung up in many a trackless wilderness. The transportation interests, experimental and hazardous at first have become second only to agriculture in the number of men enployed. More than $1,000,000,000 is paid out each year in wages to the 1,700,000 employés of the railroads of the United States—a mighty host of intelligent men, equaling in number the combined standing armies of Germany, France, Great Britain, and Japan. The New York Central Lines, which had their beginning in the consolidation of the five little roads along the banks of the Erie Canal, employ 143,000 men, the earnings of whom amount to $100,110,000 a year. Our employés outnumber by 30,000 all the soldiers and sailors in the army and navy of the United States.

"The public should recollect, too, that $71 approximately, out of each $100 earned by the railroads is spent for labor or for equipment and material which are largely the the products of labor—$10 goes directly to the employés of the railroad. $8 is paid for fuel, oil, and water, $18 is paid for rails, ties, cars, engines, structural steel, and so on, and $5 is paid for additions to yards and tracks and for extensions of shops, roundhouses, and the like. Out of the $100 only $9 reaches the pockets of the owners or stockholders of the railroads, which, to state it in another way, is less than 4 per cent. interest on a fair value of their stock.

COST STILL GOING UP.

"Although the railroads are earning about $7,000,000 for each of the 365 days in the year," Mr. Brown said with much earnestness, "the problem of the constantly increasing cost of everything which enters into construction and operation is an extremely serious one. While everything the railroads are using is advancing in price, there has been no corresponding increase in the charge for transportation. In the ten years between 1897 and 1907 fuel increased 38 per cent, in price; ties, 76 per cent; steel rails, 47 per cent; cast iron wheels, 39 per cent; bridge timber, 77 per cent; car axles, 41 per cent; locomotives, 50 per cent; cars, 72 per cent., and labor about 30 per cent.

"On the price basis of 1897 the railroads in 1907 would have spent $176,500,000 less for material used in operation and maintenance, $254,000,000 less for labor, and $219,100,000 less for cars, locomotives, rails, ties, etc. In the meantime freight rates on 897 articles have been increased, it is true, but the rates on 876 articles have been decreased, the net result in money being a reduction of about 11 per cent. to the profit of the public and consequently to the loss of the railroads.

"Do you know," Mr. Brown asked, "that railroad transportation is 40 per cent. cheaper here than anywhere else in the world, but that the wages of the employés are 50 per cent. higher than in any other country where railroads are in operation?

"While political demagogues and the editors of sensational publications have been violently attacking the credit and integrity of railway corporations, the men who are responsible for the management of our great transportation systems have been walking the floors by day and lying awake at night in an attempt to solve the problem of increased expenses and decreased net revenues. In my opinion the limit has been reached, east of Chicago, in cheapening the cost of operation. Locomotives, it seems to me, are as powerful as they ever will be. Cars cannot be made much, if any, larger than those already in use. Curves have been eliminated and grades have been reduced.

MILLIONS MORE NEEDED.

"Furthermore, the future loudly calls for the expenditure of hundreds of millions in extensions, new equipment and other improved facilities. Economists tell us that the freight traffic of the United States is doubled every ten years. Mr. James J. Hill, one of the ablest business men in the world, has said that the railroads need one billion of new money a year for five years in order to prepare adequately to meet the demands which are sure to be made upon them. Within the decade and a half between 1892 and 1907 the population increased almost 21,000,000. More than 50,000 miles of railroads were constructed. The production of pig iron, to get at a vital and illustrative fact, jumped 181 per cent., while the increase in steel was 374 per cent. And yet in that period we passed through a severe business panic and argued and rightly settled the free silver question.

"I am not an unreasonable optimist concerning the future growth of the country," Mr. Brown went on to say. "It is my business to be informed about present conditions and to try and look ahead. I have lived in the West nearly all my life and have given considerable time to the study of irrigation and agriculture. Millions of acres of dry lands are to get water. Tremendous crops, starting in their aggregate, could we but know the figures, are to be grown in new and fertile regions. Towns are to be built in the deserts and some of them will develop into great cities.

LAND TO BE MORE PRODUCTIVE.

"Our farmers, especially in the South and West, are to learn how immensely to increase the productiveness of their land. Scientific agriculture is to displace careless methods and soil destruction. Relatively few persons are aware that while the average yield of wheat in the United States is fourteen bushels to the acre, it is thirty-two bushels in England, twenty-eight bushels in Germany, twenty bushels in France, and thirty-four bushels in the Netherlands. Our average of potatoes is eighty-five bushels to the acre. Germany, Great Britain and Belgium get 250 bushels. The American corn crop, large as it has been, can be multiplied by two. I own a farm of 400 acres in Iowa and I speak from personal knowledge with respect to corn, at least.

Now all the record-breaking crops, all the increased manufactures, and all the products of the mines and forests of the future must be taken to markets in the interior or on the seaboard by our railroad. In 1907 the 225,000 miles of railroads in the United States could not promptly move the traffic of the country. Every mill, mine, and factory was in operation, every wholesale merchant had more orders than he could fill, every workingman was in a place of employment, and every railroad was being driven to its utmost capacity. I recall the events of that year, for two purposes: First, to show the inability of the railroads to do the transportation business of the country with their present facilities in times of great and general prosperity; and, second, to call attention to the effect of an unjust, unnecessary, and highly injurious campaign against railway and other corporations.

EVIL RESULT OF ATTACK.

"The loaded cars waiting to be moved became empty cars—400,000 of them stood in silent yards or on rusty sidetracks. Thousands of locomotives, their fires out, were idle in engine houses. Mills and factories and mines were closed or working on reduced time. The shadow of poverty fell upon thousands of American homes."

"But," I said to Mr. Brown, "you do not mean to be understood as opposing governmental regulation of railroads?"

"By no means," he replied. "In my opinion it is not only right, but the duty of the Federal government and the several States to regulate and control the corporations they create, not in malice, or anger, or the spirit of vengeance, but with wisdom, fairness, and I may add, patriotism. The railroads, as I have attempted to point out in my desultory talk with you, are very necessary to the country, have contributed vastly to the general welfare, and are now confronted by grave problems of their own—problems which touch the life of every citizen. It would seem to me that having brought on one disastrous panic the demagogues and muckrakers should no longer be permitted to form public opinion or to influence official action."

Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips."

Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

will open at the annual International and this is con- point as fully to Chicago every year when the prize cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are on display. With the double attraction this season, it will be possible for any one visiting Chicago to see in condensed form much of what the West and South have to offer.

INTEREST KEEN.

Interest to colonization has perhaps never been as keen as today, and the desire to take advantage of the agricultural possibilities that are offered has resulted in an extraordinary display of "land hunger" on the part of the general public. Many of those in the Middle West who are displaying this anxiety to join the movement back to the soil realise that they lack accurate knowledge of the problems of irrigation, dry farming and the drainage of overflowed lands. Much information along these lines will be obtainable at the exposition.

HOME INSTINCT STRONG.

The home instinct is strong with the American people. Sometimes this instinct is overruled and the possessor thereof lives for years in a tiny, ill-ventilated flat, or exhausts his vitality in an office; but the feeling is there, nevertheless, and some day the craving for freedom and a place that can be called "home" will win the mastery.

These men will be shown what Nature offers to the one who wishes to make a home for himself. Practically every part of the West and South, of consequence from the agricultural point of view, will be represented by attractive displays and views. Final arrangements have about been completed, and it is practically certain that the splendid exhibits made at Seattle by various departments of the government will be dropped off at Chicago on the way back to Washington. The date has been set so that this can be done easily.

The government exhibits are of the greatest interest to the farmer and the stockmen. One of the finest displays is to be made by the Reclamation Service. Models of various projects are to be shown. Dams and canals will be seen in miniature, charts will explain details of the construction work and well arranged displays will show what can be produced from fertile soil by means of irrigation. This, therefore, will be a rare opportunity to study details of the work of the Reclamation Service and the first to be offered people of the Middle West. In addition to the displays there will be lectures that will include private projects, as well as those deveoped under direction of government officials.

GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBITS.

The Department of Agriculture is to display an unusually complete set of models, transparencies, slides, photographs, etc.

What the Bureau of Plant Industry has done and is doing will be evidenced by rare plants, trees and grains never before seen in America. These things have been found in remote spots of the old world and are now being developed for the benefit of the farmers.

The Bureau of Entomology will exhibit enlarged models of insects as well as a large collection of specimens both injurious and beneficial to crops.

The government will be given all of the space necessary to show these exhibits to the best advantage.

Makers of appliances and machinery for the farm will have attractive exhibits. In addition there will be seen the special machinery needed in building and maintaining irrigation projects. The picturesque operation of growing wheat by wholesale on the great stretches of Montana is to be shown. The present plan of using large traction engines is comparatively new and will be a revelation even to the most experienced farmers of the Middle West.

The exposition has an advisory committee consisting of: Edmund T. Perkins, enginer in charge U.S. Reclamation Service, Darius Miller, first vice president, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway Company; E. O. McCormick, assistant traffic director, Union Pacific Railway Company, George T. Nicholson, third vice-president, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway Company; J. H. Hiland, third vice-president, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company; John Sebastian, passenger traffic manager, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company; Frank I. Bennett, president Bitter Root District Irrigation Company; D. R. Niver, Trowbridge & Niver, bankers; James Keeley, managing editor Chicago Tribune; Harrison M. Parker, business manager Chicago Tribune.

In addition there is a Promotion Committee with the following members: J. C. Waite, U.S. Reclamation Service; E. A. Abbott, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway Company; Max Bass, Great Northern Railway Company; George De Haven, Union Pacific Railway Company; George B. Haynes, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company; Louis Larson, Florida East Coast Railway Company; C. A. Matthews, Northern Pacific Railway Company; C. L. Seagraves, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway Company; C. B. Schmidt, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company; F. K. George, Pere Marquette System, and Robert P. Cross, secretary of United States Land and Irrigation Exposition, whose office as at No. 115 Adams street, Chicago, for the transaction of necessary business.

Notable service in promoting the interests of the exposition is being rendered by Frederic H. Griswold, assistant secretary of the seventeenth National Irrigation Congress.

Neglected Native Vegetables.

It is a pity that our native vegetables are so neglected nowadays, when we search the world for new dishes. Many of our wild plants are largely used as salads and pot-herbs in other countries, but only the gypsies and a few cottagers ever dream of eating the "greens" and sweet herbs of the fields, nedgerows and seashore.—[London Country Side

RUSTEM BEY RETURNS TO OLD DIPLOMATIC FIELD.

Commander D. Vassiliefe, A. Rustem Bey

NEW YORK, July 2.—A. Rustem Bey, recently made counsellor of the Turkish embassy in Washington by the new Turkish government, arrived on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie of the North German Lloyd line, and left immediately for his post. On the same steamship was Commander D. Vassilieff, the new naval attaché to the Russian embassy.

Rustem Bey is no stranger in Washington, for he was there ten years ago as secretary of legation. Soon after he left here he got into trouble with the Porte because of articles of his published in an English newspaper which antedated the Turkish revolution so far that they were considered treasonable.

SATAN'S PHOTOGRAPH.

Found in the Shoshone Valley Known to Be Ten Thousand Years Old.

The oldest picture of Satan has been found on the Badwater River, in the Shoshone Valley, Wyoming. It is known to have been made 10,000 years ago, at least, and it is probable that it was fashioned fully 50,000 years ago.

The picture—or the pictograph, as it called by the discoverer—was unearthed by Assistant Curator H. I. Smith of the American Museum of Natural History.

It is a wonderful find, for it shows that the men who existed on this continent long before the history of the Jews began had a conception of an evil spirit, and this leads to the thought that the same men had an idea of a good spirit and meditated upon the influence these had upon human beings.

The pictograph was carved in rock and shows the ravages of the elements upon it for centuries. The work of the prehistoric artist is still visible, however.

The figure shown is that of a dwarfish figure, very demoniacal in appearance, standing in an attitude of menace. It is undoubtedly the artist's idea of the same evil spirit which men now call Satan, which the Persians called Ahriman, and which the Greeks knew as Diabolos.

It is known positively that the carving is not that of the Indian tribes of later times, for the marks of the elements are sufficient proofs to disprove this idea, were it put forward.—[Exchange.

STORY-WRITER WHO LIVES LIKE A FIGHTING-COCK.

Marcel Prevost, Novelist and French Academician, Is a Sybarite—Fattens His Own Ortolans and His Favorite Dessert Takes Twenty-four Hours to Prepare. G. K. Chesterton Looks Like Dr. Johnson.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 23.—Marcel Prevost, the French novelist and new "Immortal," grows more interesting the more one hears about him. Whether or no a member of the French Academy is required to entertain his fellow big-wigs at table I am unable to say, but it can be prophesied that if the other academicians ever dine with the latest addition to their number, they will "fare sumptuously" and no mistake. By his own confession, the author of "Letters to Francois," is one of the greatest sybarites in France. Like Dumas' hero D'Artagnan, Prevost is a Gascon and he declares that it is "only in Gascony that one knows how to dine."

This novelist's habitual menu would make Lucullus turn green with envy. He likes ortolans, but "they must have been fattened for six months in a cage in my own house." Even his "plainest" repasts are prepared with infinite pains. A certain "estouffade de boeuf" seems a simple dish, but it "must have simmered slowly for two days." Roast saddle of lamb sounds equally simple fare, but when M. Prevost has it at home he will eat only lamb that has been brought up since birth by two ewes, "devoted entirely to the service of that one lamb." One of his favorite sweet dishes is compounded merely of milk, eggs, sugar and vanilla, but "it takes exactly twenty-four hours in the making." The novelist's cook is a stout matron from Gascony, and he despises men chefs, especially Parisians.

Really, an invitation to dine with Prevost is not a thing to be refused lightly.

In physiognomy and portliness, not to mention an almost entire disregard of such small matters as dress and personal appearance, I doubt if there is another modern writer who so greatly resembles the late Dr. Johnson as does G. K. Chesterton, author of "The Man Who Was Thursday," and "The Napoleon of Notting Hill," and just about the most brilliant essayist of the day. I have often encountered Chesterton sweeping along Henrietta street toward his publisher's, ruddy of face, preoccupied in expression, vast of bulk, broad-brimmed felt hat crammed over his mane of tawny hair, clad in a sort of yellowy-brown "great-coat" with a cape, a mass of manuscripts and quarterly reviews under his arm, and said to myself "Johnson at 45, to the life."

Now, in the London "Mail's" description of the English Church Pageant, I read: "Many inquiries have been made as to the identity of the performer who so admirably represents Dr. Johnson. It is Mr. G. K. Chesterton."

Johnson, though fat, was notoriously grouchy; Chesterton is a humorist who sees things almost as topsy-turvily as does W. S. Gilbert, and who shakes with laughter as he talks to you. He and a fellow-author were at a table near mine in a restaurant lately and the Chesterton guffaws, like those of Porthos, literally made the windows rattle. At this time there was nothing glaringly amiss with his attire, but his "get up" at a certain evening reception at his flat in Battersea never will be forgotten by at least one who beheld it. Chesterton wore a dinner jacket—or Tuxedo—which was well enough, though not according to Hoyle. He wore it, however, with a brown vest and trousers of the same color, and I fear that his necktie was red. It was not exactly what the lady-novelist calls "faultless evening dress." But he talked gorgeously—absolutely wrong in his arguments, perhaps, but absolutely brilliant and overwhelming in his presentation of them. And roaring at his own sallies.

As every one who has read his self-illustrated "Club of Queer Trades" knows, Chesterton, like Gilbert again, has a wonderful knack of drawing queer-looking people, generally with big heads and little bodies, like those in the "Bab Ballads." While I interviewed him once, he sat and produced these monstrosities. He is steeped in the lore of philosophers, theologians and all sorts of profound writers, but my arrival found him immersed in a "penny dreadful" called "The Blood-Red Mask," or something of that kind. Nor did he thrust it aside, shamefacedly. Instead, he confessed that he revels in detective stories and declared that, as he could not get good ones, nowadays, he was forced to put up with bad. In the "Club of Queer Trades," he demonstrates that he could write "bully" ones himself, although, characteristically, every one of them had a more or less farcial ending.

I notice that a leading American magazine is publishing a series of articles by Chesterton, whose work in this line is unique. On the few occasions when he and Bernard Shaw have crossed foils it is not Chesterton who has got the worst of it. He now is "doing" the "Note Book" in the "Illustrated London News"—which, up to the time of his death was written by the late L. F. Austin—and this week's commentary is characteristically Chestertonian. The writer is chaffing his country on all the pother that was made recently lest a painting by Holbein, property of the Duke of Norfolk valued at over $300,000, and alleged to be coveted by an unnamed American millionaire, should be "lost to England." Says Chesterton:

"There is a law in Italy forbidding people to sell to foreigners those pictures which are the eternal glory of the Italian genius. But there is in England not only no such law, but no such public sentiment. The Duke of Norfolk's Holbein no more belonged to England than the Duke of Norfolk's umbrella. There might very possibly be an American millionaire of so mystical a type of servility that he would be willing to pay $300,000 for the Duke of Norfolk's umbrella. In that case, as a purely business question, I should recommend the Duke to close with the offer.

"And I should think it rather unreasonable if the English papers placarded London with posters saying, 'Duke's Umbrella in Danger—Can We Save Duke's Umbrella—Umbrella Almost Gone—Eleventh-Hour Rescue of Ducal Umbrella.' I should begin to examine myself for emotions which would not be there. I should begin to remind myself that, until the newspaper boom began, I had not even been aware that the Duke had an umbrella. There would be a slight element of unreality, not to say humbug, in describing me as so particularly attached to the umbrella. It may be a very nice one; but so far it has been the Duke's, and not mine. I had never heard of it until the moment when the American gentleman was mysteriously moved to ask for it. That is often the fate of the great private picture in this country. It is hidden, like the family curse. It is never found till it is just going to be lost."

Most American visitors to the Lake of Geneva, go to see, if not to stop at, the hotel at Ouchy where Byron wrote his "Prisoner of Chilton." Henceforth, travelers will have no difficulty in identifying it, for the facade of the old hostelry—the "Hotel d'Angleterre" has just been marked with a plaque stating that Byron stayed there. The poet took refuge at the hotel, then known as the Hotel de l'Ancre, owing to bad weather, while on a voyage on his yacht round the lake. Thus weather-bound, he wrote his famous poem.

Should this note meet the eye of Anthony Comstock, that indefatigable defender of morality in the United States is adjured to "watch out" for Gabriele d'Annunzio's forthcoming novel. D'Annunzio's "Triumph of Death," it may be remembered, started Mr. Comstock on the war path directly he had read it, and from all accounts the Italian novelist's new work, which is to be called "Perhaps Yes; Perhaps No," will go his earlier work several better or worse. D'Annunzio, who has been devoting himself to the stage, has not written a novel for eleven years, but now he is going to make up for lost time. The theme of his new romance is to be the Eternal Passion and D'Annunzio has told an interviewer that in it he will "speak of love with complete expressions, profoundly, without pity, justly, and with courage; with that courage of expression which seems in me a quality even superior to my intelligence." Judging from his other books, if D'Annunzio requires courage to put what he now has to say on paper, it certainly is up to Anthony Comstock to be on the lookout for "Perhaps Yes; Perhaps No."

Continuing on the same subject, D'Annunzio said:

"I do not know whether you have noticed how incompatible the heroic forms of modern civilization, sports, are with love. The contempt of women is the vital condition of the modern hero, just as the contempt of men is that of the latter-day heroine.

"A beautiful shoulder with which we are in love becomes at once immense; it takes the proportions of the Himalayas, obliterating the horizon, that horizon, great and free, into which modern life throws itself. In this book I shall study the young girl, and the work will interest the young, I cannot say whether as a consolation or as a despair."

The Bulldog's Picnic.

A Boston bulldog, owned by George H. Clapp, was so determined to capture a woodchuck which he had chased into its den that he followed after and stayed in the hole all Thursday night.

When the dog got his jaws about the enemy he found that he could not get out, owing to the small size of the animal's hole.

Rather than lose his prey the dog retained his hold on the woodchuck over night, and was helped out by his master in the morning. The dog was nearly exhausted, and revived after feeding and drinking in a curious manner.

He consumed about two quarts of unguarded ice cream which had been set aside for a party. After that the dog seemed still somewhat dazed and capped the climax by falling into a bucket of lemonade.—[Worcester Telegram.

LOVE THE CRIMINAL.

A SUNDAY SERIAL OF UNBROKEN INTEREST.

CHAPTER III.

ON THE ALTAR OF LOVE.

For more than an hour Laura Vane sat before the fire, aching under the blow that had fallen upon her. Her fine, sensitive nature shrank from the truth. But the sturdy courage she had inherited from a long line of clean-living yeomen gave her the strength to face the situation. Mentally her back was against the wall, and her womanly nature was up in arms to do battle for the man she loved. Excuses for his conduct were ready to her hand, and she flung them one after the other against the stern, immovable fact of his sin.

In argument she was worsted. The truth remained unshaken. John Shil had killed Ben Holland. Yet what woman cares for argument? All her feelings were enlisted on the side of her lover, and she flung defiance in the face of truth. Yet, strange as it may seem, she could not face the judgment of men. Her only fear was that the world might know the facts, and that John Shil might be brought to the bar of human justice.

This battle with her own conscience was interrupted by another knock on the hall door; there was an imperious voice in answer to a woman's protest, and then, a few seconds later, a man flung himself unceremoniously into the room and closed the door behind him.

Laura Vane rose to her feet with flaming cheeks and angry eyes. The man advanced toward her with an air of easy assurance, and held out his hand.

"Good evening, Miss Vane," he said, coolly. "Surely you will not refuse the hand of an old friend—of one who wishes, and has always wished, you well." He paused and smiled with the air of a man who holds the best cards in a game of chance.

"What is the meaning of this intrusion, Mr. Tankerlane?" she cried, stung for the moment out of her self-possession. "How dare you come here, after—after—— But, thank heaven, I am not without friends. You shall pay for this insult—this impertinence."

"I am willing to pay anything for the pleasure of seeing you, Laura," he replied. "Every day seems to add a fresh beauty to your loveliness, a fresh charm to your character."

"Are you going to leave the room, Mr. Tankerlane?" she answered, quietly, "or shall I have to ring the bell, and get some of the farm hands to throw you out?"

"I am afraid, Laura," he said, politely, "that you would find some difficulty in persuading them to obey your instructions. My father might object."

"Your father," she replied, calmly, "is an honorable gentleman, and you——" She did not finish the sentence, but it was effectively completed by the contemptuous look in her eyes.

Yet outwardly William Tankerlane was no mark for the contempt of a woman. He was tall and athletic, and his clean-shaven, handsome face bore the stamp of high birth and a fine intellect. Here was no ordinary young rake, given up to wine and women, but a man who could think and act. Only the lower part of his face betrayed the sensuality of his soul within. The mouth and chin told their own story. They spoke of vice, without the excuse which vice can find in weakness, and of strength, without the sense of morality which alone makes strength a virtue in a man.

He looked at her for a few moments with a faint smile on his lips. Then he walked over to the door, opened it, and looked out into the empty hall. Apparently satisfied with the result of his inspection, he closed the door, and returned to within a few feet of Laura Vane.

"Now, look here, Laura," he said, quietly, "I have no time for a quarrel; I have come to see you on important business. You are a sensible woman, and must listen to what I have to say to you."

For reply she turned her back on him, and a faint flush came into his lean, hard face. But he came closer to her and leaned over her, so that his chin almost touched her hair.

"Are you going to listen to me, Laura?" he said, in a low, steady voice, "or shall I go straight from this room to the police and tell them that I saw John Shil murder a man in the Round Plantation this evening?"

She whipped round on him, and sprang back with a white face and terror in her eyes.

"You lie!" she cried, fiercely. "It was an accident. You lie. I tell you, you lie! You know it was an accident, you know——" She stopped, seeing the fatal mistake she had made. William Tankerlane smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"I see you know all about it," he said. "John Shil has told you his own story. I do not wish to harp on so painful a subject, but as my own narrative will probably differ somewhat from his, I think it is my duty to tell you what actually occurred."

"You may tell me what you please," she replied, slowly. "I know the truth."

In a few words, simply, without lie or exaggeration, William Tankerlane told the truth. Save that he spoke as a mere spectator, and that feelings and motives had no part in his story, his account differed in no wise from that which had been given by John Shil.

And, as the girl listened to his calm and judicial narrative, her heart sank within her. She could have met a lie with scorn and contempt. But here was the truth, seen by other eyes, reviewed as other men would view it. It was terrible and damning, as told by the lips of William Tankerlane. And he, subtle man that he was, knew that the very strength of his position depended on this strict adherence to the truth.

"Well, Laura," he said, when he had finished his short narrative, "what do you think of it all? I suppose you do not believe me."

"I believe you," she said, quietly. "But I should like to ask you one question. Why did you not come to the rescue of Ben Holland, when he hung between life and death?"

"I might have shared the same fate," he said. "I am but a child in the hands of John Shil."

"Tell me the truth," she exclaimed, sharply. "I know well enough that you are not a coward where physical danger is concerned. Why did you not come to the rescue of Ben Holland?"

"Because I love you," he replied, "and because that brutal ruffian insulted you. I was glad to see him die."

She laughed, scornfully and looked into his dark eyes.

"Ben Holland's insult," she said, "was small compared to that you offered me two months ago. My good name is nothing to you. Tell me the truth! Tell me why you did not interfere, why you watched, why you——" She stopped and looked steadily into his eyes. Then, as the truth dawned upon her, the fury died from her face and she stood very white and still. The man gazed at her unflinchingly.

"I see," she said, slowly, after a long silence. "I understand. John Shil is in your hands, and—you do not love John Shil."

A faint smile crossed Tankerlane's hard face, and then a sudden storm of passion swept across it; a hot flush came into his cheeks, the veins stood out on his forehead, his eyes glowed with a fierce fire. He strode up to the woman and gripped her by the shoulders.

"Laura," he said, passionately, "you know that I love you, that I long for you, that I hunger for you as a starving man hungers for bread. And, by heaven, I mean to have you. Now do you understand why I did not interfere to save Ben Holland's life?"

She did not answer him, but she broke away from the grasp of his fingers, and looked at him as she might have looked at a dangerous beast. Fear, contempt, loathing were all written on her face.

"I have reason to hate John Shil," the man continued, "but my hatred for him is a poor thing compared to my love for you. It is because I love you, and because I intend to make you mine, and because I am ready to sacrifice all scruples to accomplish my desire, that I let John Shil place his liberty, perhaps even his life, in my hands. I have spoken plainly, for the matter requires plain speaking. Do you understand me, Laura?"

"I understand you," she replied, almost in a whisper. "If I do not consent, you will tell what you know. If I do consent, you will be silent."

He nodded, and came toward her with outstretched hands. She did not move till his face was close to hers. Then she stepped back, and struck him across the mouth with all her strength.

"That is my answer to you," she cried.

William Tankerlane did not speak, nor move from the place on which he stood. He quietly took a handkerchief from his pocket and pressed it to his lips. Then, as he caught sight of the girl's knuckles, he smiled.

"I am afraid you have hurt yourself," he said gently, after a pause.

She turned away from him and pressed her hands to her face. She uttered no sound, but he knew that she was crying. He came to her side.

"Laura," he said tenderly, "I am a clumsy brute. I am afraid I did not make myself clear to you just now. I honor you for the blow you have struck me. It was natural that you should have misunderstood me. Two months ago I—but forget that, Laura. Since then you have taught me how strong a good woman can be. When I spoke to you just now I did not wish you—I did not intend to insult you. I meant that I wished you to be my wife."

The girl turned to him with frightened eyes.

"Your wife," she repeated mechanically, as though the word had opened up a new train of thought, and she was yet uncertain whither it tended. "Your wife, Mr. Tankerlane?"

"My wife," he repeated simply. "It will be an honor for me, and—and I love you, Laura."

She was silent. The whole matter had to be approached from a different standpoint. The man, subtle schemer that he was, had armed himself with a new and powerful weapon. An offer of marriage from the heir of the Tankerlane estates could hardly be treated as an insult. And, if it so happened that a price had to be paid for the life or liberty of the man she loved, this was at least one that could be paid without dishonor.

"Then you mean," she faltered after a long silence; "you mean that, if I refuse to marry you—"

"Precisely, Laura," he replied. "We understand each other."

"I must have time," she said in a low voice—"time to think. Have you thought of the consequences, Mr. Tankerlane? Have you thought of what it means to be tied for life to a woman who—who loathes you?"

He winced slightly at her words, but he was a man who cared little for the consequences of his actions.

"I will take the risk," he answered with a smile. "And I will give you till 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to decide. Good night."

He held out his hand, but she turned her back on him, and he left the room.

Laura Vane stood alone in the firelight, face to face with the problem of her life.

She had come to the parting of the ways. Two roads lay before her, both steep, perilous, strewn with thorns and sharp stones; both hard to tread and lost in the darkness of futurity, for though she plainly saw the misery and shame that lay at the beginning of her journey, she could not even guess what might be at the end of it.

Yet this much she knew, that whichever path she chose, she must tread it to the end alone.

She sank on her knees before the fire, and stared into the glowing embers, as though she might find some vision of the future in the caverns of red light. The flames had died away from the logs, and only a dull red glow illuminated her beautiful face. Dark shadows lay in the corners of the room, and her own image, gigantic and distorted, was thrown athwart the ceiling like a thunder-cloud.

Laura Vane had come to the parting of the ways, and she could not decide which road to take, yet the decision had to be made within the next few hours. The problem was acute and fraught with many difficulties. The consequences of her decision would be far-reaching, and the ultimate result could not possibly be foreseen.

She did not count herself in the matter. She was prepared to sacrifice all the happiness of her life to save her lover from the consequences of his crime. The long weary years of bondage to a man she disliked, the shame of selling her body for a price, the degradation of mind and soul which must inevitably accompany such a union, all these were nothing compared to the safety of the man she loved. On this one point, at any rate, her mind was clear. If it was best to make the sacrifice, she would make it, and not reckon up the cost she would have to pay.

But the problem before her was more than a question of self-sacrifice. It was not at all clear to her as yet that her marriage to William Tankerlane would be of any real advantage to John Shil. The matter resolved itself into a choice of evils. On the one hand, her lover would lose his liberty, perhaps even his life, and whether he lived or died, his name would be dishonored for all time. On the other hand, he would lose the woman he loved, and would stand no cleaner in the eyes of his God.

And she had to decide the problem without help or counsel from any living soul. No other person could know the shame of her secret, and least of all could she seek guidance from the one man to whom a woman turns in the hour of her trial. For John Shil's judgment would be certain and inevitable. He would face the gallows rather than let her do this thing for his sake.

And so Laura Vane was left to decide her fate alone. She was a religious woman, but in this matter God seemed to have gone out of her life. In vain she tried to persuade herself that she ought to obey the dictates of her conscience, and that it was the duty of a Christian woman to serve the cause of truth. In vain she told herself that the man's crime would still stand naked before the eyes of his Maker. She knew well enough the right from the wrong; but in that hour she blinded her eyes, and stopped her ears, and stifled the still small voice that cried out to her. The man she loved was in peril, and that fact blotted out everything else from her mental horizon save the thought that, if she saved him, she must be lost to him for ever.

And then again a more worldly voice whispered in her ear. "Perhaps he will be acquitted. There is but the evidence of one man, and that man an avowed enemy. The blow was struck under great provocation, in defense of a woman's good name. At the worst there will be a verdict of manslaughter." The voice spoke calmly and logically, but it grew very faint as fear gripped her heart. Even the remote possibility of a conviction was a thing too terrible to contemplate. She knew well enough that innocent men had sometimes been condemned to death, and John Shil was certainly not an innocent man.

She was deaf alike to the voice of conscience and reason, and there only remained a single thought to combat the half-formed resolution in her brain. Would her marriage to William Tankerlane be of real benefit to John Shil, or would the loss of her be more terrible for him to bear than shame, or degradation, or death itself? These were the questions she asked herself again and again; and she could find no definite answer to them.

The neglected fire burnt down to a heap of gray ashes and half-consumed logs of wood. A few patches of dull red light still glowed in the embers, but the room was almost in total darkness. The shadows on the ceiling had died away, for the whole apartment was itself one deep blur of shadow. Her face was scarcely visible—a mere patch of white against the blackness.

And there in the silence and the darkness a young girl, on the threshold of life, with a great love in her strong, simple heart, and with all the world opening out before her like some gorgeous flower, resolved to sacrifice her mind, her body, perhaps even her very soul, lest harm should come to the man she loved. Such is the love of women, foolish and illogical perhaps, but stronger than death, and set on a height to which no man dare lift his eyes.

CHAPTER IV.

THE COURAGE OF DESPAIR.

The next morning Mr. William Tankerlane called and received his answer.

"I have decided to marry you," said the girl quietly. "It is the least of two evils, and I must accept it. Your own common sense will tell you how much happiness is likely to result from such a union—either for me or you."

"I am prepared to take the risk," he replied firmly, "and you know I love you. Do not judge me hardly, Laura; I know that I am driving a hard bargain, but I would do worse things than that to gain you. Do you realise what love means, how it grips the soul, how it fires the mind to madness, how it stifles conscience and drives men to do that which honor forbids them to do? Do you understand that it is an angel with a flaming sword?"

"I understand," she said slowly, "what love means." She spoke very quietly, and there was not even a tinge of passion or bitterness in her voice. Her face was pale, but, save for its exceeding whiteness, it bore no traces of the storm that had wrecked her life. Yet, for all that, both face and voice told William Tankerlane that she knew the true meaning of a great love, and that it was, of very truth, an angel with a flaming sword.

He moved slightly towards her, with passion burning in his eyes, and with outstretched hands, as though he would take her in his arms. But she shrank back from him.

"I will marry you," she repeated coldly, as though discussing a matter of business, "but only on this condition—that the marriage is kept a secret, and that no one, and least of all John Shil, shall know of it until a year after it has taken place."

A sudden gleam came into the man's eyes, and a look of relief flashed across his face. Both were momentary, and escaped the notice of the girl. She did not know that William Tankerlane, for a very different reason, had been about to make the very same proposition.

"It is a reasonable condition," he answered after a slight pause, "and I will agree to it. I quite understand that you do not wish John Shil to know. I would suggest that we should be married in London."

"Yes, London will do," she said; "and now you must swear to say nothing of what you saw yesterday afternoon in the Round Plantation. Here is a Bible; I know you are not a religious man, but I think you will appreciate the solemnity of the oath."

He took the sacred book from her hand, pressed his lips to it, and swore the oath, adding as a rider the words, "I swear to do this so long as you agree to live with me."

The girl's white face flushed.

"I did not agree to any such condition," she said sharply.

"No," he replied, "but it is a necessary condition. You might leave me at the church door and refuse to live with me as my wife. That would be a poor reward for my silence."

"Very well," she exclaimed, "let it be so. I will meet you in London in a few weeks' time, if you will fix an hour and place."

He arranged the hour and the place, and then, fumbling unsteadily in his pockets, he drew out four £5 notes.

"You will want money," he said brusquely.

"I do not want your money," she replied calmly.

He thrust back the notes into his pocket, and held out his hand. She shook her head sadly and turned away from him. She displayed neither anger nor contempt in her refusal to take his hand. It almost seemed as though her spirit had been crushed by the blow that had fallen upon her life. The man was equally calm, and accepted the insult with good grace. But he had conquered, and it is easy for the victor to be gracious.

"They have not yet found the body of Ben Holland," he said, in a low voice, and with these words he left the room.

An hour afterwards Laura Vane had climbed to the summit of the Stonewold Hills. She had ascended by a path which lay to the south of the road in which John Shil had encountered Bel Holland, and had reached a point nearly two miles to the southwest of Laverstone.

Shortly after William Tankerlane's departure, she had fled from her father's home, as from a prison, foul with the memories of what had passed within its walls. As a rule she worked hard all the morning, but now the course of her life had been changed. In a few hours that life had been snapped into two parts, and the new section of it had been divided from the old by a gulf which could never be crossed. She had sought relief from the shock and crash of the disaster in sheer physical exercise. She had climbed a thousand feet without pause, and now, flushed and panting with exertion, she stood with her back against a gate, and looked out across the valley of the Steyne.

It was a bright, sunny morning, and all the wide panorama beneath her sparkled with light. The breath of frost was in the air, and the white kiss of it still lingered on the trees and grass which the sun had not yet reached. A faint mist, drawn out of the ground by the warmth, hung over the more distant parts of the scene, and the great base of the hills which bounded the far side of the valley were invisible. Only their summits stood out clear in the sunlight, like islands in a sea of vapor.

The little village of Laverstone, gray and quiet, nestled among the bare trees at the foot of the hills. The smoke from the chimneys rose in straight, thin blue lines into the still atmosphere. It was a peaceful scene, a perfect picture of the quiet content of country life. But Laura Vane found no peace in the contemplation of it. For in the last twenty-four hours she had learned that the quiet village, set under the clear sky, may hold the elements of as grim a tragedy as was ever enacted in the seething darkness of a great city, and that, wherever men and women congregate, there are lust and cruelty and shame.

Her meditations were interrupted by the distant beat of a horse's hoofs on the hard ground. A few minutes later a rider appeared around a bend in the bridle path. She saw at a glance that it was John Shil, and that he was riding furiously.

He drew rein on the other side of the gate and flung himself from his horse. The animal's jaws were white with foam, and the man himself was sweating profusely; but in spite of his exertion his face was very pale. It seemed to Laura Vane that he had aged in the night.

"I called at your house," he said hurriedly; "they told me you had gone for a walk into the hills. I followed you here, for I knew you would not go up by the other path. I have been thinking things over in the night; I have much to say to you."

"I, too, have been thinking things over in the night," the girl replied slowly.

"I must leave here," he continued breathlessly, "but not at once—that would arouse suspicion—but as soon as possible. I can get work elsewhere. I have some money saved up. I must leave; the place is like a prison to me. They have just brought in the body of Ben Holland. I passed them in the street; I had to stop and ask what had happened. They showed me his face; the eyes were still open, the look in them—oh, God, I cannot stay here, I must go. You must see that I must go."

"Yes," she replied, averting her face, "I think it will be best for you to go."

"I can start life elsewhere," he said fiercely, "in a new country perhaps. But I cannot breathe the air of this place. I wished to tell you this at once, and to ask if you will marry me within the next month, unless—unless anything should happen at the inquest tomorrow."

She was silent, and looking out across the valley of the Steyne, she prayed silently for strength to carry out her purpose.

"Will you marry me, Laura?" he repeated, laying his hand on her shoulder. "You know what I am. I have told you all. You did not shrink from me then. You spoke brave words of comfort. I thought that perhaps you had forgiven me, and that—Laura, for God's sake answer me!"

But still the woman was silent. She had not the courage to speak the words that would have to be spoken; to tell the lie that would have to be told.

"Laura," he cried, "you do not mean—you cannot mean that." He gripped her hard by the shoulders with both hands, and turned her face to his. She closed her eyes with a little moan of pain and would have fallen to the ground but for the strong fingers of the man who held her. But he could read the answer in her white face.

"Laura," he said gravely, "do you mean that you refuse to marry me?"

She opened her eyes and he knew the truth. He took his hands from her shoulders and looked away from her. There were deep lines about his mouth, and his face was no longer the face of a boy.

And then the woman found the strength to speak.

"I cannot marry you, Jack," she said slowly. "It would be impossible after what has happened. This thing would always lie between us. I have been thinking over many things in the night. I have decided that I can never marry you. It will be best for both of us to part, and part forever."

"Do you mean," he cried hoarsely, "that you do not love me because of—of this?"

"I still love you, Jack," she replied. "I shall always love you, but our ways must lie apart. A great shadow has fallen on our lives, and I shall be in the darkness as well as you."

For answer he reached out his hand to open the gate so that he could pass through and come to her side; but she laid her hand upon his arm.

"Do not come this side of the gate," she said. "Do not make the parting harder for me."

He dropped his hand from the latch and laughed bitterly.

"This gate, then," he said with a ghastly smile, "is the symbol of the life that is to be. But I could break it down; I could wrench it from its hinges and splinter it, and reach your side. Laura, tell me what is this barrier between us, and why, if you still love me, you will not marry me?"

"I have told you," she replied. "Can you not understand? You have made our marriage impossible. There is nothing in my heart but love and pity for you. Yet if I married you, this secret, shared by us two—by us two alone—would divide us so surely, so completely, that life would be hell to both of us. Good-by, my dear lover!"

She held out her hands to him, and he pressed his lips to them. Then the madness of a great passion seized him. He loosed her fingers, and, gripping the gate with both his hands, he exerted his enormous strength and literally tore the woodwork away from its iron hinges. It came apart with a loud crack of splintering wood, and he flung the fragments far from him onto the grass. The whole action was instantaneous, brutal, terrible to witness. Before the girl could move from the spot on which she stood, he had clasped her in his arms and was covering her face with passionate kisses.

"You are mine," he cried hoarsely, "and I will hold you against all the world—ay, in spite of yourself, in the face of every obstacle. You love me, and I will do anything to make you my wife. I will break down all barriers as I broke down this gate. I will suffer anything. I will risk anything. You are mine, Laura—till death."

The girl trembled in his arms, but her courage was great in the hour of her temptation.

"I have said that I will not marry you," she replied softly, "and nothing you can say or do will force me to go back on my word."

"Nothing?" he asked, straining her to him in his powerful arms. "Are you sure, Laura?"

"I am sure," she replied quietly. "I am quite, quite sure, Jack."

He let her go, and striding away a few paces, came back to her side.

"If your decision is final," he said in a hard voice, "my life is nothing to me. I am yours, and if you cast me away from you, I am nothing. I will, therefore, act the part of an honorable man and make peace with my own conscience. Tomorrow at the inquest which is to be held on Holland's body, I shall speak the truth. I shall tell the jury what happened, and leave them to judge whether I am a murderer. Do you understand me, Laura?"

"I understand you," she replied. "You are using this as a threat. You think that by this means you will turn me from my purpose. But you are mistaken, Jack. I will only tell you that you have fallen in my estimation. You know how much your life—your happiness means to me, and, knowing this, you use your knowledge to achieve your own desires."

He was silent and bowed his head.

"Jack," she said softly, "you are still the loyal, true-hearted Jack whom I promised to marry so short a time ago?"

He raised his eyes to hers, and his cheek flushed with shame. Then he took hold of her hand, very tenderly, and raised it to his lips.

"Forgive me," he said gently, "forgive me, my own dear sweetheart. I am always your loyal lover. I will serve without questioning. Good-by, dear heart!"

"Good-by," she answered, "and God bless you!"

For a few moments he held her hand to his lips. Then he dropped it, turned suddenly on his heel, sprang into the saddle and dug the spurs into the horse's side.

The animal sprang forward, stumbled, regained its feet, and in a few moments both horse and rider had disappeared from sight.

Mrs. Burnham came to Washington in 1901 and has been since that time pleasantly associated with general society and with the conservative element which is closely associated with the New England Congressional set. She has not been a conspicuous member of Vanity Fair, but she has entertained widely and performed all her social duties with the promptitude and the conscientiousness of detail which is characteristic of the woman of her country.

Gardening, sewing and singing taught in the schools is spreading this gospel of beauty far wider and in a more potent way than a thousand outside exhorters could do.

"One of the thirteen original States, every New Hampshire woman seems interested in some pet patriotic project or organization. I am a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Colonial Dames. I trace my ancestry back to Gen. Eaton, but I hold every hero from the State in special veneration. In Manchester, we are all worshipers of Gen. John Stark. His grave is in the old burial ground and his noble monument one of the prides of the city. One of the features of patriotic societies which makes strong appeal to me is the love of historical research which they inspire. In New Hampshire we plunge deeply into such research and in every village and small town societies exist which furnish excellent material for graver students of the national records. Mrs. Burnham may be described as the most competent homekeeper in official Washington, and no [illegible] paramount to those within her home. The mansion which Senator Burnham occupies in Manchester is one of the most stately and elegant in the city. It is built after the modified colonial style, with all the grace of outlines of that historic fashion and none of its interior discomforts. Wide porches without and spacious corridors within give the appearance of elegance and ease associated with homes of the gentry in the days when proprietary governess ruled the sturdy citizens of the Granite State. During hel long years of married life Mrs. Burnham has added to the beauty of her home until now its contents might serve as an example of what the industrious homekeeper should do. Rare bric-a-brac carefully collected, unique furniture, pieces of tapestry and embroideries, linen, fine and sheer and handsomely embroidered, with the massive silver and equisite glassware dear to every New Englander, are among the variety of cherished household gods which Mrs. Burnham has gathered. But she is particularly devoted to her garden, and the beauty of her grounds is proof that flowers grow best for those who love them. She has experimented with roses until at last she has succeeded in getting those which thrive best and bloom most luxuriantly during the comparatively short rose season which New Hampshire enjoys. Her lawn is her special delight and it slopes back in undulating smoothness, which reminds the beholder of the lawns of Oxford and the ancestral homes of England. Mrs. Burnham has collected a number of unique and ornamental shrubs and she is constantly adding to her collection. Her barns and outhouses are shrouded in trailing vines and luxuriantly blooming roses, and down in the vegetable inclosure are aromatic herbs and garden stuffs dear to the old-fashioned cook and all about are sun-dials and rustic seats and massive tables, which suggest a perpetual al fresco fête.

Senator and Mrs. Burnham have three daughters, Mrs. C. M. Baker and Mrs. A. B. Carpenter, both of whom reside in Manchester, and Miss Edith Burnham, who is pleasantly known in Washington. Mrs. Burnham was educated at the Abbot Academy in Andover, Mass., and her youngest daughter, Miss Edith, also claims this venerable institution as Alma Mater. Mrs. Baker was educated at Wellesley and Mrs. Carpenter at Laselle Institute, Auburndale, Mass. Mrs. Burnham is a firm adherent of the higher education for women and though devoted to her own Alma Mater, she is inclined to regret that she did not select a collegiate training. She believes that it not only fits a woman more perfectly for every duty of life and enables her to perform them more successfully, but she delights in the association which collegiate training means. She admires the college spirit and especially the good times which college women have, and long after they have laid aside their books to take part in the serious duties of life. Mrs. Baker belongs to the Wellesley Club, which has a large membership in Manchester, and one of Mrs. Burnham's delights is to entertain this organization and participate in their winter's programme.

Senator and Mrs. Burnham are devoted adherents of the Presbyterian faith in its most popular New England form, the Congregational. They are consistent members of the Congregational communion in their home and in Washington they attend the Congregational Church on Tenth and G streets. They take an active part in all that concerns the national development of their creed and give their time, income and talent for furthering all worthy endeavors. Mrs. Burnham is an earnest reader, but like nearly all the women in official Washington, she finds that it requires so much time to keep up with politics and with journals and dailies bearing on that vital topic that only during the summer can she give all the time she desires to new books and their reviews. Personally Mrs. Burnham is one of the most attractive looking matrons in the high officialdom. She is cordial in manner, an easy conversationalist, full of pleasant small talk, and a keen observer of men and affairs.

JOHN BULL DISTURBED.

UNITED STATES OF BRITAIN, IS ENGLAND'S NEW IDEAL.

How Fission in the English Parliament Is Leading Men of All Parties to Accept the Idea of Home Rule All Round—Revolt of Welsh M.P.'s and Lessons of the Press Conference Ripen Public Opinion.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 23.—Far-reaching results may follow the revolt of the Welsh members of the House of Commons, which has just been squelched by the personal influence of Lloyd George, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is sometimes referred to as "the uncrowned king of Wales." The rebels have promised to hold their hands for a year, but it is freely predicted that at the end of that time they will cease to be the tail to the English Liberal kite, will establish their own party, somewhat on the lines of the Irish Nationalists, and will place themselves in permanent opposition to the government of the day.

This revolt is really a symptom of the tendency to fission in English politics, which is becoming more and more pronounced, and which threatens to change the whole face of public life. It is also believed by many acute political observers that it is one of the final steps which will lead to the break-up of the empire into a series of self-governing communities loosely, but none the less securely, held together by the imperial bond. To state the case paradoxically, the empire will be strengthened by its division. The United States of Britain will succeed the present organization, and will stand as a band of brothers against the whole world.

There can be no doubt that the Imperial Press Conference which has just concluded its meeting in London has done a great deal to further this movement. Serious politicians like A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader and former Prime Minister, and Mr. Asquith, the present Premier, explicitly disclaimed in their speeches at the conference any idea of imposing the will of the home Parliament on the British colonies. "You must work out your own salvation in your own way, and being free and independent, you will be so much the more loyal and useful members of the imperial family," was the substance of their declarations, and the editors from overseas cheered the sentiment to the echo. The Irish have long adopted the same attitude, the Welsh are now coming to it, and there is a growing party in Scotland which demands home rule for Scotsmen in the conduct of their local affairs.

The revolt of the Welshmen is typical of this feeling. For years the Liberals have been promising to disestablish the Anglican church in Wales, which numbers only a minority of the Welsh people among its adherents. A bill was introduced a few weeks ago, but last week the government announced that it was too busy to pass it at this session of Parliament. The Welshmen replied that if the government didn't pass it in short order they would form their own party and vote with the opposition. Lloyd George, the silver tongued, smoothed them down, and they promised to wait a year, but they are still very angry.

The truth is that the day has gone by when the Parliament at Westminster can legislate efficiently for the whole of the United Kingdom, let alone the whole of the empire. Britain—using the word in the sense of all the British dominions—has become too unwieldy to be governed by a single legislature, and the time is approaching rapidly when English statesmen must face and solve the problem of decentralization. Englishmen are more and more coming to a sense of the futility of the British Parliament trying to decide whether a local railway shall be built in Ireland, whether the Welshmen shall be taxed to support a minority church, or whether the Irish system of land purchase shall be introduced into Scotland, while their own business is neglected. It goes without saying that the Irishmen, Welshmen and Scotsmen have been thinking the same thing for some time.

The situation has been reduced to absurdity in the present Parliament. The House of Commons has been occupied for about two months solely with the discussion of the new taxation proposals contained in the budget, and there is every prospect that it will be busy with the same problem until nearly Christmas, to the exclusion of a lot of pressing legislation for England as well as for other members of the British family. The cry is going up all over the three kingdoms for decentralization. "Give us a series of local parliaments," the people say, "which will attend to affairs of local interest, and let us free the hands of the imperial Parliament to attend to the affairs which affect the well-being of the empire as a whole." When the change will come no one can say at present. A few years ago no one would have ventured to predict that it would be in this generation, but recent events have brought it manifestly nearer. Now there are few who deny that it is coming. The only difference of opinion is on the question, "How soon?"

Other important factors in the evolution are the military needs of the empire and the attitude of the overseas colonies. It is becoming increasingly evident that the colonies must bear their share in the offensive and defensive armaments of the empire. They have responded nobly to the call by offering Dreadnoughts to the old country, and by raising their own militia, some units of which did good service in the South African War, but no argument is needed to prove that the empire's army and navy, to be efficient, must be organized on a uniform plan and under a single head. The question then arises "how long will the colonies consent to provide men and ships for a military and naval organisation in the government of which they have no voice?" The imperial Parliament is the solution which is accepted without serious objection by every one. Let the Parliament at Westminster be reconstituted to include representatives of the King's overseas dominions and let it confine its activities to matters affecting the whole empire. The colonies already possess their own Parliaments, and it would only be necessary to set up Parliaments to take charge of local affairs in England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland. No one denies that such an arrangement would immensely strengthen the empire. It would dispose, at a stroke, of the problem of Ireland, which has been vexing English statesmen for a century. It would restore the waning loyalty of the Welsh, and it would stiffen up the sturdy patriotism of the Scots. The United States of Britain would be immensely more powerful and united than Britain as it is at present—a dominant race with an overwhelmingly more numerous congerie of more or less dissatisfied subject states.

OUR EACH-AND-ALL GROUP—Sunshine Society—With The Young Folks

A CHATTY LETTER.

The President Maps Out an Interesting Line of Work for Each and All.

Dear Each and All Girls: At the very beginning of our race we had a stumble; our committee failed to get the notice of the whereabouts of the general meeting for July 7 on the page. Said committee has thereby incurred our severe displeasure. When you read this message you will know whether the committee "made good" in notifying the members otherwise, for, while there are many names on the roster, the streets and numbers are not given. You who were fortunate enough to receive the notification attended, of course, if only to meet our "Marguerite Winnifred." Some, of course, thought to 'phone Mrs. Mitchell, whose address was given, as to the destination of the picnickers, and all see the need of better organization work being done.

The roster of the local members must be complete with name, address and 'phone number of each member; then you will be easily reached.

I am writing you this for fear you will misunderstand the reason why you were not notified as to the meeting place. I am so anxious for you not to have any misunderstandings, as such things are among the penalties of life and can be remedied by thorough preparation. However, this sin of omission will probably cause you to make up your mind as to what work you can do for the success of the society.

You know the moralist said "our personal affairs seem to keep us from trying to do something to make the world better," and yet none of us throw aside the benefits received from the attempts of others. There are a few little things I wish you girls would do while you are waiting for a general meeting to be properly announced.

Send in your names, street numbers and 'phone numbers to the recording secretary, Mrs. Lucy Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles, unless you are positive she has your correct address. This will help us to get started right. While you are making up your mind just what work you want to do and how best you can express yourself, do not forget to help the contestants who are getting subscriptions to The Times.

One of the most essential things to do for the good of humanity this summer is to use your influence in ridding the city of flies! Do not buy fruit of dealers where flies are swarming; the fruit should be kept covered with netting in such a manner that flies will not touch it. Flies must have moisture in order to live; all open places wherever there is any kind of moisture should be kept closed. No water should be left uncovered. If lawns and streets were sprinkled after sunset when the flies have gone to sleep they would not have so much to drink the next day. If the face of the earth were kept clean from offensive matter there would be no flies. It is the work of each and every one to do her part in exterminating the flies, which carry such a large part of the diseases to humanity.

Are not some of you girls disgusted with the manner in which bread is delivered by some of our bakers? Each loaf should be wrapped in paper as it comes from the oven; then it does not come in contact with wagons, horses and dirty hands, and does not have to be subjected to a bath and a drying in the oven before being eaten. Let us patronize the bakers who wrap their bread properly, if we can find any, or find some woman who will make good home-made bread.

This subject of dirty bread is one I have noticed for some time, and it is one cause of disease. You see, girls, I am looking for some work for you to do to fill in the time until you take up chapter and corresponding work, and if you do that which will eliminate disease from the city you will be helping in the work for humanity. If we are not living in a circle we will try to introduce the eating of unbleached rice, which is, next to wheat, the food of civilization. Our Health Chapter has told us of the benefits of this food over the bleached rice.

Before the summer is over, I expect there will be no flies in Southern California, wherever this page is read, for I am sure there are enough Each and All girls to banish them, and I expect every loaf of bread that leaves the bake oven to be wrapped. Use your influence to this end, dear girls, and you will not be idle, but will be helping to accomplish some of the most needed labors for humanity.

Lovingly,

YOUR PRESIDENT "ARIEL."

Likes the Would-Be's.

A. R. D. of Bellingham, Wash., a member of the Would-be Authors' Chapter, sends the following note:

"I am very thankful for help about my writing. I am an amateur in the fullest sense of the word, and am always happy when I can get help to progress.

"We have a literary culb here, composed mostly of Normal School students.

"I see by The Times that the Each and All Society had a picnic in June. My Heart often longs to be in that country. Sometimes here, in the winter, when the wind is blowing and it is raining, I can just shut my eyes and see it all—the dear old mountains, the flowers and the warm sunlight, and I think of it as a place I saw in my dreams.

"Sometimes I wonder at the continual growth and decay in this life. Why are we put here for so short a time? It often seems as if we jump from the kindergarten of this school of life into eternity."

Report of Meeting.

Fifty members of Each and All Society and their friends enjoyed a basket picnic at Echo Park Wednesday and adjourned to the clubhouse at 2 p.m., where the regular monthly meeting was held. The newly elected president, "Ariel," was in charge and outlined several plans of work which will be put into effect and more fully developed later on.

Marguerite Winnifred, chairman of the Would-be Authors Chapter, was present and made some important and feasible suggestions in regard to the chapter of which she is general chairman. She is especially desirous of developing individual talent under competent guidance and believes that really good literary productions will result. She wishes also to combine certain lines of music and dramatic art, and cultivate the expression of beautiful and helpful thought in a manner that will appeal to all.

It was decided to reorganize some of the chapters and form new ones' of which there seems to be need. One, which will be known as the "Emergency Chapter," was organized and Mrs. N. Spear was made its chairman. The special line of this chapter will be charitable work in its many forms. Another is the Sunbeam Chapter, of which Mrs. L. H. Payne was named chairman, with Daisy Daniels assistant. This chapter, when understood, will appeal strongly to mothers. The initial meeting will be held at Echo Park playground next Wednesday, July 14, at 2:30 o'clock p.m. Children from 3 to 12 years old will be received and drilled in songs and pleasing exercises fostering "sunshiny" ideas and acts. It is hoped that a goodly number, since it is not confined to children of members, will take advantage of the offer.

Letters were read from out-of-town girls, showing that the Each and All Department of The Times is read and suggestions noted abroad as well as at home.

At the afternoon entertainment a piano solo was given by "Perdita," and original words were sung to original music by "Ruth, the Gleaner." "Bonnie Dundee" gave an Each and All dramatic panorama in three acts that was exceedingly unique and entertaining.

Attention was called to the "Heave-A-Wa," a home for needy children, further information in regard to which can be had from the president.

The next regular meeting will be held in Eastlake Park, August 11, of which special notice will be given later.

LUCY S. MITCHELL,
Secretary.

Good Cheer and Smiles, Kindly Deeds Done in a Spirit of Love, Not Charity.

MOTTO.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
'Till in heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on."

Did you ever stop to think that life consists in "passing on" the good and the evil things that come to us? There is no such thing as keeping to ourselves everything, no matter how much we would like to play the miser. To be sure, we may spend our money on ourselves; gratify our own desires for pleasure, selfishly leaving out others; think only of ourselves, every hour of the twenty-four. Yet we are giving, giving, every moment that we live, something to every man, woman and child with whom we come in contact. If we are not giving our love we are giving hate. If we withhold sympathy, we are giving indifference. Smiles cost us nothing, yet by withholding them, and "passing on" frowns we cause those we meet to walk for a time in the shadow, when it is our blessed privilege to lead them into the sunshine of friendliness and sympathy, which is their right.

Being "a Sunshiner" means not only helping those in distress, giving money to buy necessaries for the very poor, ah, no! Sunshine is broader and deeper than that. It is keeping those happy who are happy. Never doing anything to lower a friend's ideals; lifting aloft always the gay banner of sunny helpfulness; planting the flowers of love and sympathy along the highway of life, that their beauty and fragrance may appeal to all who pass by, the rich and poor, the merry and sad, the worthy and unworthy. In a word—shining just where we are at the moment—this moment—"passing on" the best that is in us, that our best may help some one else to be his best—that's "sunshine." Just try it!

Away down in a lonely part of Florida there lived a little woman who was a real Sunshiner. Her heart was full of loving desires to do for others, her lips ready to speak the helpful word, or smile the cheery smile. But she was very poor, and had hardly a penny she could call her own, and to "pass on" hard-earned money that rightly belonged to her little family, would not be "sunshine." Then, too, neighbors were few and far between. Days passed, when there were no opportunities to smile at strangers or friends. One day, while she was wondering if there were anything she could do to make the world brighter, and her heart had answered "no," she heard a whistle and saw a long train of cars pass the confines of her little farm. Suddenly a light broke in upon her, as she thought of the dreary waste of miles through which that train must pass, with nothing to brighten the weary eyes of the travelers it carried—travelers whose hearts, maybe, were sad! The little Sunshiner's opportunity to give sunshine had come. That very day, she began her labor of love, and for many days afterward she continued it. She planted flower seeds for miles along that desolate track, that later blossomed into brightness to gladden the eyes of travelers.

Abraham Lincoln said, "Die when I may, I want it said of me, by those who knew me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower when I thought a flower would grow."

From the sunny Southland came another ray of sunshine, in a recent letter. The hostess last summer of the Sunshine delegate from California to the convention could not enjoy her coming vacation with the thought of the tired shop girls standing every day through the "dog days." One day last week she and a friend made the rounds of all the large dry goods stores in that southern city where "half-holidays" for the clerks have never been known. The result of that day's "sunshine" appeared in the daily papers next day, with the Sunshiners' names withheld by request. The proprietors of nearly all the stores visited signed a paper agreeing to close their establishments a half day each Thursday during August. The ladies had asked for July and August, but even the one month was a victory for the Sunshiners.

One Sunshiner with a Victor phonograph and no end of beautiful records sends it visiting every once in awhile. In the homes that it visits there is always some "shut in" to whom a vision of "happier days" comes as she listens to the beautiful music. One day recently, she took it to the old ladies' home of her town, and it gave a concert to the delighted inmates, some of whom had never seen a phonograph.

The Investigating Committee of the Los Angeles branch found a sick little tailoress whose husband had deserted her, and who, wearied with the losing battle, hardly seemed to care to get well. She is now to have a month's vacation in the country, and she is to have no worry over the bills. Her physician says "it means the saving of her life." Well—to a Sunshiner, a mother's life is well worth saving, for this little women has children who will be cared for by kind friends while she is away getting well.

The executive board of the Los Angeles branch meets on the third Thursday morning of each month at 10:30 at the home of the first vice-president, No. 2816 La Salle. But as the date of the July meeting would fall on the morning of the Elks' parade, the meeting has been postponed a week. The meeting will be held July 22.

The executive board is composed of the officers and the chairmen of all the committees. But all Sunshiners who can spare the time, and wish to attend the meeting, will be welcomed.

"The moon and stars are commonplace things,
The flowers that bloom, and the bird
that sings;
But sad were the world, and dark our lot
If the flowers failed and the sun shone not;
And God, who sees each separate soul,
Out of commonplace lives makes His Beautiful whole."

AN ANSWER TO BETTY.

Dear Betty: You've stirred up such a rumpus at our house we are at sixes and sevens to know how to take you, and I've come to the conclusion that you are a joke. This letter, too, is a joke on the rest of the girls; they do not know I'm writing you. I think you must be a wonder of a shop girl, and, as I had today off, to recuperate from the effects of the Fourth, I spent the whole day looking in the stores for YOU, Betty.

I've hunted every ribbon counter in this town to see the girl next to it! I've looked on each side of every ribbon counter! I was looking for a red-headed shopgirl, a frizzly-haired shopgirl, a smiley-faced shop-girl, the "one and only" shopgirl, and was ready to buy anything you had to sell! I thought I'd get my parcels quickly, and not have to wait for my change, while you talked of the matinée or your beau to the girls near you. I did so want to tell you of the "hullabaloo" you raised at our house on that suffrage question. We spent our dinner hour the Fourth discussing you, and that subject. Your ears must have burned! John said (John is Mary's husband, she is the only one of us that is married) that he did not believe you were "real," "for a sensible girl as you claimed to be would be ready for the ballot." Bettina said she thought when one understood how to read you that you'd come out "happy ever afterward." She always speaks of people as though they were in books. The landlady's son came in while we were talking, and said: "Gee whiz! find out where she sells things, and if it's stuff ma sends me on errands for I'll make a bee line for her counter, and tell her she's all right on the suffrage question." I told him that that wouldn't be doing his mother's errands. He isn't married, Betty, and is rich and good looking!

Ariadne said, "Evidently her feathers are not like ours;" but she has hopes that when you are better acquainted with us you will grow some fine ones. She said you talked too much without thinking or you would never have uttered such sentiments on the suffrage question; that your birthday was probably on the cusp between Pisces and Aries, or you would not be so untrue to women.

Ardelia declared you were the "best ever," and wonders how old you are; says you should graduate from behind the counter; believes that you would know something about homekeeping, and she had a brother, Dick, who is a Sagittarian. Ariadne remarked that "a tall, well-built man like Dick ought not marry a little, short, red-haired woman such as Betty described herself," and Elsa said, very excitedly (Elsa is our Scottish maid:) "Why, Ariadne, you said she must be an Aries girl, and you've always said that it is best for a Sagittarian to marry an Aries!" "Yes, yes," replied Ariadne, "I know I said so, but she is not a true Aries or she would not express herself in that manner!"

Betty, I've never found out just when her birthday occurs. I've wondered if she was an Aries girl and if she had a heart for any man; she is so philosophical, and is always trying to get to the core of the subject, yet she is jolly good company. Dick, of course, being a Sagittarian, defends the existing institutions of the country, she further remarked.

I did a lot of wondering about there, for Dick was not there and how did she know Dick's opinion on the subject of woman suffrage. "By the same token" said I, "Betty must be a Sagittarian, for she is defending the way the government started, and how the women stayed at home and fixed up good things for the men to eat, and looked after the children. I don't believe she likes the old-maid, light housekeeping-in-a-flat idea. She's for a home and husband, and children." "Pooh," said Ariadne, "she's no defender of her sex, needs educating along with thousands of others who cannot see to the end of their noses!"

Mary I really think believes that women should have the ballot but is always on the opposite side of the question, and especially opposes Jacks' arguments. He, strange to say, thinks she is the "best ever." They are working together in the same office, saving to build a home, and why she argues against woman suffrage, I can't make out, unless it is to relieve the monotony of conversation, for she's so generous and helpful, if she is contrary. Betty, you'd like her! Mary said, "If women only understood the common law"—and she said it in capital letters—"they would not care for the ballot. Betty is sensible and right when she says that she has more rights than she knows what to do with. That is the trouble with women; all those who ask for the ballot have more rights than they know what to do with. If they understood the common law of the land that gives every right they need they would not ask for the ballot." Then she explained the common law, which I'll tell you about when I find you. She added that women were "more powerful without the ballot than with it." Jack remarked that she "was a power without it, but that the other women needed the ballot to make them powerful." What she said about the law opened up a new side of the question to me and I'm more than half over on your side, Betty. Elsa did not commit herself on the subject, she had no chance, and I can't write you all that was said. They saw I was on the fence and I laughed at their efforts to get me off. When I do jump I'll go with the smiling ones, the joking ones, for I think life is one huge joke and this suffrage question is the biggest joke that's out, next to you, Betty!

"IRVISHIAM."

BEAVER WANTS TO KNOW.

Invites the Views of Each and All Girls on the Subject of Woman's Suffrage.

After the "Beaver" had sent her two little stories to the Each and All department, about "bird song" and the "effect of music upon one," she sat down and snugly waited, fully expecting that some fun-loving girl would send in a witticism, something about "our beaver, the music lover," and, yes, the Beaver hoped the jolly girl would crack a joke, for there was the answer all snugly tucked in the cuff of the Beaver's camping-out jumper.

The answer? Of course a beaver is interested in music. It has scales. The inventor of this, even contemplated writing a poem, but abandoned the idea because "scales" to rhyme with "tail" or tale would never pass the chairman of Would-Bes, nor her aide, or the editorial chair. Then came a horrible thought to jibe at the joke, "you're not the only one that studies music and natural history."

Today there came a letter, twice forwarded to the Beaver, and now the atmosphere is serenely joyous again. Marguerite Winnifred had written, not a joke, but this lovely invitation: "I want to put you on the Would-Be Authors' list." What a charming climax.

Authors! Books, and then book news, yes, indeed Bettina, The Times reviewer is giving us a good literary page, information which is not only helpful to the busy book lover, but also to those of constructive inclinations. The Times gives its readers some good poetry too, one poem published not many weeks ago was a delightful surprise: "The Open Door," an exquisitely conception.

Another lovely poem, "Renewal," by Ina Coolbrith, the editorials. There was cially fine about American

These topics very naturally mind other subjects of com est, one subject, especially,

Dear President "Ariel" inquire whether any of the girls, are suffragettes, and if so, you not round up one who willing to do another Each girl a great favor? Would she to the page a bit of information, an essay, nor long story, but a simple catalogue list of the good suffrage has done for woman, it has lifted from the shoulders what it hopes to do for her in future.

Suffrage is such a big problem, most means evolution, for if we the bottom of things, we must pass woman's life from the of time; yes, and back of that form in which the first woman cast.

Judging by the clamor in directions, the suffragette is trying get out from under the thraldom man, and yet! oh, man! The God bless him.

In The Times of June "Lancer," whose noble plea "Torturing Animals" (in Park) holds a place between "Woman the Slave" and his ble "Americans Get Theirs," close to the fundamental when he says "A woman would fully stop the motion of the if it would gratify some whim of husband."

Now, can she reconstruct that ture? If she obtain suffrage should run for office, she might the one man on the other ticket.

The Lancer's remarks are with an article by some Chicago fessor, a portion of which article reported in the news department The Times of June 24. The sor's article may be scientific, places it is hugely funny. Woman not civilized! The professor calls tention to her love for bright as an evidence of her savagery. that scientific? God created a full of bright colors and also whereby they should be reproduced endlessly and put into the man eyes to behold the colors. the Creator thinking of savage civilized man while doing this

When the scientist speaks of an's fondness for decorating with birds, he is not quite fair; tion should not be quoted as the And where did he get his authority for the assertion he makes concerning woman's fondness for slaughter bloodshed. And then that which terms her "religion!"

Woman must have an escape of some sort, to relieve the monotonous whirr of the household machine. Usually she takes relief in that lies nearest and is least liable cause friction. Richard Le Gallienne in his charming "October Vagabonds" when he and Colin are planning a walking tour, touches phase when he says that he never met a woman yet whose did not light up at the thought walking tour." What delicious it suggests from the inevitable routine. Man, with his 9-to-4 hours, knows very little of the " done" law.

Yes, woman must have diver and education, fine arts, liberal and a chance to make or earn her living, till the one man comes if she wishes to do so.

But suffrage? Cui bono?

LITTLE PHILANTHROPISTS.

A Club in Garvanza Composed of Children Who Seek to Help Others Less Fortunate.

The Gamma Mu Sigma is the name of a delightful little club composed of about a dozen little people of Garvanza. The club meets fortnightly. One of its chief purposes is to raise a fund each summer, which is devoted to securing some little pleasure for less fortunate children.

Last Thursday evening these ambitious young philanthropists gave a musical and lawn party at the home of Mrs. Harold Lacy, and a tidy sum was turned over to the Los Angeles Orphans' Home as a result of the children's effort.

The lawn was decorated with hundreds of pretty Japanese lanterns, while tables and camp chairs were invitingly grouped all about. The little club members in dainty white frocks, served the ices and cakes. They made a charming picture as they flitted among their guests while they worked for sweet charity's sake. A delightful surprise of the evening was a serenade given the club members by a quartette of male voices.

The programme of the musical in which all the club members took part was as follows: Piano duet, "Mia Bella Waltz" (Otto Roeder,) Violet and Albert Lacy; vocal solo, "Grandmother's Advice" Almeda Hill; piano solo, "The Ropedance" (Koelliog) Ellen Bronson; mandolin solo, "Sobre las Olas" (J. Rosas,) Kenneth Marshall; reading, Ellen Galpin; piano solo, "Edelweiss Glide" (Vanderbeck,) Violet Lacy; song, "The Minuet" Joseph Mosenthal,) Lois Shorten; piano solo, Dorothy Dean; piano solo, "Fifth Nocturn" (Leybach,) Alice Shorten; violin solo, Sextette "Lucia," (Donizetti,) Harold Sellberg; piano solo, "Hearts and Flowers," (Theo Tobani,) Albert Lacy; song, "One Spring Morning" (E. Nevin,) Murial Rowell; reading, Ellen Galpin; piano solo, "Earl King" (Schubert-Liszt,) Carl Wheat.

A Homesick Flower.

Once upon a time there was a cowslip that grew in a meadow near a brook. It awoke at dawn every morning when the lark called "Awake! Awake!" Then the sun bathed its face and the brook sang to it all day long, such a contented, peaceful little song. The little lambs sometimes lay beside it or played all about on the great green carpet.

One day this little cowslip heard footsteps and a voice say, "Oh, what a pretty flower!" Then a hand picked it up and placed it where there was a loud noise. Thump! thump! went the noise, shaking poor little cowslip's head every time and frightening her so she kept on wondering what would happen next. But she at last grew so tired that she fell asleep.

The next thing she knew she rested in the hand of a little girl, and homesick though she was she felt that she had fallen into the hand of a friend, for the little girl was looking at it very tenderly and saying, "Poor little flower, I shall plant you in the garden with the other flowers and look after you myself."

Sure enough, the place was made under the rose bush and little cowslip was stood in the earth and brought a drink of cold water. When the little girl left her she looked about wonderingly and amazed at the fragrance and beauty, such as she had never dreamed of in the meadow, she realized that she had been transplanted into a city garden.

The red rose above her dropped down scented vivid petals, spreading over her a crimson cloak for protection, and the violets held a gathering to do her honor, while the lily bells tinkled in merry conversation all night long. She heard the jasmine sympathize with the mignonette for its lowly position; and the sunflower chide the four-o'clocks for going to sleep so early. The hollyhocks, proud of their ancestors and the favors shown them generations back, quarreled about the sunflowers being placed beside them to grow, and hinted aloud that the proper place for the sunflower was in the back yard. The tender little pansies and forget-me-nots covered their faces for shame and closed their ears tight when their pretty frocks were criticised by the loud-voiced geraniums.

All this was so strange and new to the cowslip, yet she looked about her, and once more enjoyed the loveliness of this beautiful garden. And yet she wondered how in this new place of hers those pretty flowers could be so spiteful and angry and jealous of one another. Then she thought of her humble home by the brook, where there was never a note to mar the peacefulness of life, no striving or crowding or pushing, but plenty of room.

Finally she grew sick—sick of it all. Even the perfume of the flowers did not repay her for the envy and bitterness among them, there in the city garden. Her poor little body withered, and her head fell on her breast as a dewy tear from the red rose dropped at her feet.

Early in the morning the little girl came and found the little cowslip dead.

A Birthday Party.

A jolly birthday party of the week was given by Mrs. May Becker of No. 2116 Sheridan street to celebrate the seventh birthday anniversary of her little daughter, Gladys. The table was decorated with red, white and blue in honor of the nation's birthday, as well as that of the little girl, and in the center of the table stood a big white-frosted cake, adorned with seven tiny American flags, which the little guests received as souvenirs after the cake was cut. After the feast there was a merry frolicsome time spent in playing games. The little people at Gladys's party were Bertha Klien, Dorothy Card, Grace Beak, Bertha Owen, Jessie Ebard, Jamie Ward, Eunice Smith and Dorise Smith.

In Elks' Parade.

The children of the three city playgrounds are to have a prominent place in the big Elks' parade which takes place next Friday.

Two large floats drawn by four handsome black horses will represent miniature playgrounds. The floats will be beautifully decorated, and equipped with all manner of playground apparatus. Baby swings, high swings, sand piles, blocking building, see-saws, basket weaving and gymnasium work will all be exhibited in operation by half a hundred children who will occupy the floats. The floats will be escorted by a cavalry of young outriders on Shetland ponies, and the playground brass band of fifty boys and girls will furnish the music.

A Christening.

A pretty event of the week was the christening service of the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Cahill Ayers of New York, which took place at the beautiful new home of Mrs. Walter J. Rand, No. 2810 West Seventh street.

Rev. Dr. Dyer of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral performed the ceremony, bestowing upon the little cherub the name of Delia Kathryn Ayers. The godparents were Mrs. Richard Waldron, Jr., of Hollywood, Mrs. Wallace H. Spinks and W. J. Rand. The house was beautifully decorated in pure white Shasta daisies for the ceremony, and a charming musical programme was given by Mrs. W. C. Ayers, Mrs. Harmon David Ryus and Messrs. Roland Paul and H. Lawrence of San Francisco.

"Eddie," said the teacher, "can you give a definition of cursory? The word is generally used in connection with public speaking. For example, we often read that somebody 'made a few cursory remarks.' Please write a sentence containing the word cursory."

After a brief struggle Eddie evolved this:

A 4-year-old Topeka boy is being taught by his mother to observe all the rules of etiquette. He is very obedient and tries to obey orders like a soldier.

"Son," she said, "whenever you go into the dining-room and there are ladies, step aside and let them go in first."

"Yes, mamma," he replied.

Several days later, as lunch was announced she went toward the dining-room in her home, and saw terrific "scrap" just in the dining-room doorway between her son and her 6-year-old daughter. The boy was valiantly trying to impress something upon his sister, for he interjected remarks between his yanks.

She demanded an explanation.

"Well," replied the boy, "you told me ladies should always go into the dining-room first, and Sis, here, tried to get me to go in first, and I was just trying to make her go in before me. And she's got to do it, too."

Sis went in first.

A story is told in Western Kansas of a bad storm—a sort of cyclonic disturbance. The wind smashed down the door, ripping it off its hinges and the mother, who was trying to hold it against the wind, was thrown half-stunned upon the floor.

Little four-year-old Mary looked at her mother a moment, and then at the terrific storm outside.

"God," she screamed, "you've killed mother! Now stop!"

Third: Accepting Ferrero's own statements that "Agrippina's coterie, surprised by the sudden death (of Claudius) which upset all their plans, decided to put through Nero's election in spite of his youth," and that Nero was made Emperor without the slightest difficulty, show that the chances were by no means long of the Senate refusing to elect Nero—surely not long enough to make Agrippina wait ten years. Ferrero admits himself that Nero was met with no opposition. Could not the shrewd Agrippina foresee that Nero would be elected? She knew the accomplishment of her plan would be comparatively easy. Fourth: Even had the chances been longer, the nature of Agrippina was not of the kind of woman who would wait. Her whole life had been one of taking long chances. She had killed Nero's father, Domitius, for his money. She had killed a young patrician because he was engaged to Octavia, Claudius's daughter, whom she wished Nero to marry. She put away woman after woman whom for some reason she disliked. Senators, merchants, she ordered killed because they possessed things she needed. Is this the kind of woman who is going to hesitate ten years because there was a bare possibility that the Senate would refuse to elect Nero on account of his age? Would she sit placidly for ten years and wait for Claudius to die?

Guglielmo Ferrero,
author of "Characters and Events of Roman History."

But, as I said, I do not even admit that her primary object in poisoning Claudius was to get Nero in power. That she thought of this as an ultimate thing I have no doubt. However, I contend that she herself wished to reign, and if this fact can be established, it would logically follow that to have Claudius live eight years until Nero was of age would defeat utterly her purpose. First: It will be remembered that Agrippina was the sister of Caligula, and also his mistress. For a brief time she was Empress, and the taste of power had left her drunken. She was banished by Caligula; the glory of reigning as Empress was snatched from her. Her brain burning with the desire to rule, she had even married her crapulent uncle. Second: She was fully prepared to reign. She was well trained in the affairs of state, having been brought up in a family of rulers. Third: Although after the death of Claudius, Burrhus and Seneca were wholly capable of instructing Nero in the apprenticeship of empire, Agrippina stepped in, unnecessary and unwanted, and proceeded to rule. Agrippina was well enough versed in the affairs of state to know that she was not needed, yet she thrust herself forward and took the helm. Now, had her main object been to have had Nero rule, she would have left him in the hands of his instructors and given him every opportunity of fulfilling her ambition. Her action was a deliberate attempt to keep Nero from ruling. Fourth: She combated Nero and opposed him in so many things that she drew down death upon her head. Is this the way she would have acted had she wanted Nero to rule?

However this may be, either way one looks at it the result is the same. Had she wanted Nero to rule, or had she wanted to rule herself, in both instances the application of psychology leads clearly to the fact that it was to Agrippina's advantage to kill Claudius.

The next main point of divergence in Ferrero's chronicle of Nero is the statement that Nero was a debauché and criminal. Had Ferrero followed up this statement with another that every artist with power is a criminal, my only quibble with him would be one of etymology. But as his statement was made unqualifiedly, my contention with him will be one of psychology, or, I might say, temperament. To claim, in the face of his own remarks concerning Nero, that the Emperor of Rome was a debauché is to admit one's ignorance of the fundamental principles of the psychology of temperaments.

THE BURNT OFFERING. By Edith Nicholl Ellison. Broadway Publishing Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

"The Burnt Offering" is a hybrid literary animal, a cross between a poor novel and a sermon on consumptive marriages, with a strain of the Medical Clinic Annual in it. There is an attempt here to paint terrible scenes and results arising from the marriage of tuberculosis victims, but there is nothing very horrible in it—at least it doesn't seem so; it is lethargic most of the time, and in its best passages it becomes merely disagreeable. The book is neither a good novel, a good treatise, nor a reliable clinic chart. Edith Nicholl Ellison will do well to shake the bad angel who intimated to her that she could write.

CHERUB DIVINE. By Sewell Ford. Mitchell Kennerly, New York. (Price $1.50.)

I dislike to give advice point blank about a book, for there are nearly as many kinds of tastes as there are people; and a book, no matter how good or how bad, will inevitably bore some and delight others. But I can conceive of no normal lover of light fiction who will not reap enjoyment from every page of "Cherub Divine." Of the summer novels, purposely light, there have been few as wholesomely amusing and interesting as this half-brother of Shorty McCabe. Therefore, I recommend it unqualifiedly to all.

Cherub is as lovable as he is rich, and Mr. Ford Bradstreets him a multimillionaire. He began life as an office boy, and developed into a Wall-street operator—a magnate whose fame spread far and near. Cherub is what one would call a rough diamond, and the usages of "cultured" society have no place in his daily routine. He purchases, sight-unseen, from a decayed gentle family, a Long Island estate, Hewington Acres, and two months later, when he runs down for a week end, lo, he finds the owners comfortably in possession. Then the fun begins. Mr. Ford tells delightfully how the proud Hewingtons held his hero's uncouthness in abhorrence; how Cherub meets a charming girl and does a kidnaping job, and how the girl undertakes to reform his manners. Satire, fun, and frivolity play large parts in Mr. Ford's irresistible romance.

Nero's was the highest manifestation of the artistic temperament in history. Selfish, an egotist, a craver for beauty and new sensations, he exemplified the unmoral temperament as no one else has done. He was neither moral nor immoral; he was the ascetic spectator of the world about him as well as of the world within himself. His crimes were esthetic, never vulgar; their aim to develop his own sensibilities. In this he was not a criminal. To be a débauché one must have a moral sense. Nothing in history, nor anything deducible from history points to the existence of this moral sense in Nero. In fact, everything tends to show that Nero was an artist. Among the jeunesse doree he established the festivals of youth, in which the young patricians gave themselves up to artistic expression. Nero's friends were never chosen from the mercantile or political elements of Rome. Ferrero himself says, "He surrounded himself with poets, musicians, singers; the imperial palace was invaded by a noisy horde of zitherists, actors, athletes." Ferrero, too, admits that Nero "developed the foolish vanity of actor, his caprice for the theater, which soon was to become an all absorbing mania." He played the zither in the theater, and later undertook a great artistic tour of Greece, to play in the most celebrated theaters. Nero traveled through Italy and Greece, neglecting the throne, to gather up works of art and bits of statuary. Are these the doings of a criminal? Every action of his life, every trait of his nature, spelled the one word, artist. Nero knew it. He understood himself. "Qualis artifex pereo," he said as he killed himself. That it was true cannot be denied. That it was desirable is also undeniable. A débauché is never an artist; the opposite also is true. To one who understands temperaments, unmorality was the dominent note of Nero's life.

No doubt, it was during the nights he sat in the theater, singing amid the applause of thousands, that the desire for a mammoth self-expression took possession of him. To create something, something gigantic, to see a gargantuan plan of his own take form and reach completion. He would build a city—a city of marvelous beauty. He would rebuild Rome. But Rome was already built; he would destroy it. How? By fire. The idea grew; and he thought of the magnificence of the sight. It would give him the vision of the burning of Troy. . . .To us this conception of the burning of Rome is unbelievable, but it was the logical conclusion, the perfect climax to Nero's life, in absolute harmony with his nature, and wholly compatible with his temperament. Ferrero omits the most important episodes in Nero's life, which, in their nature, would convince one of the possibility, even the probability, of the emperor's plan to burn Rome. I refer to the heinous and brutal gladiatorial festivals instigated and attended by Nero. Nowhere in history is the awful and bloody horror of these opulent Circuses equalled. Nero, with his dignitaries and priests, his princes and ambassadors, sat day after day and with delight watched scenes of murder and cruelty, the atrocities of which today can only be hinted at. The burning of Rome was not more cruel or barbarous; only a few more lives were involved. And what was a life when the artistic taking of it aided in the development of Nero's esthetic sensibilities?

Ferrero's lone argument in defense of Nero is this: "Nero was a criminal, but he was not a fool to the point of provoking the wrath of the whole people for so light a motive." Taking the stand of Ferrero that Nero was not a fool, it is easy to argue from this very point that he burned Rome, for Ferrero admits that Nero was capable of the act. Having power, and not being a fool, what would be easier than to burn Rome, be absent at the beginning of the fire, pretend surprise at hearing the news, and blame someone else? This is exactly what took place, and these facts are what Ferrero claims exonerate him. On the contrary, had he been present at the beginning of the fire, showed no astonishment at the news, and endeavored to blame no one, he would have been a fool. Surely, Ferrero will give him credit for the ability to plan out the few simple devices he used to divert suspicion. The fact that Nero, not according to his wont, was absent, and, hastening to Rome, showed great anxiety for the welfare of the people (a thing he had never done before,) and was so glib in pointing out Paul of Tarsus, the head of an unknown and fanatical community of a new religion in Rome, as the offender, would argue against Nero rather than for him. "Tacitus," says Ferrero, "in spite of his hatred for all of Caesar's family, does not venture to express belief in this story," i. e., that Nero burned Rome. But Ferrero does not see fit to mention that Tacitus himself says that on Nero's return to Rome from Antium, he collaborated in the fire, giving secret orders to revive the flames where they seemed to be dying out; and that the mammoth buildings of marble and stone, over which the fire had small power, were battered down with catapults. Who but Nero had the power to order such proceedings?

Nero, being no fool, planned well to cover his tracks, and that the people turned on him later was not the result of objective facts but of subjective psychology. A few of the Christians, and probably Saul himself, were put to death for burning Rome. Nero then started on his great plan to raise Rome. That he lacked the practicality to materialize his dreams and that he sought expression again on the stage are further proofs of his artistic nature. He has failed to count on the reaction of the Romans against the brutal splendor of his reign. Homeless, desolate, they were no longer charmed by the lavish emperor. They reacted; he disgusted them; and they requested him to leave the earth.

"What an artist the world is about to lose," he exclaimed as he died. Nero understood his nature.

HOW TO COOK VEGETABLES. By Olive Green. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. (Price $1.)

Those who think the reviewer's occupation is one of smooth and easy sailing little know of the vicissitudes of his profession, or of the obstacles that confront him. To give you an idea of the well-nigh inextricable positions in which he is placed, I need but state that E. P. Dutton & Co. have sent me a book called "How to Cook Vegetables," and have asked me to review it. I never cooked a vegetable in my life, and here is what the book contains: Forty-two ways to cook artichokes; forty-five ways to cook asparagus; ninety-five ways to cook beans; twenty ways to cook beets; eight ways to cook Brussels sprouts; 105 ways to cook cabbage; fifty-six ways to cook carrots; forty-nine ways to cook cauliflower; thirty-two ways to cook celery; nineteen ways to cook chestnuts; eighty-seven ways to cook corn; fifty-four ways to cook cucumbers; forty-seven ways to cook eggplant; fifteen ways to cook hominy; eighteen ways to cook lentils; eighty ways to cook macaroni; ninety-five ways to cook mushrooms; nineteen ways to cook noodles; twenty ways to cook okra; sixty-three ways to cook onions; twenty-five ways to cook parsnips; fifty-three ways to cook peas; thirty-three ways to cook peppers; 336 ways to cook potatoes; ninety ways to cook rice; twenty-five ways to cook salsify; fifty-one ways to cook sauces; thirty-one ways to cook spaghetti; twenty-nine ways to cook spinach; thirty-two ways to cook squash; 100 ways to cook tomatoes; forty-six ways to cook turnips; and numerous ways to cook hybrid and miscellaneous dishes.

And I am supposed to tell the housewives who read The Times if this is a good book, and if the recipes are worth trying, and to advise them whether to purchase it or not—in other words, to criticise it! How in the name of Marcus Aurelius am I to know? I have neither the time nor the energy nor the gastronomic capacity to make and test these hundreds of dishes, so how can I conscientiously advise any one as to the merits of the book?

I did as much as this, however—I selected four recipes, haphazard, namely: Spaghetti a l'Italienne, curried rice, potatoes au gratin and bean sauté, and bade the Lady of the Kitchen (I speak with diplomacy) prepare them. The result in each instance was highly satisfactory. But as to the merits of the remaining 1824 recipes I confess my ignorance; although, if they are as attractive and as tasteful to one's palate as the binding and printing of the book are to one's eye, the most fastidious epicure can find no fault with them.

PETER PETER. By Maude Radford Warren. Illustrated by Rose O'Neill. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)

"Peter Peter" is quite as sentimental a book as one would infer from its title. It is a story for females, by one of their number. No man (with the possible exception of R. W. Gilder, E. Markham and Brother Bok) could tolerate it. The hero had a beautiful wife, but couldn't keep her, having suddenly lost his money. Then twins are imprudent enough to select this time for arrival, and impecunious Peter is necessitated to live with his wife in a barn. Most of the book is made up of light and inconsequent tomfoolery, full of forced optimism, with some matrimonial-bureau maneuvers thrown in for interest relief. Over-ripe sentiment flows through the pages, and, though the author turns it off occasionally, the spigot leaks. Some people will call it delightful comedy. Also there are people who will still read Jane Porter.

FIGHTING THE TURK IN THE BALKANS. By Arthur D. Howden Smith. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. (Price $1.50.)

In reading Mr. Smith's exciting and gory tale, more than once that idol of my youth, G. A. Henty, came to mind. "Fighting the Turk in the Balkans," indeed, is a kind of matured Henty book.

Mr. Smith, who is an American, went to the Balkans and joined a band of Macedonian guerrillas. He buckled on a sword and shouldered a gun, and, according to the book, made frequent use of these weapons against the Turks in the mountains south of Bulgary. His object in writing the book, he says, was to present an unknown phase of modern life—the struggle of the Macedonian insurgents for liberty. In this he succeeds to a marked degree; but the presentation of the conditions of these "half-brigands and half-outlaws" is not always what Mr. Smith intends. We are assured that the Macedonian insurgents are a brave, fearless, manly lot of men, but when we close the book the impression is a different one. Their method of waging warfare is, in some cases, incendiary; they always shoot from hiding, and never face their enemy, or give him an equal chance. . . . Once, I believe, they came out in the open, and were routed with dispatch."

The material of the book, however, is exciting, and its bristling and flamboyant style aids much in classifying the work as a grown-up's penny thriller.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

A new story by Mrs. Wiggin in the Woman's Home Companion tells of a mother and a child who found shelter from misfortune in a Shaker community. It will be called "Susanna and Sue." There will be four colored pictures by Mrs. Alice Barbour Stephens, many black and white illustrations by M. C. Wyeth, and will have elaborate page decorations. The book although it ends at Thanksgiving, is designed for a fall holiday book. By an odd coincidence, Mrs. Margaret Deland has just written a Shaker story in The Ladies' Home Journal. Kate Douglas Wiggin's story will be published shortly in book form by the Houghton, Mifflin Company.

That "The Trail of the Go-Hawks" by Emily Blackmore Stapp, has blazed a trail straight to the heart of boy and girl readers is proved by the numerous letters which reach the publishers from childish admirers of the story. They invariably request more and inquire when they may expect another story from the same writer. The author herself comes from the family of the noted English writer, R. D. Blackmore, who wrote "Lorna Doone," and has a wide acquaintance among club women, being literary editor of one of the big Western newspapers and a member of the Iowa Federation of Journalists. The book is published by the C. M. Clark Company, of Boston.

Mary Roberts Rinehart had never written a detective story, or a long story of any sort until an editor friend sent her a picture of Ana Katherine Green, asked her to hang it over her desk, and, under the inspiration of the author of "The Filagree Ball," to produce a detective yarn. Mrs. Rinehart was eager enough to be inspired, but somehow the divine afflatus was slow to arrive. Then she went to Washington for a visit, and on her way home happened to occupy lower berth number ten. She couldn't sleep, and, as she lay there awake the possibilities of a Pullman for a crime and mystery gradually broke upon her. "The Man in Lower Ten," was the result.

Charles Scribner's Sons are publishing in this country a book under the title "French Chateaux and Gardens of the Sixteenth Century." The contents of the book are for the most part reproductions of contemporary architectural drawings, which during the French Revolution escaped destruction. Jacques du Cerceau is the author and W. H. Ward the editor. When George the Third died his library was moved to the British Museum, and the illustrations of the book are reproductions from originals in this library.

The reading public is greatly indebted to L. C. Page & Co. for the great number of delightful travel books which they issue from time to time. Of especial merit is their Travel Lovers' Series. This firm has already announced another addition to this series, which will be entitled "In Wildest Africa," and which is written by Mr. Peter McQueen. In addition to this, there will be forthcoming shortly a book on Guatemala by Mr. N. O. Winter, which will also appear in the Travel Lovers' Series.

"Parenthood and Race Culture: An Outline of Eugenics," by Dr. Saleedy, is announced for immediate publication. The book attempts to define the general principles of race culture, or eugenics, as conceived by Mr. Francis Galton. The author's assumption is that life is the only wealth, and that the only factors that determine the destiny of any nation are the conditions surrounding parenthood.

INSURANCE WORLD.

The Massachusetts plan of savings bank, life insurance and old-age pensions is just entering upon its second year of actual operation, the insurance department of the Whitman Savings Bank having been opened June 22, 1908. Very considerable success is being achieved. The record of business actually written, according to the books at the State Actuary's office, shows that there are now about 2000 policyholders, representing three-quarters of a million dollars. This is not an immense total as life insurance figures go, but as most of it has been written in the last six months and there are many evidences of growing interest, it is large enough to show that the project is attracting attention.

The net premium income for 1908 of twenty large British fire companies was £361,411 less than for the previous year, while the claim and expenses advanced by £1,013,346, with the result that the profits were reduced by £1,374,757. It must be remembered, however, that 1907 was one of the most favorable years ever experienced by the British fire offices. In July, 1907, when the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation act became operative, a certain number of the fire offices entered the accident field, and some of the strong and well organized accident offices have retaliated by entering into competition for fire business, and their efforts in this direction have met with a fair measure of success.

Hamilton Cooke, inspector of agencies for the New York Fire Insurance Company, recently sent a letter to Gov. Hughes of New York asking for a lucid explanation as to why an insurance company should by law be limited to do only $150,000,000 business a year. The Governor turned the letter over to William N. Hotchkiss, superintendent of insurance in New York. Mr. Hotchkiss replied and called Mr. Cooke down for addressing Gov. Hughes as "Mr." Hughes. He does not answer the questions sent by Mr. Cooke to the Governor. Mr. Cooke, in reply to Mr. Hotchkiss, writes a rather sarcastic letter, in which he refers to Gov. Hughes's part in the investigation of insurance companies The New York Life has had to discharge many agents and close several agencies on account of the limitations upon business in the Armstrong law.

Beautiful Hands With Housework

A dainty little housewife who does all her own work entertained a few neighbors at luncheon the other day, and the conversation turned, as it frequently does when she is present, upon the remarkable beauty of her soft, white, clear-skinned hands. "I don't see how you do it," sighed one of the guests with a despairing glance at her own rough, red hands. "It's simple enough," laughed the hostess in reply, "it's only a matter of soap. The woman who does housework needs a healing, soothing, balmy soap that prevents irritation and roughness and keeps the skin soft and healthy—that's all. My hands are as you see them, because I've used Harfina Soap for years, and never use anything else." A good thing for all women who prize beautiful hands to remember. Ask your druggist or any of the following druggists for this splendid soap. 25c a cake, or sent by mail on receipt of 25c. Send for book, "The Care of the Skin."

Broadway Department Store

Hello Bill!

Broadway Department Store

Elk Cards

95c Per Hundred

As a special feature for Monday, the printing department will furnish embossed Elk cards with name, address and Lodge number, neatly printed, for 95c a hundred.
Printing Dept., rear Aisle 6.

A Complete Line Elk Goods

We have a complete line of Elks' ribbons, ties, handkerchiefs, hats, shoes, waists, suits, parasols, and a complete line of novelties.

Welcome

We will give every Elk and visitor a hearty welcome. We want all strangers in the city to feel at liberty to take advantage of the features of the store that may appeal to them. Any information will be given at our bureau in the rear of Aisle 5. Packages will be checked and wrapped at the Accommodation Desk, rear Aisle 6. The Public Telephones, the Rest Room, the Postoffice, and Wells Fargo Express Office are at your service. The Restaurant is open from 8 o'clock to 6. Make the Broadway your headquarters. You will be most welcome.

Save on House Furnishings

You will find it profitable to keep in touch with this department on the 3rd floor. You'll always find saving opportunities in floor coverings, beds, bedding, draperies. We are telling great Bargain news for Monday. Every item means a worth while saving.

Sanitary Couches $3.95

You know the regular value of these couches. They sell all the way from $4.75 to $5.50. Our couches come from the factory that outclasses them all for quality. This price $3.95 for Monday only.

$6.50 Wool Blankets $5

We make this reduction to dispose of several pairs of soiled and shop-worn blankets. They are strictly all wool, and not damaged enough to hurt their ability to give service. $5.00 pair Monday.

Floor Oil Cloth 25c Square Yard

This is an oil finish cloth and we have it in the 1½ and 2-yard widths. The designs are bright and practical. 25c square yard means a big saving.

$11 Pro-Brussel Rugs $6.50

These rugs have become a little shop worn on the wrong side. They have been used as samples. They are woven in one piece and the size is 9x12 feet. Special Monday bargain $6.50.

Seamless Velvet Rugs $19.50

The size is 9x12 feet, and the selection is far better than you find in the average sale. There is nothing to compare with these seamless velvet rugs for service or effectiveness of pattern.

45-Inch Curtain Nets 25c

It is a most complete line including the new figured nets in white, Arabian, red or green. You seldom see the price so low on this quality.

Lace Curtains 35c Each

8 TO 10 A.M.

These curtains are termed manufacturers' seconds, but in most cases it is hard to detect the imperfections. They are full length and come in both white and Arabian. They are worth many times the price which we have made for the two hour sale Monday morning.

Cluny Lace Curtains $2 Pair

We're glad to report these new arrivals and quote this special price. These clunys are mounted on French net, Arabian color, and the range of patterns is most complete.

Muslin Underwear---Lower Prices

Our determination to always quote lower prices has been the great factor in the building up of this department. Second floor.

COMBINATION SUITS $1—These are made of good quality muslin with deep lace trimmed yoke and a band of embroidery beading and ribbon at the waist.

LONGCLOTH CORSET COVERS 75c—One glance will convince you that they are worth more. They are daintily trimmed with Val. lace or embroidery beading and ribbon.

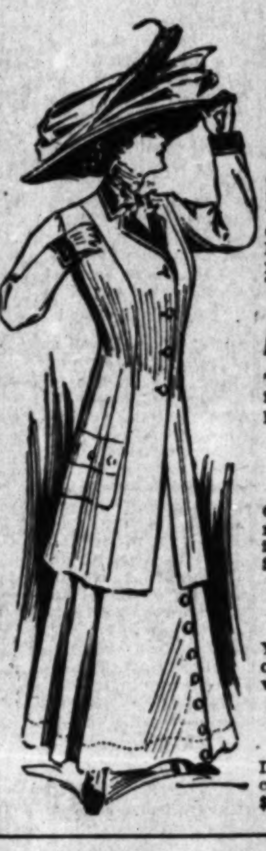
$1.75 MUSLIN GOWNS $1.19—High neck or slipover style, great variety of trimming ideas.

Childen's $1 Wash Suits 75c

Three-piece suits of striped madras; can be worn with or without the skirt. Sizes to 5 years.

$1.98 Straw Bonnets $1.75

This is our special $1.98 bonnet and we make a price of $1.75 for Monday. The straw is a good quality and trimmed with satin ribbon and flowers, several styles to choose from.



Monday a $19.50 Suit Sale

A Premier Price Event

This sale is made possible by the combining of several purchases and recruiting from our own regular stock. We have made up an assortment that includes the finest homespuns, the sturdy gray worsteds and the tropical weight serges. The coats measure 42 and 45 inches, some being fitted, others being semi-fitted. Some are lined with peau de cygne, others with satin. Don't confuse this event with the ordinary clearance sale. We are offering your choice of scores of the finest garments and the newest modes and styles. This sale is for Monday only.

Lace Braid & Elk Linen Suits $7.50

The linen suits are pure white, trimmed with Elk colors. The coats are 40 inches long and the buttons are purple. The lace braid suits are in white, pink, tan and blue. We are including many regular $12.50 values at $7.50.

Clever Wash Suits $4.95

Of all the wash suits we've handled this season this line seems to be the most captivating. Some are in pre-shrunk domestic Ramie cloth, others are in linene. The coats are 40 inches long and trimmed with jet buttons. Some are in zephyr stripe patterns, others plain white.

Cream Serge and Mohair Skirts $5

You're going to need a light skirt for Elks' week and here's a chance to buy one and make a substantial saving. These are full pleated models, trimmed with cut jet buttons. $5 Monday. Second Floor.

$4.95 and $6.95 Lingerie Waists $2.75

Dainty lingerie waists in batiste and lawn, trimmed with fine Val. lace and crochet ball work, some short sleeve models included. Regular $4.95 and $6.95 waists. $2.75 Monday.

The New Cavalier Hats $5 to $7.50

These new cavalier hats have made the midseason hit in New York. They are made on entirely new lines, and the shape is one that most every woman can wear. The shapes are black with a white facing on the brim, and the trimming schemes call for birds, wings and fancy feathers. With all the style and dash, these hats are inexpensive. The prices range from $5 to $7.50. This display on the 2nd floor.

$3 Washable Chamois Gloves $1.89

16-button length in natural shade only. They are guaranteed to wash and give good service. We have them in all sizes and every pair will be fitted. Glove department, Aisle 2.

New Parasols $2.19

Here's an interesting special in new parasols for Monday. They have fancy pongee tops with colored borders, assorted hard wood handles. Monday special $2.19. Aisle 3.

Hosiery and Knit Underwear

Have you ever noticed the constant activity in Aisles 7 and 8? There is one big reason for it—better values.

35c Stockings 25c

Mid-Summer Lace Clearance

Every July we find it necessary to go through the lace stock and seek out the short lengths and odd pieces. These pieces have lost their value to us because they take up room that is needed for regular lines. They are worth just as much to you if the lengths are right for your purposes. Note how we reduce them in prices this time.

19c Venice Appliques 10c

This lot is reinforced by a special purchase which we planned to feature at 19c. Most of the patterns can be separated and used effectively in various ways. A good assortment in white and cream.

Silk Trimming Braids 5c

These formerly sold at 8 1-3c, 10c, 12½c and 15c. The widths range from ½ to 1 inch and the patterns are desirable.

14c Cluny Lace 7c

This is a special 14c line. We've sold some of the same pieces in stock as high as 25c and 35c. We have both edges and bands, 2½ to 4½ inches wide in white and ecru.

75c to 98c Point d'Esprit 49c

The width is 45 and 72 inches. The colors pink, blue, ecru, cream, champagne and white. 49c is a wonderfully low price.

Lace Samples 2c Bunch

These are samples that have accumulated from our previous sales. We place them in one big lot and mark them at 2c for Monday.

Allover Lace Reduced 1-3

You may have any piece of allover lace in our stock at just 1-3 the marked price. This includes Baby Irish and Venise lace in black, white, ecru and cream.

19c and 25c Silk Bands 15c

Persian bands, ¾ to 1½ inch wide, beautiful color combination. In most stores these bands sell from 25c to 65c yard.

Allover Laces 10c Yd.

18 to 42-inch, allover laces in light colors. We're going to discontinue handling five odd pieces. That accounts for this sensational price of 10c a yard.

Fancy 45-Inch Nets 69c

About 40 pieces to go at this price, both silk and cotton nets in brown, navy, black and white, and a few fancy colors. These nets are actually worth from $1 to $2 yd.

Genuine Alligator Bags

An Important Sale Monday

This lot of 115 genuine alligator bags came to us at a price that is really ridiculous when you realize that they are all first quality, and in perfect condition. The lot is not large and we make three prices that will force them out in a hurry.

35 Bags Marked to Sell at $3.98

These are genuine alligator bags, remember. There are three styles to choose from at this price. They have a patent lock and leather covered 9 and 10-inch frame. Choice $3.98 while the 35 last.

10 to Sell at $2.49

These are the genuine alligator Boston bags with extra fine calfskin lining and two handles, the large size; $2.49 is the price on this lot.

70 to Sell at $4.95

Two sizes in this lot, 10 and 12-inch frames. Every bag is leather lined and furnished with an alligator purse. The fittings are perfect and leather is selected.

If after you have purchased one of these you find that you can buy a similar bag for less, under any conditions, if you will kindly return yours we will cheerfully refund your money.

LADIES—

YOUNG LADIES SCHOOL GIRLS

AT MACDONALD'S COLLEGE OF HAIR-DRESSING AND BEAUTY CULTURE, learn the sister arts of dressing the hair, treating the scalp and skin, manicuring, etc. Now is just the time for girls, who have left school, to take up this profession. Not difficult to learn; not overcrowded; proficiency commands high salary. Our advanced students are paid wages while still in college. Our graduates are constantly in demand. Diplomas from MACDONALD'S are recognized by leading establishments everywhere as testimonials of merit.

"IF YOU'RE AN EXPERT YOU'RE A MACDONALD GRADUATE."

Established four years ago by Miss Jessie H. MacDonald. This is the ORIGINAL college of its kind on the Coast. Perfectly refined and exclusively for ladies. Skillful training by competent tutors. Special rates of tuition if you start with our July class.

MACDONALD'S
MACDONALD'S

Ladies, you may have expert service in manicuring, facial massage, hair dressing, scalp treatments each, 15 cents in college. Call and see our beautiful line of hair goods. We match any shade. Combing made to order any style. All the MACDONALD toilet preparations we make and guarantee as absolutely pure. If you cannot call, write for free illustrated booklet. Mail orders filled.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS: Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY.

GOOD SENSE BEAUTY TALK. HOW TO CARE FOR THE SKIN AND HAIR. If you keep your face clean, "just real clean," you will never have wrinkles, blackheads or big pores. You can do it with ANNA BERGERON'S WITCHHAZEL CLEANING CREAM AND SKIN FOOD. One of her scientific ice treatments will teach you how by devoting ten minutes a day to yourself you will accomplish wonders. No skinning or old fashioned massage, but a treatment that cleanses the pores, hardens the tissue and strengthens the muscles. Dandruff and falling hair positively cured by my medicated shampoo and hair tonics. 416-17 FAY BLDG., cor. Third and Hill. Phone A5037. x11

SUNDAY REAL ESTATE LINERS—Classified real estate advertisements for insertion in THE SUNDAY TIMES must be in the office not later than 10:30 o'clock Saturday nights. Other "want" advertisements for Sunday insertion will be taken over the counter until 11:30 p.m.

The great volume of liners printed in The Sunday Times, numbering regularly over 5000 separate announcements, makes this regulation absolutely necessary in order to get the big Sunday issue out on time.

$1000 FORFEIT.

I WILL FORFEIT $1000 CASH IF I CANNOT PROVE TO EVERYONE CALLING AT MY OFFICE THAT I HAVE READ FOR MORE PROMINENT AND WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE THAN ANY OTHER THREE CLAIRVOYANTS IN LOS ANGELES. THIS EVIDENCE, IN THE FORM OF PERSONAL LETTERS OF INDORSEMENT, AUTOGRAPHS, PHOTOS AND HAND PRINTS WITH PERSONAL SIGNATURES ATTACHED, INCLUDING KING EDWARD VII, QUEEN ALEXANDRIA, CAMILLE D'ARVILLE, LILLIAN RUSSELL, GROVER CLEVELAND, MRS. CLEVELAND, PROMINENT STATESMEN, MONARCHS, GOVERNORS AND PROFESSIONAL MEN AND WOMEN FROM VARIOUS PARTS OF THE WORLD, BEING OF A CHARACTER THAT MONEY CANNOT BUY.

PROF. STANLEY IS THE OLDEST CLAIRVOYANT IN EXPERIENCE, THE RICHEST IN KNOWLEDGE AND SKILL. CROWNED WITH YEARS OF UNPARALLELED SUCCESS, HIS ADVICE HAS SAVED AND MADE THOUSANDS HAPPY. IT WILL BENEFIT YOU.

If you contemplate consulting a clairvoyant, several things should be taken into consideration—ability, the honesty of methods, the fairness of dealings, the higher degree of work, the accuracy of each prediction, the common sense used with it, the interest taken in each case, the respect shown to each caller, the fact of secrecy in consultation, the fee charged for services.

If you wish the truth with reliable advice, you will consult him on past, present and future. Bear in mind you will hear the truth. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

If there was no genuine there would be no counterfeit. There is honest and dishonest Drs., in fact every profession. A trial will convince the most skeptical that Byron Stanley stands in a position that no just criticism can disturb.

IT IS TO YOUR INTEREST TO CONSULT HIM AND FOR A SMALL FEE LET HIM RELIEVE YOU OF ALL MENTAL ANXIETY AND GUIDE AND DIRECT YOU INTO PLEASANT PATHS OF HAPPINESS AND PROSPERITY.

THERE ARE MANY WHO WOULD SEEK THE PEACE OF MIND A CONSULTATION WITH BYRON STANLEY WOULD GIVE THEM, BUT FOR THEIR FOOLISH MODESTY AND SENSELESS FEAR OF BEING RIDICULED, WHICH IS A GROUNDLESS FEAR.

HIS CLIENTAGE IS LARGE AND EMBRACES PEOPLE IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE, FROM THE RICHEST AND PROUDEST TO THE POOREST AND MOST HUMBLE, SO DON'T DELAY, BUT GO TO HIM TODAY.

REMEMBER THE NAME,
STANLEY.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 332 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

OFFICE OPEN SUNDAY A.M. x11

WANTED — MANY YOUNG MEN FIND life in the navy attractive, with opportunity to save money and get practical training. The navy needs mechanics of all kinds, men experienced in clerical work, in hospital work, as well as seamen. This nation is building a powerful and efficient navy, and an enlistment means a definite plan now and a definite future.

There is an incentive to get to the top in the naval service. Ambitious men have every encouragement to improve themselves. A man is assured of continuous employment at good pay, and advancement as he becomes more proficient.

The government prefers to train young men at its own expense, at naval training stations. The recruit is placed on the pay roll the day he enters. Practical instruction, intended to fit a young man to go on board ship in a few months' time and do the work required of him.

The Navy Department doesn't urge young men to enlist, but suggests that they investigate and decide for themselves whether the opportunities are worth considering.

Applicants accepted between 17 and 35; or, if possessing a trade, if under 35. Boys under 18 must furnish written consent of parent or guardian; and under 21, must furnish birth certificate, or statement of age signed by parents. Apply, or write to Navy Recruiting Station, SAN FERNANDO BLDG., 4th and Main sts., Los Angeles.

WE'LL CASH IT FOR YOU.

To obtain the desired success in the sale of second-hand automobiles it is essential that lots of different ideas, not employed by the average broker, be incorporated into a few strong principles.

12 years' N. Y. experience in the second-hand game and the knowledge of knowing how is one of our methods.

A combination of clever ideas, collectively employed, accomplished these results.

It's easy to sell anything if you know how. We produce results and can sell your car.

Everything we do, arguments made, we stand back of. Together with keeping your car thoroughly clean and polished daily and in most cases sell without demonstration.

When car is sold, we charge you 5 per cent. commission for our services and pay all expenses advertising, gasoline, etc.

PLEASE BRING IN YOUR CAR.

Runabout urgently needed. Very respectfully, MANHATTAN AUTO AND PARAOPLANE CO., 1215-18 S. Olive. 'Phone Main 4103, F5604. 11

The steamer George W. Fenwick arrived today with 2,300,000 feet of lumber for the National Lumber Company. The Fenwick towed from Oregon down the coast to San Francisco one of the largest lumber rafts ever floated by the Hammond Lumber Company. It contained 8,000,000 feet and is 570 feet long. Not only did the Fenwick bring the raft down the coast without trouble, but she towed it right up the Hammond boom in San Francisco Harbor without the use of the tugs that are usually employed to cautiously bring the rafts into port.

Four steam schooners sailed North today to reload lumber for this port. The Doris will call at Redondo Beach with balance of cargo. The Harold Dollar will sail tomorrow for the same port with balance of cargo.

The steamer Hanalei sailed tonight for San Francisco with freight and passengers for the Independent line, and the steamer Santa Rosa will sail tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock for the Pacific Coast Steamship Company. Capt. Feria is in command of the Santa Rosa during the vacation of Capt. Alexander, who is in the mountains.

A WONDER.

PROSPEROUS OXNARD, THE BEET SUGAR TOWN.

Beets and Beans Make Farmers Wealthy—Many Began as Renters—Fifteen Minutes Ride to the Ocean Beach—Good Lands Open—Sugar Factory Second Largest in the World.

BY E. C. PENTLAND.

"WHAT kind of town is Oxnard?" I overheard one gentleman ask another as the three of us were standing on the corner by The Times office, in Los Angeles, waiting for a street car.

I awaited the gentleman's answer with considerable interest, since I had just returned from a visit to the "Sugar Town," up the coast, sixty-six miles northerly from Los Angeles, and as I had formed a very favorable opinion of Oxnard, I wanted to learn whether it had impressed the gentleman addressed in the same way. His answer, however, was: "I don't know much about Oxnard, as I have never been there."

At first I was inclined to volunteer some information, but on second thought, I made up my mind, since I had not been questioned, it would be better for me not to answer. The gentleman must have been a mind reader, or something of the kind, since he turned toward me and said: "Ever been there?"

"Just came back last evening." I said. "What do you particularly want to know about Oxnard?"

"Everything you can tell me which will help me to decide whether I want to go there and make my home. I am from Michigan, and have some knowledge of growing sugar beets. I want also to know about the climate, the people, and the inducements which the country has to offer."

"I found the climate delightful," I said. Oxnard is located only three miles from the ocean. They have a local railroad from the town to the coast and hourly trips are made in a passenger car, the motive power being gasoline, it being what you might call an automobile on a railroad track. This same company has a total of about thirty miles of railroad tracks, out to rock quarries, beet fields, etc., covering quite a section of the surrounding country. There is a wharf at the terminus of the road, where ocean steamers land passengers and discharge freight. Efforts are being made to build up a seaside resort, there being bath-houses, camping grounds, and sites for summer cottages. It looks very probable that the town will extend, in the shape of ten-acre and larger tracts from its present site to the seashore.

"Oxnard is what you might term a new town, since only eleven years ago its present site was a farm. The location of a $2,000,000 beet-sugar factory was what gave the city its start, and it now has a population estimated at from 2500 to 3500. There are two banks, a daily and two weekly newspapers, hotels and lodging-houses, paved streets, a Carnegie library, some fine churches, high school and grammar schools, a public square, besides a full representation in every line of mercantile business. The population is composed mostly of those who are engaged in business in Oxnard, or farmers who have become wealthy growing the two staple crops, sugar beets and beans. The surrounding country is level and has a very fertile soil. It is so near the seacoast that irrigation is not necessary, but if wanted, an abundance of water can be obtained, by sinking wells and putting in pumping plants, or from artesian wells."

"What chances are there to buy or rent farming land, and can I obtain any employment there?" asked the gentleman.

"I am going to answer your questions just as they were answered for me. I found two classes of people residing in Oxnard, one very progressive and enthusiastic over the future prospects of the town and country, while there were some whom I met, who must certainly belong to the 'Ananias Club,' they so far 'avoided' the truth in regard to conditions. They told me there was no land for sale, none to rent, and that there was no chance for a newcomer to obtain employment. It is not the truth, but if you should go to Oxnard, and I advise you to do so, you may meet some of those 'knockers,' so I suggest that you meet, in preference, the better sort, composed of such men as J. A. Driffill, J. A. Donlon, A. Levy, W. R. Norton, George E. Hume, J. R. Gabbert, T. M. Hill, J. H. Laubacher, Alpha Adams, H. R. Staples, L. Lehmann, M. Lehmann, E. Lehmann, Paul Lehmann, C. J. Murphy, S. Weill, P. S. Cummings, Ben S. Virden, P. W. Dennis, S. M. Wineman, F. S. Toothhaker, I. M. Poggi, C. C. Trexler, John Steinmiller, H. H. Eastwood, J. W. Shillington, R. W. Avery, H. W. Witman, Sam S. Wineman, T. B. Blackburn, Charles F. Blackstock, H. K. Snow, Jr., Maj. Carr, John Logamarsino, L. E. Vaughn, Bert Brown, W. F. Linnet, S. B. Bagnell, M. Pattison, E. Abplanolp, E. K. Bither, R. Green, B. H. Korts, Roy F. Hoffman, W. H. Lathrop, G. D. Cooley, B. Holst, S. Rummelsburg, K. Knudson, W. E. Kelly, Joseph Leonard, E. H. Vineyard, Charles Donlon, W. B. Cooper, J. Trigoeden.

"Those gentlemen are not 'knockers;' they are 'boosters,' and will give you reliable information about Oxnard and the surrounding country, one reason being that they have made a success in life themselves, and know how to advise a newcomer for his own good, and will show you every courtesy in doing so."

PRICES OF LAND.

I could not believe that so thriving and attractive a town as I found Oxnard to be, could have started from nothing only eleven years ago, and has now reached its present prosperity, and wealth, if conditions, as stated to me by the "knockers" were true. So I began to make inquiries. Naturally, I first went to a real estate dealer, and asked: "Is it true that there is no land for sale near Oxnard?"

"'Most assuredly it is not true,' he said. 'We have for sale, within half a mile of Oxnard, as fine beet, bean and fruit lands as can be found in the county. We have at least 1500 acres within two miles of Oxnard, for from $300 to $500 an acre. We have lands still further out for $125 an acre, and along the foothills grazing lands as low as $7 an acre. The country tributary to Oxnard, that is, the beet-raising country, extends nine miles north, four miles south, about thirty miles east and five miles west, a territory embracing an area of about 450,000 acres. The bottom lands, where our beets and beans are grown, produce crops that bring an income over all expenses, on land values of $500 and $600 an acre. Unless the owners can see some better investment for their money they will not offer the land at a less price. And when you come to think of it, why should they? This land is a good investment. It cannot burn up, nor run away. Land adjacent to Oxnard has two very profitable sources of income, viz: beets and beans; therefore, there is but little likelihood that there will ever be a failure of both crops. The profits on the land, from each crop, varies but little. There are numerous instances where both beet and bean crops have produced an income of $100 an acre a year, of which $70 to $80 is clear of all expenses. We are offering for sale lands for from $100 to $500 an acre, suitable for beets, beans or fruit, the price varying on account of location and quality of the soil. The complaint, sometimes made, that the prices are too high, is nothing new, since we heard it even when land was selling for one-third what it is now.'

"A few years ago a gentleman came out from Iowa, with the intention of buying a farm near Oxnard. He was shown eighty acres of splendid land, with forty acres in young lemon trees and the other forty being beet land. He was asked $175 an acre, but held up his hands in amazement at the price demanded, and did not buy. A year or so later the lemon grove came into bearing, and was sold at $1000 an acre. Why? Because the income justified the price. There is an abundance of land for sale, some of it being cheap at $400 an acre, and other land dear at $10 an acre. The purchaser must use his judgment. The gentleman alluded to above, who failed to see that $175 an acre was a bargain price for that piece of land, did not take into consideration what the land would eventually return in income. The man who paid $1000 an acre had a positive assurance of a crop of lemons that would pay, over all expenses, $200 an acre, and he was satisfied with 20 per cent. on his investment.

"Those who have told you there is no land for sale near Oxnard do not know what they are talking about. We have tracts of land for sale as small as five, ten and twenty acres, but the smallest practical farm investment should be not less than twenty acres. We sell land on terms of one-third and one-fourth cash, the balance to be paid in a term of years, with interest at from 7 to 8 per cent. Mr. Yiegoejen, who purchased 160 acres at $350 an acre, himself informed me, that last year he had a net income of nearly 20 per cent. on the purchase price, raising beets, after all the expenses were paid. As an example of what has been done by purchasers of land may be mentioned the case of J. T. Lewis. He purchased a large tract of hill and valley land, which had been used as a sheep range and for raising grain. He cleared the land, and put it in beans. The first crop brought in $36,000, and last year the income from all sources was $72,000. The 8000 acres cost about $110,000, including the improvements he made, and he has already nearly gotten all his invested money back again. This illustrates what has already been said, that land values depend upon what the income will be. This land was covered with a growth of willow, and in that shape earned but little. Mr. Lewis was virtually 'talked' into buying the ranch, and was so undecided that he called in his two sons to consult them before purchasing. When Mr. Lewis first came to Oxnard he was a renter, and then made this purchase. The land had been offered for sale for several years, and at the price, in the condition the land was, did not excite any particular interest, and was not considered any great bargain. Mr. Lewis had confidence in his ability to handle it, and now every one can see how easy it is to make a fortune, as has Mr. Lewis, if they can find another piece of land just like that.

"But there are other chances just as good. Peter Burfiendt purchased 110 acres of land two years ago for $100 an acre, it having traces of alkali. Last year the crop of beets netted him, after all expenses had been paid, nearly $50 an acre, the gross return being $8402. With this year's crop ever cent he has expended on the land will have been returned to him. Edward Skull rented ninety-six acres of land, of which ninety-one acres were last year put in beets, the balance in alfalfa. The gross income from the crop was $7921.38, or an average of $87 an acre. He paid two-sevenths of this for rent, so that it left him nearly $52 an acre."

CHANCE TO RENT.

A new tract of land, about eight miles from Oxnard, is being put in shape for renting out to tenants next year for the first time, and should secure at least thirty families. All that is necessary in order to secure a piece of this land is that the renter shall have the necessary "equipment" and agree to farm the land in a "farmer-like manner." The renting is generally done in 100-acre tracts, for one year at a time, but if the renter proves to be a "good renter," there is no trouble to secure the land from year to year. A "good renter" is the person who raises the largest and most profitable crop. That is why the man who owns land will give the preference in renting to a white person over a foreigner, even at a less rent, and they farm all the lands. But is it good policy to let them get too strong a foothold? This can best be prevented by educating land owners, through public opinion, against renting or selling their lands to such races, and the greater publicity given to such cases, the more it will tend to prevent it. Out of the 40,000 or more acres in sugar beets and lima beans near Oxnard, there are now rented to Japanese only about 700 acres in beets and 800 acres in beans, but that is more than it should be. If these 1500 acres were rented by only fifteen families of white, there would be a beneficial effect on the trade of our merchants. The Japanese open stores of their own, run restaurants, poolrooms, saloons, laundries, barber shops, etc., in opposition to the local stores, and trade largely among themselves, any trade they get from the white being clear gain."

RAISING BEANS.

B. Horst, who has an experience of several years in the bean business, speaking of its present condition and future possibilities, said: "The area of land in beans, tributary to Oxnard, embraces about 25,000 acres. There are also about 20,000 acres in sugar beets, this still leaves many thousand acres of land which could, by expending money in preparing it, be put out in either beets, beans or fruit. There is a growing tendency to set the new lands to fruit, such as oranges, lemons, apricots, peaches, walnuts, etc., which pay as well, or even better, than beets or beans. The average yield of beans per acre is one ton, the average price being 4 cents a pound. The cost per acre, for raising the crop, will not reach more than $20. This leaves a net profit of $60 an acre. There are several conditions which have an influence in the yield of beans, one is the soil, and another, equally as important, the skill in cultivation. We have examples of yields, under skilled management, of thirty, forty, and even fifty bags to the acre. A bag of beans weighs eighty pounds, and sells for from $2.60 to $3.40 a bag. Thus fifty bags would amount to $170 an acre, but an ordinary yield is about $80 an acre. The beans are nearly all harvested by white labor, the wages varying from $1.50 to $2 a day and board, the work being to manage the bean cutter and to place the vines in heaps so they will dry out. The thrashing is all done by machinery, similar to that used in the wheat fields, the only difference being that special cylinders are made for the bean crop. The bean lands are rented, either for cash or a share of the crop, in the latter case from one-third to one-half the crop.

"There are numerous instances where men have started in working for wages near Oxnard, later were renters, and are now owners of beet or bean lands, and ride around in their automobiles, and have accumulated it in the last few years. The months when labor is most in demand in the bean fields are September and October, although it is necessary to employ men to cultivate the land almost continuously from January to July. The soil is not alone to be given credit for the successful raising of beans, but our even, dry climate, neither hot nor cold, which has a great deal to do with it. This peculiar climate is limited in area to Ventura county and vicinity, so that we are called the 'Bean County.' For a man who wants to get a start in life, the bean business offers excellent opportunities, as the capital required to put in the crop is not necessarily large, and the returns come in within four months from planting."

LABORERS WANTED.

Just at this season of the year all kinds of work can be had in the sugar factory, the beet fields, the bean fields, and the fruit orchards. White labor is given the preference in all cases. There will be from 500 to 700 men employed in the sugar factory, which commenced work July 10 on the four or five months' "campaign." There are two shifts of men, of twelve hours each, the work continuing night and day. The wages are 20 cents an hour and upward, no Japanese being employed. In the beet and bean fields, and the fruit orchards, much of the work is done by the "piece." I saw a father, mother and three girls on a wagon, just leaving to go out and work in an apricot orchard. They told me they would probably pit twenty boxes each a day, for which they were to be paid $2.50. That would make the earning capacity of the family, for the twenty days they would work, $250. In some countries a family would have to work a whole year to earn that much money. If the farmers would organize so that they could unite in going into the labor market and picking out those who want to pick together in the orchards, they could get all the white help they want every year, and not have their fruit handled by foreigners. There are hundreds in Los Angeles who would go out in the orchards and work, if they could choose their associates.

In one section that I have in mind, a farmer had sixty helpers in his orchard every year for years, they being families in a town about one hundred miles away. They considered it a "picnic" to be together out in the orchards. His fruit was the cleanest and brought the very highest prices in the market. A shipment was being made up to go to Alaska. A young lady wrote on one of the fruit wrappers, "Send me a nugget," and sure enough a nugget came from Alaska, worth about $5. A correspondence followed and later a wedding. Both men, women and children can work in the orchards, and camping places are generally provided by the farmers, free. At least two thousand persons will be required to do the work in and about Oxnard for the next three months, and white labor will be employed if it can be had.

The president of the Board of Trade, J. A. Driffell, or the secretary, J. R. Gabbert, will furnish information to those who write for work, either in the factory or fields. Camping out at this season of the year is enjoyable. Instead of its being true that there is no demand for labor near Oxnard and in the fruit orchards, there is an actual scarcity, unless present prospects of crops should change.

BEET RAISING PROFITABLE.

The average amount of sugar, or saccharine matter, in a ton of sugar beets is 19 per cent., or 380 pounds. Payment is made to the farmer on the 15th of the month following delivery, the price for 19 per cent. beets being $5.70 a ton, and 30 cents for each 1 per cent. higher. Last year the average yield per acre, near Oxnard, was eleven tons, and the average paid the farmer was $62.46 per acre. J. H. Alford had a yield of 28.29 tons to the acre, which brought him $134.27 an acre, for a total of thirty acres. J. H. Eastwood raised eleven tons to the acre which went 23.2 per cent. in sugar, or $77 an acre. Edward Pickett had some loads of beets that went 29.9 per cent. sugar, and his average on one hundred acres was 22.9. A great deal of the land near Oxnard is being worked by renters, but it is not easy to secure such land to rent, since as soon as one tenant drops out there are twenty others to take his place.

The best way for a non-resident to do, is let a real estate agent have his application, and look out for him. The outfit necessary for a renter to farm one hundred acres in beets, is, eight head of horses, a planter, a beet plow, a fourteen-inch or a sixteen-inch plow, and a harrow. The important part of cultivation, in growing beets, is the thorough preparation of the seed bed through the pulverization of the soil. The beet seed is planted in drills, about sixteen inches apart, the beets being thinned to eight inches apart. There are four cultivations during the growing season. No irrigation is necessary. The last operation is plowing out the beets. The topping and loading are done by hand. The "orders" for plowing out the beets are sent to the farmer from the sugar factory which has contracted the crop. Some plant the beet seed in December and others every other month until May, which brings in ripe beets from July to November.

One great advantage in the beet business is that the farmer knows what he is going to be paid for his crop at harvest time, as he contracts his beets in advance, and also there is not as much danger of entire failure, as some other crops. The usual rent of beet land is one-fifth or one-quarter of the crop delivered at the "dump." The "dump," which is built by the sugar company, is located wherever there can be secured at least one thousand acres of beets.

THE SUGAR FACTORY.

When the Southern Pacific train approaches Oxnard the tourist agent on the train announces: "This is Oxnard where is located the second largest beet-sugar factory in the world, having a daily capacity of over two thousand tons." It is said that in combined complete cutting and refining capacity this is the largest factory of any, but I could get no official figures to prove the statement. To realize what this immense sugar factory really looks like, you should see the buildings. They are the real sight. The main structure, of brick, is 401 feet long, 121 feet wide, and three stories high. The horse power necessary to operate the plant is 10,000, and there are twenty-eight boilers. The two principal smoke stacks are 156 feet high and twelve feet in diameter. The four beet sheds, for receiving the beets, are each 350 feet long, and hold one thousand tons each. The output of this beet-sugar factory was 54,000,000 pounds of sugar last year. There are eight sugar factories in California, with a combined capacity of 9100 tons of beets a day. There are yet shipped into the United States, from Germany and other countries, 1,500,000 tons of sugar each year, and it is estimated that five hundred more beet sugar factories are needed to completely supply our home market. The home market is increasing at the rate of 6 per cent. each year, so that any danger of over-production in beet sugar seems far in the future. What is probably wanted is a greater tariff on sugar. There is no reason why the United States should import sugar from foreign countries.

HOW BEET SUGAR IS MADE.

Through the courtesy of Manager J. A. Driffell, and Chief of Agriculture C. E. Bensel, the following outline of operations in making beet sugar, are obtained:

The digging of beets commences about the 6th of July and continues until about the middle of November. When the sugar factory once starts up the operation is continuous day and night during the "campaign" which lasts from four to five months. The beets are weighed as they are brought in from the fields and are unloaded into the "sheds," where water, in flumes, carry them to the "house," where they are washed and again, automatically, weighed. They are then cut into slices, called "cossetts" and carried to the "differsion battery cells" where they remain nearly one and a half hours. The "raw juice" is drawn off by hydraulic pressure to the "measuring tanks" thence to the "deffication and carbonization process" which takes another hour, where it is treated by lime and carbonic gases in order to eliminate most of the impurities called "non-sucrose matter," the impurities being "precipitated." The "thin juice" is then run to the "evaporator system" and the resulting "thick juice" to the "pans" where it is boiled to a "grain" and becomes a "fillmass" which is sent to the "centrifugals" and, after being "dried" is sugar, and packed into bags of one hundred pounds each, ready for market. The whole process takes about twenty-four hours, from the "sugar beet" to the "beet sugar."

PLENTY OF POWER.

Oxnard is the general headquarters of the Ventura County Power Company which supplies over 2000 horsepower to motors, has 4500 customers for lighting; has fifty-five miles of transmission line, and more than 200 miles of distributing line. Employment is given to over eighty men, with an annual pay roll of over $60,000. This transmission is from the mountains, fifty-five miles away. The same company has thirty-five miles of gas mains, having spent, during the past two years, over $750,000 in extensions and betterments.

TALK OF VALLEY PICTURESQUE.

LECTURE ON THE SAN JOAQUIN IS APPLAUDED.

Stereopticon Views and Luminous Explanation at the Branch Office of "The Times" on South Spring Street Prove Attractive Entertainment. Development of the Country.

Another large audience last night applauded the ever-interesting story of golden opportunity in the San Joaquin Valley, told by an able lecturer and the stereopticon at the Spring-street branch office of The Times.

With but a few words of introduction, the speaker lifted his many hearers to the lofty mountain crags and peaks, and from this lofty elevation, 14,000 feet above the level of the booming breakers, he showed them the everlasting fields of snow that assure throughout the year a bountiful supply of the purest water for the great and fertile valley that stretched away beneath their station above the clouds.

As the beautiful picture of mountain scenes was thrown against the screen the tall and stately pines were seen piercing the sky line above the snow that kissed their feet, and it seemed hard to believe that such things could be when reports of intense suffering from heat were still coming in from the States that lay beyond the blessed limits of California to the East. Packed into the great, bell-like cañons, the snow was heaped in high, glittering banks, and from the cañons' mouths could be seen escaping with a gurgle and countless splashes of joy in the sun's warm rays, the life-giving water as it sought its way to the fields and orchards of the valley below.

It was explained by the lecturer that nature, in its full-hearted generosity, has provided far more of this water than is being used, and that modern methods of preserving it will assure a store of the precious fluid that will make into gardens of plenty vast tracts of fertile soil of which no account has as yet been taken by improvident man. Swinging unexpectedly from the poetic to the practical, the speaker explained that between 600 and 800 artesian wells, and between 1200 and 1400 pumping plants, now in operation in the valley, have but served to prove the inexhaustibility of the water supply of that singularly favored country, giving water enough for all practical purposes, and he further quoted figures to show that, with proper care taken in the conservation of the mountain waters, there will be enough to irrigate an area equal to, or even granter than, that now under cultivation in the San Joaquin Valley.

Step by step the audience was taken through the development of this wonderland, from the day in which only the wild flowers grew in their luxuriant abandon as they wantoned with the kisses of the wind, fearing only the occasional crunch of the wild beast and the even softer-footed Indian that followed it, down through the coming of the sod plow, that advance agent of civilization which overturned the flowers ruthlessly to make way for the waving fields of wheat, and again on through the years, to the present high development of some parts of the valley, showing what is possible in those sections of it which have not yet been impressed into the service of man.

Picture after picture, thrown upon the screen, unfolded the many chapters of this story of man's highest achievement and the transformation of the wilderness by agriculture into a garden of plenty. There were the great fields of alfalfa, the dairy farms with the lowing kine, the orange groves, the peach orchards, the berries, the sugar beet, the eucalyptus that may prove a veritable gold mine for California, and the various other marvels of this amazing valley.

And, with it, there was the practical, common-sense talk of the lecturer as he paused in his descriptive flights to give sordid prices one almost wished withheld, explained commercial facts and dispensed a mass of other valuable information. A number of prospective settlers have already gone into the valley as a result of the work of this bureau, and the indications are that many will follow.

Needed a Physician.

A short time ago, says the Courier Journal, a young lady was troubled with a boil on her knee that grew so bad that it was thought necessary to call a physician. She had formed a dislike for the family physician, so her father suggested several others, and finally said that he would call in the physician with the homoepathic case, who passed the house every day. They kept a sharp lookout for him, and when he came along he was called in. The young lady modestly showed him the disabled member. The little man looked at it and said: "Why, that's pretty bad." "Well," she said, "what must I do?" "If I were you," he answered, "I would send for a physician. I am a piano-tuner."

ADVERTISING FOLLOWS CIRCULATION.

TO BE SURE! This is the basis upon which discerning business men apportion their yearly financial appropriation. It is not haphazard guess, but scientific investigation, careful and painstaking research, close watching of the source from which the biggest results are derived, and the most minute watchfulness which influence the latter-day business man in the expenditure of his hard-earned dollars for publicity. He studies the pulse of the people; he knows, it might be said, better than any other reader the literature that appeals.

So it is, without fear or favor, and without personal feelings entering into the subject, he distributes his advertising among the different publications which have their existence in the field of his operations.

Circulation begets advertising. Advertising follows circulation. The Times has the circulation, and hence the advertising follows:

In the first six months of 1909 The Times published a total of 26,694 columns, or 3812 pages, of paid advertising matter; for the same period of 1908, 24,387 columns, showing a gain of 2307 columns in the last six months' time. The aggregate for the first six months of 1909 is over 60 per cent. more than was printed by any other local newspaper, and the gain exceeds that of any contemporary by more than 400 columns.

A complete record of the advertising figures of all the Los Angeles papers for each of the six months last past, compared with the like period of 1908, has been kept, and is contained in the following condensed statement:

MISSOURI DELUGE.

CLOUDBURST AGAIN ADDS TO TERRORS OF MISSOURI FLOOD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, (Mo.) July 10.—Another rainfall is general tonight throughout the flooded section of Missouri and adjoining States. A waterspout struck about four miles northwest of West Plains, in Howell Valley, bordering Arkansas in the Ozark Mountains, southern Missouri, at 8 o'clock tonight. The raging torrent ruined crops as it swept down the valley and through West Plains, but no lives were lost so far as known, as farmers and citizens had been warned by telephone in time to flee from their homes and get out of its way.

The Maria des Cygnes River will be higher tomorrow at Rich Hill, Missouri, than in the disastrous flood year of 1903, the worst ever known in that region's history. Several small tornadoes hit Rich Hill and vicinity accompanying a heavy rain.

Springfield, Mo., was visited by another cloudburst today, 1.50 inches of water falling in seven hours, making 7.55 inches of rain falling there this week.

A dozen southern Missouri counties suffered losses of over $50,000 each.

M. A. Holman gigged fifty large, live catfish with a pitchfork in a wheatfield three miles from any stream or pond, after the cloudburst.

The flood tonight isolates South Cedar, Missouri. The St. Louis division of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, between Booneville, Mo., and St. Louis, is submerged tonight in many places from the Missouri River overflow, and all trains on that division were annuliel today, the Katy Flyers being detoured tonight over the Missouri Pacific from St. Louis to Sedalia.

The flood at Schell City threatens to stop Katy traffic between Sedalia and Parsons, Kansas, tomorrow. The Chariton River overflow has isolated Glascow, Missouri, since yesterday, the Wabash, Burlington and Rock Island trains going, by way of the Alton railroad.

Many thousands of additional acres of growing corn and wheat in shock were ruined today in Central and East Central Missouri. Every indications point to a higher stage of the Missouri than its disastrous overflow of 1903.

THREE KILLED BY TEXAS TORNADO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SNYDER (Tex.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] W. B. Dowell, his wife and 10-year-old daughter were instantly killed in a tornado which demolished their home, three miles southwest of Hermleigh, late last night. Another daughter, 14, was fatally injured.

APPREHENSION IN KANSAS CITY HOMES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY, July 10.—Flood conditions along the Kansas and Missouri rivers and their tributaries in this vicinity continue to cause apprehension. The Missouri River at Kansas City has remained at 25.4 feet all day but weather officials say it probably will be twenty-six by daylight and if such is the case, a few of the West Bottom streets will be flooded.

Train service west of here is badly demoralized. Freight service is practically at a standstill.

Renewed heavy rains in northwestern Missouri and in Kansas last night again sent up the Missouri and Kansas rivers and their tributaries, but no serious result followed, according to the weather observer. An effort was made today to raise the submerged cars of the Santa Fé train wrecked Wednesday near Pomona, Kan.

The body of a farmhand named Hill has been found in the river. He is believed to have lived in the vicinity. All of the passengers of the wrecked train appear to have been accounted for, despite rumors that additional bodies will be found when the flood recedes.

STREAM OVERFLOWS AT SIOUX CITY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) July 10.—Perry Creek, a small stream that separates the east side from the west side of Sioux City, suddenly overflowed its banks early today. Many homes were surrounded with six feet of water and much damage resulted.

East of town, the Great Northern and Illinois Central tracks were washed out in long stretches.

The Floyd River in the eastern part of the city also rose rapidly today and the people along its banks were warned. The overflows are due to heavy rains.

Merrill, fifteen miles east of here, reports almost a cloudburst with heavy damage to property and crops.

STILL FEARFUL IN BROWNSVILLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BROWNSVILLE (Tex.) July 10.—Surrounded by water the inhabitants of West Brownsville were today fearful of the consequences should the Rio Grande continue to rise. Small houses west of the city stood in several feet of water.

VERA CRUZ FLOODS DESTROY PROPERTY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CITY OF MEXICO, July 10.—Floods in the State of Vera Cruz have destroyed much property and inundated a wide area. The Orizaba River is out of its banks and the surrounding country is from five to six feet under water. The government has sent relief to the afflicted district.

CREDIT RUMOR OF BIG DEAL.

Wall Street Brokers Inclined to Believe Report That Harriman Will Control Illinois Central.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Persistent reports continue to be heard in Wall street that plans are under way for the carrying out of a comprehensive deal, involving the absolute transfer of control of the Illinois Central Railroad Company to the Union Pacific Railroad. In official quarters knowledge of any such proposition is disclaimed, but the idea, nevertheless, finds many believers among the well informed.

Even those who assert positively that some such a deal will be put through, declare that it will not be consummated for some months. Their idea is that upon Mr. Harriman's return from Europe, he will take up the matter and carry it to a conclusion some time before the end of the year.

Friday's rumors that the Union Pacific would lease the Illinois Central on 10 per cent. guaranteed basis are generally discredited in authoritative quarters. Unofficial information concerning the plans under way does not agree with the 10 per cent. guaranteed dividend theory. Those professing to have knowledge of the matter, assert that details of the plans for taking over the Illinois Central have not been worked out, but that if it is eventually executed, it will probably provide for the exchange of collateral trust bonds for stock of the Illinois Central, the latter being taken over at a valuation of say 200 per cent. in bonds, which would become a liability of the Union Pacific and be secured by the Illinois Central stock as collateral.

Such a proposition would be very similar to the deal by which the Burlington was taken over by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific jointly.

To Build Ore Road.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) July 10.—A contract for the construction of the 173-mile branch of the Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad from Tecopa to the lead mines in Inyo county, Cal., was let today by R. Alberger, general manager of the road. A bid of $250,000 was accepted. The mines will furnish 500 tons of ore daily.

SMILES OF PROSPERITY.

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Orders for car equipment by the railroads both east and west are on the increase. During the past week the Harriman lines have ordered 3325 box cars, 420 furniture store and caboose cars and about 1200 flat cars, gondola cars and hopper cars, in addition to a recent order for 134 passenger cars placed with the Pullman company.

The Santa Fé is said to be in the market for about 140 passenger cars and has ordered six locomotives. The Great Northern is in the market for 1000 box cars. The Baltimore and Ohio is said to be figuring on the purchase of about 3500 freight cars and is now in the market for forty-five coaches and five combination passenger and baggage cars. The Burlington is reported as about to purchase 500 refrigerator and 200 box cars.

MAY COMBINE.

Talk in Oakland of Combining the Coast League and State League Clubs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is a movement on foot in Oakland to combine the Coast League team and State League club into one organization, with Cy Moering, the outlaw magnate, holding the franchise in the Pacific Coast League. Several days ago a secret meeting was held between the parties interested, and steps were taken to have Oakland represented by one strong club in the Pacific Coast League.

If the big baseball deal goes through as it is expected to within the next few days, it will mean that the present Oakland team will drop out of the State League, and the players will be distributed to the Coast League teams after Oakland has had the pick of the bunch.

BRYAN'S DAUGHTER LECTURER.

Mrs. Ruth Leavitt Supplies Dates Her Father Is Unable to Fill.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ruth Bryan Leavitt since July 1 has been taking the place of her father as lecturer at sundry Chautauqua meetings on the Colorado western slope. Mrs. Leavitt says:

"I have been lecturing in my father's place. He's been very busy with other affairs and not wishing to deliberately break dates with the Chautauqua people he asked me to do what I could. So I delivered his lectures.

"I'm to fill other engagements during the summer, "she went on "but I'm not telling where I'm going, or on what subject I shall speak. I don't want too much of a hurrah made about it because people are rather apt to anticipate too much and be sadly disappointed."

SOLDIER DIES IN POVERTY.

Former Staff Officer Under "Fighting Joe" Wheeler Found Dead in Bowery Lodging-house.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—Col. Marcellus Pointer, prominent during the Civil war, as a staff officer under Gen. Joe Wheeler, and of late years a supposedly successful railway promoter, was found dead today from apoplexy in a Bowery lodging house. Among his effects were found letters from Gen. Wheeler commending him for bravery, and a petition to President McKinley, signed by many prominent army officers, asking that Pointer be appointed a Brig.-Gen. of Spanish-American volunteers.

Among his papers were pawn tickets for his watch and for several gold medals given him for courageous conduct on the field of battle.

OFFER TO HATTERS.

NEWARK (N. J.) July 10.—A special committee of the grand jury here has submitted an offer to the striking hatters, which, if accepted by the employers, will mean the return to work within ten days of 1400 men and women, who have been idle for months. The offer has been approved by the employés.

It is understood that the employers still will refuse to place the union label on their output.

SURVEYS FOR COAST DEFENSE.

LEAVENWORTH (Kan.) July 10.—A detachment of sixty picked men from the third battalion of engineers, under command of Capt. Lukesh, will start tomorrow morning for San Francisco. They will be engaged there for four months in making surveys in connection with the land defense projects about the city.

BIG LUMBER FIRE.

DULUTH (Minn.) July 10.—Eighteen million feet of lumber, valued at between $450,000 and $500,000, was destroyed by fire at the mills of the Virginia and Rainy Lake company this evening. It was fully insured.

Prominent People Make Very Strong Statements

People All Over California Give Praise to Chee Foo.

It must be with a great deal of satisfaction that Chee Foo, the eminent Chinese scientist, has listened to and read the unstinted praise given him in the past two weeks from people all over California. But with the modesty, of the Chinese philosopher he says little except that he was convinced of what his medicines would do before he came here. Thousands of people in the great Orient have been cured of various ailments and the sick in this country are quickly learning of the great benefit—really wonders—the medicines are doing.

Among those who have received astonishing results when many doctors and other medicines had failed to cure are the following:

Ford West of 4305 West Second street, Santa Ana. He had kidney trouble and now, after taking the new Life Remedies, considers himself entirely cured.

Seymour King, the well-known diamond broker of the firm of Roth & King, Germain Building, was told he had Bright's Disease. Chee Foo's Gong Bing medicine cured him of gall stones.

T. A. Gingerich of 616½ South Hope street, Los Angeles, was on crutches, crippled with rheumatism. He now gets around good and lively without crutch or cane.

Mrs. M. E. Jennings of Jacinto, Glenn county, had chronic liver disease, gall stones and stomach trouble. Her rapid cure was a surprise to her.

Miss Ruth Egan of Eagle Rock was seriously ill with stomach trouble and nervous debility; she is now a strong convert to Chee Foo's remedies.

Another remarkable cure of gall stones is that of Mr. I. Steele, who is so thankful that he wants everyone to know of his experience. He resides at 1180 E. 57th St., and if anyone wishes to phone him, they may do so by calling up Sunset South 6025, and he'll be glad to tell them what the Chee Foo Medicines have done for him.

The above and hundreds of people right here in Los Angeles are daily sounding the praise of Chee Foo and his wonderful New Life Remedies.

Chee Foo may be seen daily at Dean's Drug Store, 214 South Spring street.

TOM SHEE BIN CO.
So. Main St.

"GIVE THE CHINAMAN A CHANCE"

"It was recently mentioned in The Times that Dr. Tom She Bin, one of the best known Chinese physicians in the United States, had been charged with practicing without a license. The doctor is a graduate of one of the leading colleges of medicine in China. He came to this country many years ago. En route plague broke out on the ship. The vessel's physician was unable to cope with it, but it is said that Dr. Tom saved every case. He was retained by the steamship company and served on Oriental lines for several years. He then began to practice among his countrymen in San Francisco, but after the earthquake, came to Los Angeles. In view of the fact that a majority of the plague cases in San Francisco have proved fatal under the care of white physicians, it might not be a bad idea to get Dr. Bin to go up there and see what he can do."

Dr. Tom She Bin can be seen at the Chinese Tea and Herb Sanitarium, 711 S. Main St. Established 1870.

Treats rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, consumption, appendicitis, kidney, liver and all female troubles and other diseases. Call and investigate. Testimonials and consultation free. Open day and night.

LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

MASKED PAIR KIDNAP BRIDE.

Young Woman Is Whisked Away on Wedding Day.

Is Bound, Gagged and Then Left in a Ditch.

For All That Is Merriest at Marriage Supper.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (Pa.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To be bound, gagged and carried away from her home a few hours before her wedding day, and left lying beside a roadway three miles away, was the experience of Miss Sadie Forsythe of Roscoe, who became Mrs. William Early tonight. Mrs. Early is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Forsythe, prominent residents of Roscoe.

The young woman said that about 5 o'clock yesterday morning she was awakened by some person under her window making a noise and calling "Sadie, come down here, Early wants to see you."

She hurriedly put on her clothing and went downstairs. As he stepped to the porch she was seized and blindfolded. She struggled with her captor, but he was too strong for her. A gag was placed in her mouth, and she was carried out to the road, where a buggy was waiting. She heard another man whisper, "Hurry up, Bill, there will be some one coming." The horse was whipped up, and she again began to struggle to gain her freedom.

One of the men held her, while the other bound her with a rope. Mrs. Early says that at this juncture she lost consciousness, and knew nothing more until she awoke at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at a lonely spot in the road, three miles from home. When the disappearance of the bride-to-be was discovered by her parents, they instituted a general search.

After she had been found, and her story became known, a large party started out on a hunt for the kidnaper. The victim of the outrage is about 21 years old. On account of being blindfolded she says she does not believe she could identify the two men. Although somewhat upset by her experience, the bride was among the merriest at the wedding tonight.

WIFE ON STAND.

Tells Story of Her Relations With Young Nephew Whom Her Doctor-Husband Murdered.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DETROIT (Mich.) July 10.—Mrs. Ethel Boyajian, testifying today in behalf of her husband, Dr. G. K. Boyajian on trial for murder, told the story of her relations with Harotoon Gostanian, her husband's nephew, which Dr. Boyajian's attorneys contended poisoned his mind, and that he was irresponsible when he shot and killed Gostanian in police court here April 30.

Mrs. Boyajian said her husband had always shown a fatherly attitude toward his young nephew, and made him the most welcome guest in their home.

While Dr. Boyajian was away on a lecture trip in April, Mrs. Boyajian testified, Gostanian attacked her in her home, repeating the assault on three occasions. She declared that he threatened to kill both her and the doctor if she revealed what he had done, and that she was afraid to resist him further or disclose his actions.

On cross-examination she admitted having called several times on Gostanian at his rooming-house and having telephoned him there, but denied that there was anything wrong in her actions.

COUPLE FIRED ON.

GIRL INJURED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WAUKEGAN (Ill.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The village of Wadsworth is wildly stirred by an unexpected attack made upon Miss Loretta Doyle and George Lybal, a well-known couple, after midnight, when they were returning from a dance, the assailant firing five shots at them from a bush and injuring the young woman.

The victim is a daughter of Michael Doyle, a prominent farmer living a mile south of Wadsworth. Her escort is a prominent farmer's son.

The girl's injury is in her leg, one of five bullets having lodged there after the couple had started to flee in the darkness. A disappoinetd suitor of Miss Doyle's is suspected.

EXPOSURE KILLS.

MOTHER HANGS HERSELF.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, (Mo.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Carrie Schewe, age 41, deeply religious wife of William Schewe a wealthy realty dealer, kissed her three children good-by, told them not to follow her for half hour, went into the basement of her home at No. 1061 Hornsby Place, and hanged herself this morning.

Federal postal inspectors yesterday had informed her husband she had been mailing anonymous letters to him and their women neighbors, accusing them of flirting. Schewe had complained to the postal authorities, not knowing his wife was the author of the letters. Mrs. John Ammons, Mrs. Charles Rubel, and Miss Lottie Sauerwein received some of the letters. Mrs. Schewe is reported to have confessed, saying she could not account for her mania. Schewe and the women say they are innocent of her accusations.

ARRESTED ON MURDER CHARGE.

POLICEMAN VICTIM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND, Ore., July 10.—Word was received here today that Melville G. Bradley, wanted here to answer to a charge of murder in connection with the death of Patrolman John W. Gittings in this city December 18, 1907, is under arrest at Idaho Falls, Idaho. Bradley and his brother-in-law were engaged in a quarrel over the alleged beating of Mrs. Bradley by her husband. Patrolman Gittings interfered and Bradley began shooting. Gittings responded and both men emptied their revolvers, the policeman receiving a fatal wound.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Ill Health Causes Suicide.

DENVER, July 10.—Despondency caused by ill health today led William Stribley, aged 22 years, to end his life with a bullet. Stribley recently came to Denver from California.

GIRLS FLEE IN "NIGHTIES."

Half-Dozen Young Women Flit Through Streets in the Wee Sma' Hours.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ELGIN (Ill.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Belated citizens of Elgin were surprised and not a little shocked early yesterday to see a half dozen young women racing down Chicago street in their "nighties."

It was a sudden and premature ending of a "sleeping party," which a number of Phi Gamma Phi girls had been giving in a vacant house. The young women had spotted the house as a fine place to give the party, and where no one would be disturbed if they were inclined to continue their banquet of fudge, olives and lemonade until a late hour.

The party consisted of six girls. Everything went well until 4 a.m., when the sleeping girls were suddenly aroused by the sound of footsteps inside the house. Suddenly a form, unmistakably that of a man, was seen in the doorway. With a chorus of screams the girls fled and did not stop until they all reached the house of Miss Irwin, four blocks away. The man proved to have been confused by his libations and declared he thought he was entering his own house.

BOLIVIANS AGITATED.

Big Mass Meeting Held in the Public Square at La Paz to Protest.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LA PAZ (Bolivia) July 10.—Thousands of Bolivians attended the meeting in a public square this afternoon to protest against the decision of Argentina in the boundary dispute between Bolivia and Peru. It is reported that the Bolivian government will refuse to accept the decision, claiming that it implies the loss of national territory.

The government has apologized for the attacks made by the citizens of the Peruvian and Argentine legations and has promised to prevent a repetition of these attacks. The street mobs, however, continue very disorderly.

The celebration planned for July 15 has been postponed as a result of disorders here. The trouble is the outcome of the decision rendered by President Alcioti of Argentina in the boundary dispute between Peru and Bolivia.

ENDEAVORERS INDUSTRIOUS.

Work Hard in Forenoon to Make Up for Afternoon of Play.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. PAUL (Minn.) July 10.—The delegates to the twenty-fourth International Christian Endeavor Convention crowded a full day's work in during the forenoon in order that the afternoon might be free for excursions.

Following a quiet hour service there were sessions of school in several downtown churches. Labor problems were discussed in the Guild Hall of the Christian Church, under the leadership of Rev. Charles Stetzle.

In the Auditorium the business sign, "Thy Kingdom Come," was discussed. The Missionary Committee conference at the same time in the Armory heard a number of speakers from all parts of the world.

SAN DIEGO.

CLUB MANAGER FOUND GUILTY.

CORONADO'S PRESIDENT SELLS LIQUOR ILLEGALLY.

Evidence Against Head of Prominent Organization Convinces Jury. Sentence Tomorrow—Rowing Club Thinks Its Crew Treated Unfairly at Seattle.

SAN DIEGO, July 10.—Edward L. Cochrane, president and manager of the Coronado Club, an organization of young business and professional men, was this morning found guilty by a jury in Judge Puterbaugh's court of having sold liquor at the club without a license. He was released on a $400 bond and will be sentenced Monday morning.

Cochrane's arrest followed a sensational raid on the clubrooms on Third street, in which a large quantity of "wet goods" was confiscated.

Although regularly incorporated as a social club, with the privilege of dispensing liquor among its own members, complaints reached the City Prosecutor that more liquor was sold on the Coronado's premises than the law allowed. Hence the raid.

The case was stubbornly fought, the defense being represented by former Judge Torrance, but the evidence against the club manager was overwhelming.

The Coronado Club is the organization which caused the wrath of Rev. L. T. Guild, pastor of the First Methodist Church. E. L. Wilcox, a contractor employed to build a new parsonage, told the minister that he had lost some of the church's money while gambling at the club.

CHINESE "BLIND PIG."

Ah Lee of No. 441 Third street was arrested this morning on the charge of running a "blind pig." Officers say they watched the place for more than an hour and saw the defendant sell drinks to fellow-countrymen.

When arraigned in the City Court, Ah Lee pleaded not guilty and furnished $200 cash bail. The case was set for Thursday.

ROWING CLUB INCENSED.

Members of the San Diego Rowing Club are incensed at what they declare to be the unjust stand taken by the Seattle Racing Committee in barring their crew from participating in the big regatta at the exposition city. Secretary Brown said:

"I cannot understand the position taken by the officers of the northern association. Our boys went North fully prepared to race, confident of winning and with the support of the people of San Diego. I complied with every formality demanded by the association in the way of certification in the P.A.A.O. It looks like a pretty mean and unsportsmanlike trick."

GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN.

That San Diego county bids fair to follow in the footsteps of Los Angeles in the matter of good roads is the belief of every member of the $1,250,000 bond issue campaign committee as the election draws near. The campaign is being pushed with renewed vigor, especially in the back country, as there seems to be a unanimous sentiment in favor of the bonds in all the cities and towns. To explain the aims and purposes of the project to ranchmen a meeting was held tonight at Ramona. Addresses were made by E. W. Scripps of the Highway Commission, H. E. Doolittle, W. B. Hage, George F. Gray and others. Meetings are to be held in Bostonia, Wednesday night; Chula Vista, Thursday night, La Mesa, Friday night; Lemon Grove on July 19, and Escondido on July 24.

BURY DROWNING VICTIMS

The funerals of William R. Bates and Ethel Marie Bates, his wife, who were drowned by the upsetting of a canoe at the edge of the San Diego Lumber Company's wharf late Wednesday night, were held today at the chapel of Johnson & Connell, Rev. J. T. French, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, officiating. Interment was at Greenwood Cemetery.

"Home Builders" Growing Rapidly.

Growing confidence in the non-speculative methods of "Home Builders," with offices in Suite 410 in the Mason Operahouse, has largely increased the business of this model co-operative home building company within the past two months. Investors and provident people generally are rapidly becoming identified with "Home Builders," for they have full confidence in the policy of non-speculation and dangerous debts avoided, and they are receiving 3 per cent. quarterly, or 12 per cent. annually in cash, on their investment. Shares of stock are selling at $1.25 each until August 1, when the price goes to $1.40, with privilege of paying 10 per cent. down, and 5 per cent. monthly, no interest. The next dividend will be declared July 31, instant, so that all stock paid for this month will draw the full dividend in addition to profiting by the 5c a share raise.

FACT AND COMMENT.

THE construction of a second tunnel under the hills directly west of the city continues to excite a good deal of interest, especially among those who live west of the Bunker Hill. Some of those most interested have become impressed with the idea that to tunnel either on First or Second street would be a very complicated proposition because of the fact that on each of these streets the street-railroad companies hold franchises. In the case of the Third-street tunnel the thoroughfare above is impracticable either on the Hill-street or the Hope-street frontage; therefore no such complication exists. To get an entrance for the tunnel either on First or Second street at either end would be very difficult on account of the railroad tracks.

FACT AND COMMENT.

THE construction of a second tunnel under the hills directly west of the city continues to excite a good deal of interest, especially among those who live west of the Bunker Hill. Some of those most interested have become impressed with the idea that to tunnel either on First or Second street would be a very complicated proposition because of the fact that on each of those streets the street-railroad companies hold franchises. In the case of the Third-street tunnel the thoroughfare above is impracticable either on the Hill-street or the Hope-street frontage; therefore no such complication exists. To get an entrance for the tunnel either on First or Second street at either end would be very difficult on account of the railroad tracks.

New Plan Devised.

To get around the difficulty just named, some property owners interested in having another means of ingress and egress to and from the city for the district lying between Temple and Third streets come forward with a new plan. The project is to drive a tunnel under private property from Hill street to Figueroa. The opening on Hill street would be somewhat approximately to midway between First and Second streets. The scheme involves an open cut running back a distance of 110 feet and a tunnel from there, coming out in an open cut about an equal distance east of Figueroa street. The right of way is to cost nothing, as it is believed by the projectors that all property affected would be benefited as much as or more than the concession would be worth. Of course where the tunnel runs the concession would be only an easement and would deprive the owners of the use of not one square foot of their property above. Where the open cut exists the property adjoining north and south would become enough more valuable to justify the dedication of enough ground for the way.

Before the Board of Public Works.

The proposition is already before the Board of Public Works in a communication by one of those interested under date of July 3. As laid before the city authorities it provides for the dedication of a strip thirty feet wide in the clear, beginning at the west line of Hill street and running thence in an open cut, as stated above 110 feet back. Here the tunnel begins, running, as stated above, to within 200 feet of the east line of Figueroa street. In order to make this tunnel valuable to property owners on the hill above, the construction of two or more shafts from the surface to the tunnel and the operating of elevators in these is proposed. Maintenance of these elevators would be provided for by charging, say, [illegible] a passage up or down from the tunnel level to the surface above. These shafts would serve an excellent purpose in providing ventilation for the tunnel, a very necessary accessory. According to the proposition before the authorities this tunnel would be barred from use by any railroad in perpetuity. The proponents contemplate the lining of the tunnel with vitrified brick of a very light color, the thorough lighting of the cut at all points, and these features with the ventilation [illegible] would make a thoroughfare unobjectionable from any point of view.

Providing for the Cost.

The cost of constructing this cut, as proposed, would be met by the formation of a proper assessment district, [illegible] to include all property [illegible] directly affected. The proponents set the limit eastward at Main street, to the north at First, and southward at Third, while westward it would run as far as Lakeshore avenue, at that point extending from Third street north to Sunset boulevard.

NEW STORAGE PLANT.

Five-Story Building for National Ice Company at Central and Banning Streets Under Way.

The National Ice Company has almost completed the excavation for a new cold storage plant on the northeast corner of Center and Banning streets. The building, which will be a model of its kind, will cost with all its fixtures in the neighborhood of $90,000. Charles F. Wallace of San Francisco is the architect.

The plans call for a brick structure five stories in height above a basement, the total front elevation being about 100 feet from street to cornice. The building will front 90 feet on Center street and 100 feet on Banning, and both frontages will be faced with pressed brick, and will present an attractive appearance.

The building will be used for cold storage purposes only, and will be one of the largest and best arranged structures of this class in the West. Each floor will be insulated, and the doors and partitions will embody the most modern of sanitary features, and will be perfectly tight. Two elevators will be installed. The location of the plant on the railroad trackage of the river bed will give the company unsurpassed transportation facilities. The structure will be completed in about six months.

VALUABLE LEASES.

Main and Broadway Frontages Command High Rate of Rental for Five-Year Terms.

R. A. Rowan & Co. report the following recent leases through their agency: For the Century Building Company to the Clune Theater Company was rented the northwest corner of Fifth and Main streets, with a frontage of 70 feet on Main and extending back 159 feet to an alley. The term of the lease is five years and the monthly rental is reported at $1175 which would make the total rent $70,500.

For M. Y. Kellum and the Rowan estate was leased to the Gude Shoe Company the storeroom at Nos. 537-539 South Broadway. The frontage is 37 feet and the depth 150 feet. The term of lease is five years at a total rental of $72,000, or $1200 a month.

For O. H. Churchill and the Rowan estate was rented to the Sun Drug Company the northwest corner of Sixth and Broadway. The frontages are 24 feet and 67 feet, and the monthly rental is $850, the term being five years. The same lessors have rented to Takahashi Bros. the 15-foot frontage at No. 557 South Broadway, and to the Silk Store the same frontage at No. 559 South Broadway, the leases in each instance being for terms of five years at the rate of $500 a month.

SELL MANY SECTIONAL HOUSES.

H. J. Brainerd reports the sale of a three-room bungalow to Misses Minnie and Sussie Moore, to be erected in Bungalow Land, Laurel Cañon, and to cost $450. The same dealer sold a house of F. C. Collier and a cottage to go to P. Ewing of Fillermore for $850 and has just completed a four-room bungalow for Miss Mary R. Holt on Greenwood avenue, Pasadena.

FOR CHILDREN'S SOCIETY.

C. F. Driscoll of Pasadena is preparing plans for a one-story and attic frame kindergarten building, 51x52 feet, for the Pasadena Children's Training Society. It will be erected at Wilson and San Pasqual avenues, Pasadena, and will be used for dormitories.

UP-TO-DATE.

SIX STORIES OF APARTMENTS.

WILL CONFORM TO NEW STATE "MODEL TENEMENT LAWS."

Surrounded by Large Gardens and Terraces, Attractive New Structure at Grand and Seventeenth Will Be Supreme Exemplification of Latest Fresh Air Laws.

Of the apartment-houses recently designed in this city none is in every way more attractive and up-to-date than a structure which will be started at once by L. C. Crossman at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Seventeenth street. This building, which is reproduced above from the perspective of the architects, Frederick Noonan and Arthur H. Stibolt, is to be six stories in height, exclusive of a basement extending under the entire first floor, and will cost something over $75,000.

The frontages will be 63 feet on Grand avenue by 85 feet on Seventeenth street, and the lot will face 135 feet on the latter thoroughfare by 125 feet on the former. Elaborate gardening and terracing will be undertaken upon the completion of the building proper. It is planned to have all of the garden approaches in wide flights of steps. The parlor will open out onto a pergola-covered terrace.

The frontages will be of cream-colored pressed brick, and the ornamental features will be of original design. The entrance will be in marble. A large tower at the corner will extend to a height of seven stories, and will overlook an elaborately arranged roof garden.

The basement will be given over to cardrooms, tearooms, smoking-rooms and lounging-rooms, togther with the heating plant. The parlor and lobby will be on the first floor, as will a number of large apartments. Above the first story the building will be divided into 150 rooms in two, three and four-room suites. One passenger and one freight elevator will be installed. The interior finish will be in Oregon pine. The plans have been designed to conform in every way with the new Burnett "Tenement House Law."

CORCORAN LANDS POPULAR.

During the past four weeks 2905 acres of Corcoran lands in the San Joaquin Valley have been sold to Los Angeles and Southern California people by the Scandia Land Company, for an aggregate value of $127,000. The buyers are: H. M. Barstow of Los Angeles, 480 acres, for $26,400; D. T. Ostrander of Lindsay, 160 acres, for $8000; Nathan Blanchard of Ventura, 520 acres, for $12,000; T. E. Cochran of Anaheim, 30 acres, for $1950; J. L. Buck of Colorado, 178 acres for $8900; A. W. Randolph of Glendale, 520 acres, for $18,875; H. B. Norswing of Los Angeles, 320 acres, $16,000; George A. Smith of Corcoran, 505 acres, for $14,875; J. C. Ray of Mexico, 40 acres, for $5500; Messrs. K. B. Norswing and Brandt, 40 acres, for $4000.

BEACH LOTS ON MARKET.

The La Grande Beach Improvement Company will place lots at La Grande Beach on sale this week. This beach is located on the Coast Line of the Southern Pacific and consists of a broad shore several miles in length. There is a large pavilion and fine pier, and several cottages have been erected in the tract by property owners. The lots average 30x118 feet. The country surrounding this beach is rapidly settling up by homeseekers, as it is in the fertile Arroyo Grande and Santa Maria valleys.

THAT FOURTH STREET JOB.

The Other Side of the Contention As to the Improving of That Thoroughfare.

The Times for ten days past has been the recipient of many communications "kicking" vigorously about the proposed improvement of Fourth street, between Alameda street and Boyle avenue. The protestants were many and thoroughly in earnest. As the matter seems to their minds, and as they expressed it in emphatic language, they made out an exceedingly strong case for themselves. The Times had no interest in it in any way except to give its readers news as fair as it knew how concerning a matter of so much importance.

Now comes the other side of the controversy, which The Times seeks to make public as widely and as fairly as it tried in the case of the protestants. An interested party visited this office and requested that a representative should be sent to inspect the ground in person. This was acceded to, and a representative of The Times went all over the ground from the initial point at Third and Alameda to the crest of the hill on the other side of the river at Boyle avenue. The situation was explained to him fully, and the purpose here is to set out the contentions of those who wish the improvement to be made.

To begin, there is undoubtedly a great deal to be said on the side of those who propose this improvement. It is very desirable, and might be said to constitute a pressing necessity. From near the west bank of the river, to west of Alameda street the approaches to the city after passing Fourth street bridge are difficult and dangerous. Fourth street, from the west end of the bridge to west of Alameda street, is pretty nearly as straight as the proverbial ram's horn. It should never have been laid out in the way it exists. To remedy it by straightening the thoroughfare from the bridge westward is impossible, on account of the railroad depots to be encountered. It must be said that about the only remedy in sight is the one sought by those proposing the improvement. From the west end of the bridge to the crossing of Alameda street, at Third street, the improvement will open a straight shoot, and after crossing the railroad tracks at Alameda street, Third street will afford an excellent thoroughfare into the heart of the city at Main and Third.

Now the readers of The Times have both sides of the controversy placed fairly before them. If the improvement is carried through there is no doubt it will be of great benefit to all residents of Boyle Heights who live between Second and Sixth streets for a considerable distance west of Boyle avenue. They have very imperfect means of ingress to the city and return to their homes as things are now and this imperfection will be greatly remedied by the proposed improvement.

The controversy between the two sides on this basis seems to narrow down to two points, or three at the most. The protestants are wrong in their allegations that Third street property from Alameda street to Main is not assessed. That property is assessed, and ought to be, for the benefit will be very great to the property along that thoroughfare. On the contrary, these protestants seem to have valid ground for protesting against the award of $60,000 for one brick building and $30,000 for another building, making $90,000 of the entire cost of opening this bit of street. It is conceded by those who laid the ground before The Times representative that the price to be paid for the property is in excess of its actual value by a good deal.

Another point to be considered is whether the property two or three miles west of the proposed street is excessively assessed. At that distance the assessments run to from 75 cents to $1 a foot. It is not accurate to state that these assessments are practically or nearly as high as property near the point of improvement. Immediately where the opening is to be made property is assessed at $1200 a lot.

A third point, and a very material one, is this: There are only three bridges between First and Seventh streets, one on First, one on Fourth and one on Seventh. On account of the railroad depots, tracks and car yards, there can be no others. These three bridges must serve for ingress to the city for all those living between Second and Sixth streets, unless they wish to go north to First or south to Seventh. Undoubtedly the people living along Third and Fifth streets would use the Fourth-street bridge if the improvements were made. The assessment runs only on the Fourth-street property west of Alameda street at any point. The protestants think the property on Third street and that on Fifth should bear a portion of the cost. Indeed, they questioned whether the property on Sixth street should not be included, as the people would have to cross the river at Seventh street, which would bring them into the city far to the south, whereas, if they made "northing" to Fourth street, they would be getting to their point of destination perhaps twice out of three times in getting to the city.

Now with this The Times closes the controversy. As it is understood, the matter has been taken into the court and it should be left there for settlement.

PLANNING BUNGALOW.

W. E. Erkes is drawing plans for an eight-room bunglow for Charles F. M. Stone, to be erected at Rose avenue and California street. It will be frame with plastered exterior on metal lath, clay tile roof, with redwood interior trim. Plans are also under way for an eight-room beach cottage to be built for the same owner at Alamitos Bay.

GOOD BEGINNING.

PROMISING GAIN IN NEW PERMITS.

REPORTS REVEAL LARGE INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR.

July Record to Date of Building Permits Issued Most Encouraging for This Season of the Year—Increase Is Nearly Thirty Per Cent. Over Nineteen-Eight.

The report of the chief inspector of buildings, for the period from July 1 to July 9, inclusive, is most promising, considering the dullness which inevitably makes itself felt at this season of the year. The gain in valuation over figures for the corresponding period of last year is 28 per cent. The number of permits recorded during the eight days for which statistics are obtainable is 194, as opposed to 179 last year.

The valuation represented in the department's report is $285,532, an average of $35,690 a day. For the same period in 1908, the valuation was $222,096, or a daily average of $27,762. The gain in actual number of permits issued is fifteen. The Fifth Ward leads the list with fifty-six permits, representing $113,025 worth of new improvements. The Seventh Ward is second, with five permits, at a valuation of $43,409.

Following is the classified report and the report by wards:

	Permits.	Valuation.
Class A, reinforced concrete	1	$ 15,000
Class C	2	29,000
Class D, 1-story	98	109,985
Class D, 1½-story	6	13,450
Class D, 2-story	10	41,261
Class D, 3-story	1	35,000
Sheds	16	1,245
Foundations	1	4,000
Brick alterations	14	16,275
Frame alterations	53	20,316
Total	194	$285,532

Comparison with last year: 179 permits; $222,096 valuation.

Following is a report by wards, from July 1 to July 9, inclusive:

	Permits.	Valuation.
First Ward	21	$ 20,531
Second Ward	18	9,085
Third Ward	21	27,566
Fourth Ward	23	28,063
Fifth Ward	56	113,025
Sixth Ward	35	34,268
Seventh Ward	5	43,409
Eighth Ward	2	4,600
Ninth Ward	13	4,985
Total	194	$285,532

FOR SALE—

WILSHIRE-WESTLAKE DISTRICT BARGAINS.

$5750— —$5750

We are just completing a nine-room-and-basement bungalow that in quality, artistic effects and price will surpass anything else in the city. The den, which also forms one of the main front entrances, has a dark mahogany finish, with rich decorations in gables to match; the ceiling being finished the same way as the walls. This is a combination of den and library, containing beautifully finished bookcases, a handsome rustic corner mantel and floors, best grade of quarter-sawed oak. The living and dining-room are unique in style and richly decorated; also having quarter-sawed oak floors. The hardware and trimmings are solid, red copper, to match inside finish, which is dark mission stain. The mantel is very massive, being nine feet across and extending to the ceiling, with large bronze panel of classical figure above shelf. Handsome electric fixtures in all rooms to match hardware, and every light on a switch. The breakfast-room is the sunniest room in Los Angeles (when we have the sun,) and is richly finished, floor being quarter-sawed oak. The kitchen is perfect in appointment, containing first-class plumbing, woodstone drainboard, heater and boiler attached, and double wash tray on rear porch. There are four bedrooms, three downstairs and one upstairs. Those downstairs are finished in white enamel, and the very finest of polished white maple floors. The wall decorating was done by one of the leading houses in this city, and its beauty and harmony cannot be described in an ad., so you will have to see it. The bath is handsomely finished with the highest-grade plumbing, enamel, mirrors, cabinets and marble floor. Deep, fine, cement cellar and every room in the house piped for both furnace and gas. In fact, it is just what you are looking for, and if you were to plan a thousand years, you could not build a bungalow more suited to your taste. This property is situated No. 121 S. Hoover street, 12 minutes from Seventh and Broadway, by any car going to Bimini Baths; and three blocks north of Sunset Park. Westlake traction car runs in rear. The quality of interior finish in this house is as good as that found in any $8000 property. At the above price we require $2250 cash down, balance on easy terms.

$1000 DOWN—$1700 DOWN.

Just completed a handsome, two-story, 8-room house on the second lot south of the bungalow, which, in unique exterior and convenient interior arrangement will certainly suit the most exacting. While this house, in finish and decoration, is of the same quality and attractiveness as the above, yet in pattern and style, it is directly opposite. No single feature is duplicated. The dining-room is a light mahogany finish, all wood, and decorations to match. The living-room is large and handsome, and while finished along different lines, yet harmonizing beautifully with the dining-room. There are so many pretty things that we might say about this house, and it takes such a long time to say them, we would prefer you to go out and look it over. Anything you wish to know, ask of the men working on our buildings (it is all day labor, and their time is ours,) and they will courteously explain. East front and lot 50x161. Lawn and shrubbery in. Price $8000. Balance easy terms.

There has just been placed in our hands a perfectly new, absolutely modern eight-room house on St. Andrews Place, near Wilshire boulevard. This house is on a lot 63x125 with an east front. It has a beautiful living-room with beamed ceilings and all modern features. The dining-room is equal to many in houses held at double the price. There are hardwood floors throughout, except in the kitchen. A feature of the place is the very large screen porch. There is a commodious kitchen and good cellar. The house is piped for furnace. Upstairs are four chambers and bath. There is, also, a sleeping porch. This is strictly in the select Wilshire district, and can be had this week for just $6000.

This home of eight rooms is located on the high ground near Gramercy Place, only a short block from the car, and in a district which is rapidly increasing in value. The house was built about a year ago at a cost of $4600 and the lot, unimproved, would sell readily for $2500; at the price of $6500 the property is certainly a sacrifice, but the owner has a business proposition in which his money can be invested to advantage and he wants to get the money out of his house. There is every desirable convenience in this modern property and, with its sunny southern exposure, it is a most attractive home. If you are looking for a place at a bargain price, do not fail to see this one.

This beautiful, east-front residence of ten rooms is just being completed between Wilshire blvd. and Sixth st. Every detail of the house is complete; the rooms are well arranged and will be handsomely decorated.

The windows are large and of the best French plate. Every room in the house (except kitchen and maid's room) has oak floors. There are two beautiful bathrooms, the main one being one of the handsomest fully tiled bathrooms in Los Angeles. The cellar is large and is equipped with gas furnace and Pittsburgh automatic heater. In addition to the ten main rooms, there is a splendid sleeping porch.

The exterior of the house is very beautiful, the lines are perfect and give the effect of a much larger house.

The fixtures throughout are artistic and beautiful, but not gaudy. In fact, this house represents the highest type of architectural skill we have ever seen displayed in producing a well-built, beautiful and modern home at a moderate cost.

For a short time we are authorized to offer one of the most beautiful homes in the Wilshire district, located on Cahuenga blvd., between Fifth and Wilshire blvd., on an east-front lot, 60x150, with lawn in and numerous shrubs started, at the above figure. It has a massive stone front and oak entrance. There are twelve finished rooms in the house, which is modern in every detail—hardwood floors throughout, a lavatory in every closet, an exceptionally large bathroom. In fact, you will find every desirable feature embodied in this home. This house was not built to sell, and would be cheap at $12,500. If we can move it within the next fifteen days, we will take $11,250. Terms can be arranged if you desire them.

Beautiful twelve-room east-front residence on Westlake avenue, on a highly improved lot 135x150. The interior finish in the main rooms is of quarter sawed oak, with oak floors throughout; the rooms are large and well arranged with an abundance of closet room and every convenience which one might expect to have in a modern home. There is a large garage on the property and the lot is improved with numerous fine old trees, beautiful shrubbery, flowers, etc. The lot alone is easily worth $25,000. The owner has immediate use for ready cash; hence this big sacrifice for the next ten days only.

A WELL-BUILT HOME ON HIGH GROUND, WITH HARDWOOD FINISH.

ENVIRONMENTS—
High ground, adjoining other beautiful homes, with the right frontage, gas, sewer, electricity, etc.; all installed.

THE INTERIOR FINISH—
The hall, stairway and living-room finished in oak and the dining-room with its beautiful buffet is finished with genuine mahogany. These 3 rooms are finished and rubbed down to practically a piano finish, by painters; by painters who work on nothing but hardwoods. The floors up and downstairs are of the best quartered oak. The large kitchen and commodious pantry are finished in white enamel. The lighting fixtures throughout the house were especially designed.

WALL HANGINGS AND DRAPERIES—
The walls of the dining-room are hung with art Nouveau of blue silk colorings, of which colors blend beautifully, with the finely finished mahogany. The hangs of living-room and hall are of the same quality of material and quite as effective, namely to harmonize with the wood work.

THE FOUR BED CHAMBERS—
Finished in white enamel, being very large and containing large closets, wardrobes, etc. The walls are beautifully tinted in soft harmonious colors.

BATH, KITCHEN, CELLAR—
The modern bath has a beautiful tiled floor and base, with up-to-date nickel plumbing, kitchen has every modern convenience wished for, including all built-in accommodations. Large concrete cellar, with the best quality of furnace, installed with pipes running to each room. If you are interested take this matter up with us at once. Key at our office, and we

FOR SALE—A GEM OF A HOME, READY for occupancy; $3500; $350 down, $25 per month, or $300 down and $30 per month, inclusive of interest. This 1½-story house is excellently finished, and wall space and decorations such that a minimum amount of furniture will be required. It has hardwood floors, built-in buffet, open grate, bookcase, and beside the six regular rooms, two large lumber-rooms that could be used as chambers, and a simply ideal sleeping-out porch above. Toilets on both floors. Electric fixtures in and two of the nicest plastered closets in California, each lighted by a window; porch across entire front; 50x163 lot to 12-foot alley, commanding fine view of Sierra Mountains and five-mile peaceful stretch of valley. Directly on Huntington Drive, the most celebrated thoroughfare in Southern California. Thirty thousand persons pass in sight of this house daily. The locality, Sierra Park, is excellent; 15 minutes from First and Main, 3-minute car service; practically 5-cent fare. No district for price more aristocratic, none surpassing it for beauty, and few so logically situated for rapid occupancy and increasing values. Real estate in vicinity active, but prices have not yet reached the high point which excludes possibility of profit. This place should be worth $5000 in 1912. Take Pasadena Short Line car to Sierra Park, and see HARRY CHASE.

Constructed under the personal supervision of the owner, makes a substantial and [illegible] house. You could not duplicate the [illegible] the price asked today. [illegible]—$5000 cash will handle it. The lot is 80x127 feet.

NEAR PICO AND GRAMERCY PLACE.
In the highest, most beautiful corner in [illegible] delightful section. We have just had placed in our hands a home that would please the most critical in point of finish, construction and surroundings. There are 10 rooms; 5 [illegible], 2 baths, 2 extra lavatories and [illegible], fine Boynton furnace, automatic gas [illegible] for water, laundry in the basement, [illegible] with servant's room; 4 open grates, and each one a work of art. The entire lower [illegible] is done in hardwood, with piano finish. The fixtures are simply exquisite, as well as [illegible]. There are innumerable built-in conveniences that delight a woman's heart. The woodwork throughout the entire house [illegible] care and expense in its smooth, beautiful finish. The exterior is half blue brick and heavy timber construction. The driveways and walks are all bordered with beautiful plants. We haven't space to describe the place as it deserves, but if you are interested we will be glad to show the place by appointment. You can't find in any home more pleasing harmony. The very rock-bottom price is $[illegible]. Lot 70x178, corner.
SEE IT WITHOUT FAIL.

WILSHIRE BOULEVARD FRONTAGE.
CLOSE IN, OPPOSITE A BEAUTIFUL PARK.
Unobstructed view of mountains glorious. [illegible] rooms; 4 bedrooms, billiard-room, three [illegible], two beautifully tiled. First floor [illegible] of reception hall; to the left a most beautiful living room with open grate. From [illegible] room you pass into a charming den. To the right of reception hall is the spacious dining room, with its elaborate buffet, thence the pass pantry and kitchen, which contain every convenience to delight the cook's [illegible]. There are three verandas and the [illegible] porch. Very large basement, cemented, furnace, Ruud automatic gas water heater, [illegible] trays. The first floor is beautifully paneled and beamed. Woodwork hand rubbed to [illegible] finish. Wilshire boulevard and park [illegible] is a good thing to have, do you [illegible] that? It is worth money now, and will be worth more. This home has every convenience, and would undoubtedly please you. You could not build a house that would [illegible] you in every way when finished, so why don't you buy one already built that will please you just as well, saving the annoyance and risk of doing it yourself.
PRICE $[illegible].

FOR SALE—A GOOD TIME AND BIG bargains is what we are all looking for, so here goes, BILL. First is a large south front corner on W. Adams st., 150x120, with a modern 10-room house, for $10,000. Second is 40x165, with 8-room house, south of 3d st. and 5 minutes' walk from Broadway, for $10,500. There is positively nothing located as close in to the very business center as this is for less money. I have several lots at a reduced price, but not such wonderful bargains. I also have a number of cottages, but nothing at give-away prices, as you will see advertised, but some real good buys. I think this lot on Flower st. is the best buy in the city at that price. I have a 5-room cottage, lot 40x150. The cottage is new; beam ceilings; for $1200. J. C. FLOYD, 215 Mason Opera-house. x16

RICO ACRES.

Some land is dear at $5 per acre and some is cheap at $100 a square foot.

Don't confound Rico Acres with more remote land having poorer transportation facilities.

Rico Acres are on the Long Beach line, just outside the city limits and within 15 minutes' ride from the Pacific Electric Building; cars every 3 minutes. An abundance of pure water piped to every acre and with sufficient pressure to reach the third floor of a building. The soil is the best and will grow anything from oranges to grapes, from alfalfa to garden vegetables. No grading is needed.

Single acres from $750 upward; $50 down and $20 monthly. Let us show you.

BIGGEST BARGAIN
IN HOLLYWOOD.

Located in choice part of Hollywood, and is now offered for the first time at this bargain price. The property consists of 151 feet on Prospect avenue by 360 feet deep, facing on another improved street, with modern ten-room residence and other improvements, costing in all $13,000. The property is conservatively worth:

Prospect avenue frontage	$20,000
Carlton Way frontage	4,000
Modern improvements	13,000
Total value	$37,000

These figures are less than would be quoted by any one posted on Hollywood values, but we can sell it for a very much lower figure. This is a business proposition, both for you and the present owner. He needs money in his business, and you can make money by buying it. Make it your business to see us Monday morning. Price and order to view property on application.

FOR SALE—
HELLO, BILL.

How do you like it? Beats "back there," doesn't it?

Don't forget to see beautiful HOLLYWOOD the city's choicest and fastest growing suburb; cool in summer, warm in winter, where flowers bloom all the year round; splendid views of city and ocean; only 30 minutes' ride to either. The ideal home place.

You'll be coming back some day, so wouldn't it be wise to secure a choice building site NOW, before prices go higher, and you have less to choose from? THINK IT OVER.

Take an hour off and let us show you.

E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.
E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.
E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.

The Rancho La Puente, in the heart of the great San Gabriel Valley, consisting of thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in Southern California, will be offered for sale and will be sold in tracts to suit purchaser.

Only 14 miles N.E. of the city, between El Monte and Covina, by the S.P.R.R., Pacific Electric and Salt Lake Railroads.

Perhaps you are curious to know what this land is adapted to.

Well, it cannot be beaten for growing
ALFALFA,
WALNUTS,
Fruit, vegetables. Yes, and around Covina it's first-class
ORANGE LAND.

We have subdivided 5000 acres of this land for the Baldwin estate during the past four years, and we know whereof we speak.

THE WATER QUESTION.

That is already demonstrated.

There is water under this land.

One plant in operation pumps 300 miner's inches of water. There are numerous small plants, none of which pump less than 150 miner's inches of water.

Is there any market for the produce? Yes, you can sell everything right in the field.

There will never be another opportunity like this one; go out today and make your reservations. 1000 acres sold during the past 3 weeks.

PRICES AND TERMS

Have you ever heard about the DAMP LAND

Just south of EL MONTE, 12 miles from Los Angeles, one mile from the electric car line.

This land requires no irrigation whatever to grow
ALFALFA, VEGETABLES,
CELERY.

Just think of it. No labor or expense for irrigating; just plant your crops, cultivate them and watch them grow. Perhaps you don't believe this to be possible in this land of rainless summers; well, then, just board the Covina line car for El Monte, go out with us to the tract, and let us "show you" where 10 tons of alfalfa, per acre, can be grown each year, without irrigation. Get in on the ground floor and double your money in one to two years.

These are just a few tips that we are giving you.

For further information call at our offices.

"[illegible] having examined your lands west of [illegible], I have ascertained the following:

"[illegible] soil is a shale loam derived from the [illegible] materials in the Coast Range [illegible] the west. It is of uniform texture [illegible] determined depth of fifty feet and to [illegible] unknown depth beyond. The soil is very [illegible] especially so in lime which not only [illegible] it a lasting and permanent alfalfa [illegible], but by the action of lime it is well [illegible], causing it to be friable and free, [illegible] easily cultivated.

"[illegible] follows for the above reasons that percolation and drainage are excellent and hence [illegible] soil should never become sour or water-[illegible].

"[illegible] land is very uniformly level, requiring but small cost and preparation to fit it [illegible] irrigation, and will make excellent alfalfa and grain lands, and, so far as the [illegible] is concerned, should make good vine and [illegible].

45 acres, 3700 full-bearing oranges, 8 acres alfalfa, good neat 5-room house, yards, flowers, etc., barn, chicken yards, good large electric pumping plant. This is absolutely the cheapest place we have seen in years. Not long ago it was traded for $40,000. Now it can be bought for $15,750. Just think of it! Owner must sell, can't handle the ranch any longer. He has to sell is the only reason it can be bought so cheap. If you have $5000 you can clear several thousand in a very short time. See us at either office soon. The ranch is only 1¼ miles from good town. Might take some trade.

FOR SALE—

$3.00 PER ACRE::::::$3.00 PER ACRE.

Ten thousand acres finest fruit lands at $3.00 per acre in 100-acre ranches, simply as an advertisement to attract the attention of the public to the Delta of the Sonora River on the Gulf of California in the State of Sonora, Mexico; only 180 miles south of the border line. Rich as the River Nile. We can sell you the finest farming and fruit land. In the rain belt; abundance of fresh water. You can raise oranges, pineapples, sugar cane, cotton, lemons, bananas, grapefruit, olives, grapes, alfalfa, maize, corn, potatoes, onions, wheat, barley, oats, dates, figs, apricots, plums, garden vegetables, garbanzos, melons and berries of all kinds. In fact, you can raise all kinds of semi-tropical fruits. Magnificent wheat land, fine for cattle, hogs and sheep. Good market for everything. Own a home in the land of sunshine. Own a hundred-acre farm and be independent. Title perfect. Taxes practically nothing. Never in the history of our time has the equal of this $3.00 per acre land offer ever been made. It is purely an advertisement, as stated above, to attract the attention of the public. No richer or better land in the entire State of California. It is up to us to prove this to you. It is up to you to take advantage of the opportunity to be shown. You had better make your reservation immediately for the amount of land you are in a position to buy, providing the land is just as we represent it and that you are satisfied. If you cannot come in person, write us at once. First come, first served. This is the first offer of tracts in the magnificent El Carrizal Rancho of one hundred and ten thousand acres now being colonized. Only two miles from a deep water harbor, and is offered positively as an advertisement. Unless you secure one of these first ranches you will be compelled to pay from ten to fifty dollars per acre.

FOR SALE—OR EXCHANGE—
An up-to-date apartment-house to be sacrificed. Positively the greatest bargain in Los Angeles, as the place is well situated, elegantly furnished and caters to the very best class of people. It has large lobby and hall room and sold for $12,000 cash a short time ago. For certain reasons I can sell this apartment-house for from $5500 to $7500 on easy terms; $2000 will handle it. Would be glad to give details and show what I consider the best buy in Los Angeles. It must be sold at once for highest offer. Get this house and double your money; must be sold within three days.

ORANGE GROVES THAT PAY A BIG INCOME.
ORANGE GROVES
THAT ARE BARGAINS.

A SNAP.
14 ACRES—$11,000—ONTARIO.
This fourteen acres set solid to oranges on main road of Ontario is the biggest snap ever offered; owner's health failed. Fine trees, excellent condition; new modern cottage. This place is conservatively worth $15,000.

48 ACRES—$35,000—COVINA.
AN EXCELLENT INVESTMENT.
A GOOD INCOME PRODUCER.
18 acres 12-year-old oranges, navels and Valencias; 11 acres alfalfa, good stand, 9 acres apricots, full bearing. 10 acres vacant. Trees in good condition, good house, barn, etc. This place is worth a great deal more than asked.

14 ACRES—$16,500—COVINA.
AN EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY.
Set to navels and Valencias, ½ each. Navels 15 years. Valencias 3 acres, 8 years old; 1 acre 3 years. Good house, etc. An investment in this grove will prove a good one.

10 ACRES—$17,000—COVINA.
A BARGAIN—ON EASY PAYMENTS.
All navels 15 years old. Trees and soil in good condition. Within city limits, subdivided around it. As a good grove with great future value this place is excellent.

4 ACRES—$4500—GLENDORA.
A GOOD VALUE.
Set to orange trees, good condition. Valencias, 3 years old, 5 room house, modern. Owner going East. A good chance on a small place.

These are a few of an exceptionally fine list of orange groves on file at this office. Vacant orange acreage ranches of all descriptions, orange, lemon, walnut, mixed fruits, alfalfa and truck farms.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE GROVE AT COVINA.
This is absolutely the biggest snap that has been thrown on the market this year. A FORCED SALE.
JUST READ THIS—48 acres, 18 acres in fine 12-year-old oranges; 11 acres in alfalfa; 9 acres in apricots and 10 acres of vacant land. There is a good 5-room house and fine large barn; also a large variety of deciduous fruit for family use. All stock and farming implements included, together with 144 shares of Azusa Water Stock—the cheapest water right in California—bar none—and is worth a small fortune alone. This fine place is located in the heart of the very best Covina section; on a beautiful avenue; close to car line and is level and all the very best of soil. It is absolutely first-class in every respect and is simply $500 per acre below the market price. Any man who buys an orange grove or a piece of land while this is on the market, is making a mistake. Price for the entire 48 acres, including all stock, implements, etc., $29,000. Will divide any part of this. Will sell 28 acres, including improvements, 18 acres of full bearing oranges and 10 acres of fine land for $21,000. Will let 11 acres of alfalfa and 9 acres of apricots go for $9000.
We have been selling groves in this section for years, but this is the biggest snap in land, water and location we have ever handled.
Let us show you.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE AND LEMON RANCHES.
17½ acres at La Verne, part in 10-year-old Thompson Improved navels, fair house and barn; this is in the very choicest frostless La Verne district, nothing better in the State. Price, including team and implements, $12,500. A residence in Pasadena, value $3000, taken in part payment.

30 acres at Whittier, choicest section; 10 acres 12-year-navels, 5 acres, 12-year Eureka lemons, 5 acres 10-year Valencias. Every tree in perfect condition; fine soil and setting a splendid crop for next year. Good buildings. This ranch will show good value at $50,000.

175 acres, all in bearing navels, Valencias, lemons, tangerines and grapefruit, in perfect condition, setting heavy crop, fine soil, no frost, own water system. This is one of the very best citrus fruit ranches in the State, is a cash proposition, and if you can handle a big property we will be glad to submit complete statement.

THE LAWRENCE B. BURCK CO.,
x11 333 S. Hill st.

FOR SALE—A DROP OF $1500.
10 acres 5-year-old oranges, ½ navels, ½ Valencias. Just the way you should have an orange grove. The Valencias are loaded with fruit. We have never seen anything like it. It is a sight to see them. Each tree has several props, but then they can hardly hold the fruit. We will challenge any one to show us heavier loaded trees. Valencias in Orange county will hang on the trees until late in the fall when the prices are best. This ranch has the best of rich, deep, sandy loam, never bakes and produces the best of crops. All kinds of family fruit, apples, pears, figs, etc. Plenty of water to irrigate goes with place. Also large well, windmill and tank, 2-room tankhouse. Fine large barn, 5-room house, wide porches, shade trees, on good main oiled road, near two good towns, in the famous Placentia district. Good team, wagons, etc. Large income this year with a fast increase from now on. Stop your business cares and take life easy by buying this grove. Price $14,000 with crop, which will be from $1500 to $2000.

Lemon or Orange Groves.

FOR SALE — ORANGE GROVES. THE best investment in California is a good citrus grove. I've been in the center of the main citrus belt of Southern California, Pomona, for years, selling orange groves, lemon groves, ranches and Pomona realty. I've the exclusive agency of a large number of choice orange groves, various sizes, which I can deliver at right prices.

One of the finest citrus properties in California is the Witmer & Lewis ranch, magnificently located in the famous frostless La Verne foothills. Messrs. Witmer and Lewis have owned this valuable property about twenty years, but on account of the recent death of Mr. Witmer it is now offered for sale. It comprises 420 acres, about 50 acres of which is in bearing citrus trees, one third Washington navel oranges, one third Late Valencias, one third lemons, all in finest possible condition; balance unimproved citrus fruit and grain land, and foothills. Good improvements. All equipment included. Best of soil and no finer location on earth for a citrus grove or a beautiful home. In order to effect a quick sale of this property, am open to a reasonable proposition for the purchase of this extensive ranch. Sale proposition only; no trade considered.

Have another large orange grove, comprising 68 acres, nearly all in full bearing; 11 acres in lemons, balance in oranges; best of water rights, soil and location. Grove in excellent condition. Owner a wealthy orange grower, now advanced in years, desires to sell now. First time offered. Terms one third down, balance 6 per cent. A first class investment at the price I can now deliver for if purchased soon. Lemon curing house and dwelling.

$15,000—A magnificent 10-acre full bearing orange grove, with improvements; well located. Two thirds Valencias, one third navels, in good condition. This fine income grove should bring $20,000 and no doubt will a few months hence; but for best of reasons, to consummate an immediate sale, owner has just instructed me to close out at $15,000.

2 good bearing orange groves at Claremont; no improvements. Both good buys. Numerous other orange or lemon groves in the best citrus growing districts. Many exclusive properties. References, any bank or business firm in Pomona.

COPPER CREEK MINES.

Visitors to Los Angeles should not fail to see the display that will be made Tuesday at 432 S. Spring st. of the most wonderful COPPER ORE ever shown in this city.

It runs 600 pounds copper per ton.
It runs 500 pounds sulphur per ton.
It runs 350 pounds iron per ton.
Is rich also in silver and gold.

This ore is known as copper sulphide, and is the character of ore that has made FAMOUS the world's greatest mines, whose stock is from 5 to 50 times par value.

We have just finished a big mill and are installing machinery now and have allotted a few shares for sale at par to provide present pay roll. There is not another opportunity like this in America. The public is invited to call at our offices, opposite the Alexandria Hotel, and inspect this marvelously rich ore, see very large photos of mills, power plant, stores and various properties, consisting of 2000 acres copper land, coal land, lime stone, timber, water power, rights, etc. We have 165 population, 11,000 feet shaft and tunnel work, 250,000 tons are ready for stoping. We have a proven, producing mine, which will be as famous as the United Verde (Senator Clark's great mine.) Call and see

Mr. Hartsell arrived Saturday from the Mohawk Herald properties and after examining the Anaconda Mine declares he is more than satisfied with the showing and proposes to put up a custom stamp mill to work the Anaconda and other ores—he declares the Anaconda is a very good mine so much so he is willing to put his own money into a mill—anyone can see him at this office Monday and get his unbiased opinion of the Anaconda Mine—he owns no stock in the company and has no interest in any property in the district—he says he met a seven-passenger automobile with English syndicate who were looking over the Gold Park and Italic properties with a view to purchasing same—things are certainly humming in the 29 Palms District. Yours for Success,

INDORSES MUSHET.

Los Angeles Credit Men's Association at Venice Dinner Favors Him for Mayor.

VENICE, July 10.—The annual outing of the Los Angeles Credit Men's Association was held at the Cabrillo Ship Hotel this evening with E. J. Levy in the chair. The members of the association left Los Angeles in a special train, 125 strong, at 3 o'clock, assembling at the Cabrillo at 6 o'clock. The programme was in charge of A. J. Prosser, and consisted of speeches by officers of the association and songs by well-known delineators.

A resolution indorsing W. C. Mushet for Mayor was proposed by H. Flatau and adopted by a rising vote. The resolution pledges the members of the association to the support of Mr. Mushet for Mayor, declaring that while it is non-political in its purposes yet, "knowing the executive ability, integrity and geniality of Mr. Mushet, we congratulate the city of Los Angeles on having the opportunity of choosing for its Mayor such a splendid character."

W. C. Kennedy seconded the adoption of the resolution. He was followed by Newman Essick, F. G. McComas, Chairman Levy, and H. Flatau, who spoke in flattering terms of Mr. Mushet.

Mr. Mushet, who was called on for a speech, declared that if he is elected Mayor he will insist upon the framing of a new charter, a public utility commission, a total revision of the license laws, the consolidation of this city with the seaports, the construction of the harbor and the completion of the Owens River aqueduct. He said that the improvements will have to keep up with the development of the city.

RICE BATH AWAKENS.

Newly-Married Couple Abruptly Roused from Love's Dream on Train. Passengers' Joy.

Oblivious of a placard "Just Married" on the back of their seat in the Salt Lake train that brought them from Riverside to Los Angeles, yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emery of Colton, began their honeymoon. All the other passengers saw it and passed to and fro in the aisle, with smiles, but the young couple heeded them not. Not until A. B. Gazzola, a traveling man showered them with rice did they awake to the interest everybody felt in them.

Mr. Emery is the son of O. L. Emery, a hardware dealer of Colton, and he was married by Justice Thomas at Riverside, yesterday morning. It was not an elopement but the bridegroom wished to avoid friends who had planned trouble. After the ceremony, he and his bride were whisked in an auto to Arlington, where they boarded a train and supposed their secret safe.

But Gazzola was in wait with the placard, which had been painted in the senior Emery's store, with the latter's knowledge and consent.

Mrs. Emery was Miss Hannah of Riverside, and she was very charming in a traveling gown.

Mr. Emery not only got a joke from his father as a "send-off," but also a check for $1000.

PATIENT DISAPPEARS.

Man Accused of Felony Escapes from the County Hospital When Supposedly Very Weak.

Officers of the Sheriff's force and detectives are searching for William Davis, charged with a felony, who escaped from the County Hospital sometime Friday night and who is believed to be hiding under the protection of friends.

Davis formerly lived in Santa Ana. He is alleged to have purchased dry goods amounting to $5000 under the pretense of owning property and stock to back his debt.

He was arrested in Cincinnati and an officer was sent after him. He was not given up however. Later he was again arrested in Indiana and brought to Los Angeles for trial. He was suffering from lung trouble and had to be carried from the train to the Receiving Hospital where he was chained to his bed.

Later at the County Hospital these chains were removed. He was thought to be too weak to attempt an escape. It is believed however that his friends urged him to get away if possible and taking the first opportunity he slipped out of the institution and disappeared.

HURT IN DEEP WELL.

Accident Near Covina in Which Timber Falls on Workman at the Shaft's Bottom.

COVINA, July 10.—Chris Bullack, a Syrian well-digger, was struck on the thigh by a heavy timber which fell ninety feet into the well bottom where Bullack was working this morning. The right thigh bone was broken and splintered. Bullack escaped death by crowding himself to one side of the narrow well when he saw the timber slip from a fellow workman's hands. Dr. Jennings of Covina was called and sent the man to the Crocker-street Hopsital in Los Angeles. The accident occurred on the ranch formerly owned by Dr. A. E. Englehardt, near Corbett's blacksmith shop.

Work on the extensions of the mains of the Covina Valley Gas Company began on Tuesday. The Covina plant will be connected by mains with Azusa and Glendora, making, when finished, over twenty miles of pipe. The construction is being done under contract by the Gas Operating Company of Los Angeles. The B. R. Davidson Constructing Company of Monrovia is in charge of the excavation. It is estimated that about $30,000 worth of improvements are being made to the Covina plant.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS.

Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1¼c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

BUILDING CONTRACTS.

Contracts let for new building in the city of Los Angeles and near-by cities for a week, to include all items to cost $1000 and more, are as follows:

Sarah E. Bunell, three-story frame and plaster apartment building, containing thirty-six two-room suites, No. 2825 South Grand avenue, $35,000.

David Vaccaro, five-room cottage, Thirty-eighth street, near Long Beach avenue, $1200.

Pacific Light and Power Company, three-story brick building, 50x144 feet, East Third street, near Los Angeles street, $10,864.

J. W. Henderson, one-story two-room store building, 40x80 feet, Sixteenth and Vermont avenue, $3960.

M. L. Polaski and Louis Arzner, alterations to store room at No. 215 South Spring street, $6000.

W. W. Powell, two-story eight-room house, Menol avenue, near Tenth street, $4985.

Alvin J. Ellison, five-room cottage, Echo Park avenue, near Lander street, $1175.

George H. Freemon, two-story and basement brick store and apartment building, containing three stores and fifteen rooms, corner of Sixteenth and Hoover streets, $3886.

Frank C. Hill, three-story frame and plaster apartment-house, Sixth and Burlington avenue, $49,565.

Roman Catholic Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, two-story brick and frame parish-hall building, 50x110 feet, No. 2752 West Pico street, $9572.

Mrs. Irene Hammers, two-story frame building, containing eight two-room apartments, Pasadena, $5120.

M. S. Hamilton, two-story ten-room house, Linden avenue and Manhattan Place, $4600.

San Gabriel Valley Water Company, reinforced-concrete reservoir, Oak Knoll, $5358.91.

Clara Pardue Hindman, seven-room house, northwest corner of Gramercy Place and Linden avenue, $3000.

T. C. Mennell, church building at McKinley Industrial Home, near Gardena, $3600.

Mrs. E. L. Carmon, two-story eight-room house and six-room cottage, Pasadena, $8296.

Arthur H. Anthony, six-room cottage, Artesia, $2487.

John R. O'Neill, seven-room house, Colegrove, $2488.

Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company, reinforced-concrete and tile boiler house, Redondo Beach, $3027.

Ernest L. Washburn, six-room cottage, South Pasadena, $1950.

MURPHY GETS SIGNERS.

Sagebrush Millionaires Are Visiting Here.

Lease on Lucky Boy Bonanza About to Expire.

Property Will Be Left in the Best Shape.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) July 9.—Johnnie Miller, one of the principal owners of the Alamo of Hawthorne, is in Los Angeles with his wife and daughter enjoying some of the fruits of the $1,000,000 that he has taken out of the Lucky Boy during the last six months, but his absence does not appear to make any difference in the prosperity of the property, which continues to grow richer almost every day as the lease nears a close. Last week the company ran into ore in the east drift at the 450 level of the incline shaft of the Hubbard lease that was fully five feet wide and the value of which is as good as $250 per ton. Mr. Miller expects to be back by the 20th of July, when the lease expires. Contrary to report, he says that the mine will be left in such excellent shape that the owners can resume where the leasers left off without the slightest intermission and continue to ship ore at the rate of eighty to 100 tons per day established by the Hubbard leasers. Rumor had it that the lease was being gouged, after the manner pursued in the high-grade leases of Goldfield, and that the parent company would have to develop a fresh line of backs before the renewal of shipments. That this is not the case will be accepted with many congratulations by the investors of the district, who feared that a suspension of work would be construed as a depreciation of the property.

J. F. Collins, Jr., of St. Louis, whose father offered Mr. Miller the sum of $900,000 for the Alamo when the mine was in its infancy and whose offer was rejected, is in love with the district and is bound to acquire some other producing mine. This week he secured control of the Mountain Lion Extension which was owned by R. V. Le Grand of Goldfield, who is also spending his spare time recuperating at Pasadena, where his wife is convalescing from a severe illness. The Mountain Lion Extension lies west of the Mountain Lion ground due west of the Bonanza lease and is in a direct line with the west strike of the fissure contact vein from the Hubbard workings.

The Durand estate at Lucky Boy was sold last Tuesday for the sum of something over $100,000, the buyers being Richard Kirman, Walter Harris and C. E. Mark, prominent capitalists of Reno, Nev. The property was purchased under a bond and lease, the buyers taking over the Box and Elder lease on the piece of ground, the leasers retaining a substantial interest in the new company. Preparations are being made to install new machinery as soon as possible with a view to getting the best possible results from their investment. The lease, which is being operated by George Brodigan, William A. Ingalls and associates on the Lucky Boy claim, encountered some rather fancy ore this week in the east shaft on the 140 level and, if the indications hold out, the Brodigan will be in the shipping list before long.

PIONEER'S DIVIDEND.

At Rhyolite the first dividend of the Pioneer Leasing Company is announced to the tune of approximately $45,000, which the company hopes to continue as a monthly payment. This profit was derived from the lease after spending something like $50,000 in development and equipment in order to enable the leasers to extract between sixty and eighty tons of ore per day. In addition to the cash dividend, the stockholders will receive a stock dividend on the basis of one share of the parent company for ten shares of the lease. The richest ore is being taken out of the 260 level, but sinking will be resumed in the winze before long.

The Mayflower Consolidated Mining Company has signed a contract with the Nevada, California Power Company for the installation and use of electricity to displace the gasoline machinery in service at both mine and mill. The purpose is to use electricity in all departments and the change will be made at once. An electric hoist will come first. The reason given for the change is greater efficiency and economy.

The Montgomery-Shoshone has made its semi-monthly clean-up of $25,000 in bullion, in spite of the fact that the mill was dead three days, owing to the withdrawal of power. During the time of operation a tonnage of over 2[illegible] daily was treated.

A project is under advisement for the treatment of West Extension ore, which will, in all probability, go to the Needles smelter, if the metallurgists of that work agree upon the treatment. There are 125,000 tons on the West Extension dump.

TONOPAH DOINGS.

The excavation for the new mill of the Tonopah Extension is about finished, and it is announced that the mill will be built through a bond issue of $150,000 of 6 per cents., which the company claims will be saved the first year that the mill is in operation. Tonopah has suffered materially from the shutdown of power that crippled the entire southern part of the State, and which was not fully remedied until the fifth of July, when all plants and mines using electricity resumed, after a suspension variously estimated from three to five days. The big mill at Millers also stopped, and record shows only an average of sixty-six stamps dropping, crushing 2200 tons of ore, instead of the customary 2500 tons. In the Tonopah the stoppage had another bad effect on the mine, owing to the inroads of water that ran up 175 feet during the period that the pumps were pulled. Owing to the small flow, which is only one-quarter of the capacity of the pumps, it took but three days to pump the shaft dry and resume sinking. The only important change is in the Red Plume shaft, where the company is exploring an entirely new area, which shows live quartz right along, with bunches of ore carrying milling values. The Midway mine, the only one using steam power on the desert, was not affected by the shutdown, and kept going at its customary pace.

The producing district of Tonopah will likely be extended before long, owing to the letting of a contract and lease on ground of the Jim Butler company. Chris McCarthy, one of the earliest residents of the camp, and a miner of much experience, together with Harvey Epstine and associates, are the leasers. By the lease, the lessees will be enabled to work the ground for two years. Considerable work was done before the property was acquired by Jim Butler, and the lessees will devote their attention to the Fraction claim, where there is a shaft down 400 feet. From that level they will drift toward the West End ground. At the outset there will be a heavy expenditure to equip the property with powerful and suitable machinery, which will enable it to be worked to the best advantage.

W. S. White of Los Angeles has combined with W. S. Taylor and J. Lemle of Rhyolite in the erection of a custom mill for the Pioneer district, with an initial capacity of forty tons per day. The company is styled the Nevada Ore Treating Company, and is said to have been financed by southern capitalists, whose names do not appear in the prospectus. The site selected is half a mile south of Springdale, where there is said to be an abundance of water, and the process will be that of C. E. Wiswell.

ELLENDALE STIRS.

The Ellendale district, about which so much was written before it was opened to prospectors and leasers, is taking on some signs of life since the discoverers found that the public would not accept their word as sufficient for the investment of extensive capital. During the week the Cliffords and the Nays have started a tunnel on the original find to tap the ledge at a depth of 100 feet down the mountain, for the purpose of proving that the ore is in place.

This action was forced on them, as the leasers were very reluctant about beginning work. There were also many complaints about the terms of the leases, that restricted the lessees to one year's use of the ground, without any allowance for interruptions through strike troubles or any of the usual saving clauses that are always incorporated in the Southern Nevada lease. The covenants were in the nature of cinch propositions, with the Cliffords playing a sure thing.

It has been demonstrated satisfactorily to those in charge that the ore makes depth, and all that remains is to prove this to the satisfaction of the incoming throngs. No shipment has been made from the ground, in spite of the fact that a small fortune is said to be lying on the surface, sacked ready to carry off, and it is currently reported that nothing will be shipped until the prospect is developed into a mine.

There is not the slightest rush or haste about developing the property, and the ground is being worked with an idea of saving everything in sight, which the locators say is the highest kind of high grade. The future of the camp rests on the outcome of the work being done in driving the tunnel; and if it fails to keep values, then the life of Ellendale will not be worth considering. On the contrary, should the ore body be found, the country will be convinced that the greatest of modern mining camps has been proven. It now appears that it is the intention of the discoverers of the rich find to follow the strike to the end, irrespective of where it may lead, and a shaft will be sunk on the ore which will meander with the trend of the vein, no matter where it goes. The value of the ore already sacked is beyond the realms of speculation, but, it is safe to say, that it does not fall short of the $100,000 mark.

PARKER COUNTY.

Little Butte and Planet Sales and the Railroad Stir Things.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BOUSE (Ariz.) July 9.—The recent sale of the Little Butte, whereby that valuable property passed to a strong syndicate, the recent sale of the Planet mine to the Lewissohns of New York, and the beginning of construction of the Clara's Swansea-Arizona Railroad has started mining activity in Bouse. In addition to the above the Shannon Copper Company has just bought a group of nine claims from Bouse and MMahan, the original locators of the Little Butte, the announcement that the Woods Investment Company of Los Angeles will start work on its valuable claims soon, the contract let by the Daly Mines Company of Los Angeles for 135 feet of work on the Vulcan mine, and the purchase of nine claims belonging to G. F. Spear by Pat Clark.

The group of claims recently bought by the Shannon Copper Company join the Little Butte property on the southwest and are called the Blue Slate group. Several openings have been made all showing shipping ore. These claims, like the Little Butte, carry very rich gold values in addition to the copper. The Shannon Copper Company is one of the strong companies of Arizona and has made arrangements to develop on a large scale.

The Woods claims join the Little Butte property as well as the Blue Slate group and have been owned by the Woods Investment Company of Los Angeles for some time and considerable work has been done in the past. H. E. Woods was in Bouse a few days ago and stated that his company would begin atie operations on July 15. They expect to put on a large force of men and equip the property with all the necessary equipment and machinery to make a big mine.

The Daly Mines Company of Los Angeles has recently let a contract for a 135-foot shaft on the Vulcan group which is located ten miles south of Bouse and about the same distance from the Little Butte. The Vulcan is also in the Plomosa Range and has similar formations to those in other parts of that range.

The Lewissohns of New York who recently took over the Planet announce that on next week they will have a large force of men at work and will spend $1,000,000 in development alone.

The Inland Copper Company, ten miles north of Bouse, also has a rich group of claims. This company has mapped a large amount of development. It has installed a fifty-horse-power hoist on the main shaft and has also built a big camp. The new railroad from Bouse to Swansea will run through this property.

RICH PROPERTY.

WINNEMUCCA'S SHOWING.

WINNEMUCCA (Nev.) July 9.—S. W. Gundaker, president of the National Mining Company, reports that the full face of the tunnel No. 2 is in ore. The point where the miners are at work at present shows a depth of 164 feet below the main tunnel, on the Combination lease, where the Stall brothers are extracting the fabulously rich gold ore that is making this camp famous. The striking of this large vein at this depth is not deemed remarkable by miners who have examined the wonderful property, for there is every evidence that the vein will go to an almost unlimited depth.

The conditions at National are almost identical with the conditions at Goldfield in the high grade deposits. A team loaded with what is called second-class ore is en route to the railroad, and the stuff will run from $1 to $3 per pound. This ore was saved from the drifts where the very high-grade ore was taken out. For some time the Stall brothers have been piling this ore in the tunnel until they accumulated enough for a carload. They have taken out a fortune, and, with this so-called second grade, the ore will average $6000 per ton, and the beauty of it is that no stoping has been done in the extraction.

SMELTING.

NEW CONDITION IN INDUSTRY.

FAILURE OF SMALL REDUCTION WORKS SHOWN.

Production of Copper and Treatment Are Like Growing All Raw Material and Their Manufacture Into Finished Marketable Goods, Entirely Distinct Lines.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) July 9.—Ever since man commenced to delve into the earth for precious metals, the word "mining" has generally been held to embrace also all processes for the reduction of the ore produced and for the extraction of the valuable elements contained. To every mine, under this understanding, there must be a mill or other reduction apparatus. If the mill failed to extract the values, then the ore was called "refractory" and another failure usually was added to the many known before. All over Arizona are the remains of such reduction works, where the impossible was attempted by miners who knew only what they had seen done before. There are scores of mills where lessons were expensively learned that sulphurets would not platen or amalgamate, and there are dozens of dinky thirty-ton water-jacket furnaces, which produced something like 40 per cent. matte till their managers found that transportation charges were eating up much more than the revenue.

These things are bringing about a new order, in which mining and reduction are distinct, possibly excepting only the mines where gold ore is still to be found relatively free or susceptible of ready and relatively intense concentration. And it should be noted that even the concentrates must go to a separate plant for final treatment. Roughly summed up, it is about as feasible for a small mine owner to have his own complete reduction plant as it would be for the average beet grower to produce sugar.

This condition is peculiarly true in the copper industry, in which the getting out of the ore may be likened to farming, while the making of copper is manufacturing, pure and simple. Copper ores vary broadly. Globe, for instance, in carbonate ores, has more than a working percentage of silica and badly needs sulphide, in order to insure economical smelting. The sulphide, or much of it, has to be shipped in, while the silicious ores are drawn upon for economical lining of the converters at Douglas and other points. Years ago the Old Dominion smelter ran without sulphide, freighting in coke by wagon from the Southern Pacific, 140 miles distant, at a cost of nearly 3 cents a pound. But in those days, the average ore ran 20 per cent. in copper, besides good values in gold, and wasteful methods could be used without bankrupting the corporation. Those were the days when some small smelters even shipped matte at a profit! But those days are gone and now has entered the era of the great consolidated reduction plants.

NEW CONDITIONS.

This new condition is coming to pass mainly through the extension of railway transportation facilities. The mine owner nowadays no longer gouges along a high-grade stringer. He takes the width of the ledge and the stope is as broad as the ore body. He is studying how to get profit out of millions of tons that will run as low as even 3 per cent. and, in the Clifton-Morenci district, has been successful. But no poor man may do these things. Often it takes millions of dollars to open a modern copper mine and more millions to build economical smelter plants. The United Verde at Jerome "broke" a half-dozen wealthy men before Senator Clark came, to spend money like water in the building of an adequate smelter and in the construction of his own railroad, to the end that he is now drawing about $4,000,000 per annum profit from the property.

In the olden days, a mine which produced a half-million a year was a bonanza. Now the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas is producing about $13,000,000 worth of copper a year, four-fifths coming from the company's own mines at Bisbee, twenty-five miles distant. It has been found cheaper to haul the ore down hill for that distance than to haul the coke and ore fluxes that distance up hill. And to Douglas are being gathered ores from many localities, besides the rich concentrates of Nacozari, allowing the supervising metallurgist to adjust his mixtures so as to insure the clearest fluxing, gaining a high percentage of recovery in values with a minimum expenditure for coke, power and labor. In such a great central plant profit can be made while paying a mine owner more for his ore than he could realize from it in a smaller plant of his own. It looks like an outgrowth of trust methods, but the net result is all right to the miner who can get a railroad siding to his ore bins.

Prof. James Douglas, head of the Phelps-Dodge corporation, has been discussing this smelting question in its bearing upon the latter-day agitation toward the fullest conservation of natural resources. Reciting the many economies that have been made in reduction processes and the betterments in mining conditions, he expresses his belief that the future will bring much of value in utilization of smelter wastes.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Guggenheim interests are reported to have bought 100,000 shares of Gila Copper at $5.50, as well as 44,000 shares of Ray Consolidated at $19. Both properties have immense bodies of very low grade copper, in Northeastern Pinal county.

At Vulture plans are being made for a new mill, in place of the old eighty-stamp mill, of which ten stamps have been operated on test runs lately. It is told that the ore worked has plated and amalgamated an average of $7.14 a ton, about 80 per cent. of the sample value. Fuel oil is being used, the country for miles around having been stripped of wood. It is believed that an ample supply of water will be secured by pumping, avoiding the heavy expense of piping from the Hassayampa River.

There is another rumor to the effect that the Deming smelter will resume operations September 1, and that the plant will be much enlarged, with a new furnace and with converters, for the reduction of copper sulphides.

The old Picacho mine in the Cababi Mountains has been bought of Frank Hereford of Tucson for $15,000, by the Cababi Mining Company, capitalized in Tucson and Indianapolis, represented by Charles N. Wilson of the American Engineering Company. The old mine was worked by the Spaniards, who took out immense quantities of almost pure silver. Later, in the early sixties, the ground was gophered by Mexicans, but of late the claims have been unworked.

An American company is working claims just north of the famous El Tigre mine in Sonora, and is realizing profit, after packing its ore eleven miles by burro, then hauling twenty miles by wagon to the Nacozari Railroad, a total transportation cost to the smelter of $40 a ton.

Assays of 25 per cent. are coming from the ore of the new Denn copper strike at Bisbee, coming from three feet of ore on the 1200-foot level.

Owing to the falling off of production of the copper mines and the lowered price for the product, the assessment roll of Cochise county this year has been decreased by a million to $18,000,000.

Fifty-nine mining claims and a smelter and appurtenant machinery are to be sold by Receiver John Kavanaugh on July 26, at the Courthouse at Florence, to satisfy a judgment of $201,000 against the Troy-Manhattan Mining Company. A syndicate composed of its main stockholders has been formed to take over the property at the sale and to work it on a large and economical scale.

Below Clifton the Shannon Copper Company is beginning construction on a large concrete office building.

A railroad fireman named McCombs, who has his home in Benson, claims to have found how to temper copper, following out experiments on the same line made by his father many years ago. McCombs has a razor claimed to be of tempered copper that can be sharpened in the same manner as an ordinary razor and which holds its edge well and which does well the work of steel. The inventor states his belief that his process will be available for the tempering of copper for use as armor for war vessels.

NORTH CALIFORNIA.

LITIGATION IS THREATENED.

ALLEGHANY CERTAIN TO HAVE LAWSUITS A-PLENTY.

Mines Are So Close Together It Is Almost Unavoidable, While the Titles of Some Are Not Too Good. Receiver's Appointment for Sixteen-to-One.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GRASS VALLEY (Cal.) July 9.—Following the appointment of a receiver for the Sixteen-to-One mine, comes the rumors of further litigation concerning mining properties at Alleghany. A majority of the quartz mines which have recently come into prominence were located in placer holdings and in many cases ownership is said to be clouded. Whenever any opportunity can be grasped by parties desiring to make claims to such mines, it is promptly embraced. It is also likely that as work progresses litigation will break out between the operating companies. The mines lie so close together and the ore bodies have been followed to such extent that many well-informed mining men anticipate considerable difficulty when the camp enters upon an active producing era. In the meantime capital continues to pour in; new strikes continue to be made; deals of vast importance to the district are almost daily consummated and the boom is steadily growing.

At the Sixteen-to-One operations have been materially affected by the appointment of a receiver, but rich shipments are made on a fair scale to Nevada City. Only the richest ore is being handled, much of this running from $20,000 to $80,000 per ton. Developments are demonstrating the persistent nature of the wonderfully rich body which continues to run thirty inches wide with bonanza values throughout.

At the Twenty-One a rich shoot of ore several inches wide has been intersected. The vein closely resembles the Sixteen-to-One ore body, both in structure and values. Developments have not progressed sufficiently to demonstrate its width or extent. The Tightner lower tunnel is still driving for the main Tightner ledge and is expected to strike the famous vein daily. If not encountered soon prospect drifts will be run to pick it up. The El Dorado, Rainbow, Morning Glory, Ophir, Red Star and other prominent producers continue to look well. Prospecting is going on at dozens of properties and in many instances good results are reported.

NEVADA COUNTY.

Nevada county has been the scene of important transactions and strikes during the past week. Particularly has this been true of the Washington section.

At the Oakman a seventeen to twenty-foot vein running from $15 to $20 per ton was struck at a depth of 150 feet by the 180-foot tunnel. The management is arranging to put a large force at work and will drive drifts both ways on the vein to open thoroughly. Massachusetts people were at the Oakman and immediately purchased the Sunshine an adjoining property, and have arranged for its operation in an extensive way. The ledge ranges from five to thirty feet wide and carries milling values. The mine will be equipped with a five-stamp mill in the fall. The same people also purchased the Red Cross mine at Omega and are perfecting details for its operations on a largely increased scale. The vein runs from twelve to twenty feet wide and can be readily mined by the "glory-hole" process. The mine is equipped with a twenty-stamp mill and six-foot Huntington mill. Other Massachusetts people are looking over the field with a view to purchasing properties of merit.

In the Graniteville section the Anchu, Erie and others are showing marked improvement. At Grass Valley the North Star has declared a quarterly dividend of 4 cents per share. This amounts to $160,000 and the management expects to pay two more before the end of the year, and probably an extra dividend at Christmas. The shaft is down 5400 feet, partly vertical, partly incline, with values showing splendidly in the lowest level. Stockholders are scattered throughout California and the East.

AMADOR PROPERTIES.

The South Eureka mine at Jackson reports the uncovering of a large fairly rich ore body at the 2700-foot point. Developments are being pushed and the ore body is giving promise of again placing the South Eureka on a large producing basis. This mine is one of the best known in Amador county and has been worked with varying success since the first discovery of gold on the Mother Lode. Many Southern Californians are interested and have paid heavy assessments at various times. The management is well pleased with the outlook and intimates that dividends may be expected if the late strike comes up to indications.

At the Zella, another property involving Southern California capital, the forty-stamp mill is operating at full capacity. Five stamps are dropping on ore from the Plening claims, where a large body of low-grade ore has been opened. Several misleading reports regarding this ledge have been circulated, but the management states that but little rock of value has been found. It is being actively prospected and may develop into something of value.

EL DORADO.

El Dorado county has been the scene of important transactions recently. The Vandalia mine, one of the best-known properties in the county, has been taken over by San Francisco and Placerville interests and will be actively worked. The Vandalia has a productive record of $500,000, but has been practically idle for several years.

The Two Channel Company has been reorganized under the name of the Gold Channel Mining Company, with a capitalization of $300,000. The company controls six miles of channels, embracing approximately 2000 acres of patented mineral lands.

The Encinal Gold Mining Company is actively developing the Cedar Creek mine, three miles from Fairplay. The holdings comprise 1200 acres of gravel channels and development has been so satisfactory that an order will be shortly placed for a gravel mill. The gravel channels are among the largest and most promising in the lower section of the county and yielded good values whenever intelligently worked. Los Angeles people are said to be principally interested.

FARMERS VS. DREDGERS.

Dredge miners throughout the Sacramento Valley are awaiting with considerable interest the results of the meeting of representative citizens called by Mayor White of Sacramento to devise means of regulating dredging throughout that district. It is charged by the valley farmers and cities located along the Sacramento and tributary rivers that dredge mining is responsible for the disastrous floods that have prevailed in the valley during late winters. This is emphatically denied by the dredge operators and any attempt to restrict the operation of the gold boats will be vigorously contested.

At the present time the dredging fields of California are producing in excess of $10,000,000 per year and practically all the gold boats are in commission along the Sacramento, American, Yuba and Feather rivers. Most of the machines are landlocked and the operators contend that no débris is escaping into the streams. The farming interests, on the other hand, assert that the law regulating the storage of débris on the banks is not followed strictly and that huge quantities of débris are constantly escaping to the rivers.

SHASTA AND SISKIYOU.

Copper mining in Shasta and Siskiyou continues to attract widespread attention. Reports from Yreka are to the effect that the Blue Ledge Company is quietly arranging for the early building of a railway to Grant's Pass from its mines, and also to build a large smelter at an advantageous point on Joe or Elliott creeks. Throughout the Blue Ledge section Boston, New York, London, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other interests are actively carrying on exploration and developments. That this region will eventually become one among the important red-metal producing districts of the West seems assured.

In Shasta county the Mammoth is operating four furnaces, the Bully Hill two and the Balaklala, one. It is reported in Redding that the Balaklala will shortly increase its production, which at present approximates 1,000,000 pounds of blister copper monthly. The Mammoth Copper Company is developing several properties outside of the Mommoth mines and will have the five furnaces in commission soon. The Mountain Copper Company is shipping steadily to the Martinez smelter, all damage caused by the recent fire having been repaired. It is reported that the construction of a 4000-ton smelter at Keswick will commence before the end of the year.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed. Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Not Silver Glance.

SILVER LAKE, June 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed three samples. First, the gem found in Death Valley, about sixty miles northwest from Tecopa, Cal., please classify it. The black soft rock—what is it? Some say silver glance, others call it sulphide of lead; quite a big ledge of it in the Avawatz Range, west of Riggs. Is there any value in it? The third, found near the black stuff, is a good sample of "brass," I suppose.

Please reply in the "In the Earth" column. Thanking you for this and for former favors.

Yours faithfully, E. V. S.

ANSWER: Brass does not occur native, and yet, under certain conditions it is possible that ore carrying native copper with willemite (zinc silicate,) together with natural Death Valley heat and water of past ages, would result in the formation of the metal.

The gem (?) submitted is impure chalcedony, splotched with copper carbonates. The blackish soft rock is impure lepidomelane, and material represented by your samples is of very doubtful value.

Hornblende.

FALLBROOK, June 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] You will find inclosed two samples of ore from De Luz Cañon. Will you please classify them for me? What are the star-shaped crystals in No. 1?

Yours truly, H. D. B.

ANSWER: No. 1, hornblende; No. 2, mica present with lime, alumina and silica present. Both samples of no value.

Gypsum and Shale.

MOJAVE, June 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you with this a few samples from near this place. The white piece, I presume, is gypsum; the three gray pieces shale, and the two black pieces is, or has been, shale, with oil leached out of it. There is an immense dyke of this gray shale, and scattered over many acres of territory. Gypsum and black material not very extensive. Kindly let me know through the "In the Earth" columns what you think of it, then I can be governed as to work, etc. Thanking you for the desired information, and with the hope that I am sending you good oil indications.

Truly yours, W. R. J.

ANSWER: You name the samples correctly, with the exception of the friable black stuff, which is impure wad and bog iron ore.

The shales do not show up very favorably for good petroleum indications. Prospect for breaks and fissures, and if possible get under the leached surface shale. Then submit further samples.

Oxides and Carbonate.

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In developing some mineral springs in Orange county we came upon the inclosed formations. The red is from spring No. 2. Would you kindly give us an analysis of the same?

Thanking you for past favors, and finding in the "In the Earth" columns some of the most interesting matter of the entire paper. I am, yours very respectfully, E. E. B.

ANSWER: You submit four samples. One of the specimens is an impure talc (magnesium silicate) with calcite and magnesium carbonate present. Soda (trace) is in the rock.

The red specimen carries more soda than any other sample. It is high in iron, and this particular specimen does not react for lithium.

Your other material shows but little values from combined water. Accept our thanks for your good words. We regret that a quantitative analysis could not be given you on each sample.

Not Fire Clay.

ELSINORE, June 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herewith sample of clay. Is this fire clay? What use could it be put to any value? Also a sample of rock from a ledge, both from about four miles from Elsinore.

Yours truly, J. A. C.

ANSWER: The clay is an impure Fuller's earth of doubtful commercial value. The rock is a conglomerate of magnesium silicate, with low percentage of magnesium carbonate.

Cobalt Not Present.

CALIENTE (Nev.) June 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find inclosed in another package, well marked, three pieces of rock. I think they contain nickel or some other metal that is rare in this country, as I have been unable to receive a chemical analysis from any (two) firms which gave me the two metals excepting gold. I find the lighter parts of the rock are quite soft, the knife blade scratches it. I figured its hardness about 4 in the scale of hardness. I also figure the sp. gr. at 2.5 or 2.8. In concentrating I find a great deal of tin-white magnetic particles. Are they cobalt? The scratch gives a streak hardly discernable. I find that these magnetic particles dissolve quite readily in c. p. nitric acid. I next added a few drops of sulphuric acid, which boils vigorously, and leaves a metallic curd on top of solution. I then smelted a little of the pulp on a pocket smelter tablet and crushed some and put it in a glass; meantime, I take a small piece of silver, put it in another glass, add a few drops of nitric acid, which produces a milky solution and forms a curd precipitate. I pour this silver solution on the smelted pulp and add nitric acid a drop at a time until it quits boiling, and the solution turns light green in color, which I take to be nickel. I then pan off the carbon particles, and find I have a sediment of bright, shining particles, which, when rubbed with pestle, resembles light-colored gold and silver alloy. On adding a few drops of sulphuric acid—which does not darken them nor have any effect—I decide they are not iron. I wash off the sulphuric acid and add nitric acid. It does not seem to make any change. I then add hydrochloric acid in dilute form, but action is very feeble. I then heat solution. Metallics were visible twenty minutes later in a less shining form, more like light-colored gold. Are the principal metals of the ore cobalt and nickel? or was I wrong in my diagnosis? If so, please let me know through The Times what the bright, shining particles are.

This ore comes from near Big Springs, Nev., and the whole mountain is practically of the same rocks as I have sent you. Trusting that I will see the answer in The Times in the near future. I remain, as ever, your reader and prospector. F. L. W.

ANSWER: Your letter is published in full for two reasons. (1.) There is a metallurgist (?) reporting great platinum values from the section indicated. (2.) There is probably too much alchemistry in the analysis you make.

Prospectors and others should consult the columns of The Times for assayers of repute and precision, submit gold and platinum assays to them always.

It is not clear how nitric acid and sulphuric acid (concentrated) has no effect on your findings; when dilute hydrochloric acid gives a feeble action. If you use coin silver your green color is understood. To the point: Among the rocks submitted are pyrrhotite (magnetic pyrite) in microscopical forms, with zinc traces. Microscopical magnetite is also sparingly observable throughout the rock. The metallic "curd" you refer to is but sulphur.

In somewhat, poetic language, let it be noted that aqua regia would, by ebullition, change your particles to a soluble condition. Nickel—trace only—is in the ore submitted, but in too low percentage to work at a profit.

Platinum Not Present.

QUARTZITE (Ariz.) June 5.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would you kindly state in The Times if the enclosed sample is platinum. It looks like antimony and lead. This is from the Dome Range. Yours truly, G. A. M. an old man. For years more than his share The wonderful vitality enables them to resist for many years, a half a century. But it was telling on this old man. He lay on his bunk and coughed miserably, and he knew that he would never be well again. So he called his children around him and told them that he wanted to die. He reached for the old Hudson Bay gun that he had carried since boyhood. He cocked it and handed it to his eldest son, telling him to put him out of pain. But the boy had been told by the whites somewhere that it was a sin to kill in this way, and he refused to grant his father's last request. The others also refused. Then the aged Tillemut took the weapon, placed the muzzle in his mouth, and touched the trigger with his toe.

On the Russian Diomede, an island in Bering Strait, another old man met death in a somewhat similar manner. In the Diomede case, however, the sons obeyed the father implicitly. This was the regular old Eskimo death. There was no shooting. It was in a large iglo, the roof of which is supported in the middle by a stout beam. To this beam the boys fastened a strip of walrus skin, at the end of which dangled a noose. They helped their father to the edge of the bunk, fastened the noose about his neck, and let him swing off his high bed and strangle to death.

These people are not cruel. No more affectionate people can be found in the world than the Eskimos. Blows are seldom struck; harsh words are seldom uttered. But until quite recently the ending of hopeless suffering by suicide or by killing the patient was the universal rule all over the Arctic world. To kill a suffering relative or friend was considered an act of kindness and mercy, just as we consider it an act of mercy to kill animals we know cannot recover.

This may recall the Spartan parents who left their weak or deformed children on the mountainside to die. But such cruelty is unknown in Eskimo society—the children here are sacred and the most unfortunate and misshapen are given the tenderest care. Nevertheless when death was plainly approaching and the sufferer asked to be relieved, his request was always granted. Even infants were thus put out of pain. Although there is none of the conspicuous demonstration of grief that characterizes the saddest moments of a more impulsive people, the sorrow for the dead in an Eskimo household is just as bitter as in any refined home in the world.

In spite of the ruling white man's ideas concerning the taking of life in this way, the Eskimos still more than half believe in it. The ordinary death is reported as follows: "He died himself." This means that "he" died without the affair being hurried along either by his own hand or that of a friend or relative.

THE BASQUE RACE.

All Efforts Have Failed to Trace the Origin of This People and Their Language.

[Exchange:] The Basque provinces lie in the north of Spain, and although for centuries students have tried to trace the real origin of the people and find a key to their language they have failed to do so.

The race is a Catholic one, and their devotion to the Catholic faith is so firm that it is commonly said the devil gave them up as a hopeless object of his sinister attentions, simply because he could never understand or master their language.

All other known tongues spoken by the sons of men have been shown to possess a common origin, traceable to the Arabic or Semitic. But the Basque language has entirely resisted the philologist. In some aspects the vernacular shows traces of a Chinese admixture; in others it is clear the North American Indian terms are native to it. It also shows traces of barbaric language spoken on the east coast of Africa.

The people themselves bear physiological traits found in those who speak the said tongues. The native name of Basqueland is Eskuara, and their motto is "Iruracbat," or "three in one." Nor is their political structure anything like that of any known political body, though they belong, of course, to Spain.

Each Basque province is governed by a Parliament composed of representatives—selected partly by election, partly by lot—among the householders of each country parish or town. Their laws are essentially peculiar to themselves, and are conceived on no known code, either by ancient or medieval times. They are the puzzle among nations, and number 500,000, all told.

Too Tempting an Opportunity.

"H'm!" said the doctor reflectively, as he looked at the patient he had been called in to attend. "You must call in another medical man."

"Am I as bad as all that?" moaned the patient, paling at the thought of his possibly near-at-hand demise.

"Well, I don't know just how ill you are," replied the man of medicine, "but I do know that you are the lawyer who cross-examined me in a law case last week."

"What's that to do with it?" asked the other, in surprise.

The reply came unhesitatingly.

"A good deal. My conscience won't let me kill you, and I'll be hanged if I want to cure you. Good afternoon!"—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

Piracy Increasing.

Piracy is increasing along the coasts and inland seas of the empire. The Japanese hitherto have been known to plunder wrecks that had been abandoned, but an attack upon cargoes in transit has not been recorded. However, a big lighter was recently on its way to Yokohama to be transshipped to an ocean steamer, when it was attacked by a force of pirates. A large part of the cargo was abstracted, the crew of the lighter being helpless to offer resistance.

In the beautiful waters of the inland sea, too, especially in the vicinity of Seto, acts of piracy are becoming alarmingly frequent. The pirate craft number more than a dozen, each armed with deadly weapons. Various vessels plying among the islands have been ransacked from time to time, many persons have been robbed in the last few years and even women have been carried away captive.—[Exchange.

HOW RACES ARE WON AND LOST

The Stearns took third place in the Santa Monica road race, easily defeating its old rival, the "Locomobile."

Owing to an accident to the Thomas while in practice Thursday, it became necessary at the eleventh hour to replace the motor with one from a private car owned and driven by Mr. H. C. Wyatt over 18,000 miles without an overhauling. In the third lap the pump connection broke. The car was run until the tenth lap without water circulation, at a mile-a-minute gait, according to instructions received before the race, which were to maintain this rate for 150 miles, then increase; but the driver, Elmer Huber, and his mechanic, Paul Corrigan, realizing this speed could not be maintained throughout the race without water circulation, and not injure the car, decided to withdraw from the race. Thus the chances of the Thomas faded.

Corbett Tells How to Win

Former Champion Pugilist Says You Must Have a Good Stomach or You'll Never Have the "Punch" That Insures Victory

James J. Corbett, conqueror of John L. Sullivan, and former champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, says: "If you haven't a strong stomach you can't get the punch that wins."

It is a well-known fact that a man's stomach is one of the most important organs of the body. When your stomach is in perfect working order you are happy and contented, but when it is not you are easily discouraged and soon lose all energy and ambition to push forward. When a man's stomach is all knocked out it is not long before the other organs are affected and he becomes a burden to himself and to everybody else.

The stomach is responsible for most of the chronic ailments from which people suffer. If it does not digest the food properly there will be extra work for the liver; when food remains in the stomach and ferments it makes a gas which extends the stomach and presses on the lungs and heart and causes palpitation; when it passes the undigested food into the intestines constipation ensues, poison gets into the blood, causing rheumatism and a whole lot of other trouble; in fact, it would be easy to trace most of the chronic ailments back to poor digestion.

You know the stomach is the engine of the body. You put food into the furnace and as it burns it generates power, and that power runs the human machinery. Naturally, if you don't digest your food properly you are going to have very little power with which to run the machinery.

Get out of the habit of taking drugs and help your stomach and heart in their work by adding to their vitality. Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt is a natural invigorant. It pours electric life into them, and that is what they have lost. Electricity is the only cure for them.

"Why should I use your belt?" That is, why is it better for me than many other things advertised to cure my ailments? Because it cures by restoring the vitality of the part that is ailing, and the other things do not cure at all, because they do not restore the vitality. This is assuming that our electric belt gives electricity, which is the basis of animal life, and that the other things are drugs.

The day of blind following of habit is passing, and men are thinking now. In these days a man does not pull the cork out of a bottle and swallow a dose of the stuff without looking on the label to see what is in it. People are beginning to fear the word "dope," as they have been shown that it means destruction to the nerves and tissues.

With a strong stomach, feeding the nerves and blood of the body with new energy every hour of the day, you are proof against disease, because not only does it create all the vitality the body needs, but it keeps the blood clear of the poisonous matter that causes rheumatism and other troubles.

Here is a man cured of weak back and stomach trouble. H. P. Baker, Covina, Cal.: "The sharp pains I had in my back when I bought one of your belts have entirely left me, my appetite is first-class and my stomach now does its work in proper manner."

Here is a man who tried drugs first. J. F. Fulkerson, Ventura, Cal.: "I was broken down with a bad case of back trouble and I procured one of your Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belts. At that time I was unable to walk. Your Belt worked like magic in my case and I recommend it to all sufferers. I found you perfectly square and honest with me in every way."

The majority of cases which have been lately cured by the Dr. McLaughlin Belt are of men broken down by nervous strain, overwork, overeating and late hours. In them the old ambition seemed to have gone; self-confidence was lacking, and there was a tendency to premature old age. In such cases Electricity is most effective, as its effect is to restore life to the nerves and all the vital organs.

Here is a man cured of back trouble. A. M. Bryan, Careaga, Cal., says: "Before using your Belt I always had to lose from four to six weeks' work on account of my back every winter. Since using it I work every day."

We could fill pages of this paper with letters of praise from those who have been cured by Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt, but those given above are certainly enough to suggest to the reader that he also may find relief from his ailments by using electricity.

If you are suffering from Nervousness, Backache, Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Constipation, or any ailment which drugs fail to cure, call today for Free Book. This book should be read by every man. It tells facts that are of interest to every man who wants to remain young in energy at any age. Call if you can; if you can't, send coupon for our beautifully illustrated 84-page Free Book.

The "Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt" is patented and is made only by the Dr. McLaughlin Co. and sold only by the Dr. McLaughlin Co. in their own offices throughout the world. Drug stores, canvassers, manufacturers and street corner men can't get this Belt. There are none "just as good."

Surrounding Independence, the County Seat, on Three Sides, and Extending For Ten Miles Down the Valley

The Southern Pacific Company is now building a new transcontinental line from Los Angeles to the East, via Mojave and Owens Valley, to a connection with the Central Pacific in Nevada, thus avoiding the Tehachepi Pass and the Sierra Nevada forty miles of snow sheds, thus shortening the distance between Los Angeles and Chicago about 300 miles.

The railroad front is now a hundred miles beyond Mojave, and before the end of the year cars from Los Angeles will be running to Independence.

A resident of Los Angeles has recently returned from an extended trip through the valley, and makes the following report:

MORE BACK COUNTRY FOR LOS ANGELES

Few people in Southern California realize in the slightest degree the new country that is being opened up as tributary to this southern metropolis.

Owens Valley is more than a hundred miles in length, and from one to ten miles, or more, in width. That section has been so isolated that little is known of its people, its resources, and its land and water supply by the public in general. It has been cut off from Central California by the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and from Southern California by a vast extent of desert, with no railroad connections to bring these two sections together.

All that our people seem to know or care about that Valley is the fact that it is to supply our city with an additional supply of domestic, irrigation and power water. This lack of interest in that valley is caused by lack of knowledge of its extent and natural resources.

A few of our city officials, and a very few of our business men, have made trips to the valley, but in making those trips they have, as a rule, kept both eyes on the means being adopted to secure a portion of the water there found for use here.

But there is another side to the question. The Owens Valley is one of great extent—a valley that is rich in agricultural, as well as mineral and power resources. From Little Lake, at what might be termed the lower end of the valley, to Round Valley, at the upper end, is a distance of about 125 miles. And while Little Lake is not, strictly speaking, a portion of Owens Valley, still, for the purposes of a general description of the country, it can be so considered without doing violence to geographical facts.

The Valley contains a large acreage of as fine soil as the stars and stripes float over; and then it has some soil—like all other sections of the arid and semi-arid west—that is of little or no value.

The Valley is well supplied with water. It is one of the very best watered sections of the State. The rainfall is light—very light—but the snowfall on the Sierra Nevadas, which loom up so abruptly on the west side of the Valley, is heavy—very heavy. The average annual rainfall does not exceed four or five inches; but the heavy deposit of snow on the highest range of mountains in the United States, which deposit is kept in cold storage for summer use, more than makes up for the rainfall shortage in the Valley below. That deposit of snow remains on the ground unmelted until the middle or last of May, when the mountain streams gradually increase in volume to meet the increasing demand for irrigation water during the mid-summer months and do not recede to their normal conditions until the cool weather sets in again during the autumn months, when irrigation water is less needed again. Thus it is that the light supply of water is furnished the lands of the Valley during the fall, winter and spring months, when it is least needed, and the larger supply is furnished during the summer months when it is most needed.

Nature has not only provided these great storage reservoirs on the tops of this range of mountains, but it has also provided another system for storing the surplus waters, on which supply the people can at will make sight drafts that will be honored.

Vast gravel beds underlie the Valley, and into that subterranean reservoir more than half the water that comes down the mountain streams flows, thus making a double supply of stored water that can be used when it would do the most good.

Heretofore this valley has been pretty well isolated from the outside world, because of the lack of railroad communication. It is true that for several years past there has been a narrow gauge railroad connecting this valley with the railroad systems of Nevada, but the service has been a very unsatisfactory one, because the connection was not direct with either the extensive business interests of Central California nor the active development and growth of Southern California.

Los Angeles has been and is the natural outlet for the people and products of Owens Valley; but in order for a citizen of that valley to reach this city heretofore, he had to travel over a thousand miles to get here, while the distance to travel should have been but a little over two hundred miles. He had to go north to a connection with the Central Pacific, thence west to Sacramento over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and through forty miles of snow sheds, and thence half the length of the State climbing over the mountains again at Tehachepi Pass.

Now the Southern Pacific is building a direct line up through the valley to a connection with the Central Pacific in the State of Nevada, with the intention, it is stated, of making this another trans-continental line that will avoid not only the Tehachepi Pass, but also the other more difficult climb over the Sierra Nevadas. With this end in view, the company is not only making a first class road bed, but it is laying 75-pound steel rail. Within the next few months a person can take a sleeping car here at Los Angeles at the close of business and get up the next morning at either Lone Pine, Independence, Big Pine, or Bishop.

People are beginning to go into the valley even at the present time, with the railroad front at Little Lake, which is about seventy miles this side of Independence and 120 miles this side of Bishop, at present the largest town in the valley. Even before regular trains run to either Independence or Bishop, look out for a rush of settlers that will equal, if not exceed, the rush to Imperial Valley during the vigorous days of 1901-2-3.

Speaking from a development point of view, the Owens Valley stands today where Southern California stood forty years ago. Land is as cheap there now as it was here then. Water is as cheap there now as it was here then—and more abundant.

That section resembles this country in another respect. In 1870 most of the water of Southern California was beneath the surface, but the people didn't know it; and if they had known it, they had no economical way of bringing the water to the surface. Today the pumping of water is as simple as the plowing of land—and the process is not an expensive one. Here we had to learn with long years of experience how to utilize the resources that were hidden beneath the surface. Today Owens Valley can benefit by our experience. It can develop as much in five years as we developed in thirty-five.

That valley has great agricultural resources that will make it one of the wealthiest valleys of the State. The farmer there can take a piece of land and get quick returns and good returns. Take alfalfa as an illustration. The season is shorter there than here, but the growth is astonishing. There the farmer cuts his alfalfa but two or three times a year, while here he cuts it seven or eight times; but then look at the growth there. The first cutting is made there as a rule in June, when from three and a half to four and a half tons of choice hay are cut from the acre. Another crop is then cut later in the season which is equal in quantity to the first, and then several months of good pasturage is had or another lighter crop can be cut. And alfalfa only requires two good irrigations during the year.

There the alfalfa is not cut until it is fully in bloom and the seed begins to form; and then in that valley the hay does not shed its leaves or bloom, and the stalks are not woody and tough. Hence the stock not only eats the hay up, stalks and all, but the hay is more nutritious, and horses fed on such hay can work hard without being fed on grain also.

This condition of affairs as touching the alfalfa question makes the dairy and hog business very profitable. The same can be said also of sheep and horses.

This valley also produces in its meadow lands—lands that are naturally moist and need no irrigation—the finest growth of redtop and timothy. Such lands furnish one good, heavy crop of hay each season besides many months of the finest pasture for stock. The owners of fine stock in San Francisco and other sections of California send to Owens Valley for this timothy and redtop hay, which is considered the finest of feed for fine stock.

Wheat, oats and barley mature to perfection, and there is never a failure. Small grains, alfalfa, cows and hogs give quick returns. Then comes the question of fruits which give greater returns—more money to the acre.

This valley is the home of the apple and pear. A good apple orchard, properly located as to soil and climate, and properly cared for, is as profitable as the orange or lemon. Apples are a staple at all seasons of the year. Oranges and lemons are considered a luxury. Apples sell for more per bushel the year round than do oranges. It takes time to grow either an orange orchard or an apple grove, but while the apple trees are growing, potatoes, pomme de terre (apples of the earth) can be grown with profit between the trees without injury to the orchard. Potatoes in Owens Valley yield from eight to fifteen tons per acre, and sell at from $25.00 to $30.00 per ton.

The soil and climate of the valley seem to be suited to the growth of vegetables of nearly all kinds, as well as all kinds of fruits, except citrus fruits.

As for markets, the gold mines of Southern Nevada are within easy reach, and next year Los Angeles city will draw on the valley for a portion of its supplies. These markets will take all the produce that can be grown in that valley, and pay therefor remunerative prices.

Already capitalists are quietly investigating the valley with a view to not only making purchases of land and water, but they also have an eye to subdivision and colonization. Already the Sierra Securities Company has secured about 2200 acres of choice land just south of Independence, and is subdividing the same into twenty, forty and eighty acre tracts with a view to making a compact settlement on Southern California lines.

The Company also owns a large portion of the townsite of Independence, together with several hundred acres of land adjoining the townsite on three sides.

The Company has secured as a right of way for a boulevard and a trolley line a strip of land 200 feet in width, and for a distance of ten miles, extending from the town of Independence to the Alabama hills, this right of way is perfectly straight. Members of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county have signified their desire to co-operate with the Company in opening up this fine boulevard in lieu of the old road, which is neither straight nor convenient. The old road will be abandoned, but other new roads will be opened. The Company is now platting a tract of land ten miles in length and from two to three miles in width, extending along the proposed boulevard. The tract contains about 12,000 acres, a portion of which is owned by the Company and the owners of other lands in the tract are signifying their desire to unite with the Company and make this section the finest compact settlement in the valley. In laying out the tract, roads parallel to the boulevard will be located every half mile, and cross roads at right angles to the boulevard will also be provided every half mile, thus cutting the land into blocks one-half mile square—each block containing 160 acres, or eight 20-acre lots. This will be a section of small holdings.

The Company owns the entire flow of Shepherds Creek and two-thirds of the flow of Independence Creek. During the years 1906 and 1907 the Company had the flow of these two streams carefully measured every ten days to ascertain the average flow that could be depended upon. As regards rainfall, those two years were considered a good average for many years past. From the measurements made it was also ascertained that those streams between the foot of the mountains and the place of measurements further down on the slope of the valley, there was a loss of 60 per cent. of the water. When a pipe line is laid along each stream for the purpose of developing the water power, this loss of water will be saved, and when so saved the Company will have under its control 3000 inches of water in Shepherds Creek and 3200 inches in Independence Creek, or a total of 6200 inches. It is the program to organize a mutual water company for the purpose of irrigating the 12,000-acre tract of land. These water rights in the two streams named will be turned over to the water company, and each land owner under the system will be given stock to represent his interest in the system.

The water will be distributed to the various owners of land under the system by means of cement ditches or cement pipes, so that the distribution may be perfect and no water lost.

The land owned by the Company is located midway of the tract, about five miles below the town of Independence. The lands between the town and the Company's lands are unimproved, but are under private ownership. They have no right to water at present but the owners are anxious to co-operate with the Company and join in the system of subdivision, securing the right to use water from the water company.

The lands below the tract owned by the Company are also under private ownership, and some of them have good water rights from reliable sources of supply. These land owners are also considering favorably a proposition to unite with the system and pool their water rights in one fine system.

The 6200 inches of water owned by this Company would be worth here in Southern California from $1000 to $3000 an inch, according to the location of the streams. At $1000 an inch, the lowest price named for this section, the two streams named would have a value of $6,200,000. Who shall say but that irrigating water in the Owens Valley will not be worth $1000 an inch ten years hence just as readily as it is worth $100 an inch there today?

Another tract of land embracing nearly 2000 acres, with a good water right said to reach nearly 1000 inches, can also be had for similar subdivision purposes. Southern California men, with Southern California energy and capital, are making a move on the valley, and there is no telling what may happen in the near future.

People frequently say today: "If I had only come to Southern California thirty years ago, I could have made money enough for anyone." And so he could, but there were drawbacks then that we do not have today. Then everything was experimental. Today we need not make mistakes. The chances here today are as good as they were thirty years ago, only it takes more money. Is it not possible that twenty years hence the same remark may be made by residents of the Owens Valley?

Southern California recently expanded its borders and took in the Imperial Valley—a valley that now contains 2500 people and $50,000,000 of wealth—a valley where many blades of grass have been made to grow where none grew before. Imperial Valley is now a part and parcel of Southern California.

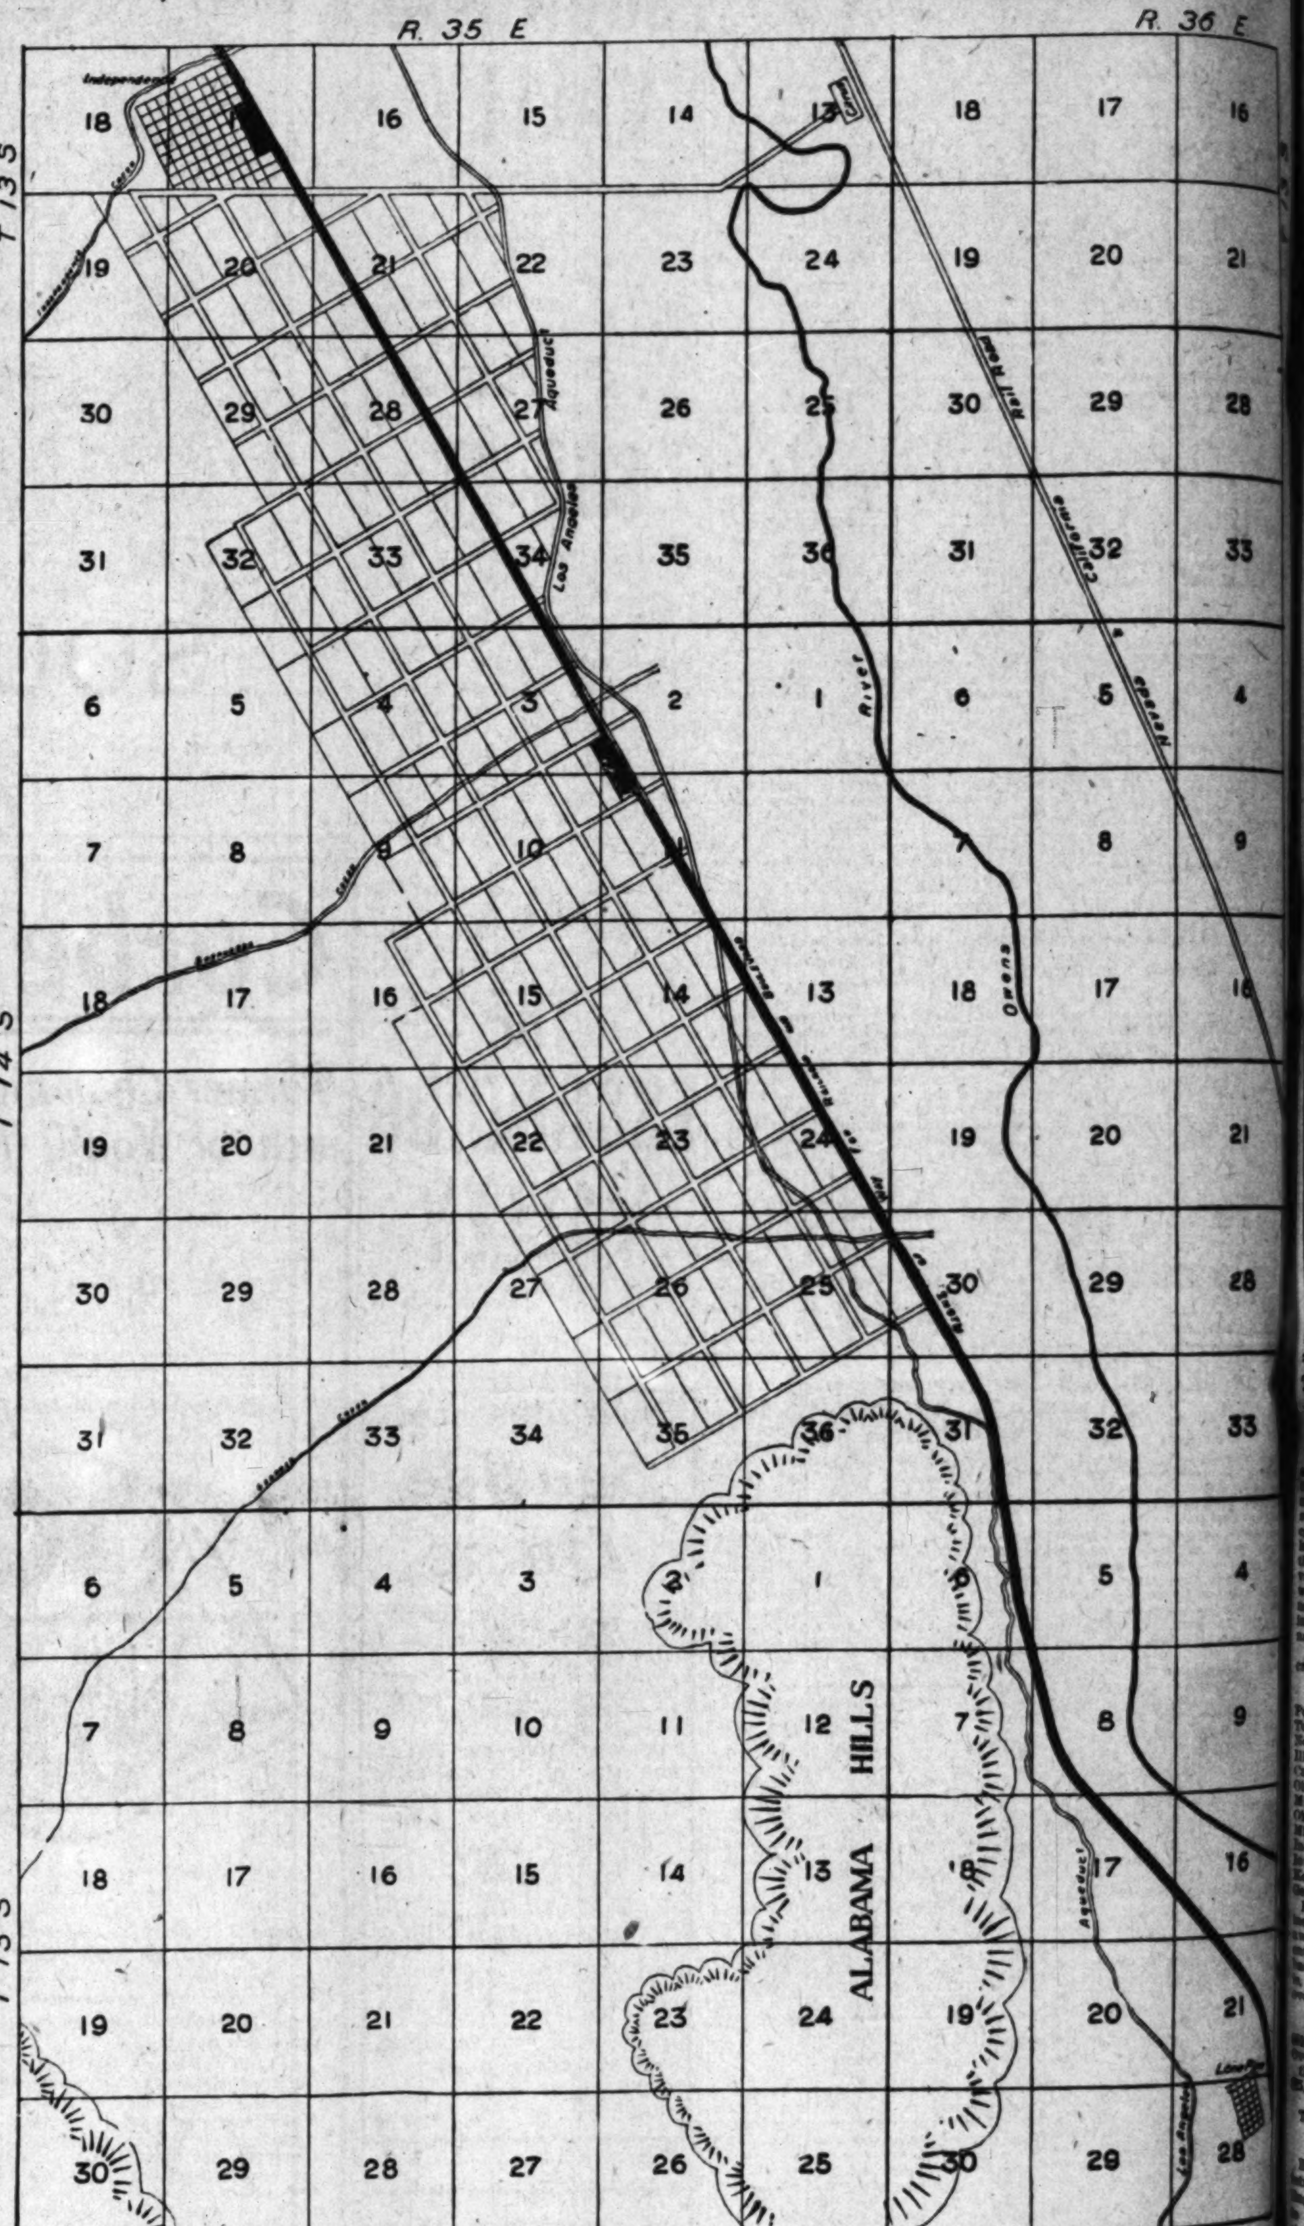
Today we are not only getting ready to annex more territory to the city of Los Angeles, but we are getting ready to annex more territory to Southern California, and Owens Valley is to be made our newest extension. We need it, and it needs us. We can help each other.

The mountain streams and canyons of Owens Valley will become, a few years hence, popular pleasure resorts—easy of access to Los Angeles people and to the visitors within our gates. The best trout fishing in the State is to be found today in those mountain streams.

The grand mountains that tower up for two miles or more above the floor of the valley exhibit a grandeur not found elsewhere in the State or on this Coast.

As soon as the cars reach the valley, it will be in order for the Chamber of Commerce to organize a business man's excursion to visit the valley and get acquainted with its people and its products and resources.

The editors of Southern California, always looking for new fields to visit, will also be glad to go up and spy out the land, as they did a few years ago when they visited the Colorado desert—now the Imperial Valley—the desert having been destroyed.



Preliminary Announcement

Having secured options on several thousand acres of choice land in the valley, with an abundant water supply, below Independence, we submit herewith a map of the valley extending from Independence on the north, to Lone Pine on the south, with a view to placing these lands on the market. This tract of land will soon be placed on the market, when further particulars will be given the public.

People are already rushing into the valley in search of cheap lands and choice locations. Men are actually standing in line at the U. S. Land Office at Independence.

The railroad now takes you into Little Lake, and the automobile line takes you from that point to Independence.

Very soon the railroad trip will be lengthened and the automobile line shortened. Before going into the valley, call on us for further information, and we will give you letters to our representatives in the valley, who will show you every courtesy.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S HANDSOMEST BUNGALOW—ON MT. WASHINGTON.

ONE OF THE VERY FINEST

We reproduce today an architect's sketch of one of the handsomest bungalows in America. This beautiful home has just been completed and adorns the corner of San Rafael avenue and Mt. Washington Drive — on scenic Mt. Washington. The building cost $6000 and is unique in many details. It contains eleven rooms and because of its peculiar location on undulating ground, it is in reality a two-story house at the rear and a bungalow in front. The house has a patio at the back in the center of which is a fountain.

HOTEL WORK PROGRESSING

Construction work on the Mt. Washington Hotel has already reached the third story and the roof will be put on next week. The big hostelry will, undoubtedly, be completed at an early date. It will be a fitting ornament to Mt. Washington and a popular rendezvous for tourists and week-end pleasure seekers.

ILLUMINATION OF INCLINE

A contract has been closed with the Pacific Light and Power Company, whereby a magnificent electric illumination system will be established on both sides of the incline railway roadbed. Ornamental electroliers will be installed. This is one of the finest of the recent improvements planned for Mt. Washington. The view of the lighting system at night will, undoubtedly, be very attractive. Work on the new improvement will be commenced at once.

TRAVELER'S ENTHUSIASM

A prominent traveler, who has made several trips around the world, visited Mt. Washington last week. He was enthusiastic in his praise of the big mountain subdivision. He stated that in his opinion no residence section of any of the great cities in the world enjoys a more comprehensive view than Mt. Washington. The scenic incline railway was also generously praised by this well-known globe trotter.

ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Mt. Washington Is Strongly Forcing Itself In the Limelight of Public Interest.

Public interest in Mt. Washington is increasing by leaps and bounds. Thousands visit the lofty residence district each week. The publication of the EAGLE has done its share in awakening the public to the unsurpassed residential advantages of this wonderful elevation. It is expected that fully 20,000 Elks with their families will visit Mt. Washington within the next four weeks.

The Incline Railway is in perfect condition and is giving excellent service. A. St. C. Perry, general manager of the system, states that he anticipates no difficulty in handling the largest crowds. The road and equipment has been rigidly tested and has not been found wanting in any detail.

GLOWING PRAISE

Well Known Eastern Writer Pronounces Mt. Washington Residential Marvel

A prominent eastern journalist, after enjoying a trip up Mt. Washington last week, had the following to say about the property:

"For centuries homes commanding an unobstructed view of mountain ranges, the city and the ocean have been the privilege of only royalty and great wealth the world over. Now, right here in your own Los Angeles, the man of even moderate wealth may build his home on a charming, sunkissed eminence that commands a vista of snow-capped mountains, several cities and the blue ocean — not surpassed on either hemisphere. And an incline railway brings this spot within 20 minutes of the Los Angeles shopping district! This may seem like a remarkable statement, but a visit to Mt. Washington today will reveal its absolute truth. No broader or more ambitious residential project has ever been attempted on the Pacific Coast than Mt. Washington. For many years this stately mountain has been admired for its peculiar scenic advantages by countless thousands, but it has remained for a number of far-sighted prominent Los Angeles men to produce the capital necessary for the transformation of this great viewpoint into a practical residence place. The construction of an incline railway, the same length as the Mt. Lowe road, and the building of a broad automobile highway to the summit, were among the engineering problems that had to be mastered. But these things and many others have been accomplished and Mt. Washington with its overwhelming residential advantages stands today as a practical home proposition. It offers almost real mountain living within quicker reach of busy Broadway than most residence sections of the city. Mt. Washington is not simply a future dream—it is a splendid, vivid reality today. Beautiful homes are adorning its sunny top—the sound of hammer and saw are heard on every hand. Although the future has wonderful things in store for this grand old masterpiece of nature—the present is brilliant enough to attract the most fastidious home builders."

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Business recovered yesterday morning after the slump of Friday in such a manner that the larger part of perishable fruit was moved. Prices were slashed to the lowest possible figures—anything at all to get rid of the fruit and keep it from entire waste. Apricots were sold at 25 cents a box, the first time this year that they have reached that low figure, and the same price which marked the low ebb last year. Anything for berries was the cry. They sold right along as low as 25 cents a crate, or an average of 1 cent a basket. Both markets were filled with the berries. Peaches were worth only 40 cents a box. Pears declined to $1.25. A car of Bartletts, shipped here by the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, was received by one of the large dealers and immediately placed in his hot rooms where they will ripen in two days and after which they will be distributed by the Elks from Sacramento. A car of peaches for the same purpose, which will arrive here on Tuesday, will be ready for immediate distribution.

Local eggs were very firm. The price paid for case counts on the open market yesterday morning was 27½ cents. At that figure there were not sufficient eggs on the market to supply the demand. The call for eggs is increasing perceptibly, owing to the greater demand from the hotels and restaurants, which are beginning to feel the influx of visitors. Receipts of eggs were only 353 cases.

Butter arrivals were good, 28,437 pounds. The call for local creamery was excellent, and there was some eastern stock sold for immediate distribution.

Cheese was well called for. Receipts were 14,128 pounds. Northern fresh was the best seller, although it brought two cents less than the actual established quotation. Cheese throughout the week has been selling well. Northern has been the only variety to advance.

Two cars of potatoes were reported in from Orange county. Most of the railroad arrivals at present are from that section. There have been no changes since Thursday when tubers all declined 25 cents. At this figure they continue to hold up better. Onions are weak, owing to the fact that the warm weather is causing their rapid drying or rot and it is imperative for the merchants to move them as fast as they arrive. Beans are unchanged.

Vegetables are as low as they have been at any time this year. They are not called for at this season, owing to the general dislike of housewives to cook them. Tomatoes declined to 75 cents a crate with heavy receipts and their quick ripening. Cucumbers were down to 35 cents a lug box. Cabbage sold slowly at less than 50 cents a sack. Sweet corn braced considerably with the heavy call and as a result sold at 35 cents a lug box. Kale sold at 15 to 20 cents a box. Spearmint was shipped in and sold at 15 to 20 cents a bunch.

NEAR "GOOSE EGG" CLASS.

Associated Oil Only Security Handled on Los Angeles Stock Exchange's Session.

A limited activity in Associated Oil was all that prevented yesterday's call on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange from being in the "goose egg" class, for the sales of 50 shares of this one petroleum marked the grand total of the business done. Not a fluctuation in quotations was recorded which is worth the noting.

Thirty shares of Associated were handled under the regular delivery contract at 33.75@33.87 1-2; trading prices from 1-8 point to 3-8 point lower than those prevailing on Friday. Ten shares were handled at 33.62 1-2 seller 30 days, and 10 more at 33.75 under the same terms. The security closed at 33.87 1-2@34.12 1-2, unchanged in the bid, and down 1-8 point in the asked price.

MINES LITTLE LESS WEAK.

Slight Improvement on Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange But Florence Suffers Slump.

The mining issues listed on the Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange were a little less weak yesterday, with the exception of Florence. But even that security, just at the close, at noon, suffered a slump of 5 points in the asked price.

Five hundred shares of Goldfield Consolidated changed hands at 6.75@6.70, prices from 5 to 10 cents better than those prevailing on Friday. The close, at 6.70@6.75, was advanced 20 points in the bid and 10 points in the asked price.

Fraction was a cent off in the trading figure, and 200 shares were handled at 55. The stock closed at 54@58, off a point in the bid and up the same amount in the asked price.

Fifteen hundred shares of Daisy were marketed at 22½, under the regular delivery and at the same figure under the seller 10 day contract. The closing bid at 22 was up ½ point.

Transactions in Florence amounted to 400 shares at 3.00, the price of the past few days. The close was at 2.90@3.00, unchanged in the bid and off 5 points in the asked price.

A thousand shares of Bisbee West sold at 1.00; 5000 of Crackerjack at 1 1-8; 1000 of Jumbo Extension at 12; 2000 of Mayflower Consolidated at 9½; 2000 of North American Mining at 4 3-4, and 1000 of Red Hills at 6½.

Fifty shares of Mexican Petroleum Common changed hands at 19.25, and 10 of Union Oil at 106.50.

Hopes for Large Demand for Securities Dashed and Sales Fall Way Below Normal—Dribble of Offerings Sufficient Only to Carry Prices to Lower Level.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—Today's stock market dullness was the reflection of the disappointment of hopes of a good demand for stocks. The demand today continued torpid and the dribbling of offerings was sufficient to carry prices downward.

The Financial Chronicle estimated the rate of increase in June gross earnings of railroads over June of last year at 10.45 per cent., on returns from one-third of the total mileage of the coutnry. The same authority points out, however, that in June last year, the decrease in gross earnings for a similar mileage and in comparison with the previous year reached a percentage of 30.9.

Bonds were irregular, total sales, par value, $1,666,000.

United States 2s and 3s have declined ¼ and the 4s, registered, ½ per cent. on call.

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 111 West Third street.]

[illegible], July 10.—Liverpool was again [illegible] this morning on bullish [illegible] spinners takings. Rain[illegible] a deficiency of 14 inches [illegible] and as a result the [illegible] now prevailing are causing [illegible] unless early relief is of[illegible] will not make out its last [illegible] liquidation has been thorough [illegible] and a considerable short [illegible] accumulated on the theory that a reaction was due, and in the event of unfavorable news over Sunday the market will probably open higher. We are very bullish and believe in buying on every ten-point break that occurs.

Hill of Logan & Bryan says: "Fearing the weather over Sunday in Texas and looking at the bullish week-end figures of the visible supply, and prompted by a desire to cover their short interest, the Liverpool market is too good for American markets, and advances of about 10 points in American prices are to be expected this morning, unless the weather map discloses rain in Texas. Texas temperature, early, show no relief from the heat, and American markets may show their usual strength throughout the day, and higher levels of prices be maintained."

Weather—Temperature, Ardmore, 102; Muskogee, 100; Gainesville, 102.

Cotton forecast: Louisiana, Arkansas, probably showers; Oklahoma and Texas part cloudy.

The World's Greatest Magazine Success

How You May Share in the Extraordinary Profits of a Wonderful Business

What This Offer of 9 Per Cent Preferred Shares Means for Investors

Among the many big enterprises of Chicago, the wonder among the big cities of the world, is the Woman's World—the world's greatest magazine success. This phenomenal success was achieved because it was the FIRST MAGAZINE to supply the BEST LITERATURE to the masses in the small cities and towns at the lowest cost—a dollar-a-year magazine for 25 cents a year. The most famous writers and thinkers of the country, whose work formerly could be had only in the high-priced 15 and 25-cent magazines, are contributors to the Woman's World, and this explains the phenomenal growth of the Woman's World.

It has a circulation of over 2,000,000 copies a month, OFFICIAL PROOF OF WHICH ANY ONE CAN HAVE FOR THE ASKING.

This is the largest circulation of any magazine in the world. THIS MAGAZINE IS CHARGING THE HIGHEST RATE FOR ADVERTISING. The regular advertising rate is $8 per line, $112 per inch, and $4200 per page per insertion, and every issue is crowded with advertising during the busy season, for the reason that business men, who depend on advertising for their success, are finding it a better and stronger puller than any other magazine in the world.

Our last March issue carried as much as $30,000 advertising, and had to leave out over $20,000 desirable advertising which came too late and could not be accommodated for lack of facilities. The Woman's World carries clean, desirable advertising only. ADVERTISING AMOUNTING TO $250,000 A YEAR IS DECLINED BECAUSE OF ITS UNDESIRABLE AND OBJECTIONABLE CHARACTER, although other periodicals accept and publish such advertising.

The Woman's World was started about ten years ago with only $1000, and brought to its present gigantic proportions by my own work. How fast this magazine (the pioneer in the field to give the masses a high-grade magazine for 25 cents a year) has grown is evidenced by the fact that in the last few years we had to move several times, each time to larger quarters, until it now takes THREE BIG BUILDINGS to accommodate our enormous business, which employs over 500 people.

A Mammoth Magazine Printing Plant.

One of the largest, finest and best equipped magazine printing plants turns out this magazine. In addition, other periodicals of very large circulation are printed by us.

The Currier Publishing Company, an Illinois corporation, owns the Woman's World and this gigantic printing plant. Both have always been splendid money-makers. How, otherwise, could I, without money from outside shareholders, have built up this great enterprise?

A Rare Opportunity for Investors.

A block of the 9 per cent. preferred stock of our company is offered to investors, for a short time only, at $55 a share. THIS STOCK IS "TREASURY STOCK," issued for betterments and extensions and to provide means for the constantly growing business. Conditions have never been more favorable to doubling and even trebling our business than now, when we are heading towards unprecedented prosperity. It is the ambition of every growing business enterprise to expand. We are now seeking outside capital for the very reason for which other big enterprises have recently been selling securities—for example: Armour and Company, who have recently issued $30,000,000; the Cudahy Packing Company, which just issued $4,000,000, and Swift and Company, who issued $10,000,000 new securities—for it is better to be independent of banks, as IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS CANNOT BE EXECUTED WITH MONEY BORROWED FROM BANKS FOR A FEW MONTHS ONLY.

$100 Makes $12,000.

It is reported that Munsey's magazine stock, offered to the public a few years ago at $100 par value, is worth today $12,000 and drawing $100 a month in dividends. The few who did not miss this rare investment opportunity have made fortunes.

Mr. Munsey not long ago announced in one of his publications that he is clearing over $1,000,000 profit a year. The Munsey Magazine has a circulation of only 600,000 a month—less than one-third of the circulation of the Woman's World.

The Magazine Business a Great Dividend Producer.

There is probably no other business that is so profitable as the magazine publishing business. The record of this business proves it. McClure's, Everybody's, the Ladies' Home Journal, the Cosmopolitan are making fortunes every year. The Curtis Publishing Company, which owns the Ladies' Home Journal, is doing a yearly business of $9,000,000. Mr. P. F. Collier, owner of Collier's Weekly, who died recently, left an estate of over $5,000,000, all made in the publishing business within a few years. Yet no other magazine has a circulation of 2,000,000, which we prove for the Woman's World every month.

The Attractiveness of Our Proposition.

The 9 per cent. preferred stock is not only entitled to this fixed income, payable semiannually on July 1 and December 1, but also participates in all earnings after the common stock receives 9 per cent. Further, all subscribers to our 9 per cent. preferred stock are receiving as bonus, one-half share of our common stock with every preferred share. BOTH THE PREFERRED AND COMMON SHARES ARE FULL PAID AND NON-ASSESSABLE.

This remarkable profit-sharing feature ought to bring investors profits of 25 per cent. a year, when our improvement and extension plans are once executed and put to work. I, MYSELF, OWN ONLY COMMON STOCK, AND MY OWN FINANCIAL WELFARE DEPENDS ON SEEING THIS COMMON STOCK, AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, ON A HIGH DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS. CONDITIONS JUSTIFY THE EXPECTATION THAT THE COMMON STOCK WILL BECOME A DIVIDEND PAYER BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1910.

Conservative Investors Wanted

I would especially like to interest a good number of investors who can investigate our great business and present condition, and judge its great prospects. THERE IS NOTHING ABOUT IT WHICH WILL NOT BEAR CLOSEST INVESTIGATION.

It is a business whose earnings any one can almost correctly estimate every month by counting the number of inches of advertising contained in each issue and multiplying by $112, the price of one inch per insertion. This ENTERPRISE IS AN OPEN BOOK to investors, no matter where they live.

Our Latest Improvements.

Of late we have installed, in addition to our already splendid equipment, $76,000 worth of new machinery, consisting of a $40,000 Goss magazine press, built expressly for the Woman's World; additional Miehle presses; additional photo-engraving equipment, and four new Automatic Addressing and Wrapping Machines. These machines will enable us to reduce the cost of wrapping and addressing the Woman's World and our other publications about 50 per cent. It will mean a saving of approximately $2000 a month in the mailing department of our business alone. This saving, of course, means additional profit for our shareholders.

Prominent Business Men Among Our Stockholders.

We have a good number of prominent Chicago business men among our shareholders, men who by connection or acquaintance with the publishing business know what enormous profits there are in it, and therefore are in an excellent position to fully judge and value the splendid prospects of the Currier Publishing Company, WHICH HAS BEEN SUCH A PROFITABLE BUSINESS FROM THE START THAT OUT OF ITS ANNUAL EARNINGS ALONE THIS GIGANTIC BUSINESS HAS BEEN BUILT UP.

Had I owned ample capital when I started, instead of growing as my means allowed, this business today, I am confident, would be earning $1,000,000 and more per year, but I had to develop it from the revenues of the business as I went along. It has, however, come to the point now where more rapid strides can be made with additional capital.

Earnings.

The profits of the first three months of 1909, when not a share of our preferred stock was yet sold, as the offer of stock was made after the first quarter, were $59,000. As the 9 per cent. yearly dividend on the preferred stock requires $45,000—the profits of the first three months were sufficient to pay a full year's dividend on the preferred stock, leaving a balance of $14,000. ON THIS BASIS THE YEAR'S PROFIT WOULD BE $236,000, OR MORE THAN NECESSARY TO PAY 9 PER CENT. ON THE PREFERRED AND 9 PER CENT. ON COMMON STOCK FOR ONE YEAR.

By this one can judge what enormous earnings are possible with additional capital.

Ours is not an enterprise in the experimental stage, but a well-established one, that WANTS MORE MONEY TO DO BIGGER THINGS.

As the money received from the sales of the stock goes into the business either for improvements or working capital, the assets are enhanced by the very money shareholders are invited to put up.

Investors in their own interest ought to act at once, for not every day is there such a remarkable investment proposition placed before conservative and intelligent money savers. THE 9 PER CENT. PREFERRED STOCK CAN BE BOUGHT FOR CASH OR ON MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS. THE PRICE OF EACH FULL PAID AND NON-ASSESSABLE PREFERRED SHARE IS $55. SUBSCRIPTIONS CAN BE SENT DIRECT TO THE CURRIER PUBLISHING COMPANY, 46-48 WEST MONROE STREET, CHICAGO, OR TO THE COLONIAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, WHICH ACTS AS OUR REGISTRARS AND TRANSFER AGENTS.

Within a few weeks over one-half of our preferred stock has been issued. The subscriptions came in large numbers from intelligent and conservative investors able to judge merits and prospects.

If you are interested in a sound and attractive investment, which I am convinced will be THE GREATEST DIVIDEND PAYER AMONG MAGAZINES and multiply in value with growing dividends, and wish to secure FULLEST INFORMATION about the record and present condition of this company, its standing and references, please fill out and RETURN ATTACHED COUPON AT ONCE. Don't delay—if you don't want to come too late and wish to BUY this 9 per cent. preferred stock at present price of $55, and secure the bonus of common stock, for the selling price of our preferred stock will be advanced to $60 August 16, 1909.

THE MARKET.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Demand for Small Properties Continues and Sales Are Many and Prices Steady—Buyers Purchase Lots for Improvement—Suburban Real Estate Active.

The slight falling off in the number of sales of improved and unimproved properties is something which experienced realty men expect at this season of the year, but most dealers report that conditions are most encouraging notwithstanding a certain inevitable dullness. Great activity in building operations in all classes of construction more than makes up for the falling off in sales. The permits for July to date exceed those for the corresponding period of last year by nearly thirty per cent. It is anticipated that the activity in the Fall will be pronounced, and real estate men of competent judgment are investing in new acreage tracts north, east, south and west and improving them for purposes of subdivision in the Autumn and Winter months. Following are the sales reports for the week:

Lively Wilshire Way.

The Briggs Comany reports the following recent sales in the Wilshire district: Walter McCarty to Mary E. Greenleaf, an unimproved lot on Oxford avenue, sixty feet north of Third street, 60x150 feet, for $1500; H. B. Eakins to a local investor, an unimproved lot on the west side of Ardmore avenue, north of Wilshire, 95x150 feet, for a consideration of $10,000; A. M. Osborn to W. Smith, an unimproved lot on the east side of Hobart boulevard, north of Sixth street, 60x150 feet, for $2350; W. W. Woods to N. Ralph Martin, a six-room modern bungalow, with a lot 50x150 feet, on the west side of Hobart boulevard, between Third and Fourth streets, for $4200; Agnes M. Connor to William Schweppe, an unimproved lot on the west side of Ardmore avenue, south of Linden, 75x150 feet, for a reported consideration of $4250; C. D. Clapp to Don McFarland, a lot on the east side of Harvard boulevard, near Linden 50x150 feet, for $1725. The Joseph Reed Company assisted in this sale. B. F. Wright to Jessie Nicholson, a lot on the east side of Oxford, near Third street, 50x157 feet, for $1500; E. J. Sanborn to a local investor, the northeast corner of Wilshire boulevard and Hobart, 140x150 feet, for $10,000. The new owner will improve this corner in the near future with a fine residence. C. C. Lenegan to Margaret E. Youngworth, an unimproved lot on the east side of Hobart, sixty feet north of Sixth street, 60x150 feet, for $2500; O. L. Metzger to Lillian M. Edwards, a lot on the east side of Hobart, sixty-five feet south of Fifth street, 60x150 feet, for a consideration of $2300; B. F. Wright to Elizabeth A. Moore, a lot on the east side of Cahuenga boulevard, sixty feet north of Sixth street, 60x150 feet, for $2350. L. J. Girvin to Elizabeth A. Moore, an unimproved lot on the east side of Kingsley drive, north of Fifth street, 50x150 feet, for $2900; F. C. Harris to Dr. H. Y. McNaught, a six-room bungalow in the West Park tract for $5000.

Etiwanda Vineyard Sales.

Emil Firth reports that Etiwanda Vineyards, which he recently placed on the market, is attracting many buyers. Sales are reported as follows: Leonard D. Redfield, ten acres on Malaga street, south of San Bernardino boulevard, for $2250; N. H. Powell, five acres at the corner of Vineyard avenue and Malaga street, for $1250; Joseph W. Turley, five acres at the corner of Grand avenue and Malaga street, for $1250; Sewall T. Atherton, five acres, at the corner of Sultana and Vineyard avenues, for $1250; Byron M. Haltry, five and a quarter acres at the corner of San Bernardino boulevard and Tokay street, for $1370; John T. Mansfield, five acres, on Sultana avenue, south of Grand avenue, for $1250; Hardie L. Fuller, five acres at the corner of Grand avenue and Malaga street, for $1250; George C. Kelber, five acres on Malaga street, south of Grand avenue, for $1250; Arthur G. Wheeler, five acres, at the corner of Grand avenue and Sultana avenue, for $1250. Etiwanda Vineyards is situated on the Santa Fé Railroad, east of Etiwanda, and four miles west of Rialto.

Beaumont Still Growing.

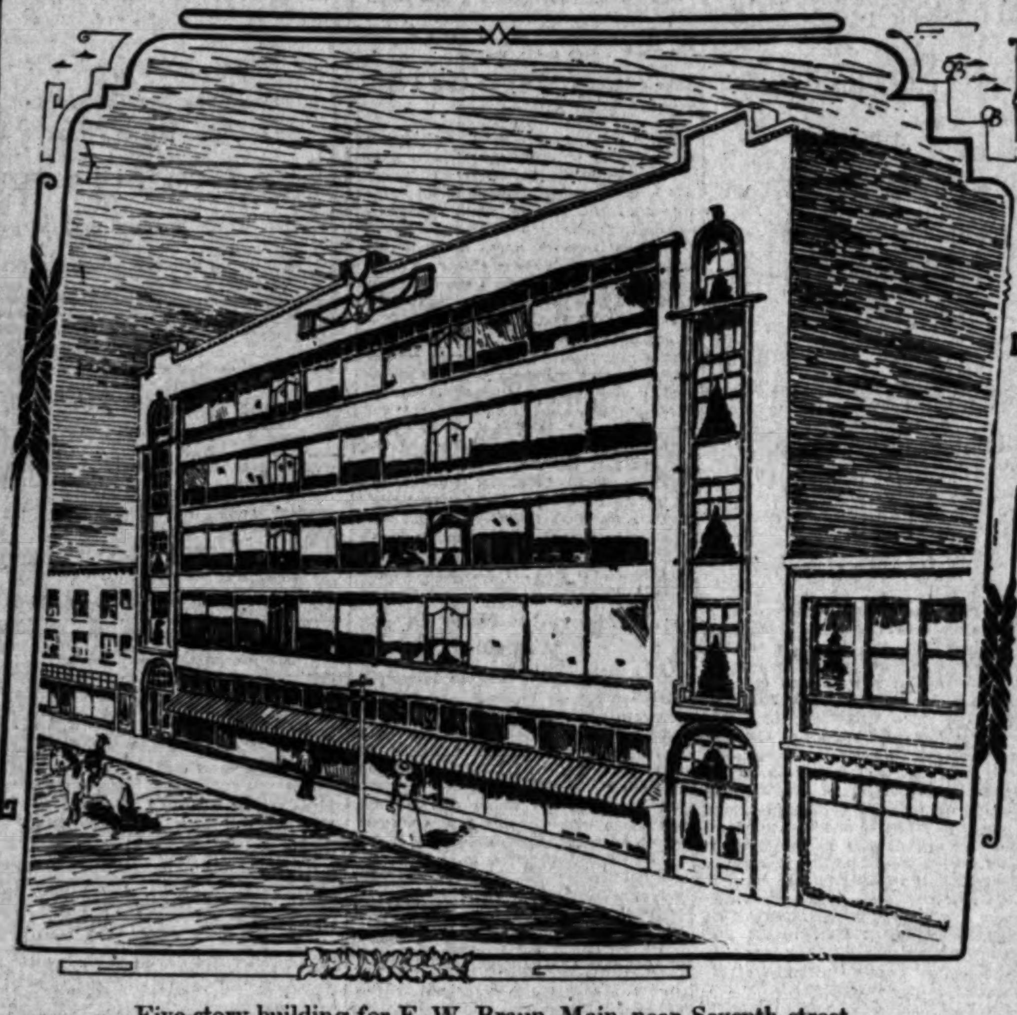
The Beaumont Land and Water Company reports the following sales: Oscar Littchen purchased for himself and associates a total of twenty-five acres, in Cherry Valley West tract, the price paid being $3250. Frank Paul and L. R. Combs bought two lots in the Apple Valley tract for $1926.60. Both will plant apples and other fruits and make residential improvements. George D. and Emma Eason secured a lot in Apple Valley for $816.75, and A. P. Leeds, two lots for $1590.40. City property was purchased by A. F. Probst and M. J. Fletcher for $330, and Frank C. Keller of Tropico, for $150. In both instances the buyers expect to erect improvements for income purposes. New buildings include two cottages for Robert Adams, costing $3000; a pumping engine-house in Edgar Cañon, costing $850, and a schoolhouse costing $2500. The site of the latter is two acres in the Edgar Vineyard tract, at the corner of Live Oak avenue and Vineland street. It was donated by the Beaumont Land and Water Company.

Activity in Vermont Square.

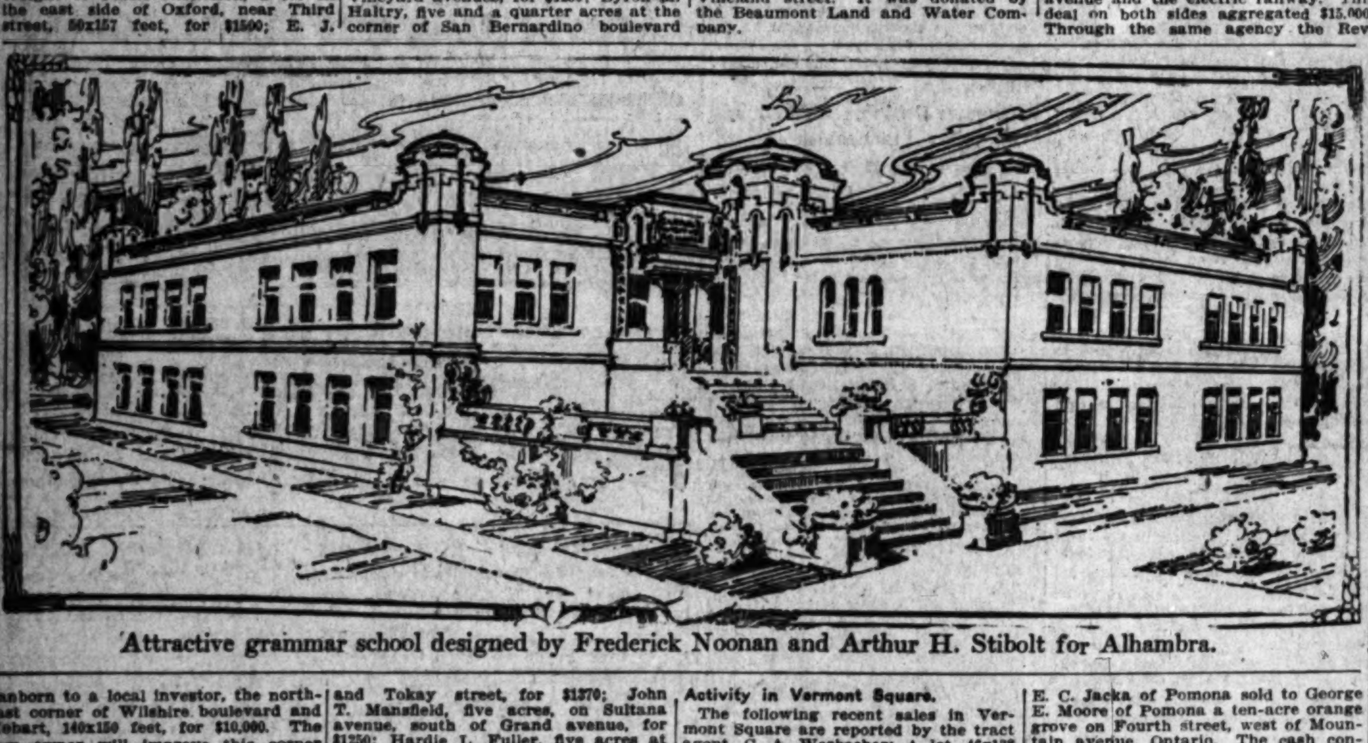
The following recent sales in Vermont Square are reported by the tract agent, C. A. Wesbecher: A lot, 46x128 feet, on Forty-sixth street, between Denker avenue and Harvard boulevard, to T. M. Manche, for $825. A lot 44x130 feet, on Fiftieth street, between Raymond and Normandie avenue, to L. F. Dunspaugh, for $800. A lot 88x130 feet, at the northwest corner of Forty-sixth street, and Normandie avenue, to Rev. M. Rentschler for $2200. Mr. Rentschler is building a $3000 house on the property. A lot, 43x128 feet, on Forty-sixth street, between Harvard boulevard and Western avenue, to J. Langichell, for $600. A lot 44x130 feet, at the northwest corner of Normandie avenue and Forty-seventh street, to Ella Prithers, for $1200. A lot 43x130 feet, on Fiftieth street, between Kansas and Budlong avenues, for $900, to L. A. Johnson, who will improve with a home.

SELL VALUABLE ACREAGE.

Edward E. Gillen & Co. of Pomona have the following real estate sales to report for the last five days: C. P. Blakemore of Los Angeles exchanged to the Rev. Harrison T. Buff of Pomona a nine-room two-story residence and barn, together with nine lots [illegible] acres, all in oranges and other fruit, on the corner of Palm street and Jones avenue, Pomona, for forty-four feet and four apartment-houses, on the south side of Surf street, Ocean Park, between Ocean avenue and the electric railway. This deal on both sides aggregated $15,000. Through the same agency the Rev. E. C. Jacka of Pomona sold to George E. Moore of Pomona a ten-acre orange grove on Fourth street, west of Mountain avenue, Ontario. The cash consideration was $13,500. John H. Hildren sold a fifteen-acre alfalfa ranch, two and a half miles southeast of Chino, to S. C. Shurman for $6000 cash.



Five-story building for F. W. Braun, Main, near Seventh street.



Attractive grammar school designed by Frederick Noonan and Arthur H. Stibolt for Alhambra.

TO BUILD TEMPLE.

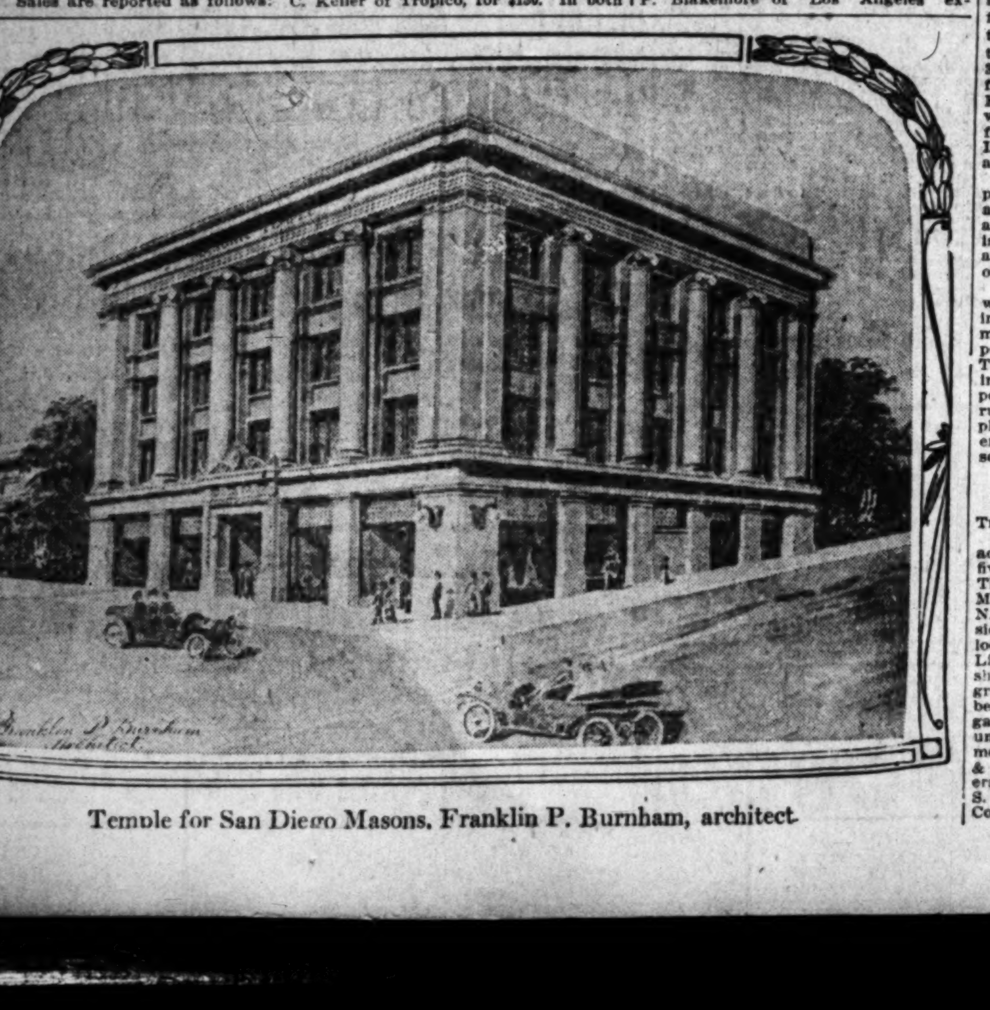
San Diego Masons Accept Design of Los Angeles Architect for New Lodge Home.

The design submitted by Franklin P. Burnham for the new Masonic Temple in San Diego was accepted by the Masonic Temple Association of that city last Tuesday. The structure, a perspective of which is reproduced on this page, will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000, and will be one of the handsomest and most complete temples on the Coast.

The building will occupy the northeast corner of Fifth and Ash streets, and will cover a ground area of 100 feet square. The main floor will contain four storerooms. The main entrance will lead back to a large hall, 38x96 feet in size, which may be used for Shrine, banquet or hall purposes. Four lodgerooms, averaging 40x60 feet, will be located above the main floor, for the Consistory, Commandery, Blue Lodges and Eastern Star. The space around will be utilized for ante-rooms.

All lodgerooms will be finished in pine, enameled old ivory, with artistically tinted walls and ceilings. The ante-rooms and parlors will be finished in Oregon pine and stained light and golden oak. The tungsten system of lighting will be used throughout.

The outside walls of the structure will be of brick, the street fronts being plastered with white Medusa cement. The interior floors will be supported on iron girders and columns. The Plenum system of heating will be installed, and the ventilation will be perfect. Two passenger elevators will run to the top floors. The working plans will be rushed through, and the erection of the building commenced as soon as proposals can be taken.



Temple for San Diego Masons, Franklin P. Burnham, architect.

PLAN WINTER COLONY.

The following is from the Chicago Tribune:

"A winter colony of attractive character is planned on a tract of sixty-five acres of land at Pasadena, Cal. The land has just ben purchased by M. Cochran Armour of this city from N. W. Webster of Pasadena for a consideration of $100,000. The property is located at Arroyo Seco, just south of Linda Vista bridge on the western shore of the Arroyo Seco, and has great natural beauties, which are to be enhanced by elaborate landscape gardening. Work on the grounds is under way already. Mr. Armour is a member of the firm of Rogers, Brown & Co., pig iron and coke manufacturers, and is a brother-in-law of David S. Gamble of the Procter & Gamble Company."

FLOORS COVER ACRES.

Reinforced Concrete Structure Five Stories High to Front on Main and Los Angeles.

Of the many improvements under way and contemplated, one of the most notable is a large building for F. W. Braun, plans for which are being prepared by W. J. Saunders. This structure will be five stories in height above the basement, and will extend from Main street through to Los Angeles street, having a frontage of 50 feet on the former and of 100 feet on the latter thoroughfare. The site is about 300 feet south of Seventh street. The floor space will reach the enormous area of 135,000 square feet, or nearly three and one-half acres. The cost is estimated at $123,000.

The structure will be a class "A" store and loft building of reinforced concrete construction. Both store fronts will be of plate glass, in large sheets, for the upper as well as the lower floors, and very little masonry will be permitted to obstruct the light. Both will be of attractive design.

The building is to be equipped with the most modern fireproofing, all openings to the elevator shafts and stairways being fitted with steel shutters. The window sashes will be of metal. All interior columns and floor slabs will be of reinforced concrete, and all will be erected without the use of wooden forms.

The building will occupy two lots, one of which, fronting 100 feet on Los Angeles street, has a depth of 133 feet, and the other immediately adjoining on the rear, a depth of 185 feet from the Main-street frontage of fifty feet. The structure will cover the entire area. The construction will start in about a month.

READY TO BUILD.

Bids Being Taken for Construction of Handsome New Grammar School in Alhambra.

Bids are being taken for the Garfield-avenue grammar school at Alhambra, a cut of which is reproduced on this page from a perspective drawn by the architects, Frederick Noonan and Arthur H. Stibolt. The structure will be situated on the corner of Garfield avenue and Alhambra Road, in the suburban city, and will cost about $27,000.

The building is of a modified Mission style of architecture, and is unique in that the second story is approached from the outside by a wide flight of stairs with a large terrace, giving the children of the second floor the same advantage of entrance and exit as those below. A feature of the second-story arrangement is a large hall 40x60 feet, around which are grouped the classrooms in a cloister effect. The wardrobes also open off this hallway.

The first floor is given over to bicycle rooms, toilets, lunchrooms and playrooms, together with the domestic science department and the sloyd room.

The building is to be of cream-colored pressed brick, and will be one of the most attractive grammar schools in this section. The structure is 120 feet square.

BUYS OCEAN FRONTAGE.

Lycurgus Lindsay is reported to have purchased a total of about 1000 feet of ocean frontage lying at Ocean Park, between the roller coaster and Bristol pier. The property is vacant and lies between the cement sidewalk and high-water mark. It is said to be the only ocean frontage at Ocean Park not owned by the city.

It is reported that the purchaser will proceed to build on this property a number of little stores, fruit stands and shops. No very costly or ornamental structure is likely to be undertaken there, for the foundation would cost more than the edifice.

The report, which was published in The Times several days ago, is said to have already aroused a good deal of anxiety down by the beach. On the other side of the cement sidewalk are rows of houses, many of them handsome. When the ground was bought and these residences and other buildings put up, it was with the understanding in the minds of the owners that they were on the ocean front. But lo! there is an ocean front and an ocean front, and now these handsome residences are to be separated from the water's edge by this row of diminutive edifices for business purposes for the most part.

There is regret growing up in the minds of the city authorities that they had not beforehand procured possession of all the ocean front and thus safeguarded it from all objectionable use.

VALUABLE TRANSACTIONS.

Henley, Halfhill & Nicklin report the following important lease, together with exchanges and sales of property: To the Pacific Rock and Gravel Company of Los Angeles was leased 100 acres of rock and gravel-bearing land on the line of the Pacific Electric Railroad, one mile west of Azusa and near the San Gabriel River. The lease was from the Slauson estate and was made on a royalty basis for five years, with an option of ten years and will pay the lessees about $35,000 for the five years. A large crushing plant has already been installed at a cost of about $40,000. For Florence A. Bateman a ten-acre improved ranch in the Santa Ana Valley near Buaro station, valued at $4250, exchanged for a modern six-room cottage at No. 621 East Forty-sixth street, valued at $4600. The difference was adjusted by mortgage. For W. H. Young two cottages at Nos. 3716-3718 McClintock avenue, on a lot 40x118 feet, valued at $4500, and the southwest corner of Hunter and Lemon streets, 47½x137 feet, improved with two small cottages valued at $4500, to Gaetano Gianquinto for an apartment-house at No. 39 Rose avenue, Ocean Park, valued at $12,500. The difference was adjusted by cash and mortgage. For W. S. Bailey, lots 50x150 each, on Kensington Road, one-half block west of Douglas, value $6000 to T. K. Hulme for two lots, 57½x150, improved with modern 9-room residence known as No. 813 Kensington Road, valued at $7500. Difference adjusted by mortgage.

For George E. Philippi a five-room cottage at No. 761 East Kensington Road on a lot 50x185 feet, valued at $4000, to T. K. Hulme, for the property at No. 3467 East Fifth Street boulevard, a lot 40x130 feet, improved with a six-room bungalow valued at $3500. The difference of $500 was paid in cash. The following property has been sold: For H. B. Parsons to Sarah Boyd, the south 50 feet of a lot in Los Robles Park, Pasadena, 50x390 feet, improved with six-room cottage valued at $1450. For W. H. Bentley to Eva R. Parsons, the property at No. 1247 Sapphire street, 50x120 feet, on the north sire of Sapphire, between Boylston and Bixel streets, improved with small bungalow. The consideration was $2600 cash.

OUTSIDE BUILDING PERMITS.

Permits for new building in Southern California cities outside of Los Angeles for a week, for all items to cost $1000 and more, are as follows:

Ferguson, residence, $2200; I.O.O.F., altar stone, $1000; First Christian Church, church building, $13,000. During the past six months, permits to the value of $349,887 have been issued in Riverside.

At Redlands, two permits, neither one of them calling for the expenditure of as much as $1000.

At Santa Ana, two permits, one of them to John J. Peters, residence, $1000.

At San Bernardino, three permits: To F. J. Nicholson, residence, $2800; Frank Ficke, brick building, two stories, $4935; Lisle Esler, cottage, $1000. From January 1 to July 1 the permits issued in San Bernardino total $415,020, compared with a total of $278,825 for the same period last year.

At Santa Barbara, one permit, to A. C. Schindler, residence, $1735.

At Hollywood, one permit, to Hattie and Frances Phelps, cottage, $1370. From January 1 to July 1, 1909, permits to the amount of $250,497 were issued in Hollywood, compared with $172,709 for the corresponding period last year.

At South Pasadena, four permits: To J. A. Stitt, eight-room house, $2500; F. K. Groves, four-room cottage, $1200; W. Swontowski, seven-room house, $2300; Mrs. J. L. Decker, eight-room house, $3267. For the first six months of 1909, building permits issued in South Pasadena aggregate a total amount of $351,907. For the month of June the permits amounted to $69,367.

ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS.

The following items are from the columns of the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer:

A. L. Haley is preparing plans for a two-story flat building and a two-story garage to be built on Harvard boulevard near Fourth for William N. Snell. Both buildings will be frame, with concrete foundations and shingled roofs. The flat building will have a seven-room suite on each floor.

FERRIS AND SHETTLER TROPHIES THE PRIZES.

APPERSON BEATS THE VANDERBILT CUP RACE TIME AND CHALMERS-DETROIT WINS SMALL CAR EVENT.

POINTS OF THE SANTA MONICA ROAD RACE.

Big car race won by Apperson, driven by Harris Hanshue, in 3h., 8m. 3s.

Small car race won by Chalmers-Detroit, driven by Bert Dingley, in 3h. 38m. 35s.

Average time of Apperson was 64.44 miles, which breaks the Vanderbilt cup record.

Average time of the Chalmers-Detroit was 55.5 miles.

Fifty thousand persons saw the races from various vantage points.

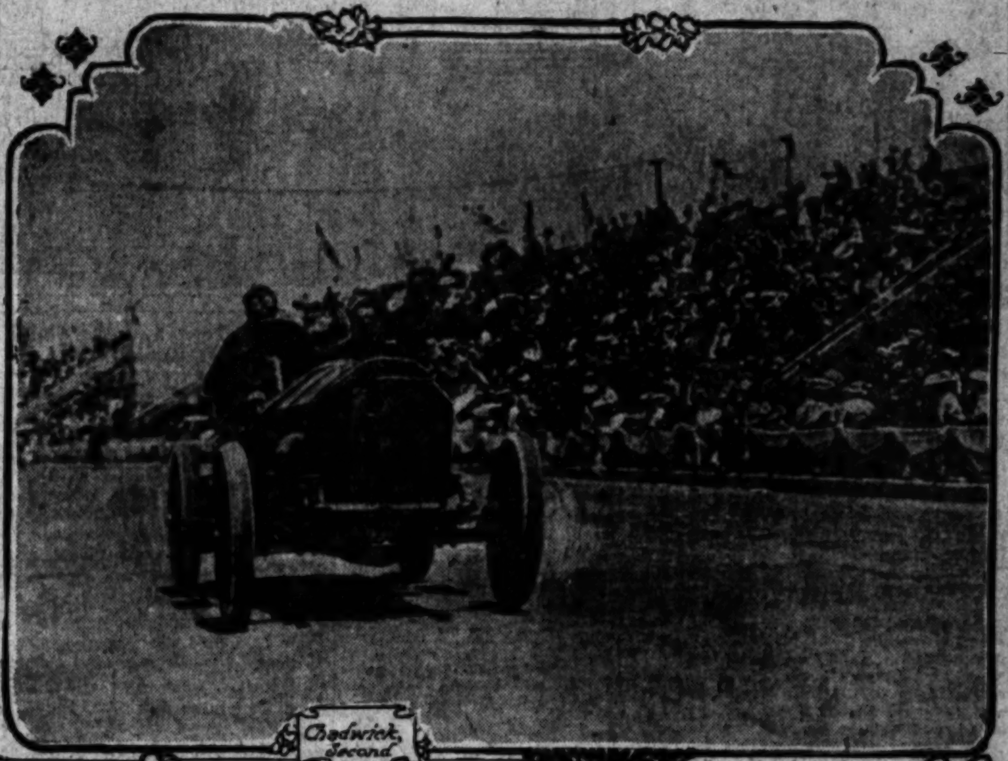
The Dick Ferris trophy goes to Leon T. Shettler, agent for the Apperson.

The Leon T. Shettler trophy goes to the Western Motor Car Co., agents for the Chalmers-Detroit.

Not an injury worthy the name was reported and the accidents to cars were but trivial.

The management of the big event was excellent, and no time was lost in getting the cars off.

There was no serious trouble between the management or the city and private parties over the handling of seats and concessions.



Stearns, Third, rounding the Nevada turn.

Apperson Car, with Harris Hanshue at the Wheel, winning the great road race and the Dick Ferris trophy at Santa Monica yesterday. The Chadwick was second and the Stearns third.

FAST AS THE WIND.

Averaging 64.44 miles per hour over the entire course, Harris Hanshue, in the Apperson "Jackrabbit," won the great automobile road race for the Ferris Trophy on the Santa Monica course yesterday morning, in one of the most thrilling auto contests ever held on this continent.

The time was 3h. 8m. 3s. for the 202.417 miles. The average time was better than that made in the Vanderbilt race last year, and the performance will live long in the annals of the sport.

The Apperson jumped into the lead in the eleventh lap and maintained its advantage until the end. Bruno Seibel, in the Chadwick, was second, having made a wonderful run, after a rather tame start. His time was 3h. 15m. 30s.

The Stearns, with Frank Free driving, was third. The fast car led the field for several laps, and was a close second during the greater part of the contest. The Stearns's time was 3h. 19m. 52s.

The Locomobile was fourth, Murray Page finishing the race in 3h. 21m. 15s.

The Stoddard-Dayton crossed the line fifth, in 3h. 24m.

GREAT CROWDS.

Fifty thousand persons witnessed the race. Every vantage point about the 8.417-mile course was occupied. Automobiles were driven across grain fields and cabbage patches in order to get a position along the course. On Nevada avenue and the Palisades, the people were packed along the roadside, ten deep. The stands were but half-full, but the roofs of the buildings were crowded, and there was not a window that overlooked the course that did not half a half-dozen spectators.

The race was not marred by had accidents. Several drivers had narrow escapes. The Haynes went into the ditch on its fourteenth lap, and had to quit, but Driver Shannon and Machinist La Casse were not seriously hurt. The course was well patroled and the management could not have been better, except that the timing system was not as efficient as it might have been.

Dick Ferris, donor of the cup, occupied a box at the finish, and was given an ovation when he arose after repeated calls for a speech. Ferris came across the continent to witness the struggle. He says the course is the fastest in the world and predicts that all road records will eventually be lowered on the Santa Monica course.

The Apperson will receive the $1000 Ferris Trophy, one of the handsomest silver cups ever offered for any race. Cup and base is 3½ feet high and weighs thirty-three and a half pounds. It contains 400 ounces of pure silver and is lined with gold.

The fastest lap was made by the Lozier, which Tettzlaff drove in 6m. 50 3-6s., in the first round. The car held the lead at the beginning of the race.

SECOND EVENT.

Nearly everybody remained for the light car race. The thousands who had witnessed the thrilling struggle of the morning had no desire to leave. Another such contest was promised with cars lighter, but, for their weight, equally as fast as the speed-devouring demons which had thrilled the spectators during the morning session.

For an hour lunches were enjoyed. Every automobile party spread a picnic lunch, and during the interval awaited the start of the second race. Lined along the course, the thousands of automobiles were left standing, while those in them awaited expectantly the popping of the exhausts which would tell that the second race was on.

Along Nevada avenue the spectators were massed in a solid body. On every vantage point the crowd swarmed like flies. There was not a foot of frontage which had not been preëmpted at 12 o'clock. Many went without lunch rather than give up the position which they had gained when the crowd moved at the finish of the big event.

At the Soldiers' Home, where the veterans had gathered to watch the race, the throng was packed in solid lines. It was impossible to get standing room near the course at the turn where the road sweeps past the grand stand erected for the old soldiers.

Along the Palisades the automobiles took the best vantage points. On one little knoll at least 200 machines had been parked, the occupants craning their necks to watch the cars as they whizzed past.

ON THE SNAKE TURN.

Again, down at the "S" turn there were thousands of people who wanted to watch the cars come through the zigzag at sixty miles an hour. Every house along the course had its race party. Porches were lined and in several instances small grand stands had been erected where the races could be watched to better advantage.

Clarence Smith, in the Maxwell, almost drove into the money in the little race. He finished fourth, close to the Buick. It was Smith's first race, and he kept his car on the course for lap after lap, making fast time for the entire race.

Bob Greer, in the Mitchell, drove a consistent race. Again the Mitchell remained on the course through the entire contest. The Cadillac was forced to go into the paddock after Christopherson had been obliged to give his lead to the Mitchell.

The Regal, driven by C. H. Bigelow, finished consistently. Though it was never in the running, the little car made a good showing and finished with a burst of speed that did credit

HAD CORRECT DOPE.

MAJORITY OF GUESSERS NAMED RIGHT CARS.

Apperson's and Chalmers', Backers' Faith Justified by the Result. Ten Best Estimaters Within Three to Ten Seconds of Time Figured.

It appears from the result of the great classic Santa Monica road race that the majority of the guessers on the outcome had the straight "dope" as to the cars destined to win.

Out of a total of 25,132 guesses submitted in The Times guessing contest, 6552, or a little more than one-fourth of the total number of guesses, named the Apperson as the winner in the race for the Ferris cup. Out of a total of 22,204 guesses as to the winner of the Shettler cup, 7994 favored the Chalmers-Detroit. The fact that these two cars carried off the honors is very good proof that the majority of the persons who figured on the race made a close study of the cars and drivers, and exercised sound judgment in picking the winners and estimating the speed that would be attained.

Hundreds of persons participating in the contest came within a few minutes of estimating the time correctly, and quite a number came within less than 60 seconds of forecasting the correct figures.

The coupons were all numbered in the order in which they were received at The Times office and in the case of tie guesses, the one bearing the lowest number will be awarded the prize.

HOW THEY GUESSED.

Following is the score list showing the number of guesses recorded in favor of each car.

SAILING.

WASP IS VICTOR OF "TIMES" CUP.

SAILS CLOSE RACE WITH SAN DIEGO YACHT GRETCHEN.

Mah Pe Sailed Fast Race, But Her Measurements Set Her Back Though She May Yet Be Given Trophy—Skipper Wood Hangs by Broken Bowstay and Is Drenched.

The Times Challenge Cup was won by the Wasp of the South Coast Yacht Club yesterday afternoon at San Pedro, with a minute and a half to spare. The little craft crossed the line at the end of the San Pedro breakwater at 4:42:55, beating the Gretchen by a scratch.

The contest was one of the best ever held in the South. The victory was so close that when the steamer Cabrillo, following in the wake, nearly threw the Wasp out of her course, she had only a fraction over a minute in which to finish the lead.

It is barely possible that the trophy may be snatched by the Mah Pe, which entered the race with the understanding that her measurements would be taken later. It is not believed that the Mah Pe is eligible, although her great displacement compared with her small sail area brings her well down to the thirty-five-foot class.

The real race was between the Wasp and Gretchen and the Mischief II. The start was one of the best ever seen on the Coast. They were off in a bunch after circling around and around the starting flag waiting for the second gun at 1:10 o'clock.

The Mah Pe, with a great area of canvas, was so close to the other nine craft that they could hardly be noticed.

The real sport of the race was furnished by Skipper Warren Wood of the Mischief I. The yacht broke its bowstay just as it crossed the line. For fifteen minutes the skipper hung in a sling under the bow of the yacht with the swells breaking over him. Finally the line was fastened and he was hauled out of his precarious position.

MAH PE RACES.

As the yachts rounded the Pt. Firmin whistling buoy, the Mah Pe raced up the coast to Point Vincent, far in advance of the other contestants. She took one long tack two miles out to sea against the westward wind. All the other boats kept close to shore, with short tacks, ranging from one-quarter to three-quarters of a mile in length.

The Aeolus passed the Mischief II two miles above the lighthouse, not far behind the Mah Pe. Back and forth the Gretchen, Mischief II and the Wasp tacked. They did not change their relative positions for some time. The Gretchen was in the lead, followed by starting in the first race, the last to get away on the great grind.

MILE AFTER MILE, LAP AFTER LAP.

GRAPHIC STORY OF WILD DASH TO VICTORY, HONOR AND FAME.

THE Apperson started like a flash with Frank Siefert in the Stoddard-Dayton hanging on the line. It took Hanshue just 8m. 7 1-5s. to make the circuit. Frank Siefert had trouble all the way. It took him 17m. 8s. to make the round.

Ralph Hamlin in the Franklin started alone. Bert Dingley in the Chalmers, running mate to the Franklin, failed to appear until all but three cars had started, and lost six minutes.

L. B. Harvey in the Rambler started with Harry Lord in the Studebaker, and the two cars fought out the first lap for the entire eight miles. The Studebaker led the Rambler by one second past the grand stand.

George Bradbeer in the Premier and C. Tetzlaff in the Lozier came to the line at 8:03 o'clock. The Lozier flew away from the whitewashed mark and tore over the course at a terrific clip, making eighty miles an hour on Nevada avenue. The Premier was distanced by the heavier and higher priced car which made the circuit in the remarkable time of 6m. 50 3-5s.

Harold Stone, in the little Columbia, the smallest car in the big class, and J. A. Scott in the Pope-Hartford, came to the scratch at 8:04 o'clock. The two cars went away together and finished with the Pope-Hartford 1 3-5s. ahead of the midget car.

Promptly to the second the Stearns with Frank Free driving, moved to the starting mark with the smaller Haynes crowding its way to the narrow line. The high-powered Stearns showed its class ten feet from the starting line as it leaped to the pole and took the lead, swinging into Nevada avenue at a mighty clip.

INCREASES LEAD.

All the way to the Soldiers' Home the Stearns increased its lead and Free swung the big car into the stretch two miles ahead of its running mate, the Haynes.

Free threw the Stearns around the course in 7m. 58s., and it took Shannon and the Haynes 11m. 14 2-5s. to make the same lap.

Murray Page and the Locomobile picked by many as the probable winner, started with the big six-cylinder Thomas at 8:06 o'clock. The Loco looked wonderfully fit as the man with the single eye came softly to the line. In a cloud of engine smoke the Thomas seventy horse power swung to the side of the Loco and the two drivers took the word together and were away.

Down to the dangerous turn at Ocean avenue the cars raced, with the Thomas drawing rapidly away from the slow car. Huber and the Thomas rushed past the grand stand three-fourths of a mile ahead of Page and the white Loco.

Bruno Seibel, in the big Chadwick, one of the highest-powered cars on the course, came to the line last, with the belated Chalmers, as his running mate. Bruno made a tame start. He looked as if he needed sleep. His battery box was hanging loose at the side of the car. The Chadwick man's face was drawn, his eyes were hollow. He looked scared.

Bert Dingley, in the Chalmers, rushed away from the faster car, and took the first turn two lengths ahead of the big black monster. His triumph was short-lived. Big Bruno, reputed the most dare-devil driver on any track, opened up his gunboat on Nevada avenue, and went into the teeth of the light morning breeze like a rocket. He passed the Chalmers, and then slowed down, content to stay ahead of the "Bluebird." He finished the lap 100 yards to the good of the car he had started with, and settled down to steady racing.

PACE BEGINS TO TELL.

Thrills came quick and fast on the second lap, as a leader began to show. The big Lozier, with Tetzlaff showing his teeth, came tearing down the course. He had made the fastest lap of the race, and swung into the lead, finishing the second lap in 15m 17 1-5s., with the Stearns a close second.

The race developed into a grueling test between these two fast cars, with the Apperson and Thomas well up.

These four fast racing monsters jumped into a class by themselves, with the Lozier first by two minutes, the Stearns second, the Apperson third and the Thomas fourth.

Ralph Hamlin, in the Franklin, drove the race he had planned, and came around the turn into the stretch without varying more than a few seconds each time.

The Chadwick driver, to the surprise of every one on the course, took his time and refused to let his big car out. He took the laps in a little better than 9 minutes, and went buzzing away at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip for the entire run.

The Studebaker and Rambler continued to fight out the race, hanging close together, with Harvey on the Rambler, the oldest driver in the race, a second behind.

Page and the Locomobile dropped into a plugging pace, making the laps in 8½ minutes regularly.

At the end of the seventh lap the Lozier had a slight lead over the Stearns, which was showing great speed. The Lozier stopped for a second to change a spark plug, and then raced away with its lead cut down a notch.

Hanshue and the Apperson were a close third in the eighth lap, and the Chadwick was fourth. Bruno had passed the Thomas on the middle of the seventh lap.

Bert Dingley and the Chalmers, which had made a great run, went out in this lap with a broken frame, and did not resume the race.

With the race well started the Stearns took the lead in the eighth lap with the Lozier a few seconds behind and running like an express train.

Harvey and the Rambler went to the bad in this lap, coasting past the finish line with his engine mute. He reached the paddock with difficulty.

On the third lap the Columbia went out with a broken magneto driving shaft.

The Stoddard was delayed on the first turn when Frank Siefert in taking the boards on Ocean and Nevada avenues, tore off a tire and smashed an oil pipe. Siefert could not make up his lost time and in the eighth lap had to be content with seventh place.

Harris Hanshue swung the Apperson into the lead in the ninth lap and came past the grand stand with a comfortable lead. "Han" was given a send-off as he flew by the bleachers.

Harry Lord in the Studebaker kept his car at a steady pace and when the Rambler stopped, jumped ahead and began reeling off the laps at intervals of about 8m. 45s. The car looked good at this period of the contest.

Hanshue held his lead in the twelfth lap, going like a fiend. He looked like a winner and the favorite seemed to be making good.

Friends of the fast "Jackrabbit" got together in the grand stand and rooted themselves hoarse.

GIRLS LEAD ROOTING.

Three pretty girls in Leon T. Shettler's box led the rooting throng and waved auto veils and screeched a welcome as the Apperson came tearing down the stretch.

The grand stand took the cue and shouted for the leader and the girls were happy.

Hanshue and Frank Free in the Stearns came into the stretch almost together, at the end of the fourteenth lap with the Stearns leading by about three lengths. "Han" waited until he reached the grand stand and then flew past the Stearns like a flash. The pretty girl jumped on a chair and with face flushed and eyes dancing, led the bleachers in a mighty tiger yell.

It was the Apperson's race barring accidents, and with the long grind half over "Han" looked very much like a winner.

The Stearns was a full minute behind the flying meteor. Free began letting out his car and on the Nevada-avenue stretch the two leaders had a battle royal.

The thousands of spectators that lined the course along Nevada avenue went wild with delight as the two leaders came into the long stretch.

Like lightning the word had been passed that the Apperson was leading and as the cars began the mighty struggle people crowded their way to the front of the course.

Hanshue took up the gauge of battle and kept the lead to the turn, swinging into Nevada avenue five lengths ahead of the Stearns. Into the curve at the Soldiers' Home "Han" went at an awful clip.

WITHOUT NUMBER.

Around the Palisades hundreds of automobiles were packed. The Apperson continued to increase its lead until at the dangerous "S" turn "Han" was nearly a half a mile ahead of the Stearns.

The Apperson had shown itself to be the fastest car on the course. It had passed any other machine at will. Without a stutter the engine hummed to the merriest tune "Han" had ever given ear to.

The Locomobile, dangerously far behind, was making a consistent race at the end of the fifteenth lap with the Apperson a full lap ahead.

After a costly delay, the Lozier resumed the race in the fifteenth lap with a fierce handicap to overcome. Fettzslaft went in to regain his lost ground and circled the eight and a fraction miles in 7m, 27s., better than a mile a minute. Down to the turn the Lozier flew at a terrific clip, passing the slower cars as if they had been tied to a post.

It was showing all kinds of speed and could apparently take any lap at 7 minutes or better when working right.

Harry Lord in the Studebaker was driving a pretty race and up to the fifteenth lap had picked up seven of the cars as it fought doggedly for the coveted lead.

At the end of the fifteenth lap the Apperson was leading the Stearns by 3m. 18 4-5s. and appeared to have the race well in hand. The Chadwick was third.

DRIVES LIKE MAD.

Murray Page began to drive like mad at this stage of the big grind and was running fourth in the race.

As the Pope-Hartford ripped past the grand stand in the fifteenth lap the crowd edged its way onto the course and a tragedy was narrowly averted as Scott's car skidded and shot straight for a group of excited spectators. Scott, with a mighty effort, yanked his steering wheel and swung the car a few inches away from a frightened onlooker who dashed madly back to the sidewalk. The Pope ran consistently and was well up at the finish.

S. Q. Shannon, driver of the Haynes, had a narrow escape in the fourteenth lap when the car dashed into a ditch on the Nevada-avenue turn. The car skidded and crashed into a palm tree, wrecking the car. W. J. La Casse, mechanician, was thrown from the car and painfully bruised.

SANTA MONICA RECORD BREAKER.

Fastest race ever held on American continent, Savannah Grand Prize, November 26, which was won by the Fiat, 115 horse power, Wagner driving, 65.11 miles average.

Second fastest race ever held in America, the Apperson, 53 horse power, driven by Harris Hanshue, which averaged 64.44 miles for the entire 202.8 miles.

Next fastest, Vanderbilt race, October 24, 1908, Locomobile, 64.1 horse power, Robertson driving, 64.4 miles.

At the conclusion of the sixteenth lap the Apperson was leading the Stearns by 3m. 28 4-5s.

In the nineteenth lap the Apperson was five minutes ahead of all other cars and running like a millrace. The Stearns was second and the Chadwick third and the Loco fourth.

TAKES UP RUNNING.

The Studebaker here took up the race in earnest and went after the Loco, worrying Murray Page not a little.

The Lozier was tearing off laps in seven minutes with Tettzlaff trying desperately to regain his lost ground.

Mrs. Leon T. Shettler took the lead in the rooting at the end of the twentieth, when the Apperson flew past the grand stand five minutes ahead of all cars in the big race.

Heedless of the bright sunlight, the pretty wife of the Apperson owner waved her programme in triumph as the plucky driver raced over the thin white line an apparent winner.

Free, in the Stearns, nearly a lap behind the leader, came across the finish at the end of the twentieth a little more than two minutes ahead of the Chadwick, third in the race.

The Loco was a good fourth, with Page pounding every atom of speed out of the car, which was not fast enough to win.

Tettzlaff and the Lozier came over the tape with a front tire wobbling dangerously.

LOCO OUT OF IT.

Leavitt gave up the race at the end of the twenty-third lap, when the Apperson flew past the stand at a killing pace. The crowd enjoyed itself joshing the big fellow, who seemed to have lost heart. His pet car, painted a snow white, was far in, and hopelessly beaten.

There was a pause while the Apperson finished the last lap. "Han" was out for a fast lap, and under instructions from Shettler, was driving at a terrific pace.

As the car flew past the finish the crowd howled with delight.

The Pope-Hartford finished eighth, and after it had crossed the line the race was declared at an end.

Shettler and Hanshue received a great ovation when they were introduced as the winners. The trophy was not presented the winners at the end of the contest, as it was explained that the cup was too heavy to handle conveniently.

The big Thomas seventy-horse-power racer went out in the eleventh lap with a broken water pump. The fan belt had broken in the third lap, and the car was running without any cooling system. Huber had trouble with his engine before the race, and the big engine from Wyatt's car had been fitted into the Thomas's hood for the race yesterday.

For eleven laps the Thomas held third place, and was running easily. Huber was instructed to drive at a mile-a-minute clip for 150 miles, and was following structions when his car went out of the race.

SWAPPING IDEAS.

Shippers and Railroad Men at Work Over Freight Rate Classifications in Michigan.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hundreds of shippers and railroad traffic officials in the west are now in session at Charlevoix, Mich., to determine upon freight rate changes of the greatest importance. The occasion is the semi-annual meeting of the Western Classification Committee, which will make changes in rates by establishing classification ratings on new articles of shipment, and by changing existing classifications upward or downward.

The merchants and maufacturers are admitted to the meetings, and allowed to make their arguments for and against proposed changes, after which the railroad men go into session. The hearing of petitions has been in progress since Tuesday, and probably will continue next week.

H. C. Barlow, officer director of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who was one of the fifty or more Chicago representatives, returned today from the meeting greatly impressed with the new plan of exchanging ideas as to rates between the shippers and traffic officers.

"This was the first classification meeting I have attended for six years," said Mr. Barlow, "and a great change has been brought about. Instead of star chamber sessions, the classification meetings are now open gatherings, at which both sides are given an opportunity to air their views."

The Durocar went out with a broken drive shaft during the twenty-third lap. It made a splendid run and would have finished well up had it not been for this mishap. McKeague drove.

LITTLE FELLOWS.

CHALMERS TAKES SHETTLER CUP.

DINGLEY DRIVES GREAT RACE IN FAST TIME.

Stoddard-Dayton Engages in Close Duel With Winner and Siefert Is Worthy Foe—Hard Luck in First Race Gives Both Drivers Chance to Shine in Second.

Bert Dingley, in the Chalmers-Detroit, won the light car race for the Leon T. Shettler trophy after a fierce road duel with the Stoddard-Dayton. Frank Siefert on the Stoddard fought all the way for first place and was making a strong bid right up to the last lap, when Dingley showed what he could do by gradually pulling away from Siefert's car, which finished second.

Hard luck in the first race had lost Dingley his chance. Determined to regain his laurels the Chalmers was driven to the start of the small car event looking wonderfully fit. The Stoddard and Cadillac were sent away and at 12:31 o'clock Dingley threw in his high gear and was away like a flash.

Around the turn the Chalmers flew and the blue streak appeared again in front of the grand stand after an interval of a little more than nine minutes. Dingley drove carefully but fast. He was out to win.

Frank Siefert, in the Stoddard-Dayton, jumped into the lead early in the race. It was Siefert5s chance. He had lost the big car race, after a mighty effort. He had nursed the big "sixty" around the course when the engine refused to hit right. The little car was humming wonderfully well and Frank was out to make a bid for first place.

NINE-MINUTE LAPS.

Lap after lap the Stoddard flew on, making the turns in about nine minutes and maintaining a lead which, though slight, served to show how fast the light car is. Siefert drove to win and kept his car sweeping over the course at a terrific pace.

With the race well started Frank Siefert took the lead at the end of the third lap. He continued to gain for lap after lap until he was a minute ahead in the early stage of the race. He held his lead almost to the middle of the contest.

Settling down to a gruelling contest Dingley went out to win the race. His car was just a trifle faster than the Stoddard, and this fact, coupled with the wonderful driving ability of Dingley, gave him the little race.

J. A. Nikrent in the little Buick put up a strong bid as he raced around the course. The little White "Streak" showed wonderful bursts of speed and at times looked like a winner. It was always in the money, but Nick had hard luck. He threw a tire near the Soldiers' Home and the delay was too costly to be regained even in a 202.008-mile race.

As the midget cars popped past the grand stand it seemed to the crowd that the little cars were maintaining a mile-a-minute pace. The machines fairly flew toward the turn. The pace was terrific, as the average of 55½ miles for the race shows.

Several speed brushes which occurred in front of the grand stand served to keep the crowd keyed up to a high pitch of excitement.

FASTER THAN EXPECTED.

The race for the Shettler trophy was a faster and better contest than anybody had hoped it could be. The course was as fast as for the big car race. It had not been chopped to pieces.

While making a desperate effort to catch the flying Stoddard, Dingley made the fastest lap of the light race, circling the course in a little better than 9 minutes. He showed wonderful speed at all times and kept his car on the course for every minute.

The little car bumped along at a terrific clip as it swung into the stretch from the Palisades. Dingley drove at this pace every minute of the great race.

When the average was already high Dingley was not content. He opened the car out notches and tore toward the Nevada-avenue turn. He took the boards faster than the Apperson had taken them in the morning. He jumped into the stretch at Nevada avenue with a swing which resembled the big cars in action. He rounded the turn at the Soldiers' Home and the veterans stepped back to watch the little blue streak as it faded away in a cloud of dust down the course.

This was to be Dingley's race and the big curly-headed boy knew how much depended on his ability to drive the fast little car into the premier position.

START ON TIME.

The Stoddard and Cadillac started together at 12:30 o'clock, Stoddard taking the lead to the lower turn.

The Chalmers and Maxwell went away at 12:31, the Chalmers jumping into the lead.

The Regal and Studebaker E.M.F. left a minute later, the Regal leading to the turn.

The Mitchell and Durocar furnished a sensation for nine laps with the little Mitchell leading. The two cars left the tape together and fought out the race with the Mitchell maintaining a slight lead.

At the end of the seventeenth round the Regal was stopped in front of the grand stand by the referee who warned driver Bigelow against fouling other cars.

The Durocar went out in the Soldiers' Home turn with a broken crank shaft.

The little cars averaged 55.5 miles for the entire race.

CONVICTS STILL FIGHTING.

Band of Political Prisoners Escaped from Siberia Struggling Hard for Their Freedom.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 10.—Information concerning the escape of the band of political convicts in the interior of Siberia, who are making their way toward East Cape, on the extreme east coast, in an effort to reach Alaska, was brought to Seattle yesterday by John W. Kelley, who has long been identified with affairs in the Arctic, both in Alaska and Siberia.

"The first word of the escape of the convicts reached the ear of Capt. N. F. Kallinikoff, acting Governor at Nichniy, Kalimsk, which is 1500 miles from East Cape, March 13," said Mr. Kelley. "He immediately sent a detachment of his men in pursuit, and they overtook and engaged the fugitives 100 miles from the post.

"The Cossacks were defeated, and seven of them killed. Several of the convicts met the same fate.

"Reduced in numbers by death from exposure, and many of them having been killed in battles with the natives, the band numbered twenty when last heard from. They have only looted the villages and killed the natives in cases where their demands for dogs, food and reindeer have been refused.

"Capt. Kallinikoff dispatched a band of messengers to East Cape, who struggled for 1500 miles over the rough wilderness of the peninsula, several of them perishing on the way, with a message of warning to the commander of the garrison at East Cape.

"The escaped convicts are not of the low, criminal class, but are political prisoners.

"Upon receipt of the letter from Capt. Kallinikoff, at East Cape, on June 20, the day I left, word was immediately sent to Vladivostok for a gunboat to patrol the coast."

Jeweler Hurled from Train Had Two Valuable Diamonds Returned by Honest Passenger.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—After he had been revived in a hospital, Samuel Lowey, a diamond merchant, who fell from a New York Central train when it was going through the Harlem station at thirty miles an hour, felt of his pockets hysterically and asked if his diamonds had been found.

Doctors drew from his pockets several packages containing $18,000 worth of diamonds, but Lowey said there were more, that he had two large stones in a small pocket of his coat.

While he was describing them, the police arrived at the hospital with the missing gems. A passenger had found them.

JOHN D. LIVES FOR OTHERS.

Billionaire Says That Is Only Way to Prepare for the End of Life.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John D. Rockefeller, asked today how he would advise people to spend their vacations, replied:

"By living simply. By spending more time out of doors. Nearly every one would thus be in better health.

"The way to prepare for the end of life is to live for others, and that is what I am trying to do.

"Every one should remember that there is something worth while besides mere money getting. Men should occupy their minds with other things than business.

"People worry too much. Some complain of their trials and some even of the sunshine that comes into their lives. Everybody should try to be happy under all the changing conditions of life. But first of all they should get out of doors, take up some outdoor sport and keep healthy.

"I am in perfect health—never felt better in my life. Dr. Biggar tells me I am good to live to be 95 or possibly 100. Perhaps I shall, for Dr. Biggar is usually right."

ALONG THE COURSE.

MOTORS TAKE DEATH TRAP.

DIFFICULT CURVE PROVES EASY FOR CRACK DRIVERS.

Thrills and Quakes Come at Nevada Turn—Incidents of Great Santa Monica Race—Where Apperson Flew on to Victory and Chalmers Won Many Laurels.

As viewed from the sharp Nevada-Ocean-avenue curve of the automobile race course, the automobile road races today were nothing if not spectacular. The sight was one of rapidly-recurring thrills. "The Death Trap" is the name that had been given the square corner, but as there was everything save accidents the appellation must be accepted as a misnomer.

It was in the very first lap of the heavy-car race that the Stoddard-Dayton cut the unfortunate caper that is responsible for her luckless finish. She failed to take the turn. Knowing that she could not take it without accident she headed straight down Ocean avenue, sustaining injuries that troubled her throughout the race. A leak was sprung in the oil tank.

At a loss of about eight minutes, the car was turned about and again entered the race, but throughout the contest the leak caused trouble, and was responsible for delay. More spectacular than the deviation of this car from the narrow path was the hair-raising performance of the Haynes.

Rounding the turn on the inside the wheels skidded on the planked bed of the saucer, and the car was piled against the concrete curb and jammed into a hoary palm adorning the Senator Jones residence. The front wheel of the car dug a hole four inches deep into the trunk of the palm, but aside from causing a leak in the radiator, the only injury was to the time record, as it required the driver and mechanic fifty minutes to extricate the car, wedged as it was about the curb and tree.

The breaking of a valve spring sent the Lozier to the hospital for repairs that knocked several minutes off her time, the necessity for replacing a rear tire added to the handicap, and still another delay was occasioned by the necessity for a new supply of lubricant.

One of the tragedies of the track that was not witnessed by the thousands was the accident that occurred near the Soldiers' Home turn to the Thomas, when the pump shaft broke. For five laps the flyer tried to weather the storm but was forced to give up the battle.

The Rambler's radiator developed a leak and she was under the painful necessity of coasting in front of the grand stand only to be towed to the repair tent. Early in the game the Columbia broke a magneto shaft. She was far from the crowd and her misfortunes were witnessed by few. And the break of the frame of the Chalmers-Detroit occurred on the long country stretch. She was barely able to jog into the hospital a hopeless and helpless wreck.

One trip each to the repair camp was made by the Pope-Hartford and Apperson, the latter for gas. The Chadwick duplicated the performance of the Stoddard in failing to make the sharp turn, shooting straight ahead down Ocean avenue, she lost two or three minutes in turning around and getting on the course again. Several times during the big race one or another of the heavy cars rode the boards that formed the outer edge of the embankment, and it was nothing short of miraculous that there was not a tip-over. With the lighter cars it was an entirely different story.

The hospital was the one deserted place. The Cadillac turned in once for water and once for oil and a third time for radiator trouble, and in sliding onto the course from Second street the car was steered so near the massed humanity at the curb that the watching crowd held its breath, but the wheel was turned just in time to pull the car clear of women and children and not a soul was injured. This was the one really near accident of the day.

GLIDDEN TOUR FEATURES.

Bar Women from Great Outing—Enmity of Others Aroused Because of Drastic Action.

It appears from reports that the barring of women from participation in the Glidden tour as either contestants or passengers has not met with the unanimous approval from the Middle West that Chairman Hower of the touring board of the American Automobile Association had hoped for.

The owner of a newspaper published in one of the Kansas cities along the route has come forward with a suggestion which he hopes Chairman Hower will adopt. He thinks that arrangements should be made to send the women to Denver by automobile or railroad before the tourists start from Detroit, on July 12.

They would have an opportunity to see Denver, Colorado Springs, and explore the neighboring country before the tourists arrive in Denver. He says: "The women can then continue the trip through delightful Kansas, and I believe the Denver Motor Club will furnish enough cars to bring the rest of the crowd on to Kansas City."

Poor Man's Car.

Slowly the oft-repeated assertion that the automobile is a rich man's vehicle is losing its force. A few years ago it had a certain foundation in fact. It was almost as true as it was notorious that many people mortgaged their houses to buy automobiles and economized on their food supply to buy gasoline. Nowadays, if one starts with a good car, whether moderate or high priced, and uses it with intelligence, care and skill, he can keep his maintenance cost down to reasonable figures.

Bennings Races.

The racing contests to be held on the famous Bennings track by the Maryland Motor Car Racing Association, on July 16 and 17, promise to be first-class events. A twenty-four-hour race will be run on the 16th, for stock cars, and on the afternoon of the 17th there will be two races each at five, ten and twenty miles, also limited to stock cars.

Fight to Finish.

The value of fighting to a finish is shown by the victory recently won in Ohio by motorists who protested against the imposition of taxes by both State and cities. The suit was directed against the city of Columbus, and the city won in both Common Pleas and Circuit Courts. The motorists fought on, and the Supreme Court held that the right of cities to tax automobiles was taken away when the Legislature passed the new motor vehicle law.

Will Erect Signs.

Members of the Automobile Club of Washington and motorists who visit the national capital are interested in a request made to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for an appropriation for the erection of signs to designate where the twelve miles an hour rate is enforced, where the fifteen-mile rate must be observed, and also where greater speed is permitted.

GOOD REPUTATION.

HER OLD PASTOR'S LETTER TO DEFEND ELLA GINGLES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Both prosecution and defense in the trial of Ella Gingles, accused of larceny by Miss Agnes Barrette, made claims today of newly discovered evidence that would swerve the jury.

Assistant State's Attorney Short asserted he would prove Miss Gingles learned of the name of "Tom" Taggart, Democratic politician, in a perfectly legitimate business way, that the girl requested Miss Barrette to send her to French Lick Springs on an errand, and that Miss Gingles left Miss Barrette's apartments in the Wellington Hotel on the night of January 4 two hours before she says she did, and that the night gown found on Miss Gingles in the bathroom has been marked "A. Barrette" through a conspiracy.

He intimated that the talk of deporting Miss Gingles was made for the purpose of winning sympathy with the jury. He also said he would produce hospital records to show that an operation was performed on the defendant. He reported sending two special detectives to Canada to round up witnesses against the defendant.

Mr. O'Donnell asserts he has found twenty witnesses to prove that Weather Forecaster Cox was mistaken in his testimony. He also produced copies of a letter forwarded to him from Miss Sara M. Hopkins, a Chicago young woman touring Ireland, whom members of Chicago Woman's Club requested to investigate the previous career of the defendant.

Miss Hopkins is a member of the Catholic Women's League, and was specially requested to make the investigation by Mrs. T. E. Bagshaw and Mrs. P. C. Fitzgerald, two of the leaders in the lacemaker's defense.

The letter, from Larne Manse, Larne, County Antrim, Ireland, says, in part:

"As I have said, she is the child of respectable, well-off parents. She, herself, so far as I know, has always been respectable and well conducted in every way, with a large infusion of enterprise and determination in her character, so that you may proceed in your generous and energetic endeavors in her behalf, with the most entire confidence in her integrity in every respect.

[Signed] "J. KENNEDY.
"Minister of the Old Presbyterian congregation of Larne and Kilwaughter."

BIG FIRE LOSS AT RENO.

Fire Destroys Mammoth Slaughter-house, Valued at Over $50,000. Manager Burned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Flames broke out this morning at 11 o'clock in the lard room of the mammoth slaughter-house and refrigerator plant of the Humphrey Supply Company, situated a quarter mile north of the race track and city limits, and quickly spread to all parts of the great building.

Urgent efforts were made to induce the fire department of the city to make an exception to its rules and go that far beyond the fire limits and save the valuable plant, but it refused to do so. There was no way to extinguish the rapidly-devouring flames and after burning three hours, the plant was a complete loss to the extent of more than $50,000, but with only $7500 insurance.

The cause is unknown as yet. Manager Fred Small was shut off by the flames and ran for a window. In grasping some iron to escape certain death, he sustained serious burns, as the metal proved to be red hot. Several hundred head of dressed meat was hanging in the cold storage cells, and was all destroyed.

One building alone cost $25,000 and contained valuable fixtures. There were several narrow escapes from burning by some of the employés.

MR. TAFT EAGER FOR TRIP.

Two Biggest "Ifs" Removed by Improvement of Mrs. Taft's Health and Appropriation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Taft talks quite freely now about his contemplated visit to California. As far as the two biggest "ifs" are concerned, Mrs. Taft's health is rapidly improving and arrangements have been made to take care of the item for traveling expenses in the appropriation bills. Some of the Democrats in the House, including Fitzgerald, of New York, are against the appropriation, but there can be no doubt that it will pass.

While the President is in Los Angeles, his comfort will be looked after by Senator Flint. Representative Needham called today on the President and they had a long chat about the forthcoming trip. The President said he wanted to visit the Yosemite Valley and the Mariposa Big Trees, and he asked Mr. Needham to take charge of that part of his trip. Needham promised to do so.

The President will stop at San José, where he will probably be guest of Representative Hayes. The President will probably start on his trip September 15.

WALLA WALLA ANXIOUS.

WALLA WALLA (Wash.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The people of this city are exceedingly anxious that President Taft shall include Walla Walla in the itinerary of his western tour, and the Commercial Club and municipal officials today joined in the following invitation that was telegraphed to him at Washington:

"This historic city, the scene of the life work and massacre of Marcus Whitman, patriot, pioneer, and now the seat of Whitman College, and the center of one of the most fertile and beautiful of valleys, invites you to stop for a handshake as you journey through the West. Your honored predecessor, former President Roosevelt, after his visit here a few years ago, was kind enorgh to say:

"'Walla Walla, made the pleasantest impression upon my mind of any city I visited while in the Northwest,' and as everything he saw is now vastly improved, we can assure you a happy surprise in this 'Garden City' of our highly-favored State, and we sincerely desire, Mr. President, that, as your train must pass this way en route to the Coast, you do us the honor of as long a visit as your time may permit.

"WALLA WALLA COMMERCIAL CLUB."

ESKIMO GOES HOME.

Boy Commander Peary Brought to America Sails for Greenland's Ice Floes and Snow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Kept from home for thirteen years, Mene Wallace, the Eskimo boy brought to this country with five of his people from the Polar regions by Commander Peary, sailed today on the Red Cross line steamship Rosalind, for St. Johns, N. F. At that port he will be taken aboard the steamer Jennie and conveyed to his home in Greenland.

Before Mene sailed, the Arctic Club which was instrumental in bringing the boy and his relatives, all of whom died, to this country, extracted from him a written agreement that he would not again return to this country, or that while in Greenland he would not bear arms against the Peary expedition. This was due, it is believed, to the thought that Mene, angered at the attitude of Peary and the Arctic Club in refusing to take him back to Greenland, once safe in his native home, might seek revenge from the treatment he received while in this country.

Mene said he would organize an expedition of Eskimo to find the North Pole.

TWENTIETH CENTURY BONDAGE.

GERMAN ACTRESSES DRIVEN TO EVIL SAYS MANAGER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An author named Leppel has just issued a book dealing with the moral of the present-day theater, which is creating a sensation. He says that actresses on the German stage are so badly paid that vast numbers of them are driven to evil in order to dress and maintain appearances as directors require. It is the exception when girls in the chorus and in other minor places get a salary exceeding $250 a year.

The girl's patron, who has paid expenses for dramatic training and during the waiting period, expects to be compensated otherwise than by a return of his money. Then comes the director, the stage manager and others whom the girl must appease, if she is to get on. The result, so far as the girl is concerned, may come gradually or swiftly, but it is sure.

Leppel charges that many girls have nominal employment on the stage in order to avoid police attention. In small theaters, especially in garrison towns, with large numbers of unmarried officers, the state of affairs is scandalous and ought not to be countenanced in any community pretending to have a conscience. It is quite common, the book charges, for rich men to become acquainted with theater managers in order to meet young women employed on the stage.

Leppel declares that he tells of matters within his personal knowledge and that the conditions he describes are so well known or so easily substantiated that no manager will dare dispute him. He was formerly director of a theater and writes as if he knew his subject intimately.

MORE MISFORTUNE.

ERROR LOSES SNAPPY GAME.

Hitt Trimmed by Little Slip in Eleventh Inning.

Garrett Holds Perhaps Down to Four Swats.

Many Beautiful Stunts Shown in the Fielding.

Portland, 1; Vernon, 0. Eleven innings.

Eleven innings of high class heaving featured by some beautiful fielding was what the good sized crowd of fans saw yesterday at the Chutes grounds in the fifth struggle of the week between Portland and Vernon. Some of the fielders must have thought old Garry Herrmann himself was sitting in the grandstand taking notes for they did things they will probably never try again.

Unhappy Hogan once raced like a thoroughbred back to the grandstand to bump into it and grab a foul that Ort tipped off in the second inning and in the last of that round Eagan hit a foul back of third base that Speas ran almost half a block to get and then just managed to reach it with outstretched arms while going at top speed.

In the fourth Bernard galloped over into the right corner of the fence and grabbed a high foul just as he collided with the batting cage; Garrett dashed in almost to the plate in the sixth inning to grab a pop fly that Hitt bunted and Garrett was enabled to double Hogan at first base, while Breen made a fine running one-handed scoop assist on Bernard's hot grounder in the sixth.

It was a game made bright and sparkling by the fielding but the pitching was no less classy. The first swat made off Garrett for seven innings was Eagan's bouncer over the pitcher in the fifth, while after the second Hitt allowed no pokes until the eighth and but for Martinke's bungle in the eleventh it is probable that darkness would have stopped the game. As showing just what it was it is only necessary to state that in eleven innings but thirty-four men are credited with a time at bat, not including three passes and a sacrifice, which shows that the battle was a fast one and interesting all the way. There were very few complaints on the umpiring and the fans certainly had a good day of it.

The only chance the Perhaps had to score was in the eighth, when Martinke started things with a walk and was forced at second by Haley. This bird ran to third on Mott's swat to right and could Hogan have soused the ball safely it would have meant a victory, but the best he could do was to bounce the pill to Garrett and Haley was caught at the plate. This put Mott on third but he died there, for Hitt was forced a second by Bernard after singling to left.

The only run of the game came in the first of the eleventh, which was started by Speas going out at first on an infield grounder. Ryan followed with a safe bounce hit over the pitcher and then McCredie and Johnson hit to left in succession. Ryan ran to third on Johnson's poke and when Martinke juggled this Ryan scored. Then Ort fanned and Breen popped up to Haley, which shows that Hitt was both good and bad in the same inning.

The Perhaps could do little with Garrett and after the eighth he was just as good as in the early part of the game. He was never in danger but twice and he easily pulled himself out of the holes.

FINE PITCHERS' BATTLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—The third consecutive game went to Los Angeles today by a score of 1 to 0. The visitors put the only man over the plate in the second inning, when Beall walked, Dillon sacrificed and Smith singled.

It was a pitchers' battle, Fitzgerald allowing but two singles, and Hosp and Nagle being batted for five. Much dissatisfaction was manifested when Umpire McCarthy called Flanagan out at the plate in the fourth. Three such decisions in three days have cut down the attendance noticeably. Score:

HERRMANN TOO BUSY TO TALK.

HEAD OF NATIONAL COMMISSION PLEASED AT PROSPECTS.

Will Meet Coast League Magnates in This City This Week to Discuss Baseball Matters and Will Look Over Players—Oaks Giving Best of Satisfaction.

August Herrmann, probable exalted ruler of the Elks and chairman of the National Baseball Commission that rules baseball matters in the world, arrived yesterday morning but brings no particular news of interest to the baseball fan or player.

In the few minutes' time that he was able yesterday to talk baseball, he frankly said he wanted to forget all about it for the present if possible for he has other business to look after. Of course he was naturally in favor of organized ball and would do all he could at all times to promote it. He had no clear idea as to what would or could be done on the Coast for organized ball but he expected to meet Henry Berry, Cal Ewing and other Coast leaders here this week to talk over the situation.

When asked concerning the recent ruling of the commission as to the three year and five-year suspensions of players who failed to report to their respective clubs by May 1, he stated that the five-year penalty attached to players who deliberately jumped their contracts and that the three-year sentence was for men who failed to report. When asked if this applied to the case of Mike Donlin, Mr. Herrmann stated that there seemed to be a general mix-up in regard to that case and that he did not believe Donlin could have reported in New York, if he had been anxious to, on account of sickness. He had not investigated this thoroughly, however, the intimation being that it had not been brought to his attention.

This is Mr. Herrmann's first trip west and naturally he is delighted with the country and the climate. He will be here ten days or two weeks and will doubtless talk more baseball when he gets through with the Elks or rather when they get through with him. He speaks very highly of his fielder, Rebel Oaks. Of course the Herrmann eyes will be cast upon some Coast League ball players during the time Mr. Herrmann visits the various ball grounds of the Coast, but he will not pay any particular attention to Beall of the Los Angeles team, for Comiskey of the White Sox has a gentleman's agreement with Henry Berry to the effect that if Los Angeles has a chance to dispose of him, that Comiskey will be given the first opportunity to buy him.

According to Mr. Herrmann baseball is enjoying a very prosperous season this year all through the East and all the clubs are making some money.

C. C. Huff, Lordsburg, Cal.	3	8	0
C. H. Thornburg, box 55, Long Beach, Cal	3	8	0
Chas. A. Clouser, No. 2116 W. 30th st., city	3	8	7
Bert Beattie, No. 1417 Temple street, city	3	8	10

Following are the five prize winners for making the best estimates as to the light-car race:

Name, address.	—Estimates— Hrs.	Min.	Sec.
Frank H. Cole, Highland, Cal.	3	38	40
E. H. Howes, No. 337 N. Mathew street, city	3	38	40
N. Dougherty, No. 2014 S. Figueroa st., city	3	38	29
Mrs. J. C. Wright, Azusa, Cal.	3	38	27
William F. Ford, No. 1715 Lenox ave., city	3	38	25

Mr. Huff, Mr. Lavelle and Mr. Thornburg each came within three seconds of estimating the Apperson's time, as given out by the judges of the race. Their guesses were numbered, respectively, 7081, 8783, and 9204. Mr. Huff, therefore is entitled to first prize.

Frank H. Cole and E. H. Howes tied in coming within five seconds of estimating correctly the Chalmers-Detroit's time in the light-car race. Mr. Cole's guess was No. 1295, Mr. Howes's No. 8879; the former therefore is entitled to first prize in the light-car class.

COMMON-SENSE POLICY.

BIG LEAGUES MAY JOIN HANDS WITH MINOR ORGANIZATIONS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The two major leagues combined with Byron Bancroft Johnson as the president is within the possibilities of the near future. The idea originated with Preident August Herrmann of the Cincinnati club and already looks good to a majority of the sixteen clubs that go to make up the party of the first part of the national agreement.

In short, the idea is to have the two present leagues run by vice-presidents, with Mr. Johnson as the president of the combination at a salary of $25,000 a year. Then with the major leagues a party of the first part and the National Association a party of the second part, represented by their respective presidents on a national commission with August Herrmann as chairman, there will be developed a working force in organized baseball that will fully protect the property rights of all interested.

With H. M. Sexton representing the minors and Ban Johnson the majors, baseball would be in the hands of the two ablest men in baseball today and both the majors and minors would welcome Mr. Herrmann as the third party on the commission.

A combination of this kind would to the full protect the best interests of baseball and make secure the investments in those cities, building or already built, such as Pittsburgh, New York and St. Louis. Cleveland and Detroit will start in soon to build plants only second to Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Washington and Boston will soon follow in the same line. Cincinnati has already a first-class plant, while Chicago will be strong on ball parks when Comiskey has finished his new home for the White Sox, which will be ready next spring.

It will be possible and feasible, in some cities, to play the games at one park where two clubs are located in a city such as Boston, New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis. With non-conflicting schedules and games every day for six months the public would soon become familiar with the fine homes of the clubs and the expenses would be much less for the clubs interested.

The chances for new leagues to break into Chicago or Pittsburgh would be lessened and the annual talk of "outlaw" leagues would soon be a thing of the past all over the country, for the new combination would strengthen the hands of the great minor organization that has grown very powerful during the last three or four years.

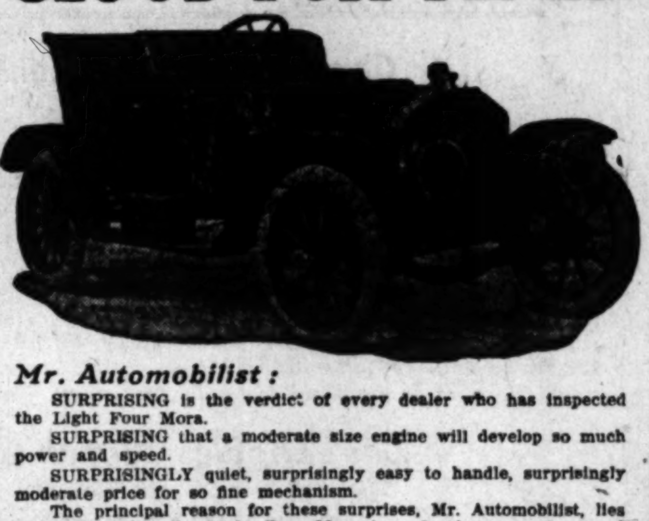
Get A Mora LIGHT FOUR MECHANICALLY RIGHT GOOD FOR YEARS



Mr. Automobilist:

SURPRISING is the verdict of every dealer who has inspected the Light Four Mora.

SURPRISING that a moderate size engine will develop so much power and speed.

SURPRISINGLY quiet, surprisingly easy to handle, surprisingly moderate price for so fine mechanism.

The principal reason for these surprises, Mr. Automobilist, lies in the fact that the Light Four Mora is a development of several years' constant, unremitting, capable labor to improve on in the commencement good article.

Not a single untried experiment in the car; just the improvements over previous models that go to make for perfection, maximum efficiency, strenuous capability and reliability, and to the further fact that the MORA is not an assembled car.

It will pay you to investigate the Light Four MORA if in the market for a car of medium size.

Of course it costs more than some others, but figure properly

THE COST OF A CAR

is original cost, plus season's repair bills, less value at end of season

MORA cars are good for years, therefore have an exceptional second-hand value.

MORA cars are mechanically right, therefore repair bills are comparatively small; and consider, moreover, the value of the saving of fine riding days, to say nothing of temper that ownership of a really good car entails. Come in and look our cars over.

TRAINING FOR BATTLE.

FIGHT FEASTS FOR FANCIES OF VISITING ELK HORDES.

Charles, Battling and Arthur Nelson, htweight champion and his brothers, who are helping him train for his fight with Ad Wolgast.

ISTIC fans from all over the country are preparing to attend the Elks' week events which the Pa- c Athletic Club has arranged for esday and Wednesday evenings at Carey's pavilion.

he first contest will be between ttling Nelson, the champion light- ight of the United States, and Ad olgast, the rising young feather- ight who has aspired to the light- ight title, also. Nelson and Wol- st are on the ground training hard the battle, the Dane doing his rk at the South Side Club at Ver- n where he has his two brothers, arlie and Art, to help. The camp crowded daily with onlookers who anxious to get a glimpse of the who fought his way to the top pluck and persistence.

he Battler will give a special pro- amme this afternoon beginning at 3 lock and will box at least ten nds with his various sparring tners. At handball, bag punching rope jumping, the Dane is a past ster and he will indulge in all of e methods of exercise as a wind- to the training for the contest esday evening with the Milwaukee olgast is down to 135 pounds, and far as he is concerned the weight 133 ringside will be a simple mat- . The Brewer will do some work afternoon at Venice where he has n getting ready for the battle which ans so much to him.

ust the moment that Wolgast steps o the ring with Nelson he faces a nce to make himself famous, for uld he succeed in stopping the Dur- le One he will have in sight the spects of earning within the next r or two at least $50,000, so that he ll may be concerned over the out- e of the contest.

olgast has given out that he will after the Dane from the first and keep away from the tactics usu- y pursued by him of covering up. figures that he will be able to get the Dane whenever he wishes and es on that powerful left of his to him the victory.

spite of the assertions of Wolgast he will be on the winning end esday evening, Battling Nelson right ahead sawing wood and his side he declares that he will e short shrift of the Milwaukee 's aspiration. Nelson also expects pen up from the start so the fans uld see a rapid bout while it lasts. betting on the outcome is 10 to 6 favor of Nelson with even money ered that the Dane will end the test with a knockout.

Wednesday evening Billy Papke and Flynn will hook up for ten nds and one of the toughest fights the year is sure to result from the ting of this pair.

apke has just returned from his lebrated battle with Stanley Ketchel ich added much prestige to the underbolt. Papke is anxious to e out the stain of defeat adminis- ed to him by way of a newspaper ision when he and Flynn met at McCarey's pavilion some time ago. Papke declares that he feels 25 per cent. stronger than when he fought the fireman before and he has no fear of the outcome Wednesday evening.

Flynn has been working harder than ever for this contest. He has been located at Vernon for the last two weeks and has toiled until the most critical fans are assured that Jim is in prime shape for the battle. Flynn's aggressive style of onslaught may be able to get Papke's goat and the fireman has asserted that he will not pause for a moment when he shakes hands with Papke as a signal that the battle is on.

These fights will be preceded by a good programme of preliminaries, so that the fans will see plenty of fighting during the two evenings' shows. For the Nelson-Wolgast night the preliminaries are as follows:

Abdul the Turk and Billy Morris, ten rounds, about 150 pounds.

Jimmie Ervin and Kid Cleveland, six rounds, about 115 pounds.

Hogo Dougherty and Kid Barnes, six rounds, about 126 pounds.

Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club is trying to forestall the scalping of tickets.

JEFFRIES TALKS.

CLEVER MANAGEMENT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—Personal friends of J. J. Jeffries have received word from him, they say, that so soon as his theatrical contract terminates on July 17 he will post a $5000 forfeit and sign articles for a fight with Jack Johnson.

In the last few months there has been much discussion as to the failure of Jeffries to post his forfeit, and this failure has elicited much criticism.

Replying to this, Jeffries stated that his theatrical contract would not permit him to sign articles to fight any one, and for that reason he has refused to post a forfeit until his stage work is finished.

SUNDAY WRESTLING.

Munkers Is to Meet Local Greek This Afternoon in Catch-as-Catch Can Bout at Chutes Theater.

Tony Munkers, manager and matchmaker of the Chutes Park Athletic Club, is to wrestle Johnny Bellis, a local Greek, in the pavilion of the club at Chutes Park this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Fred Johnson and Eddie Woods also are to meet on the mat. The length of the bouts is to be twenty minutes and the men are to wrestle catch-as-catch-can, best two out of three.

Munkers is desirous of meeting Eugene Traveller at 158 pounds, and has issued a challenge to him.

The Chutes Park Athletic Club has secured the human-roulette pavilion in the park and expects to use it in pulling off weekly wrestling bouts. The pavilion has a seating capacity of 500 persons, and Munkers hopes to boost the game by matching the best men available. Contests during the week are being arranged.

Tony Munkers, Middleweight Wrestler, o is to meet Johnny Bellis before the new Chutes Park Athletic Club, Sunday afternoon.

CLAIM CHAMPIONSHIP.

Bonita High School Girls' Baseball Team Thinks It Deserves Title. Other Teams Wouldn't Play.

The girls' baseball team of Bonita High School claims the championship of Southern California on the ground that the Polytechnic High School and Santa Monica High teams did not accept its challenge to play for first honors.

The Bonita girls played games with Chino, Pomona, Monrovia, Compton and other teams and were not defeated during the season. The team was coached by Samuel McDonald. Ruby West was captain and Lelia Caldwell was manager.

The victory over Chino was sweet to the Bonita girls, who were overwhelmingly defeated by their rivals in 1908. Considerable rivalry existed between Bonita and Pomona and it was only after a hard game that the Pomonans were downed, 7 to 6

HALF-NELSONS.

MAT AMATEURS ARE PROMISING.

SOUTHERN BOYS HOPE TO WIN WRESTLING HONORS.

Bouts to Be Pulled Off at Ascot Park While Marathon Race Is Being Run—North and South Again to Be Pitted Against Each Other. Good Sport Expected.

The annual wrestling tournament for the amateur championships of the Pacific Coast, which is to be held by the Los Angeles Athletic Club for the Elks at Ascot Park tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, will bring together the best amateur mat artists of the West.

The champions of the North will be pitted against the holders of the Southern California honors in the various classes and it is expected that the bouts will be the most closely contested and interesting that have ever been held in the South.

The complete list of entries follows:

Featherweight—115 pounds and under—C. W. Breese, unattached, Los Angeles; Cyril Westmoreland, Y.M. C.A., Los Angeles.

Lightweight—135 pounds and under—Jacob A. Kaplan, Y.M.C.A.; George Retzer, David Harris, J. B. Gardner, Los Angeles Athletic Club; J. J. Huemerich, unattached, Los Angeles; Leo C. Connor, Reliance Athletic Club; J. P. Parker, Olympic Club; J. Minchin, Tucson Athletic Club.

Welterweight—145 pounds and under—H. W. Hinks, H. R. Maierer, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Herbert Duncan, Milton Rapp, Olympic Club.

Middleweight—158 pounds and under—George Isaacs, W. McKay, Los Angeles Athletic Club; M. A. Lynn, Tucson Athletic Club; Milton Rapp, Herbert Duncan, Olympic Club.

Light heavy—158 to 168 pounds—Andrew Farrell, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Herbert Duncan, Otto Wallfisch, Olympic Club.

Heavyweight—168 pounds and over—Richard Allen, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Otto Wallfisch, Olympic Club.

The contestants are to wrestle catch-as-catch-can. The length of the bouts in the preliminaries is to be six minutes and in case a fall is not registered the referee will be authorized to order an extra three-minute bout. In the finals, if a fall is not made at the end of the regular period, the wrestlers will be given a three-minute rest and then will wrestle for three minutes. In case neither man has been downed, another three-minute period will be added. In the preliminaries the addition of extra bouts is optional with the referee, while in the finals they are required.

Championship medals in solid gold and silver are to be awarded to the first and second-place winners, respectively, in each weight division.

Al Treloar, who has trained the men who will wear the colors of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, believes the southern wrestlers have a good chance at least to break even with the men from the Olympic Club. Lynn and Minchin of the Tucson Athletic Club are said to rank among the cleverest mat men in Arizona.

Herbert Duncan of the Olympic Club is the Coast champion in the welterweight division. He is entered in the 145, 158 and 168-pound classes. Wallfisch, who will represent the same organization in the heavyweight class, is the champion of the northern part of the State. Against him will be pitted Dick Allen of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, whom Treloar has brought out and especially trained for the tournament. Allen is a husky and as strong as an ox, and although he has not had much experience in the game, the members of the local club are backing him to beat the San Franciscan.

The bouts will be held on a platform that has been erected directly in front of the grandstand. The spectators' view of the Marathon runners will not be obstructed, and as the wrestling and the race will be run off at the same time, there should be "something doing" continuously.

Elks presenting coupon books, and woman companions, will be admitted to the sports free.

Officials—Referee, George W. Braden; clerks, Jay Welton, Clifford Horn; timer, I. B. Lothrop.

Police Active.

The police in towns in the vicinity of Boston have been unusually active this year in arresting motorists exceeding the speed limit. The Automobile Owners' Association of Boston has likewise been active in warning its members of places where the speed rules are stringent.

TRACK AND FIELD.

RALPH ROSE BRIGHT STAR.

Giant Californian Is Going After More Records.

Best Athletes in the Country Entered in Meet.

Ordinary Men Barred from All Competition.

Ralph Rose, holder of the world's record in the shot put, is expected to be the star of the big track and field meet for the championship of the Pacific Athletic Association, which is to be held at Ascot Park under the auspices of the Elks' Entertainment Committee, Wednesday afternoon. The Healdsburg wonder recently threw the sixteen-pound weight several inches over fifty-four feet, bettering his former record by about five feet. Rose will wear the winged "O" of the Olympic Club.

The entry list was closed last week and Manager Braden is glad that the number of prospective contestants does not exceed fifty. It will not be necessary to run off the track events in heats, and there is no likelihood of the field events consuming too much time.

Braden has made arrangements to conduct the various events with dispatch. A corps of experienced officials has been engaged and from the past performances of the men who are to compete the spectators probably will be treated to exciting sport in every event. Coast records are likely to be smashed, and Rose is likely to set a new mark in the shot put.

Athletes of mediocre ability were not allowed to register for the meet. Certain performance requirements were set in each event, and men who were not able to present affidavits to the effect that they had at least equaled the marks set in their respective events were turned down.

Twenty-one universities, colleges, high schools and athletic clubs in California are to be represented in the meet, and Arizona will be represented by athletes from Phoenix and Tucson.

Elks and woman companions will be admitted to the meet without charge. The grand stand has a seating capacity of 10,000. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to place winners. The complete list of entries follows:

GLIDDEN TOUR IN THE WEST.

Early Start from Detroit Tomorrow Morning.

Pleasant Outing Planned for Automobile Jaunt.

Entry List Said to Be Not as Large as Formerly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Detroit is thronged tonight with prominent members of the automobile fraternity, who are participating in the numerous festivities arranged prior to the start of the Glidden tour from here Monday morning.

A continuous chain of entertainment which started last night with a complimentary banquet tendered to the visiting officials of the American Automobile Association by the Detroit dealers, and which ends with a boat ride through Lake St. Clair tomorrow afternoon, promises to keep the tourists busy every moment until the start. No further entries were announced by Chairman Hower tonight, and the probabilities are that the various trophies will be contested for by the thirty cars previously named.

The official list, with the names of the drivers, will not be announced until tomorrow, as the work of examining the cars has not been completed.

The feature of today's programme was the parade, in which 1030 machines participated. Every automobile factory in Detroit, of which there are many, made special efforts to make a showing, and the result was an imposing array of beautifully decorated cars and unique floats, which seemed to meet the favor of the many thousands who lined the way. Cars which have made themselves famous in one way or another, also took part in the parade and attracted considerable attention, among them being the Chalmers-Detroit "Blue Bird," winner of the Indiana light-car race, and the famous Studebaker army dispatch car.

Previous to the parade the visiting motorists were entertained by trips to the numerous automobile factories. Tonight a band concert was held in front of the City Hall by the Maxwell Briscoe Band of Newcastle, Ind. The festivities closed with a fireworks display.

Considerable disappointment is manifested by the A.A.A. officials over the low number of entries for this year's tour, which was voiced by Chairman Hower in his speech last night at the banquet. He intimated rather strongly that fear of the result was the reason for many failures to enter, and urged the value of the tour as a sporting event, which he declared to be an essential factor in the automobile industry.

A conference was held at the Hotel Pontchartrain this noon of the members of the National Convention Committee of the A.A.A., who were in the city to witness the start of the Glidden tour.

Chairmen Diehl outlined the plans, which had thus far arranged for the holding of the second annual national good roads convention in the city of Cleveland, on September 21-23, and reported the vast amount of interest which has already been manifested in this year's convention, and predicted that aside from all the leading good roads advocates of the United States government there would be present the highway commissioners and representatives of at least thirty States.

SAVE SLEEP-WALKER ALIVE.

Police and Fire Department Needed to Rescue Young Woman from Fatal Plunge.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—It required efforts of both the fire department and a police detachment to save Miss Catherine Soulier, a sleep-walker, from death at her home in Yonkers.

Miss Soulier, who had been afflicted with somnambulism for several days, rose from her bed, and, with her eyes closed, walked out of a window on to a narrow ledge three stories above a well-lighted street.

Passers-by saw her and called the police. An officer ran upstairs and climbed out of the window. Miss Soulier had reached the end of the ledge when the policeman grabbed her arm.

She awakened suddenly and when she looked down into the street, she became so terrified that she fainted. In falling, her body went over the ledge, but the policeman held onto her arm.

Other policemen came to his assistance, but they could not lift her back, and the fire department was called out. An extension ladder was put up to the ledge and two firemen carried the young woman down."

MAKES LUCKY MISTAKE.

Error in Reading One Word for Another Saves Rich Woman Heavy Fine.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—The mistake of Mrs. N. A. Gladding, a prominent Indianapolis woman, and wife of the vice-president of the E. C. Atkins Saw Company, in reading "abroad" as "aboard" has released her from the penalty of paying a heavy fine for failure to declare more than $1000 worth of gowns purchased in Paris.

After leaving Queenstown on the steamship Cedric, Mrs. Gladding was given a blank form on which to make out her declaration of dutiable goods. She read the words "purchased abroad" as "purchased aboard," and as she had purchased nothing on board the ship she did not declare the Paris finery.

When the Cedric reached New York her trunks were seized and sent to the appraisers' stores.

Collector Loeb has accepted her explanation, she has paid the duty and escaped the heavy fine.

"HOME BUILDERS'" EXPANSION.

Capital Stock Increased from $200,000 to $1,250,000.

Active demand for shares of stock in "Home Builders," with offices in suite 416 in Mason Operahouse, has caused the board of directors to give notice of increase in the capital stock from $200,000 to $1,250,000. Nearly all of the first issue has been exhausted. This is the best indication of the strength and growing popularity of the conservative plan of the company. Shares may now be had at $1.25 each, paying 3 per cent. quarterly, or 12 per cent. annually in dividends. All cash paid in is immediately used only in the building of new homes for the people. After the home is sold, so there can be no speculation, and no dangerous debts contracted. The earnings go to all shareholders, share and share alike. Protection gilt-edged—home property in growing Los Angeles.

Jim Brooks, professional grouch and umpire-baiter.

ALSO HORSE RACING.

RAISING DOGS AND BASEBALL PLAYERS TRIES MEN'S SOULS

BY GREY OLIVER.

EVER see the man who thinks an umpire is the invention of the devil that spends all its time off the ball field eating loco weed and scheming some new way of throwing the harpoon into a weak ball team? Ever get acquainted with the fellow who knows that inside baseball means the ability of a batsman to foul off every ball flung at him in order that he may have that many more chances to knock an umpire's block off? Ever meet the man who knows that when his ball club wins a game the umpire forgot to bet on the other team or managed to stay sober the night before?

If you have not, you should shake hands with Jim Brooks, stepfather of the Perhaps team, who is struggling bravely these days to keep his aggregation from falling into the cellar.

He has all of them beaten to a mushy pulp when it comes to handling a hot package to anything in his line or out of it and a hamburg machine looks like a tin whistle when he arrives in front of the entrance. Whenever the other managers see him coming through the gate they open the ice chest and get ready for a line of hot talk on horseshoes, bum decisions, more luck than sense, crossed fingers, beatin' the barrier, and about a dozen other things that may excuse a ball club that is trimmed by the other team.

It is said that the first thing young Brooks saw after he got his eyes open and his mother had given him some breakfast, was a race horse; the next thing was a Boston terrier, and the third a ball team. As he lay in his cradle sucking his thumb, he decided that he would make his fortune in the forenoon of his life with a race horse; pass away the time of the luncheon hour selling the aristocratic and expensive Boston, and fill out the afternoon of existence in trying to solve the great American riddle, Why is a Bum Ball Team? He kept at the first of these until the city shut up Ascot Park by taking in the shoestring strip that extends to bilgewater bay; stuck to the second until some underhand scrub poisoned his most aristocratic lady Boston; and now is up against—well, he is president of the Vernon ball team.

Brooks knows the racing game from the first shovelful of dirt that is thrown to make a track up to the number of room the judge has in the Van Nuys Hotel. He knows that the "morning glory" that the touts whisper mysteriously to the barbers and waiters is generally the one worst bet of the day; that lame goats that go up in the betting are the ones to get down on; that bookmakers lay against one "in the can," and if a booker has a bet on one to place this one will generally place whether he is in the money or left at the post. He can also tell you why the fourth dam of Ascot Major was the fourth dam; that Lady Curzon could just as well eat dog biscuits as be Empress of India; that in order to enter the winners' bitches class you must have won at least three prizes, and one of these in the open, and that you can keep a dog's hair from falling out without bathing it in glue or making it wear a wig.

When it comes to baseball, however, you have him soused both ways from the jack. Ball teams are paid to win games, and they can if the umpires will only give them a chance, and you'll know it if Jim can see you first. He will lay you 50 to 1 any time there is a close decision that his team gets the hooks, and that the president of the league must have had a severe attack of erysipelas of the imagination when he thought the present staff of umpires could tell the difference between a ball and a strike or that a foul was not a bird that laid eggs for gentlemen.

Outside of the ball field, Brooks can keep you dopey for hours with bright and sparkling stories that sound the depths and shoals of human life, and is as liberal-minded and as good a citizen as you would care to meet. Inside the entrance—well, just ask him why Vernon lost the ball game.

JUST A FEW.

ONLY SPEED MANIACS BLAMED FOR SPITE AGAINST AUTOISTS.

H. C. GALLOUPE of the Automobile Club of Southern California, is much concerned because of the attitude of certain people toward the motorists. In speaking of the number of recent automobile accidents, Galloupe is of the opinion that the speed-mad motorists are to blame for almost every tragedy. He says:

"We have in Los Angeles three motor bodies—the Automobile Club of Southern California, the Automobile Dealers' Association and the Motorists' Protective Association—all of which include among their members some of the best of our citizens, and it should be remembered by those who are prone to criticise, that the officers and members of these organizations deplore these sad accidents and fatalities a great deal more than the public at large seems to realize.

It is the old story of history repeating itself—crime, pestilence and famine always run rampant at periodical intervals—and it seems that right now a small percentage of those who are able to own or borrow an automobile are bent upon taking the law into their own hands—starting out with the avowed intention of driving as they please and let the rest of us get out of the way.

At a recent meeting of the City Council with more than one hundred motorists present—most of whom were members of some one of the three local motor bodies—it was conclusively proved that there is no crying need for a change in the rate of speed, but it did develop that there is a crying need for the enactment of a law that will compel the justices of our city courts to impose punishment somewhere near commensurate with the crime that a few speed-crazy maniacs are guilty of. The officers of the Automobile Club are strongly of the opinion that the guilty motorists should be punished, and they wish it understood that no offender can hope to hide behind the club's cloak—if found guilty of a violation of the law. Should any motorist displaying the club's emblem be found racing or speeding on the city streets, the officers of the club would thank any person to take the number of their car and report it to headquarters at No. 323 South Hill street.

There is still another side of this subject that is seldom spoken of in print, and some striking illustrations of it were brought out at the recent meeting between the Council and automobile owners—pedestrians must be educated to use a little more common sense and not knowingly tantalize the motorist by deliberately standing in the middle of the street in order to see how near they can pass in front of a moving auto and not be run down.

One motorist related an actual occurrence while passing along a country road, where a man and a small child were standing high upon the bank evidently waiting for him to pass. When he had reached a point nearly opposite to where they stood, the child suddenly ran down the bank and across the road directly in front of the moving car. The child was saved, but in doing so he damaged the engine to the amount of many dollars.

"Our new city ordinance will probably be very severe on the offenders, and the Automobile Club of Southern California proffers its good offices in seeing that these laws are justly enforced and obeyed. The time is not ripe, but when we are a little farther advanced in the science of modern transportation a law will be enacted that will compel the pedestrian to keep to the sidewalks, and leave the main thoroughfares for faster-moving vehicles."

Sign Campaign.

A sign board campaign is to be conducted by the Green County Automobile Club of Monroe, Wis. Boards will be placed at all crossings on the main traveled highways at once. The cost will be borne by the club and the members will do the work of putting them up.

Careless Drivers.

To prevent recurrence of complaints of the careless driving by automobile tourists from the United States, the Ontario Motor League has prepared and printed a summarized statement of the laws governing automobiles. The collectors of customs at various ports of entry will distribute the statement to automobile tourists.

Flag to Flag.

Not only has President Diaz of Mexico promised to guard the route of the "Flag to Flag" contest from Denver to Mexico City, in September, but he will give orders to admit the competing cars at the border without the usual customs-house formalities. Rurales will be posted every few miles along the course in Mexico and will make the race perfectly safe.

BEGINS LAST JOURNEY.

Body of Sir Arthur Cowell Stepney Is Shipped to England for Burial.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

YUMA (Ariz.) July 10.—Another chapter in the story of Sir Arthur Cowell Stepney, the English baronet, whose sudden death here, July 2, disclosed the eccentric career of a man born to a title and vast estates in Great Britain, who chose to denationalize himself and drop his title to become an American citizen, closed tonight in the shipment of the dead nobleman's body to New York, from whence it will go across the sea for interment in English soil.

H. C. Ackroyd, the Vancouver, B. C., attorney, who arrived in Yuma four days ago to take charge of the body and effects of the deceased, gave out the first authoritative statement concerning his late client tonight. According to Mr. Ackroyd, the dead baronet's full name and title was Sir Emile Algernon Keppel Cowell Stepney, born in Germany of English parentage, about seventy-five years ago. As a young man Sir Arthur was an attaché of the Foreign Office in London, and subsequently in the 70's and early 80's he sat in Parliament for South Wales, where he had large estates.

For years all his time not given to travel, in which he delighted, had been spent on his British Columbia estates, in the cultivation of which he was intensely interested.

FIDGETING FOR WAR.

Young Turks Party at Constantinople Seeking Pretext to Begin Fight With Little Greece.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cretan affairs are regarded with serious misgivings in official quarters. It is learned from a reliable source that the outlook is threatening. Reports indicate that the Turks are doing their best to provoke war with Greece, while the little kingdom, conscious of the danger, is avoiding anything of a hostile nature.

The Young Turks believe they have a great chance of smashing the Greeks with no risk to themselves, and at the same time materially strengthening their present precarious position at home. On the other hand, they hesitate to make a decisive move, fearing a Bulgarian attack from the rear. Although the differences between the Porte and the government at Sofia have been outwardly adjusted, the Bulgarians would gladly seize the opportunity to attack the Turks in the event of a war with Greece.

Meanwhile the situation is complicated. The powers, however, appear to be anxious to prevent disturbances in the Balkans and are considering the advisability of sending a joint warning to Turkey to let Greece alone. It is expected that the developments of the next few days will be highly important.

Return Lost Money, Watch and Steamer Ticket to Sorrowing Denver Milliners.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Misses Kate and Jane Dunphy, milliners of Denver, came near not being able to sail for Europe today on the steamship St. Paul.

While shopping in Broadway, Miss Kate lost, through a hole in her pocket, a gold watch, an envelope containing $300 and another envelope containing their tickets to Europe. They advertised their loss.

The tickets were found in a store, where they had been left by a man who had picked them up in the street. Another reply to their advertisement told of a boy, giving his address, who had found some money. With a detective, the Misses Dunphy called on the lad and he returned the $300, and the gold watch. He was given $20.

TO AID STRIKERS.

General Organizers of American Federation of Labor Reach Pittsburgh to Begin Campaign.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, July 10.—Emmett Flood and John A. Flett, general organizers of the American Federation of Labor, arrived here yesterday and spent the greater portion of the day in conference with P. J. McArdle, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

They have been assigned to the Pittsburgh district by the American Federation of Labor, to assist the Amalgamated strike against the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, and will begin an active campaign this morning.

President McArdle said the announcement that the United States Steel Corporation would build a fifty-mill tin plate plant, and a fifty-mill sheet plant at Gary, Ind., the largest of its kind in the world, is only a bluff on the part of the Steel Corporation to win the strike for the American Company.

ELKS HAVE CHANCE TO HUNT DEER.

DEER hunting during the latter part of Elks' Week will be possible this year on account of the opinion of the Attorney-General that the season opens July 15. All doubt concerning the changing of the date was removed yesterday when The Times received the following telegram from the California Fish and Game Commission, in San Francisco:

"Attorney-General renders opinion that deer season opens July 15. We are governed accordingly."

Inasmuch as the new law lengthens the hunting season two weeks, as it will still close November 1, Boards of Supervisors have endeavored to shorten the season under a law later held to be unconstitutional. It was tested on a case from this county in respect to the dove season and the Appellate Court held that the Legislature could not give such powers to Supervisors.

Any action of county authorities in fixing hunting seasons that do not conform to those arranged by the State Legislature is illegal.

The hunting license for tourists is $25.

WASP IS VICTOR.

the Wasp and the Mischief II, with about the same distance intervening between them.

The Mah Pe rounded the whistling buoy at Point Vincent, ready for the return, at 3:22:45 o'clock, followed by the Aeolus at 3:27:45 o'clock. Then came the Gretchen at 3:37, the Mischief II at 3:41:05, and the Wasp at 3:46:30 o'clock, uncorrected time.

Another pretty race was occurring a mile behind between the Venus and Butcher Boy. The Venus took the lead about a mile up from Pt. Firmin and in another mile both were passed by Mischief I, fast making up her lost time. The Nackey did not finish. Daisy and Trilby were the last around the buoy.

The Trilby, under double reefs, entered an exception to the rules, which was allowed.

The breeze died away at the start and it seemed that the conditions favored the Mischief II. Half way up the coast it was thought that the wind was even too light for this yacht. Coming down the coast the wind freshened and the Mah Pe led all the way and finished at 4:40:40 o'clock. The finish of the other boats was as follows:

Wasp, 4:42:55; Gretchen, 4:44:16; Aeolus, 4:50:20; Mischief II, 4:55:48; Mischief I, 5:24:30; Butcher Boy, 5:32; Venus, 5:37:19, and Trilby, 5:47:15 o'clock.

The skippers who sailed the different yachts were the owners of the boats, their names being as follows: Mischief I, Warren Wood; Mischief II, Walter Folsom; Venus, K. R. Bradley; Wasp, Fritz Whitney; Mah Pe, Joe Pugh; Nackey, Lew Harris; Aeolus, Frank Wyatt; Daisy II, Clark Morgan; Trilby, Dr. A. Gahan; Gretchen, J. S. Holly, Jr.; Butcher Boy, Kent Hamilton.

George E. Bowles, commodore of the San Diego club and one of the judges, expressed his satisfaction with the race and declared that his club would try again next year for The Times trophy.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR MATINEE.

Harness Meeting Will Have Special Features.

Classy Nags Are Expected to Perform Well.

Big Purses Are Offered for Regular Events.

Four matinée races, to be included in the harness meeting that is to be held at Agricultural Park for four days beginning Wednesday, were arranged yesterday by the Los Angeles Harness Horse Association, which is to conduct the meeting as a special feature of the California circuit

One matinée event will be held each day of the meeting. The free-for-all race on Saturday is expected to be very interesting. Prizes valued at $60, $25 and $15 are to be awarded to the first three place winners, respectively.

The horsemen are getting their campaigners in excellent condition for the meeting, which undoubtedly will be the classiest that has ever been held in this city. The purses range from $800 to $1000, and the fastest harness horses on the Coast are to be seen in action. The entries for the matinée races follow:

The 2:25 trot, one mile, two heats in three: Arms, Joseph H. Williams; Rex, Dr. W. A. Conway; Rich, C. E. Germer; Lottie Vayer, O. O. Jonas; Charlie Wilkes, D. T. Sedgewick; Mamie Elizabeth, C. A. Canfield; Zulu Belle, C. A. Durfee; Clara G., William Morgan; Crisis, William Morgan.

The 2:30 trot, one mile, two heats in three: Rancho del Passo, L. J. Christopher; Direct Maid, Charles Saddler; Julia Clay, W. H. Nesmith; Fussy B., W. A. Connoly; Orena, W. A. Glasscock.

The 2:30 pace, one mile, two heats in three: Maj. Gifford, R. J. Prescott; Red Jacket, O. O. Jonas; Noma, O. O. Jonas; Honest John, Perry Lowe, Bernie Wilkes; L. A. Denker; Isabelle, Perry Lowe.

Free-for-all trot, one mile, two heats in three: Zombretta, L. J. Christopher; Athasthane, D. L. Bachart, Pleasanton; Escobodo, Porter brothers, Portland; Easter, S. B. Wright, Santa Rosa; Zombro Nut, Porter brothers, Portland; Jay Direct, J. R. C. Burton; Dr. Lecco, C. A. Durfee.

Officials—Starter, Ed. Smith, Ocean Park; judges, C. A. Durfee, L. W. Fulson, George Easton; timers, J. W. Nickerson, H. Moore, E. Deffebach.

BADGES DISTRIBUTED.

H. L. Pritchard, deputy fish and game commissioner, is distributing the new badges that are to be worn by deputies during the year, beginning the first of this month. The plain shield badges are being called in and the wearers of them are no longer invested with authority to enforce the fish and game laws. Deputies under salary during the current year will wear a large star. Deputies appointed by the commissioner, but who receive no remuneration for their services, will be provided with badges having the shape of a shield with a star in the center.

BOWLING SCORES.

High scores rolled on Morley's Spring-street alleys in the past week were:

Tenpins—J. P. Wieland, 223; M. Balch, 207; J. Novacovich, 214; F. Blume, 225; J. Johns, 246; E. Giambastiani, 234; J. Balch, 259; G. Ballard, 218; F. McDonnell, 222; N. W. Boroje, 200; G. Jimjons—C. O. Goldman, 107; H. B. Little, 132; J. Dilger, 118; J. Borelli, 122; C. Lawton, 108; M. Hall, 103; S. Hall, 119; R. Dilger, 105; C. Lillard, 124; W. Mohr, 112; D. Dool, 115; J. Johns, 115; L. Jones, 102; W. Dolan, 114; D. Walton, 115; C. Eaton, 119; S. Trinhill, 129; G. Sampson, 110; M. Balch, 105; L. E. Nicols, 119; A. Brainard, 128; W. Skipp, 101; E. Murray, 111.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

J. Balch's 259 in tenpin was the week's high game.

H. B. Little was high at jimjons for the week with 132.

S. Hall in French five ran the week's best score, 230.

In the second match between the following quartettes victory was reversed, winning two out of three and by 95 pins. J. Johns, of the victors, had high game, 246, and A. E. Stone of the opposing team high average, 181 1-3. The result table:

	1	2	3	Total	Av.
Wieland	134	185	152	471	157
Lillard	150	161	156	467	155 2-3

	1	2	3	4	5	Total
Trinhill	92	129	115	102	108	546
Sampson	95	110	95	105	85	490

Autos Are Safer.

That automobiles may safely be driven twice as fast as horse-drawn vehicles or saddle horses is the conclusion reached as a result of the tests held a few weeks ago on Hillside avenue, Jamaica, L. I., N. Y. L. W. Page, Director of the Office of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, who was in charge of the tests, says: "The brake tests demonstrated absolutely that a speed of thirty miles an hour is as safe or safer to the motorist and other users of the highway as half that speed when horse-drawn vehicles are considered."

Will Buy Hill.

The Automobile Club of Worcester, Mass., has revived the project of buying a hill for its climbing contests. The scheme resulted from an attempt by owners of lands abutting the Dead Horse Hill, which has been utilized by the club, to raise the price for its use. The hill which the club proposes purchasing lies a couple of miles to the west of the city, and the grade is steeper than that of Dead Horse. There is a good site for the erection of a grand-stand, from which a clear view of practically the entire course is obtainable. More than half the money necessary for the project has been pledged.

MIT ARTISTS.

BOXING DURING THREE DAYS FOR AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

FORTY-ONE entries have been received for the amateur boxing tournament that is to be held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Athletic Club for the championships of the Pacific Coast, at Venice, Thursday and Friday nights, and before the entry list closes Tuesday night it is expected that the number will be increased to fifty. Against the best local talent will be pitted men from San Francisco, Stockton and San Bernardino.

The entries to date follow:

The 105 pound class—J. Rafter, Olympic Club; Fred Sholes, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Eddie Fox, Dan Rooney, Rocco Wego, unattached, Los Angeles; Roy Snyder, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Charles Corson, Y.M. C.A.

The 115-pound class—W. E. Coe, W. Silverman, Y.M.C.A.; Walter Fickett, Jack Mann, George Kahn, Tony Smith, unattached; Eddie Dennis, Olympic Club.

The 125-pound class—Frank Curtis, Mike Botel, unattached; Oscar Walter, Newsboys' Club.

The 135-pound class—Willie Dwyer, Olympic Club; Sam Coulter, Charles Boscha, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Jimmy Hayes, unattached; J. Beauchamp, Broadway Athletic Club.

The 145-pound class—Alvin Ashley, Clarence Macey, L. R. Cuder, unattached; J. O. Niderost, Olympic Club; E. Barry, Broadway Athletic Club; C. B. Edwards, G. C. Cockhill, C. Chandler, Y.M.C.A., Los Angeles.

The 158-pound class—Cliff Reumann, Los Angeles Athletic Club; E. Reguse, unattached.

The 168-pound class—Victor Newman, Y.M.C.A., Los Angeles; Otto Wallfisch, Olympic Club.

Heavyweight class—Clark Jorgstorff, Los Angeles Athletic Club; Otto Wallfisch, Olympic Club.

The Stockton Athletic Association has notified F. W. Henderson, secretary of the L.A.A.C., that it will send a representative, and the San Bernardino Athletic Club is to enter three men. Several unattached local boxers have signified their intention of entering tomorrow.

All the men entered for the bouts are to be subjected to a physical examination at the Los Angeles Athletic Club tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. The contestants will be required to make their respective weight limits at 7 o'clock on the nights of the tournament.

If fifty or more entries are received, two nights probably will be devoted to the preliminaries, and the finals will be held Saturday night. The bouts promise to be the classiest amateur mix-ups ever held here. All the Southern California champions in the various classes are entered.

F. W. Burgess, boxing instructor of the Olympic Club, will accompany his men to this city. They are expected to reach here tonight. During the tournament they will stay at Venice. The L.A.A.C. boxers will stay at the club annex at Venice.

Six-and-a-half-ounce gloves are to be used by the contestants. In the tournament held in May, much lighter gloves were used, and with the heavier mitts it is not likely that unnecessarily heavy punishment will be meted out.

Cliff Reumann, the middleweight boxer of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, who is the only holder of a Coast boxing championship in the South, sustained a sprained ankle yesterday. He may not be able to enter the tournament, although De Witt Van Court believes he can get him into shape.

The officials for the tournament are to be selected early this week. The contests will be pulled off in the pavilion of the Venice Athletic Club. Gold and silver championship medals are to be awarded to the first and second men, respectively, in the various divisions.

BALLS AND STRIKES.

The loss of Gandil of Sacramento and Koestner of Los Angeles will be sorely felt by the Coast League fans—until others are secured to take their places and as these cracks will not go until next season, there will be ample time to replace them. Gandil is slated for the Chicago White Sox and Koestner for Cleveland. With Garry Herrmann coming here to look at Beall of Los Angeles, and Johnson of Portland, it would appear that Coast League players are in demand.

Little Jimmy Toman, the umpire, declares that no more ball players will be allowed to run over him and that he proposes to keep busy with all the roarers. During his last series at Sacramento he put no less than eight men out of the games and will continue this kind of business.

Jiggs Donahue, now at first base for the Washington team, will be made manager of the team when Cantillon's three-year contract expires in September. This is the rumor and certainly the team could be no worse off than it is now.

It is stated in the East that Chick Fraser, the former Chicago Cub pitcher, intends to sue Murphy for back salary and will take the case through the courts.

Lave Cross, once third baseman for the Philadelphia Athletics, is back on the pay roll again, having thrown over his job of managing a team in the outlaw South Atlantic League, to become a scout.

Buck Francks, formerly shortstop of the Oakland team, says that he should have gone to the Omaha team long before he did, for he has made more money there than he ever did in Oakland and has saved some of it.

Heine Spies, the well-known old catcher of the Los Angeles team, is working in this city every day, and has promised to catch a game for the Vernons if they want him.

SOUTHERN FISH ON EXHIBITION.

The State Fish and Game Commission has notified Deputy Commissioner Pritchard that a fish car is to be sent here next week for the purpose of getting a general assortment of fish to be exhibited in the aquarium at the Alaska-Pacific Exposition.

The car probably will be shipped to San Pedro and most of the fish will be collected at Catalina. The Commission made an effort to secure a representative assortment of fish at Monterey, but failed.

Something Doing Every Minute to Entertain the Thousands of Guests

DETAILS.

PROGRAMME FOR WHOLE WEEK OF THE ELKS' CELEBRATION.

Good Things That Have Been Provided for the Entertainment of the Best People on Earth, Who Are Traveling Far to See the Beauties of Los Angeles and the Southwest.

LOS ANGELES Elks have prepared a fine welcome for the thousands of visitors, many of whom already are here, and the programme for the week is full of good things.

The real "business" of the entertainmen will open tomorrow with "Pasadena Day." Pasadena Lodge, No. 672, will be the host.

PASADENA DAY.

Grand Lodge members and their ladies will leave on cars entering Pasadena at Hotel Green, for the festivities in that city. They will, between the hours of 9 and 10 a.m., be given a ride about the city in automobiles and deposited at Tournament Park. All other Elks will be carried direct to the park by the cars that take them to Pasadena. A big barbecue will be given between the hours of 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Chariot races, stage hold-ups, etc., will be given immediately after the barbecue. Grand Lodge members and ladies must be at Hotel Green at 9 a.m. Grand Lodge members should leave Los Angeles at 8 a.m.

As a special event for the entertainment of the Grand Lodge visitors on "Pasadena Day" the Charioteers have been persuaded to undergo again the strain and excitement of the race.

There are four entries and four thoroughbred horses, harnessed abreast to each chariot. The chariots and the togas worn by the drivers are an exact replica of those so vividly described by Gen. Lew Wallace in "Ben Hur."

The race consists of four heats and is run as follows: Choice of position is chosen by lot. Two of the teams run the first heat, the remaining two teams run the second heat, the losing teams of the first and second run the third, and the winners of the first and second run the final.

One thousand dollars is the prize, and the finest horsemen of the West struggle for the glory of winning first. Nothing but thoroughbred horses, selected from California's finest ranches, are used, and for three months preceding the event they are trained for speed and endurance.

LOS ANGELES RACES.

In the afternoon in Los Angeles at 2 p.m. at Ascot Park there will be athletic sports as follows:

Full distance Marathon and wrestling championship of the Pacific Athletic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of America, under auspices of Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Twenty-five of the best long-distance runners of the Pacific Coast, including champions from the University of California, Stanford University, Olympic Club, San Francisco; Phoenix, Ariz. Indian School, and many Southern California institutions, including several champions from the Los Angeles Athletic Club, will compete for the handsome fifteen-inch loving cup and six handsome gold, silver and bronze medals.

In the seven classes of the catch-as-catch-can wrestling events, are entered champions from the Olympic Club, San Francisco; Tucson Athletic Club, Los Angeles Athletic Club, University of California, Swedish Athletic Club, Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. and University of Southern California. Seven gold first-place and seven silver second-place P.A.A. of A.A.U. championship medals are offered for the two best men in each of the following weight classes: Men weighing under 105 pounds, under 15 pounds, under 135 pounds, under 145 pounds, under 158 pounds, under 168 pounds and over 168 pounds.

A large scoreboard will show the mile laps of each Marathon runner.

An excellent musical programme will be rendered by the Los Angeles Elks' Reunion Band during the afternoon.

In the evening at Los Angeles at 8 o'clock, in the Auditorium, there will be public ceremonies incident to the annual reunion. The programme is as follows: Overture, "Auld Lang Syne" (Muller;) invocation, Grand Chaplain, Brother Rev. John Dysart; vocal solo, "Jest, Perfume and Dances" (Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet,") Miss Nell Brennan of Cincinnati; address of welcome in behalf of the Elks' Reunion Committee and Lodge No. 99, B.P.O. Elks, Motley H. Flint; contralto solo, Miss Lillian Scanlan; address of welcome in behalf of city of Los Angeles, Mayor Alexanrer; song, quartette, Charles F. Eaton, George W. Chant, Jake Hill, Will Clark, of Spokane Lodge No. 228; Address in behalf of State of California, Gov. James N. Gillett; response on behalf of Grand Lodge, Rush L. Holland, Grand Exalted Ruler B.P.O. Elks; finale, "America," orchestra.

SANTA MONICA THE HOST.

On Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Auditorium the Grand Lodge will open. Afterward Santa Monica will take the visitors in hand. The guests will be met upon arrival of all trains by delegation from members of No. 906, which includes also Ocean Park and Venice.

Immediately upon arrival at Santa Monica, guests will be escorted to the arena, where will be held the carnival of Spanish sports, commencing promptly at 10 o'clock a.m. Pagoda lunch and refreshments will be served from 12 noon to 1 o'clock p.m. on the ocean front.

A grand regatta, given by the South Coast Yacht Club, will start promptly at 1 o'clock p.m. from the new reinforced concrete pier at the foot of Colorado avenue, over the Santa Monica three-leg course, guests being privileged to view the races from any part of the beach.

Between the hours of 1 o'clock p.m. and 6 o'clock p.m., the guests will be extended the courtesy of the Ocean Park bath-house or Venice bath-house, and they will be enabled to enjoy a dip in the surf, plunge, or hot salt bath.

The Gregory Italian Band will give a grand concert during the entire day. The day's festivities will terminate with two informal dances to be given at the Horseshoe pier auditorium and the Venice dancing pavilion from 8 o'clock p.m. to midnight.

Headquarters, rest rooms and information bureaus for the convenience of guests have been established at the following places: Elks' Club, Ocean and Arizona avenues, Santa Monica; Horseshoe pier auditorium, foot of Pier avenue, Ocean Park; Ship Hotel "Cabrillo," Windward avenue, Venice.

On the same afternoon in Los Angeles, at Ascot Park, at 2 o'clock p.m., there will be concerts by bands from all parts of the United States, exhibition drills of the crack Elks' drill corps; gorgeous Japanese daylight fireworks, manufactured especially for the Elks' reunion by the leading manufacturer in Yokahama. Admission to Elks and their ladies by tickets from coupon book; to all others regular admission will be charged.

In the evening at Los Angeles, all Elks and their ladies will be admitted free to the Orpheum, Belasco, Majestic and Burbank theaters on presentation of coupons.

LONG BEACH EVENTS.

Wednesday, the 14th, will be Long Beach day. There will be an automobile trip over Ocean boulevard to Naples and the Craig ship-building plant; bay trip across Long Beach harbor front to the government breakwater and past the Salt Lake "Jack Knife" bridge, the largest of its kind in the world. During the afternoon the courtesies of all places of amusement and theaters on the Walk-of-Thousand-Lights, including the Majestic pavilion, roller coaster, Byde-a-Wyle and Bently Grand theaters and the Long Beach bath-house, will be extended to all Elks. Surf bathing, water bicycle races, yacht races and motor-boat races. Fishing from Long Beach's $150,000 pleasure pier, where barracuda, yellowtail, albicore and jewfish are caught in quantities. Special concerts in the shell on the beach by the world-famous Long Beach Municipal Band. At 9 p.m. grand ball at the Hotel Virginia. Special concert in the Auditorium by the Long Beach Municipal Band.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Ascot Park, Los Angeles, there will be monster track and field championships of the Pacific Athletic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of America, including California, Arizona, Montana, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaiian Islands. One hundred athletes, including several world's champions, will compete. Among the record-breakers are Ralph Rose, the world's champion shot putter.

Thursday morning at 10 o'clock will come the grand Elks' parade. The line of march will be as follows: West on Tenth to Main; north on Main to Temple Block; west to Spring; south on Spring to Ninth; west on Ninth to Broadway; north on Broadway to First.

At 8 p.m. on Thursday will come the electrical circus parade, including fifteen gorgeously illuminated floats with thousands of incandescent electric lights. This pageant will be one of the most beautiful and spectacular events of the week. The floats are as follows: Elk, emblem, crocodile (hayseed band,) trick horse, clown elephant, $10,000 beauty, dreadful octopus, wonderful giraffes, Mary and lamb, wild man of Borneo, performing bear, queen of hearts, horrible sea serpent, dime museum, Maud.

The route of the parade will be north on Main from Ninth to Temple block, around Temple block and south on Spring street to Ninth; west on Ninth street to Broadway, north on Broadway to Second street, east on Second street to Spring street, south on Spring to Ninth.

On Friday at 9 o'clock, a.m., will come the massed band parade. All the bands in attendance at the reunion will assemble at Temple block, Spring and Main streets, will be massed as one gigantic musical organization, and will move south on Spring street to First, west on First to Broadway, south on Broadway to Ninth street.

At 10 o'clock Friday comes the midsummer floral and allegorical festival, of which William A. Hammel will be grand marshal. This will include hundreds of decorated automobiles, a magnificent equestrian division, and gorgeously decorated floats representing cities, business, social, fraternal and civic organizations, also a parade of nations, typical of the following: Indian, Chinese, Japanese, Egyptian, Spanish, Mexican, French, Italian, German Danish, Liberal Alliance.

The route of the parade will be east on Ninth to Broadway, north on Broadway to Temple, east on Temple to Spring, south on Spring to Ninth, east on Ninth to Main, north on Main to Plaza.

Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, will come the second night of the magnificent pageant, the electrical circus parade, and at 9 p.m., the mammoth invitation ball at the Al Malaikah Shrine Auditorium. Visiting Elks and their ladies will be admitted on tickets from the coupon books.

On Saturday, July 17, at 8 a.m., Grand Lodge members and their ladies will be taken on a trip to Catalina Island. Lunch will be served at Catalina. On return trip, as boats near San Pedro, there will be a magnificent display of fireworks.

AT ARCADIA.

At 9 a.m., Saturday, there will be a monster celebration at Arcadia, affording a delightful trip through the San Gabriel Valley, Oneonta Park and thousands of acres of orange groves. The day at Arcadia will be a revival of the olden times in California. Ten thousand pounds of choice beef, pork and mutton will be barbecued. Ten mammoth barbecue pits with 1000 pounds of meat in each, will be prepared for Elks and their friends, necessitating the work of fifty men two days to prepare the feast which will be under the direction of Joseph Romero. There will be 6000 loaves of bread, chili con carne, frijoles, and other Spanish sauces, and all will be served on tables with a frontage of one and a half miles, capable of seating 3500 people at one time.

The following sports and contests will enliven the day: Bronco busting and roping contest, by twelve of Lucky Baldwin's cowboys, fresh from the range; continuous vaudeville show; old-fashioned straw ride around the late Baldwin home and vineyards; flat races by thoroughbreds from the Baldwin stables; bands of music all day and evening; burro races, with silver cup to winner—Elks only; swimming races, in three heats; tub races, fifty yards; twenty-five-yard dash, ladies only; egg race, ladies only; fat men's race, Elks only; catching the greased pig; sack races; hurdle races; tug of war, Elks only; walking the greased pole; baseball, 2 to 4 o'clock p.m.; ladies' nail-driving contest; wheelbarrow race, 100 yards; pie-eating contest; balloon ascension, parachute jump; potato races; one-fourth-mile flat race, Elk riders only.

$500 in prizes and cash.

JOYS AT VENICE.

On Saturday at Venice there will be a band concert by Chiaffarelli's Venice of America band on St. Marks' Plaza during the entire afternoon. There also will be a grand cannon salute to the visiting Elks from the Venice breakwater by members of the life saving corps; one-half mile swimming race in the ocean; aquatic dinner in the ocean, participated by members of the life saving corps, when a course dinner will be served from a boat to the diners, in water twenty feet deep; grand aquatic sports in the Venice lagoon at 4 p.m.; dancing, swimming, boating and bowling during the entire afternoon.

In the evening at Venice Chiaffarrelli's Venice of America Band will give a concert and in the plunge at the bath-house an exhibition of high trapeze and ladder work will be given, ending with a human fire dive from the extreme top of the plunge to the water.

The ocean front at Venice will be illuminated and the programme includes a fine display of fireworks. Later there will be a carnival ball in the Venice pavilion.

On the same evening in Los Angeles will occur the third and last magnificent electrical circus parade. This will wind up the week's entertainment.

BIG INDUSTRIAL PARADE.

Estimated by Chamber of Commerce That This Division Will Be More Than Four Miles Long.

Acceptance received by the Chamber of Commerce to its invitations to manufacturers of Los Angeles to participate in the great industrial parade of July 16, indicate that this section of the procession will be at least four miles in length. In fact, the division has expanded to such an extent that some fear is expressed that there will not be room for all that would like to get in line.

Several novelties will be introduced in the division, invitations having been extended to many firms and corporations that never before have been represented in such a street display.

One trouble that the exhibitors have experienced is through the lack of experienced decorators, who could turn out the kind of floats desired. Scores of such men have come into Los Angeles within the last week, and it is expected, with their help, that the contemplated floats will be in line.

NEW ORLEANS COMING STRONG.

New Orleans Elks expect to break all previous records for traveling by the lodge of that city, in the tour to Los Angeles and other points. Before they return to their home they will have covered 7000 miles. More Elks will take this trip than ever before joined a similar excursion; on their last special train 126 members went to a Grand Lodge reunion 1000 miles distant. A fine new dining car will be provided by the Southern Pacific for the trip, and in addition there will be a long train of Pullman sleepers. Many of the travelers will go as far as Seattle before returning to Louisiana. Fifteen States will be traversed by the special New Orleans train in the course of its travels, the purpose being to return from Los Angeles by way of San Francisco, Salt Lake and St. Louis.

FREE FRUIT FOR ELKS.

Sacramento Development Association Plans to Give Unique Treat to the Many Visitors.

A carload of fruit each day, to be distributed among the thousands of visiting Elks in Los Angeles, will be forwarded to this city through the efforts of the Sacramento Valley Development Association, according to announcements received here from the northern part of the State. Secretary Miller of the association and Secretary Crane of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce are the originators of the plan.

Apples, grapes, apricots and other seasonable products will be in the list, and the Northern California people will see to it that there is a general distribution, to be accompanied with the statement that Southern California is not the "whole cheese" when it comes to the growing of fruit.

The fruit from the northern end of the State will be contributed by growers, and it is expected that enough will be sent here to meet the wants of all visitors and to attract attention to the part of the State in which it is grown.

Ten housand dollars will be spent by Sacramento Elks in boosting their section.

NEVADA COUNTY ALERT.

Realizing the great opportunity that the Grand Lodge meeting affords for boosting California as a whole, the Elks of Nevada county are coming to Los Angeles with a fine exhibit of the resources of their section. This display has been prepared by the Nevada County Promotion Committee, and is composed principally of minerals. It is said that gold ore from the Grass Valley and Nevada City mines, to the value of $10,000, will be brought by these Elks from the northern part of the State. There also will be exhibits of copper, silver, antimony and other valuable metals and minerals. A committee of prominent mining men will come along to boost the county.

REMINISCENT.

OLD-TIME ELK TALKS OF PAST.

CAPT. COLYELL OF SAWTELLE ONE OF ORIGINALS.

Veteran Tells of the Early Days in Which the Foundations of the Order Were Laid—Says Dramatic Association in Philadelphia Gave It Its Start.

Living unostentatiously in a little house at Union avenue and Shatto street, alone with his memories, laughing at the infirmities of age, is Capt. Thomas F. Colyell, a veteran of the Civil War, who loves to tell his version of how the great order of Elks originated among a merry crew of good fellows in Philadelphia.

Bon vivant in his youth, a man of education, and a gentleman enriched by a lifetime of experience that would make half a dozen books of far more than passing interest, Capt. Colyell tells his stories only to a few chosen friends, and then always with the strict understanding that not a word of it will be given to the newspapers.

Capt. Colyell was a personal friend of the elder John Drew, Stuart Robson, Frank Mordant and a score of celebrities who helped to make bright the epoch immediately following the close of the Civil War. One of his best-beloved friends was Charlie Vivian, the actor who wrote the first ritual of the Elks.

"Did I know Charlie Vivian?" exclaimed Capt. Colyell, caught off his guard and betrayed into telling the story again. "Well, I should say I did. I knew Vivian in Philadelphia, long before he wrote the Elks' ritual.

"Let us see—yes, it was back in '66 that we organized the Wheatley Dramatic Association in Philadelphia. There were about half a dozen of us, including young officers of the United States Army and Navy. We clubbed in together and bought an old Catholic Church that was standing at the corner of Fifth and Gaskill streets in Philadelphia. We paid $25,000 for it.

"Those who contributed were John Gallagher, the son of old Capt. Gallagher, who was then port warden of the city of Philadelphia; then there was Frank Farrell, chief clerk of the ordnance department at the Philadelphia navy yard; Frank Carter, who was then a photographer in his uncle's gallery, the largest concern of its kind in the city—Frank afterward became a wealthy theatrical manager—and Ewen Hulfish, the artist, a painter of considerable note in his time. We paid $5000 apiece for the hall, and Mrs. John Drew's carpenter—she was the mother of the present actor, John Drew—her carpenter remodeled the interior of the old church into an exact reproduction of Mrs. Drew's famous theater up town.

"In these fine quarters the Wheatley Dramatic Association used to give private theatricals. John Drew was the leader of the organization. This was immediately after the assassination of Lincoln, and as the theaters were closed in Washington, we found it profitable to give public entertainments once a week, and when the Legislature was in session at Trenton, N. J., we played there for a week to good business.

"Of course, we had lots of friends among the actors. There were Stuart Robson and Frank Mordant, both of whom have been famous, and Fatty Stewart and Billy Emerson and a good many others. These were always invited to our entertainments and Mrs. Drew had a box in our theater. When we played in public, we always went on the bill under assumed names, of course, for several of us were army and navy officers, and we could not afford to be known in such masquerades. I was the business manager for the association. I wore plum-colored gloves and a long black coat and a tall silk hat, ha, ha!" and the old soldier forgot his years and infirmities to laugh in glee at the fun of the old days.

"But theatricals alone could not long have held the interest of such a lively bunch of youngsters. They organized the S.E.B.C. as a side organization—a side degree, as you might call it. It was convenient to have the side club known only by these letters, you see, for they stood for the Sunday Evening Beer Club, and the S.E.B.C. had a glorious time. There were no theaters opened on Sunday evenings, and the actors who hurried to our hall after week-night plays always showed up on Sundays for a little fun. We had regular meetings, criticising the plays of the week, imposing foolish fines and laughing at one another. At the end of a couple of years or so, the S.E.B.C. became the Jolly Corks, a social organization a little more ambitious than the S.E.B.C., absorbing the Wheatley Dramatic Association, which we had named after William Wheatley, John Drew's partner.

"In 1872, I believe it was, the Jolly Corks was merged into the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. I was in Montana at that time, working as an assayer, and never had an opportunity to join the order, but I met Charlie Vivian at Pawnee after the order was formed, and you may be sure we had a great old time, discussing the boys and their doings. This was ten years after I had left him in Philadelphia."

Capt. Colyell was personally acquainted with J. Wilkes Booth, when the assassin of President Lincoln was struggling to obtain Thespian fame long before the war. At the outbreak of hostilities, Booth cast his fortunes with the South, while young Colyell enlisted with the Cameron Guards, which subsequently became the Eighty-eighth Pennsylvania Infantry. He was wounded at Fredericksburg, and on his recovery was made a captain and transferred to the One Hundred and Thirty-second Illinois Infantry. He met Booth again after the Appomattox surrender, and says that the cause of the assassination was that Booth had been made desperate and irresponsible by realizing that he had squandered all the funds placed in his hands for the Southern secret service and that the time for an accounting had come.

"Booth was a remarkably handsome man," said the captain. "But he was a fool when he saw a handsome woman. He squandered the money the Confederacy had entrusted to him, and tried to redeem his credit with the South by assassinating the President."

HOW GRAND LODGE CAME.

BOOSTERS FOR LOS ANGELES BRING GRAND LODGE HITHER

Chairman John G. Mott,

head of the Los Angeles Elks' Boosting Committee, which success year at the Dallas convention in bringing the next grand lodge to Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES would not have got the Grand Lodge of Elks this year had it not been for the efforts of the big bunch of boosters sent from this city to Dallas a year ago to the reunion. All of this great preparation for the entertainment of the visitors would have been unnecessary had it not been that a small army of good fellows made the trip to the Texas city last year with the one purpose of winning out for Los Angeles.

Some time before the convention at Dallas it was decided by members of the local lodge that the next meeting should be held in this city, and plans were laid accordingly. Motley H. Flint, John G. Mott and John Brink were among those keen for Los Angeles as the next convention city. They, with Thomas Darmody, E. B. Drake, Louis Schwaebe, N. R. Martin and others were named on the committee to go after the meeting.

A booklet containing beautiful views of Los Angeles and the surrounding country was sent to all the Elks whose names were available, many thousand dollars being spent in the preliminary campaign.

FINE SPECIAL TRAIN.

After that came the special train from Los Angeles to Dallas, which is said to have been the finest of its kind ever to leave the State. The Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' and Manufacturers Association had contributed liberally toward meeting the expense, and the consequence was that the eighty-three Elks who went on the train traveled in style.

They carried with them fruits, wines and souvenirs calculated to make a lasting impression on the visitors at Dallas, and on one of the cars was mounted The Times siren, which shrieks its own message.

Surrounding cities coöperated by sending representatives, and from Northern California came many distinguished Elks, all bent on bringing the next reunion to this city. Among this number was Henry A. Melvin, now a member of the State Supreme Court, whose home is at Oakland.

Long before the special train had reached Dallas, John G. Mott of this city was chosen to head the boosters, and the northern and southern parts of the State had agreed upon Los Angeles as the gathering place for 1909.

California established headquarters at the Hotel Southland in Dallas, the siren was mounted on top of the hotel, and from that time forth every visitor to Dallas knew that Los Angeles was a bidder for the privilege of entertaining the next Grand Lodge.

CALIFORNIA IN WHITE.

All the members of California lodges wore uniforms of white. On the Sunday following their arrival in Dallas, the members attended services at the various churches, wearing the white clothes, and it was not strange that most of the visiting Elks from the East and other parts of the country were attracted that night to California headquarters, where hospitality was dispensed with lavish hand. California wines, fruits and nuts were on tap, the celebrated Wiggins punch was to be had, and it even is said that a local brewer sent forth a carload of beer.

Detroit, which was the principal rival for the Grand Lodge meeting, provided music, stereopticon views and the like, but it did not seem to draw very well; the crowd all seemed to go to the California headquarters.

DETROIT ALARMED.

Detroit members became greatly alarmed at the progress California was making; Frank Bryson of Los Angeles had an advantageous position at the official registration bureau—but, of course, he did not use it to the advantage of Los Angeles. When this row came up, Mr. Mott, as chairman of the California delegation of boosters, offered to divide with Detroit all the wines, fruits and other things that this State has at its disposal. Detroit declined this offer, but some of the members of the Michigan city insisted that California—and Los Angeles in particular—had expended at least $20,000 in its campaign for the next reunion. (As a matter of fact the cost was but a few hundred dollars; public-spirited citizens and business men of this city contributed most of the amount.)

Los Angeles delegates to the Dallas convention made a great hit in the big parade, marching in white uniforms and carrying parasols. There was no mistaking that they were from Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES WINS.

When it came to a vote on the convention place, Mr. Mott, w noted as an orator, proposed Lo geles, and he was seconded by A. Melvin of Oakland, now a of the California Supreme Co vote was close on the first strong argument against Los having been made because higher railroad rates from cities. But Los Angeles finally 121 votes—a victory that is to the high class of boosting the carried on under the direction Mott.

Well, that is about all in con with the success of Los Angeles curing the Grand Lodge. It is Los Angeles now to show that fidence was misplaced.

SACRAMENTO STRONG.

Sacramento Lodge, No. 6, which got its charter in the early days, and to which the original number was restored only recently, will travel to Los Angeles in twelve special Pullman sleepers. It will have 150 uniformed men, and in addition will bring Greer's band of thirty pieces. Sacramento lodge will bring a carload of fruit and wine. Ten thousand baskets of fruit and the same number of pint bottles of wine will be passed out to visitors at the lodge's headquarters, Hotel Lankershim.

CONIFEROUS FLAGSTAFF.

Flagstaff Lodge, No. 499 of the Elks planned an unique greeting to brothers who passed through that city on their way to Los Angeles. To each traveler who could give the grip was handed a pine cone, to which was attached by purple ribbon a tag, bearing this greeting: "Hello, Bill; Welcome to the West. Flagstaff Lodge, No. 499, a mile and a quarter high." On the tag there also were many facts pertaining to Flagstaff and its environs.

JAPANESE ENTRY.

The Japanese Association of Los Angeles will have a beautiful float in the parade of all nations, which will form the fifth division of the procession on the 16th inst. The float will illustrate events in Japanese history.

GRAND.

PACE SET FOR DECORATIONS.

EMBELLISHMENT OF STREETS IS THE FINEST EVER.

Thousands of Electric Lamps Are Used in Night Illumination, Making City Shine as Never Before. By Day, Too, There Will Be Something to See.

Sixty thousand electric lamps blaze forth a greeting to visiting Elks on their arrival in Los Angeles to attend the Grand Lodge session. This in addition to the ordinary illumination of the stores and the municipal lighting of the streets.

All the lamps of the ornamental street-lighting systems on Broadway, Hill, Main, Spring and Fifth streets will shine purple for the whole week, and there are hundreds of spans of purple and white lights across the principal business streets. In Central Park, 1000 white lamps spread their luster at night.

All of the lighting companies—the Los Angeles Gas and Electric, the Edison and the Pacific Light and Power—have a hand in the illumination, both public and private.

In preparation for the week of jubilee the lighting companies have had forces of men at work coloring lamps. In all the electroliers, purple lamps will be used, and, in addition, there will be thousands more of the same color for decoration of business houses.

Clear white lamps are dipped in purple coloring matter, and when they come out it is almost impossible to tell whether the glass has a coating on the outside or is colored in the making. After the celebration, the lamps will be dipped in an alcohol bath and thus restored to their pristine condition. The Los Angeles Gas and Electric and the other lighting companies have forces of men engaged in the task of coloring lamps, and for a few nights, at least, Los Angeles will be "all purple."

At Third and Spring streets is suspended the celebrated "Edison flag" of 1000 lamps—a perfect specimen of the Stars and Stripes in red, white and blue.

At Fifth and Spring streets the Spring-street Improvement Association displays a big emblem in which 500 lamps are used.

It is estimated that, in addition to the public decorations at night, at least 30,000 lamps are used by individuals—principally stores on the downtown streets. The Boston Store, for instance, uses 1600 lamps in its decoration.

Some people have an idea that all this illumination will put money in the coffers of the lighting companies. As a matter of fact it is said by officials of these corporations that they will lose heavily because of the celebration. They will supply power for countless thousands of lights in the downtown districts, but at the same time there will be a shutting-off of the lamps in residence sections. Weighing the whole matter, an official of one of the lighting companies said yesterday that all of the corporations would be losers on the nights of the central illumination, though, at first blush, it would appear that they would gather in bushels of shekels. The utilities companies, it is said, will receive less than $600 for "juice" furnished throughout the celebration.

Patrick Doyle is chairman of the Elks' committee that has charge of the decoration of the streets for the day celebrations. His task is quite different from that of Chairman W. G. Hutchison, who will direct the illuminations. W. M. Humphreys of the Board of Public Works is assisting Mr. Doyle in his work.

Every one of the ornamental electric light posts on Broadway, Hill, Spring, Main and Fifth streets is covered with palm fronds from the city parks. Thousands of Elks' flags in purple and white, together with an equal number of United States flags, are suspended in the main business streets. Many novel designs are be used at street intersections.

Irish Women in War.

Irish women who led the rioters at Roscommon recently recall the fact that in ancient Ireland women always went to war and fought in the front. There were also many professional female warriors or champions, such as Etaine, Aife, Brefuc and Ness (mother of Concobar MacNessa,) some of whom, like Medb or Maive, the warlike Queen of Connaught, were also great commanders. The Lady Scattiach Buanand, who was the principal teacher of the hero Cuculainn in the use of his weapons, had a sort of military academy in Scotland, where many of the great Irish chiefs received their military education.—Exchange.

WHITE "SQUAD" ONE BIG CARD.

DRILL TEAM IS PROUD ASSET OF LOCAL LODGE.

Organized Less Than a Year Ago, It Has More Applicants Than It Can Accept—Will Cut Big Figure in Caring for the Thousands of Visitors to Los Angeles.

One of the big hits of the Elks' parade will be the White Squadron of Los Angeles Lodge No. 99, which is to have a prominent part in the reception of visitors. There are more than sixty members of this squadron—commonly known as the drill team—and they play a big part in the festivities of the week.

This team was organized in September, 1908, shortly after the return of the members of the Los Angeles lodge from Dallas, where they succeeded in having Los Angeles chosen as the place for the present reunion.

Charles P. Kitts was the originator of the idea, his purpose being to form an organization that would reflect credit on the local lodge when the thousands of visitors should pour in from all sections of the country.

The suggestion was received with enthusiasm by Los Angeles members at a regular meeting of the lodge, but in response to 950 postal cards that were sent, only thirty favorable responses were received.

With this small nucleus the drill team was organized. Robert Atkinson, who had been a military instructor in the University of Kansas, and who at other times was connected with the regular army of the United States at Fort Leavenworth, was named as captain and the small body of men began drilling for service at the Elks' harvest festival of last fall, the success of which went far toward providing funds for the entertainment of visitors this year.

The fine showing made by the drill team at the festival brought out many more recruits, until finally the membership ran up to such a number that it was necessary to call a halt and to place a limit on the size of the organization. Scores now are on the waiting list for admission to the ranks.

Kitts, who was responsible for bringing the body into existence, organized the old navel reserve in Los Angeles years ago, and it is principally due to his enthusiasm that the present drill team has attained prominence. The team drills regularly each Monday and Friday evening on Grand avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, and it has become a big feature of the local lodge. It has its own quarters in the magnificent building of the order at Third and Olive streets. The nifty white uniforms will become well known to thousands in the next few days.

The officers of the squadron are as follows: Captain, Robert Atkinson; captain and adjutant, Charles P. Kitts; surgeon, Dr. Ralph Hagan; first lieutenant, M. Ray Costerisan; second lieutenant, Frank Bryson; first sergeants, G. A. Skinner, W. R. Maiden and Andrew Francisco; color sergeants, Thomas Fox and George F. Cline. Other members of the organization include: Thomas Abbott, D. L. Adams, George M. Adair, J. P. Arnoldy, Rex Belcher, William M. Boyle, H. J. Brown, E. Bellue, George E. Bahrenburg, W. Bahrenburg, George H. Burkhardt, George Bacon, Samuel T. Curson, William T. Calderwood, Joseph T. Campbell, A. W. Dunn, L. D. Gilbert, Walter J. Goldsmith, W. P. Givens, Joseph C. Goldsten, W. F. National Organization a Great Standing Army for the Spread of Good HISTORICAL.

BIRTH OF THE ELKS' LODGE AND ITS SUBSEQUENT LIFE.

Early Days of the Formation of the Order; How It Came Into Being and Details of the Work of Over Forty Years, in Which the Growth Has Been Tremendous.

FROM a little bunch of good fellows who gathered in New York a little more than forty years ago the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks has grown into a great national organization, with nearly 1200 lodges and a total membership of about 325,000. It is among the largest of the fraternal organizations of the United States, and its rapid growth in the last few years is proof of its wide popularity.

Authentic data gathered by historians of the order show that it had its origin with a goup of singers, dancers and entertainers in New York in 1867. These men were engaged in giving concerts in the lower end of the metropolis, and the desire for a central place of meeting, where all could get together and enjoy themselves, led to the formation of an organization that was known at first as the "Free and Easies."

This organization made a hit at once among professional men—principally actors—and a new name was chosen—"The Jolly Corks." There was a good deal of conviviality at the meetings of this crowd, but it was not long before some of the more serious members reached the conclusion that a benevolent scheme could be developed through which much good might be done.

NAMING OF ORDER.

At first there was opposition to this plan, but in the end it won, and the Committee on Permanent Organization finally chose the name that now is borne by the order. On February 16, 1868, the organization came into being, and almost simultaneously it was decreed that none but Americans should be members. No lines are drawn as to the religious beliefs of members. The Star Spangled banner covers the altar in every lodgeroom throughout the country. No lodge may be started legally outside United States territory.

The first lodge was instituted in New York City on May 24, 1868, and the ritual then in effect remained in force for about twenty-five years. Another ritual was adopted at the Detroit Grand Lodge in 1892, and this remained in effect until the ritual now in force was adopted at Philadelphia two years ago. A new constitution and bylaws, adopted at the Denver Grand Lodge in 1906, took effect immediately after the Philadelphia meeting.

New York Lodge, No. 1, of which W. Lloyd Bowron, now of Los Angeles, was the first member, remained in absolute possession of the field for nearly three years—until March of 1871, when No. 2 was instituted at Philadelphia. From that time there was nothing doing until April of 1876, when Lodge No. 3 was formed at San Francisco. In the same year Chicago and Cincinnati organized lodges, and in the following year Sacramento came into the family, California thus being the first State in the Union to have two lodges. Sacramento, originally No. 6 in the list of lodges, was forced for a long time to be known as No. 328, but at the Dallas Grand Lodge the original number was restored.

ONE LODGE IN A CITY.

San Francisco had organized a second lodge, and this for a long time was known as Golden Gate, No. 6, but this eventually was disbanded—no city being permitted to have more than one lodge.

The real boom of the Elks began in 1882. Up to that time, for a period of nearly fifteen years, the organization had been confined to actors, writers and other professional men. This was due, in great part, to the fact that Charles A. Vivian, an entertainer, and son of an English clergyman, had really started the order. Vivian and W. Lloyd Bowron, "No. 1 of No. 1," who now is in Los Angeles, set things going with the "Jolly Corks," out of which grew the present magnificent fraternal organization.

Of the original members of the "Jolly Corks" only six now are known to be living. They are Bowron, Richard R. Steirly of Hoboken, N. J.; John T. Kent of Jersey City, N. J.; Harry Bosworth, Astoria, L. I.; John H. Bloom, New York City, and Frank Langhorn, Plainfield, N. J.

For many years the Grand Lodge meetings were held in New York City, but Cleveland finally captured the honor in 1890. The New York lodge was so peeved that it did not attend the convention, and there was bitterness for three years, until the meeting at Detroit in 1892, when New York again resumed its standing in the order.

FIGHT OVER MEETING PLACE.

In the following year there was a dispute between the Grand Exalted Ruler and the Grand Board of Trustees, as to the place of meeting. One Grand Lodge gathering was held at Jamestown, N. Y., and the other at Atlantic City, N. J. At the Jamestown meeting Meade D. Detweiler was selected as Grand Exalted Ruler, and at Atlantic City Edwin B. Hay was selected for the same position.

For a year there was warring among the factions, but in 1896 Detweiler admitted defeat and surrendered to Hay of Washington, D. C., since which time there have been no differences in the national organization.

In its existence the order has made woderful progress. The membership of 325,000 in about 1200 lodges has property under the organization name to the value of more than $16,000,000, and in charity it dispenses more than half a million dollars each year.

There is very little of the mystical about the order. It has a simple ritual, but no grip or pass word. It is one of the tenets that the faults of brothers shall be written on the sands, while their virtues are inscribed on imperishable tablets of love and memory. The only real secret, it is stated, is the list of persons to whom charity is extended.

THE QUALIFICATIONS.

Membership qualifications are that applicants be white male citizens of the age of 21 years or more, of good moral reputation, and with a residence of at least six months within the jurisdiction of the lodge to which he seeks admission.

On the first Sunday in December of each year every lodge of Elks throughout the United States conducts a "Lodge of Sorrow" for departed brethren, and on June 14 of each year "Flag Day" is observed with patriotic ceremonies.

One of the secrets of Elkdom, unknown to outsiders, has to do with the clock emblem, on which the hands always point to the hour of 11 o'clock. Elks throughout the United States spend a few moments in contemplation of the deeds of absent and departed brothers.

In connection with the national organization a home is maintained at Bedford City, Va., for aged members of the order. More than $20,000 is expended annually at this home, and its work is constantly growing.

ROLL OF GRAND OFFICERS.

The roll of officers of the Elks since the organization of the order, including the present, is as follows:

Charles A. L. Vivian, founder and first presiding officer of the first crude Elk lodge.

'PHONES FOR ALL.

Fifteen Trunk Lines of Each Company Connect Elks' Headquarters With Two Big Systems.

Thirty telephone trunk lines connect the headquarters of the Elks in the Phillips Block, Franklin and Spring streets, with the systems of the Sunset and Home companies, assuring opportunity for plenty of talk. Each telephone company has gone into the game with the intention of furnishing every possible convenience to the public, and the wires are bound to hum from this time forth.

Owing to the temporary nature of the headquarters, neither company has been able to assign a number, but persons who desire information may get it by calling on either line for the Elks' registration bureau.

Those who have the automatic telephones of the Home company will be obliged to call first the operator at "Central," then stating that they wish the Elks' headquarters. On the Sunset line, the call simply will be for the same headquarters.

A. M. Taylor, St. Augustine, Fla. grand inner guard.
Thomas B. Mills, Superior, Wis. grand trustee
Edward Leach, New York, grand trustee.
Rush L. Holland, grand exalted ruler
Raymond Benjamin, Napa, Cal., grand esquire.
Warren G. Sayre, Wabash, Ind. grand esteemed lecturing knight.
Chas L Decker, Minneapolis, grand tyler.

LOS ANGELES LODGE HISTORY TELLS OF CONSTANT GROWTH.

From Thirty-three Members a Little More Than Twenty Years Ago the Total Now Has Expanded to More Than One Thousand—Some of the Difficulties of the Early Days.

LOS ANGELES LODGE, No. 99, B. P.O.E., was organized in the summer of 1888, two members of Denver Lodge, No. 17, Perry, by name, who were then conducting a vaudeville house on North Main street, near the old Pico House, obtaining the list of signers. Within a few days more than fifty names had been signed to the call for the organization of the lodge. This list bore the names of men who were prominent in the arts and professions, and of others who were prominent in the life of the city.

Under a dispensation from the Grand Lodge at New York, the local lodge took formal shape on September 2, 1888, at the old Pythian Castle, No. 118 [illegible] Spring street. W. C. Dudley, Exalted Ruler of Golden Gate Lodge No. 6, of San Francisco, acting representative of the Grand Lodge, had the dispensation from the Grand Lodge, together with many letters approving the formation of a lodge in this city. He also installed the officers. Theodore Summerland, a member of the State Railroad [illegible], was put in as Exalted Ruler. Elks from Washington, D. C., [illegible], Mansfield and Chillicothe, [illegible] and Indianapolis assisted at the installation.

LOW RATES THEN.

[illegible] the charter fees were [illegible] the yearly dues were $6.50. [illegible] costs $100 to join the lodge [illegible] are $12 a year. There is [illegible] difference between what [illegible] get then and what they get [illegible].

[illegible] members joined the [illegible] at the start. After they had [illegible] the mill a banquet was [illegible]. This was looked upon as a big [illegible] Los Angeles, which at that [illegible] a population of only about [illegible].

[illegible] 1888, Los Angeles Lodge [illegible] into quarters that had [illegible] for them by McLain and [illegible] at No. [illegible] South Main street. [illegible] under the dispensation, I. [illegible] of Monrovia, was elected [illegible].

[illegible] 1888, the Grand Lodge [illegible] charter for Los Angeles [illegible] and on May 25 of the following [illegible] ("Jim") Meredith, one [illegible] of Los Angeles county [illegible] of the State Supreme [illegible] installed as Exalted Ruler. [illegible] Grand Exalted Ruler [illegible] an official visit to the [illegible].

CLARK'S REIGN.

[illegible] year, on March 29, [illegible] Clark of the Los Angeles County Superior Court (now deceased) was installed as Exalted Ruler. This was at the fag end of the "boom," and everybody was hard pressed for ready money. Because of financial troubles the lodge sold its furniture and effects in April, 1891, for $750, and paid some of its indebtedness. In the following month the lodge removed to McDonald Hall, No. 127 North Main street, to rooms over the establishment conducted now by C. F. A. Last, and here, on Sunday afternoons, the Elks held weekly meetings, paying a rental of $4 a day for use of the quarters.

About the middle of April, 1892, there were only fifty-three members of the local lodge in good standing. Frank Holtzlander, now deceased, was installed as Exalted Ruler, and one year later E. V. Naud was placed in the same position.

In February of the following year—1894—the lodge returned to its former quarters, in the McLain and Lehman Hall, on South Main street. At that time there was serious consideration of a proposal to drop the Los Angeles charter. District Deputy Eugene Daney, who attended some of the meetings, persuaded the local members to give up this idea, and he finally won.

There was revived enthusiasm in the next month; there was $162.95 in the treasury, and the members promptly reëlected Judge Clark as Exalted Ruler.

FLEMING GOES IN.

One year later Dr. E. W. Fleming was installed as Exalted Ruler. At this time there were fifty-six members, with $125.10 in the treasury.

In March of 1896, Judge W. A. Ryan, now deceased, was installed as Exalted Ruler. Then there were seventy members, and $336.45 in the treasury.

On April 7, 1897, Dr. W. F. Kennedy became Exalted Ruler. He found a membership of eighty, and $174.60 in the treasury.

John E. Brink became Exalted Ruler of the lodge on April 6, 1898, when there was a membership of 138, with $978 in the treasury. Things were "looking up," and the Elks took on a new lease of life. At the end of Brink's term there was a net gain of eight in the membership, while the money balance showed $2724.25, at the report of which there was, of course, much jubilation.

In March of 1899, the lodge then being prosperous, a hunt was instituted for new quarters. A committee appointed to look into the situation reported that "any locality south of Fifth street was too far from civilization," recommending a lease for five years of Music Hall, on South Spring street, between Second and Third, adjoining what is now the Orpheum, but which in those days was the Los Angeles Theater. These quarters, accordingly, were leased, and, until the completion of the fine new buildings at Third and Olive streets, they afforded a home for the Los Angeles Elks.

DUES ARE RAISED.

During Brink's administration the dues were raised to $12 a year. Brink was honored with the appointment of District Deputy by Grand Exalted Ruler Fanning for the term ending in June, 1904.

Thomas J. Darmody became Exalted Ruler of Los Angeles Lodge in April, 1899, and in June of the same year the lodge moved into its new quarters at No. 231 South Spring street—the Music Hall. The membership jumped to 362 and the cash on hand reached the total of $1511.40. Pretty fine.

Then, in 1900, came John G. Mott as Exalted Ruler, and right after he took office the Elks held a country fair and street parade, from which a goodly sum was netted.

Mott's administration was so successful that he was reëlected for a second term as Exalted Ruler. In his first year there was a gain of ninety-one members.

In June of 1901 the life membership fee was raised to $200, and the initiation fee to $50. During this term the local lodge was incorporated under the laws of California, and there was a gain of 112 in the enrollment, making a total membership of 545.

YOUNG INSTALLED.

A year later—in 1902—Milton K. Young was installed as Exalted Ruler, and it was during his term that the first Elks' Building Association was incorporated. Seventy-eight new members were added during the year, making a total of 623.

In April of 1903 Byron Erkenbrecher was installed as Exalted Ruler, and in the ensuing year there was a gain of sixty-five members, making a total of 698. Getting to be a pretty husky organization by this time!

One year later—in 1904—Dr. Ralph Hagan was installed as Exalted Ruler, and about the same time there was a visit from Grand Exalted Ruler Fanning and Past Grand Exalted Ruler Detweiler. A month after Dr. Hagan went into office Grand Exalted Ruler Pickett, who had succeeded Fanning, visited the lodge. The initiation fee of the local lodge was raised in October of 1904 to $100, and about the same time the lodge bought the lot at the northwest corner of Fifth and Olive streets, paying $50,000 therefor. This was the contemplated site of the new Elks' building and it was looked upon as a bargain at the price.

HONORS FOR HAGAN.

During the Hagan administration the fee for life memberships was raised to $400 and the yearly dues to $24. Hagan was honored by appointment to the position of District Deputy by Grand Exalted Ruler Brown, for the term ending in July, 1906. During the year in which Hagan was at the head of the lodge there was a gain of ninety-three in membership, making a total of 731.

In April, 1905, Frank Bryson was installed as Exalted Ruler. Forty-one new members were added, but deaths and removals cut the total gain down to two. At this period the yearly dues were reduced to the old figure of $12.

One year later, in 1906, Byron L. Oliver, lately deceased, was installed as Exalted Ruler. Grand Exalted Ruler Henry A. Melvin of Oakland, now a Justice of the California Supreme Court, made his first official visit to the local lodge during the Oliver administration. For the year there was a total gain of twenty-two members, bringing the roster up to 805.

LODGE SELLS LOT.

In the same year the Elks' Building Association sold its equity in the lot at Olive and Fifth streets and paid the lodge $31,937.50 for its share therein, a profit of $7637.50. Thereupon the building association was disincorporated and the lodge was the gainer in the amount named.

A little later—in December, 1906,—having realized such fine returns from one investment, the lodge decided to try it again, and the Crocker mansion, at Third and Olive streets, was purchased for $48,000. A new building association to erect and furnish a suitable home for the Elks was incorporated in December, 1906, and within a few weeks thereafter the ritual adopted at the Grand Lodge at Denver went into effect.

Will Stephens was installed as Exalted Ruler in April, 1907, and his "Sunny Jim" smile brought an addition of twenty-four members to the lodge, carying the total to 829. During the Stephens administration the lodge contracted with Architect Frank D. Hudson and F. O. Engstrum & Co., as builders, to erect the new building at Third and Olive streets. The consideration was placed at $110,000, but it exceeded this amount considerably.

This building was completed within the last few months, and it is believed that visiting Elks will pronounce it the finest of its kind in the country.

FEES REDUCED.

In August of 1907 the local lodge reduced the fee for life membership from $400 to $200, for a period of two months expiring in February, 1908. The result of this was that there was a big increase in life memberships.

In March, 1907, the local lodge bought at the Inglewood Cemetery 7500 square feet for burial purposes.

In January, 1908, the lodge held its most successful smoker, under the direction of Otto H. Schons. As a result of this entertainment more than $3000 was turned into the orphans' fund.

By this time the Elks had become a power in Los Angeles. Anything they touched seem to turn to gold; the explanation was that the people had come to look upon the organization as the most practical of its kind, and all it had to do was to "start something" in order to get what it wanted.

M'GARRY'S RULE.

In April of 1908 M. J. McGarry was installed as Exalted Ruler, and three months later the celebrated "Boosters' Club" was started for the meeting of the Grand Lodge at Dallas, the result being that we are to have the gathering in Los Angeles this year, though it is considered wonderful that the big Southwest should get the meeting two years in succession.

On the return of the boosters there was held an "effervescent symposium" under the direction of Mr. Schons. After that, on September 2, 1908, the twentieth anniversary of the formation of the lodge, the corner-stone of the new lodge building at Third and Olive streets was laid with appropriate ceremonies. This ceremony was held at 11 o'clock at night, in charge of John Whicher of San Luis Obispo, District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler. At that time there were about 900 members in the lodge.

Later came the elevation of Leo V. Youngworth to the position of Exalted Ruler. Since then the lodge has gone into its new home, the finest in the country, and the membership has reached a total of something more than one thousand. It now is one of the biggest lodges in the United States.

COMFORT FOR THE LADIES.

Rest rooms for ladies are provided at various places throughout the city, where visitors will be afforded every attention during Grand Lodge week. At various stores, The Times offices, and Elks' headquarters there will be "open house" for the ladies. The list of rest places is as follows:

The Times building, First and Broadway; Security Savings Bank, Fifth and Spring streets; Bullock's, Seventh and Broadway; Elks' Hall, Third and Olive streets; Hamburger's, Eighth and Broadway; Harris & Frank, No. 437 South Spring street; Coulter's, No. 225 South Broadway; Ville de Paris, No. 317 South Broadway; N. B. Blackstone, No. 318 South Broadway; J. R. Lane, No. 327 South Broadway; Emil Firth, No. 319 West Fourth street; The Times Free Information Bureau and Branch Office, Nos. 531-533 South Spring street; Official Headquarters, Registration, Information, Validation, Postoffice, North Spring street, corner Franklin.

This story would seem to show that colored people have tough heads:

Dinah, crying bitterly, was coming down the street with her feet bandaged.

"Why, what on earth's the matter?" she was asked. "How did you hurt your feet, Dinah?"

"Dat good fo' nothin' nigger (sniffle) done hit me on de head wid a club while I was standin' on de hard stone pavement."—[Everybody's Magazine.

ALL NEWS OF ELKS' WEEK.

"The Times" on Last Day of Celebration Will Publish Complete Chronicle.

On the last day of the week's celebration by the Elks in Los Angeles, The Times will publish in one complete number the news of all of the important features of the Grand Lodge, reviewing in detail the events of the days of gaiety. Every item of concern to the thousands of visitors in the city during that period will appear in the issue mentioned, and the paper, as announced, will be a valuable chronicle of all that has gone before in connection with this visit of the Elks of the United States. This number of The Times will be of extreme value to the members of the big fraternal organization, as well as to all other visitors, and it is planned to make of it a history of the meeting that can be had from no other source in similar form.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Nomad.

I wish my pa en ma would find
Sum place they like en settle down;
I'm purty sick uv movin' vans
En livin' everywhere in town.
Fer just about the time the kids
With which a feller wants to play
Look in en say, "Who's that new kid?"
By Joe, we up en move away.

En when the neighborhood is got
A gang of boys you bet your boots
You can't get in with 'em right off—
They've got to know all new recruits,
En fight with 'em, en look 'em up,
To find out if they'll do or nay;
En just about when I'm to pass,
By hokey poke, we move away.

But what is sadder still is that
This always movin' ev'rywheres
Deprives a boy of what his heart
Most craves, en that is love affairs.
If haply he lights near a maid
Whose love for his is all too plain,
En bliss is right around the bend—
Why, there is where we move again.

Contentment.

I sing the song of contentment, the joy of a placid mind;
Of a nature overflowing with love for all mankind.
I sing a wise preferment—the dinner of bread and herbs—
With a tranquil breast and a soul at rest and a brain that no care disturbs.

I sing the peace of discernment 'twixt plenty and overplus;
The calm of the poor surroundings, sans the tumult and noise and fuss.
I sing the bliss of effacement, the joy of the unconcerned,
While the greedy toil for more meed of spoil and the fuel of life is burned.

I sing the song of allotment—the measure of good one needs;
The wisdom of world adjustment that he that is wisest heeds.
I sing the song of fulfillment—the reaping of all one sows—
The nondesire to go farther, higher than the goal that one's talent knows.

WHY

Corcoran is a Success

Corcoran's success is the result of a wealth of natural resources brought to their present high state of development by an investment of over $2,000,000.00 in the purchase and improvement of lands extending about 23 miles along the main line of the Santa Fe. Nothing of a "boom" nature has entered into this growth. The careful, conservative and reliable methods of its management have won the confidence of the public, and the result is a community of wide-awake progressive farmers whose success is a living proof of the merits of all the claims made for Corcoran.

CORCORAN LANDS ARE RICH AND PRODUCTIVE.

The soil is a rich alluvial deposit, practically level, easily cultivated at all seasons of the year, and among the most productive in the United States. No stones, brush or cactus.

CORCORAN WATER SUPPLY IS ABUNDANT AND SURE.

Over 40 flowing wells developed on lands controlled by this Company prove this to be one of the very best artesian sections. Sub-irrigated at from 7 to 9 feet. Pumping water in seemingly inexhaustible quantities can be secured from wells 60 to 200 feet deep, at moderate cost, as the lift is only from 12 to 22 feet.

Many ranchers rely on one deep flowing well to irrigate from 160 to 320 acres.

CORCORAN HAS NATURAL GAS WELLS.

On a large portion of the lands at a cost of about $200 can be secured a well which will FLOW sufficient water to irrigate about 10 acres, together with natural gas for heat, light and fuel. Both FLOW from the same well without injuring the valuable qualities of either. The gas is odorless, sootless and non-poisonous. One gas well has been flowing water and gas for 19 years.

CORCORAN HAS EXCEPTIONAL RAILROAD FACILITIES.

The transcontinental line of the Santa Fe runs directly through almost the entire length of these lands, and a junction with the Southern Pacific connects at Corcoran. No lands more than 5 miles from a shipping point. About midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, assuring ready competitive markets.

CORCORAN DAIRIES PAY BIG PROFITS.

These lands are unsurpassed for the raising of alfalfa, the basis for the stock, cattle and dairy industry. Level land, rich soil, abundant water supply, and equable climate make the conditions for profitable stock raising and dairying ideal.

CORCORAN SUGAR BEETS

the last two years made a world's record. The sugar beet crop in the Corcoran district in 1907 and 1908 averaged over 21 per cent. sugar, which is said to be the highest ever known for an entire section. The Pacific Sugar Co. of Los Angeles has completed a million-dollar beet sugar plant in Corcoran, which will handle the beets from thousands of acres now planted in the vicinity. The factory is reinforced concrete, main portion 4 stories in height, and one of the most complete and up to date in the world.

CORCORAN IS A RAISIN DISTRICT.

Vineyards near Corcoran which have been heavy and profitable producers for years prove these lands to be as well adapted to raisin grape culture as any in the San Joaquin Valley. Hundreds of acres planted more recently at Corcoran give promise of equal success.

CORCORAN LANDS RAISE ASPARAGUS.

The Lewis Asparagus and Fruit Company has 640 acres near Corcoran, a large portion of which is planted to asparagus, which is one of the highest priced and most profitable vegetables in the world. The climatic conditions at Corcoran are pronounced by experts to be exceptionally favorable to the early and prolific culture of asparagus, and the high quality of asparagus and profits for the crop harvested this year bear out this opinion.

Join one of our excursions and see for yourself the extensive alfalfa fields and profit-paying dairies and creamery. Inspect the numerous flowing water and gas wells and the pumping plants, the broad acres of grain, sugar beets, potatoes, asparagus, vineyards and other growing crops. See the thriving new town with its brick buildings, new $20,000 R.R. depot, piped water system, electric lights, school, churches, creamery, stores and million-dollar beet sugar plant. Consider that three years ago this was raw prairie, and you will be impressed with the opportunities offered in this new and growing section.

TALK WITH THE CORCORAN FARMER.

Let him tell you of the productiveness of the soil, the healthful climate, the abundant, pure, certain water supply, and the money-making opportunities at Corcoran. See for yourself the cheapest land in the State considering the many natural resources and the immense sums expended and being expended in developments.

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

A trip to Corcoran will in every way substantiate the claims made for it. If you do not find it all or even more than represented, your trip will cost you nothing. If you are looking for a home, for a farm, for a safe and profitable investment, it is to your interest to investigate.

MONEY MAKERS AND SPENDERS.

is a fact that there exists a prejudice in the minds many against men who make money in large sums. This feeling is bitter in some minds. The strangest about it is that the feeling is directed more against who make money than against those who inherit The prejudice we speak of centers its strength on men like Rockefeller, Harriman and Morgan and away from those like Howard Gould and Regi- Vanderbilt.

question is not out of the way when we ask this is. Men of the first type get their money as a of doing something which makes for the benefit of world at large. Taking the worst estimate of the Oil Company for which there is even decent evidence, yet there is a large credit to be that giant organization for good we all have re- from the improvement in lighting our dwellings other ways because of the discoveries and inven- of those who have brought the crude-oil business a scale of perfection. Men such as the first accomplish much while making their money which life is made easier for us all.

is it a fact that such men set great store by money money's sake. Money is not the object of their am- It is only a means to an end greater than

Vanderbilt began in a small way running a boat from the Battery, at the lower end of New to Staten Island. It was a useful occupation, and gainful in a small way. The savings were taken sea-going vessels which also were an advantage public. With the partial perfection of the loco- this capable business man saw railroads would The Hudson River Railroad followed, the New York Central under the able management of the elder Vanderbilt. Each step of progress made his life more valuable to the rest of us

He never set great store by money, nor forgot his humble origin. To the end he was the most democratic of men, and never assumed superior airs in the presence of those in his employ because he was richer than they, he the paymaster and they the hired men.

James J. Hill is the same type of man. So was Jay Gould. Andrew Carnegie and J. P. Morgan are men of great achievement first, and money is only a means toward ends by which the world is advanced in civilization and by which wealth is developed by which we all live in greater comfort. Abraham Hewitt, Peter Cooper and others only made the inventions of Stephenson and Fulton possible of application and extended the application to fields as wide as the world in which all men may reap part of the benefits. All these men were plainly democratic in their intercourse with other men, and recognized the usefulness of the humblest laborer in his field as a necessary chain in the great line of events by which their achievements were carried out to completion. They used all the money that came into their hands to make life easier and more comfortable for all their fellows.

The other type represented by the spendthrift sons or grandsons of these men of achievement is very different. They are not democratic. They are full of pretense of superiority based on wealth they did not make, and of which they make no good use. Their ambitions are all ignoble, their manners are snobbish, their lives grossly selfish. They advance the progress of the world no step in any direction. They are not only spendthrifts, idlers and purse-proud, but they are debauchees as a general rule. Of no use in advancing the material progress of the world, they are a detriment to their race in the corrupting influence of their lives and examples. They make a vulgar, ostentatious display of the money which came to them by accident and which they use on their own selfish pleasure.

Yet you hear a hundred criticisms aimed at the men who use money to further the interests of mankind for the one aimed at those who live for their own enjoyment.

The feeling is bitter against the men of democratic plainness of life and manner, and tolerant of those vapid snobs who assume such airs of superiority, passing idle lives and spending their money as well as wasting their energies in debauching their fellows in one way or another.

It is difficult to reason out why men like old Commodore Vanderbilt should be looked upon with disfavor and Reginald Vanderbilt be excused for his vulgarity, pretensions and debauchery. Why do so many regard John D. Rockefeller as a monster of iniquity, who look upon Howard Gould as a "good fellow"? Is it because there is much socialistic virus in our minds?

SAVING NEW YORK.

WHEN THE MINISTERS GO AWAY THE EVANGELICAL COMMITTEE DOES GREAT WORK.

[Mabel P. Daggett, in Delineator:] The Evangelical Committee of Greater New York has started its annual summer campaign. Representatives from eight denominations of the city churches constitute its membership. This will be the fifth year of the work. The movement is unique among evangelistic efforts. Many men have been moved to exhort New York to righteousness. Dwight L. Moody used every now and then to swing around here in his circuit with a warning cry against the modern Babylon, and in a whirlwind revival at Cooper Union or the Grand Central Palace bring sinners by the hundred sobbing to repentance. "New York is the most godless city of a continent," some ten years ago exclaimed the Rev. Thomas Dixon, the young Don Quixote at the head of his People's Church, riding full tilt against the stronghold of Tammany Hall. "It is the city of Satan. We will take it for God," said Dowie, who led his Restoration Hosts in a spectacular invasion, ultimately emptying all the vials of his wrath in Madison Square Garden. "New York is the wickedest city on earth, except Paris," says the Rev. L. G. Broughton, who periodically comes from Atlanta, Ga., to lash the metropolis for its flaunting cafés and its lethargic churches. Even an Indian came not long ago. "The way for New York to be good is to worship the sun," said Wounded Elk of the Yaquis.

New York is the greatest missionary field in the world. Everybody with a message brings it here. None has read it deeper into the lives of the community than the summer gospel workers. It started with the discovery announced one spring at a religious meeting: New York is not absent in summer. New York is here in summer. Comparatively few of the people go away—among those few the clergy. There began the movement for an open Bible in New York in the summer time. Let the churches close. Only one-third of the population ever enters them, anyhow. Take the preaching to the people in the out-of-doors. To arrange for this they formed the Evangelical Committee. Its treasurer is John S. Huyler, the famous candy manufacturer. Its active propaganda is under the direction of a superintendent, Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Smith. With this organization in the field, the regular preachers now take their summer vacation with a clear conscience.

Her Arithmetic.

The Call

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

And I shall say to my soul, Soul . . . take thine ease.—[The Gospel according to St. Luke, xii, 19.

The laughing whispers of the breeze
Go softly through the forest trees,
The drifting shadows, dark and cool,
Play hide and seek across the pool—
But through it all the breeze brings word
Of haunts that know no song of bird,
Of barren alleys in the town
Where all the day the sun beats down,
Of blurring, waving lines of heat
That float along the narrow street.

The road leads up the solemn hill,
And at the top the air is still,
And one may look o'er field and wood
And know that all the world is good—
But still he knows that far beyond
The streets still hold their slaves in bond;
That men benumbed of wrong and right
Give of their strength to make the spoil
That some win on the field of toil.

But here all through the dreaming day
Go children laughing at their play,
Go children singing blithe and free
As any careless bird and bee—
And through the songs these children sing
Come chords that have a sullen ring,
Come strains that sob from little lips,
The pain of aching finger tips,
The weariness of heart and brain
Of them that tread the path of pain.

And so it goes by east or west
Wherever we may seek for rest,
Wherever through the world we fare
The undertones of grief are there.
Across the vineclad hills there come
Mirages of the distant slum,
And with each playing child there runs
Some of toil's captive little ones—
And through it ever sounds the call
That we are brothers one and all.

THE SEEKER.

When shall I cease to take delight
In forms of transient grace—
Will-o'-the-wisps that all the night
Flicker before my face!

O sometime shall I not be less
A creature of desire,
With gain of autumn happiness
For loss of April fire?

Nay, I was sent to wander far
On desperate quest and lone,
To follow wind and bird and star
And cloud forever flown!

And all these forms so frail and fleet—
Whereafter run tonight
My weary and enamored feet,—
They are the garment bright,

The flying glance, the floating hair,
The call and cry of One
This flesh shall see not, though I fare
Onward from sun to sun.

TREASURE.

Be merry while you may,
Sweet lady o' the morn,
For each rose has its day,
And every night its thorn.

Laugh while your youth is fair,
Dance while the sun is bright,
Ere comes the evening care,
The trouble of the night—

So, were it time at last
For you and joy to part,
The dusk would glow with past
Stored sunshine from your heart.

Port Arthur in 1909. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE GREAT MONUMENT.

MEMORIAL THE JAPANESE ARE ERECTING IN HONOR OF THEIR DEAD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PORT ARTHUR (Manchuria) 1909.—I spent this morning on Quail Hill, where the Japanese are erecting a memorial in honor of their heroes who died at Port Arthur. This hill is a saddle-shaped elevation which rises to a height of a thousand or more feet out of the arena of the amphitheater in which Port Arthur is located. It faces the narrow entrance to the harbor where the Japanese and Russian gunboats showered shells upon one another, and about it may be seen the hills forming the rim of the amphitheater upon which were the fortifications taken one by one by the Japanese during the siege.

Quail Hill from now on will be called Monument Hill. It is a fitting site to mark the glorious victory of the soldiers of the Mikado. It overlooks Golden Hill and the Tiger's Tail, which with their fortifications protect the harbor entrance, and it is the first elevation to be seen coming in from the sea.

It is right upon its top that the monument is now going up. A great temple of silver gray granite, it will be about 300 feet high and will cost almost $200,000. The stone for it is coming by the shipload from Shimonoseki, Japan, and hundreds of huge granite blocks are now scattered about the harbor and at the foot of the hill. Many of them are as large as a library table, and not a few weigh several tons each. A cable road has been constructed from the harbor to the site of the monument, and a steam engine drags up the blocks on low cars.

The monument is already about one-third completed. The pedestal has been finished and the first series of Ionic columns erected. The scaffolding about the structure can be seen for miles around Port Arthur, and the monument will command both land and sea. When I visited it today, 200 Chinese masons were chiseling at the stones and the great blocks were rapidly rising into place. The work is being done by Manchurian-Chinese, under Japanese overseers.

Twenty-two Thousand Heroes.

I have visited the world's most famous monuments from the mighty shaft to Washington, which rises from the base of the Potomac in our own capital city and the great sarcophagus of Napoleon in Paris, to the gigantic boulders on the Rhodesian Hills, which mark the grave of Cecil Rhodes, but I have seen nothing so impressive as this. At one end of the mighty elevation stands the monument; and at the other end, perhaps 800 feet distant, is a Shinto shrine of this same silver gray granite, under which lie the bones of more than 22,000 Japanese heroes, who were killed at Port Arthur. The platform upon which the shrine stands is reached through a great copper bronze torii; and at each side of the latter is a granite lantern, like those one sees at Nikko and about the other shrines of Japan. The stone platform must be more than 100 feet square, although the shrine itself is comparatively small. These two monuments cover the whole top of the hill. They are reached by military roads, which wind their way up the mountain, and also by steps for foot passengers.

The Battleships of Port Arthur.

Come with me to the foot of the monument and take a birdseye view of the battlefields of Port Arthur, as they lie here in this quiet year of our Lord, 1909. We are right in the midst of the amphitheater in which, for eight months, day and night, went on the greatest gladiatorial show the world has yet known. Just under us is the harbor which was filled with the Russian gunboats; and on its shores are the old and new towns which were occupied by the soldiers during the siege. On that sea, outside, lay the blockading Japanese squadron sending its shrieking shells at the ships and the city. On the hills all about us were Russian soldiers, and on their opposite sides, the Japanese armies, crawling and plowing and tunneling their way to the forts. The story of how, inch by inch, every bit of the ground was fought over, and how at last Japan was successful has been told in song and story; and you may find it today in the books describing the war. I doubt, however, whether any such story can show the real wonders of the defense and attack; or the heroism of both bodies of troops.

The country about here is much like the bare hills of Montana or Colorado. It is dry and thirsty. There is no vegetation except scanty grass, with here and there a bit of scrub oak. The fighting was all in the open, and the fortifications had to be thrown up out of rock, gravel and disintegrated stone. The tunnels, made by the Japanese, were not through earth, but through rock, and in undermining the forts they could go but a few feet a day. Nevertheless, while overlooking these hills, one sees scores of miles of such trenches. The work on the embankments reminds you of the great Chinese wall, and the hundred miles and more of military roads which the Russians built to reach their various fortifications impress one with the vast sums which they spent, all in vain. Their forts were of concrete, reinforced with iron, and they embrace a circle of more than ten miles. They made Port Arthur the strongest fortress ever besieged.

Today all of the forts erected for land defense are in ruins. The Japanese do not intend to repair them, and the only work they are doing is upon those facing the sea. They have added to and strengthened the fortresses on Golden Hill and the Tigers Tail, and they prohibit strangers from visiting the battlefields along the coast.

As to the other parts of Port Arthur one may go anywhere, provided he leaves his camera at home. There are scores of droschkies which were brought in by the Russians, and are now owned by Chinese. These are hauled by little Manchurian ponies, and they will take you all over the country at 25 cents an hour or for a little more than $2 a day.

Mother Earth's Face Pockmarked.

During my stay here I have visited many of the battlefields and have tramped over the hills where the greatest fighting took place. The grounds are scarred by shot and the face of old Mother Earth has been pockmarked by the siege. The shells were thrown everywhere, and some of them went deep into the ground. As soon as the fighting was over, the Chinese by the thousands swarmed over the landscape and gathered up every bit of lead and iron in sight. They even dug up shells. Often they would find one which had not exploded, and would innocently pound on the cap with a pick. The result was another big hole in the ground and the almond-eyed diggers scattered over the landscape in pieces.

Today it is difficult to find large chunks of shell, though there are innumerable bits of iron about the forts, as well as all sorts of relics of the Japanese and Russians. There are army buttons, torn caps and and pieces of the barbed wire, which, charged with electricity, entangled the soldiers as they climbed the and burned them to death. I saw rotting sandbags and tattered leather coats worn by the Russians here and there about one of the forts, and I picked up a p of splinters from the shells which the Japanese had thrown.

The Horrors of War.

The terrors of the siege are shown by the museum at Port Arthur. The government has collected relics the various battlefields and placed them in a big building outside the old town. They have made models of the forts, which show the devilish ingenuity that both the Japanese and Russians used in destroying one another. There are great coils of the barbed wire which was scattered over the hillsides. The wire was connected with powerful batteries inside the fortifications, and such soldiers as blundered against it in the dark were sure to be killed. There were twenty kinds of hand grenades filled with nitroglycerin. They look like miners' lamps, but when thrown they really lit the way to death.

The Japanese had wooden guns, ten or twelve inches in diameter, which they carried with them into the trenches. Their projectiles for these were cans of Shimose powder holding from a pint to two quarts, and they caused terrible destruction. They had also squares of deal boards which were buried a few inches below the surface. Attached to these were tubes of acids so connected by wires that they exploded as the troops stepped on the boards, throwing a whole company into the air.

Here also are the mines which were used on land and sea. These are acorn-shaped iron shells as big as a bushel basket, which would blow up a ship at sea or destroy a company or a regiment upon land.

The museum has every kind of shell, from some as high as one's shoulder down to little fellows the size of your finger. It has Japanese flags which the Russians used to entice their enemies within reach of their guns, and a Japanese kite which they used to test the wind before sending up their balloons. It has pieces of silk which they employed during the latter part of the siege to make sandbags, and steel picks of all kinds, from new ones, fresh from the stores, down to some which are worn to the length of one's thumb by digging the rocks in the fort tunnels.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting.

Much of the fighting was hand-to-hand. In tunneling into the forts, the Japanese and the Russians were often close to one another, and they remained so for days, separated only by ramparts of sandbags. As I looked at one of the forts, a Japanese officer pointed out a tunnel in which he said he had fought for several days with his fellows, the Russians being on the other side of the wall, so close that the troops could hear one another talk. Said the officer:

"We joked with each other, using one of our men as an interpreter, and we even passed brandy and tobacco over the sand bags."

"How did the Russians fight?" I asked.

"They fought bravely, but the odds were against them in that their common soldiers did not know what they were fighting for. They did not care for Manchuria, and they had no faith in their Emperor. Every Japanese esteemed it an honor to die for his country, and the most of us would rather have died than been defeated."

Roosevelt and the Japanese.

"But would not the Russians have beaten you if the war had gone on much longer?"

"I do not know," was the reply. "We were in a bad way when the hostilities were suspended. Our money was almost used up, and it is doubtful if we could have kept on fighting. Indeed, we owe everything to your President Roosevelt. It was his offer of peace that saved us, and I can tell you we appreciate his work at that time. The Japanese worship him, and if he ever visits Japan, we will just kill him with kindness in showing our gratitude."

Just here I would say that I have heard many such expressions concerning Theodore Roosevelt. He is a hero to the Japanese, and they cannot speak of him too highly. His biographies, printed in their language, have been sold by the thousands, and even the school children know all about him. During a call upon Prince Ito a few months ago, His Excellency referred to Mr. Roosevelt in the highest terms. He said: "Theodore Roosevelt is a friend of Japan and we honor him much." The Prince thereupon ordered his servant to bring in a photograph of the ex-President. It was originally of cabinet size, which Mr. Roosevelt had sent to Prince Ito with his autograph at the foot conveying his regards. The photograph had been enlarged to more than life size, and it was beautifully framed. Prince Ito ordered it placed on a chair facing us, so that our ex-President seemed to be a part of the interview.

A Boom City Busted.

The Port Arthur of today makes me think of one of the inflated towns of our great West after its boom has exploded. Just before the war began, the Russians were preparing to make it one of the finest cities of Asia. They had erected enormous buildings for their officials and were putting up residences to correspond. Merchants and other private citizens were doing likewise. New structures were going up everywhere, and houses of fifty and sixty rooms were being erected. In the new town, which formed the Russian residence section, a dozen or so of such buildings, with the scaffolding about them, are still to be seen. Some are finished to the roofs and others to the first floors only. They have not been touched since the war and are going to ruin.

Such residences as were completed can now be rented for a few dollars a month. Just opposite my hotel stands a brick house of three stories which contains fifty rooms. It probably cost $75,000 to build, and it could be rented today for $50 a month. Adjoining it is another residence which is still larger. It is occupied at a rental of $25. On the hill behind me are the foundations of a Russian cathedral which, if completed, would be as large as any church building in the United States. It was about ready for the walls when the war occurred, and it was stopped forever. A new hotel which had been erected in the old city was turned into a hospital during the siege. It is now the property of the Japanese Red Cross Society, and is used as a hospital for the Japanese.

The Japanese officials occupy many of the Russian public buildings. The civil offices of the Manchurian government are in a gray structure in the new town; the military department is in a white building farther back and the Russian naval offices, which covered an acre or so, are to be turned into a Japanese military academy. The hotel in which I write this letter is the once famous restaurant known as Saratoffs, where the Russian officers gambled away thousands of rubles and drank their vodka. It has the same barroom and the same Odessa billiard table, but the vodka has disappeared and a Japanese bartender dispenses saki instead. Japanese girls wait upon you in the dining-room and Japanese boys act as your chambermaids. The hotel belongs to the South Manchurian railway, which is now a Japanese corporation, and it has become a most orderly place.

Grand Pianos for $25.

I had a talk this evening with an official who was here when Port Arthur fell. He tells me that the Russians were crazy to get away, and that furniture of every kind went for a song. Said he: "Sofas, tables and chairs could be had for the asking, and grand pianos brought $25 apiece. Costly hangings were thrown out into the streets, and some of the houses were set fire to by their owners. After we took possession, I found our soldiers tearing up valuable books, and using them for fuel or throwing then out into the snow, and I besought the general in charge to allow me to go through the town and save the libraries. He did so, and as he saw how many books there were, gave me a detail of soldiers to bring them in. We collected altogether about 20,000 volumes. The most of them were in Russian, but there were a thousand or so in French and English. Several hundred were in Italian, and some Chinese and Japanese. There were nine sets of encyclopedias, all Russian or German, and a great many musical books.

"I tried to catalogue them, classifying them first by language; and later by subject. The most of the volumes were fiction, but there were many scientific works. There were Russian translations of Shakespeare and Dickens, and also of Mark Twain's 'Innocence Abroad.' The Russians had every luxury here. They lived well and at the close even better than we Japanese; for by the terms of our capitulation we gave them fresh meat, although we were living on canned stuffs ourselves. Nevertheless, we could not satisfy them."

Old Port Arthur vs. the New.

The Port Arthur of Russia was far different from that of Japan. In the old days there were soldiers everywhere. Military officers, dressed in big caps and long coats, swaggered through the streets. There was a large garrison, everything was booming, and money and drink flowed like water. A circus building was erected in which all sorts of shows were held, and there were famous cafés and restaurants. Today the circus has been turned into a bazaar, and about two score Japanese women sell all sorts of Japanese goods at the booths within it. The soldiers have disappeared. The Japanese have only one regiment here, and nothing like as many troops are to be seen as in the towns of Korea or even Japan.

As far as business is concerned, the city is dead. It consists of about 5000 Manchurian Chinese, and the military and civil officials of the Japanese government. The Chinese are poor. I see full-grown men going around with baskets on their shoulders picking up the droppings of manure from the streets. When a man's wages for a whole day are equal to a half-bushel of such stuff, he must be poor indeed.

The Chinese do the rough work of Port Arthur. Many of them are now engaged in getting out the blocks of stone with which the Russians sank their merchant vessels when they knew that Port Arthur must fall. More than thirty ships were destroyed in that way; some thousand stone blocks being used for the purpose. The Japanese are sending these blocks home for their public schools. One will be erected as a monument in each playground, to keep alive the memory of the heroes of Port Arthur.

"Will your people continue to hold Manchuria and Korea?" I asked this question of a high Japanese officer.

"Yes," was the emphatic reply. "We shall hold on to Korea as long as there is a bone left in a soldier's leg to stand upon the soil. We are in Manchuria to stay, and we will die before we will allow either the Chinese or Russians to drive us away."

Japan's Monument to Russian Dead.

At the same time, I find a kindly feeling for the Russians among the Japanese. They have erected a little granite temple with a Greek cross upon its top as a monument to the dead among their enemies who fell at Port Arthur. This is situated on a low hill about two miles from the city and surrounding it are the graves of thousands of Russian soldiers. There is a brick wall inclosing several acres about the monument. In this space the officers are buried, the grave of each being marked with a stone or iron cross. Outside on the slopes of the hill stands a thicket of white wooden crosses rising to the height of a man's shoulder, and marking the graves of the privates. The inscriptions on the monument are in Japanese and Russian, and they state that the memorial was erected by the Emperor of Japan in honor of the bravery of his great enemy, the Russians.

"When," he said, "is an actor not an actor?"

The Smile of the Gods.

DONALD IS TESTED AND COMES OUT VICTORIOUS.

By a Special Contributor.

DONALD scowled darkly as his eyes fell upon the two smiling figures by the roadside. Acknowledging their salutations with a curt nod, he turned away with hot anger in his heart and entered the mill. That this stranger should supplant him in Hilda's affections filled his great heart with a blind rage. He had loved her with a strong man's desire ever since she had come to the little village, and his way had seemed as a primrose path until Voight Harland had dawned upon the horizon. Then had his dreams been shattered as the oak is shattered by the lightning bolt. Donald ground his teeth with suppressed rage and strode across to his station by one of the great saws.

On every side the steel saws screeched savagely as they tore their way into the shrinking logs, and their infernal song seemed to form a harmony with the bitter thoughts that cruised through his brain. With sudden rage he threw a log into place and watched, with curious satisfaction, the steel fangs tear their way into the heart of the protesting victim. The savage teeth drove through the protesting wood with demoniacal facility and finally whirled impotently in the empty air.

A shadow suddenly fell across him, and glancing up, Donald repressed a challenge of menace with difficulty. His rival stood a few feet away regarding him curiously. The eyes of both men met with more of battle than friendliness in their glances. Donald mastered an insane desire to grasp the other's throat, and turned away.

"Rather interesting work, that."

The stranger spoke with a lazy drawl.

Donald grunted by way of reply, and deftly moved another log into place.

"Been at it long?" asked Voight, in no wise disconcerted by Donald's uncompromising attitude.

"Long enough not to ask fool questions," responded Donald shortly.

"That's an advantage worth having," was the reply, accompanied by a smile of amusement.

Donald inwardly raged, but gave no sign. It was this cool audacity of the visitor that made Donald long to spring upon him and choke the cool assurance from his body.

Voight walked to the edge of the pit and gazed interestedly into the vortex of rushing wind and dust. The snarling teeth scattered the dust in circling cataracts that hissed and stung madly. A curious fascination held him as he watched the vicious fangs slowly eat into the heart of a tree that had once been the forest's pride.

"Rather an unpleasant fate if a man should fall," he remarked amiably to the unbending back of the worker.

"You'd think so if you happened to fall in," grimly.

Voight stood at the edge of the pit, his hands carelessly thrust into his pockets. At the sight of the careless attitude, a wild thought flashed through Donald's brain. One quick move, a sudden shove, and he would be free to win Hilda. None but the saw would know, and its steel lips would be forever silent. He glanced swiftly around. Not a man was in sight. All were busy with their work.

At that instant Voight, warned by some vigilant sentinel of the brain, turned. At the glare of menace in the other's eyes, his own glazed with terror and he sprang back. His foot caught in a crack in the rough floor, and with a shriek of despair he pitched headforemost into the pit.

For an instant, Donald stood like one paralyzed with the horror of it all. That last cry of terror had been drowned by the infernal scream of the saw—as if it had been anxious to conceal the death cry of its victim. Then as the truth flashed upon the worker, he laughed with sudden demoniac glee. Fate had cast the dice, his rival was to perish at other hands than his. His heart pounding wildly, Donald bent forward and gazed into the pit with fascinated eyes. He saw the doomed man struggling desperately in the yielding sawdust, and his lips curved grimly as he thought how each movement was bringing the victim nearer to the hellish teeth that were thirsting for his blood.

The rushing wind from the saw tossed the hair of the victim away from his terrified face. The lips of the doomed man moved convulsively, and Donald wondered vaguely of what he was saying. And ever the grinding teeth hissed and shrieked like a thousand exultant devils. The staring eyes sought Donald's and clung to them with a mute message of appeal. Donald regarded the eloquent orbs with curious interest, and wondered why the face twitched so oddly. He felt like a man looking upon a horrible fantasy with no power to intercede. Sometimes he wondered if Hilda would care, but even that seemed of little importance.

Inch by inch the fair head crept nearer to the hellish teeth. He had ceased to struggle now, but his eyes continued to seek Donald's with quiet, mute insistence. Terror no longer reigned in their depths, but they told of the wonder of a dying man with his gaze on the lifting veil of another world.

Another instant, and——

With a sudden cry of horror, Donald threw himself on the brakes and stilled the raging saw in its moment of victory. Another instant and he was beside his rival, had gathered him in his arms and was out of the infernal pit.

Donald laid his burden down on the rough floor and bent over him with wildly beating heart. Voight gazed up at him wonderingly.

"It's all right, Donald," he murmured weakly; "Hilda loves none but you. She refused me this morning."

THE selection of the President's pastor, Dr. Ulysses Grant Baker Pierce, to succeed the late Dr. Edward Everett Hale as chaplain of the Senate is a graceful compliment to Mr. Taft and at the same time a deserved recognition of this eloquent Unitarian divine.

Dr. Pierce will receive $1000 a year from the government for offering the prayer at the opening of each session of the Senate, and this remuneration will, of course, be in addition to his salary as pastor of All Souls' Church, Washington. Dr. Pierce is forty-three years the junior of his predecessor, Dr. Hale. His forty-first birthday will occur Wednesday next. Both were graduated at Harvard—Dr. Hale in 1839 and Dr. Pierce fifty-two years later; and both were born in New England, Dr. Hale in Boston and Dr. Pierce in Providence.

That Uncle Sam employs ninety-two clergymen is a fact which will surprise nearly every one. They receive all the way from $4400 to $600 a year, and all bear the title of "chaplain." Sixty-two belong to the army, twenty-four to the navy, four to the Federal penitentiaries.

Twenty-one are Roman Catholics, twenty-one are Methodists, nineteen are Episcopalians, ten are Baptists, eight are Presbyterians and four are Congregationalists, while the Unitarians, Universalists and Disciples of Christ are represented by two each and the Lutherans, Dutch Reformed Church and United Brethren in Christ each by one minister of their faith.

The two chaplains of Congress are elected by their respective houses as are the sergeant-at-arms and other officers, and both receive the same salary.

Blind Chaplain of the House.

The chaplain of the House, the Rev. Henry Noble Couden, is a Universalist. He was born back in Indiana sixty-six years ago, and when a lad in his teens entered the Civil War, in one of whose battles he lost the sight of both his eyes. He now entered the Ohio State School for the Blind, and after being graduated there was educated for the Universalist ministry in the divinity school of St. Lawrence University. He has been chaplain of the House since 1895. He is a distinguished-looking man of tall, erect, slender physique and although his hair is white looks younger than his years. He and Senator Gore are daily led to the Capitol by their faithful wives.

Noted Unitarian Chaplains.

The Senate never had a Unitarian chaplain prior to Dr. Hale. The House of Representatives in the earlier years had two chaplains of that faith—the Rev. Jared Sparks, from 1821 to 1822, and the Rev. William Henry Channing, from 1867 to 1869. The first of these, the noted Dr. Sparks, had a Unitarian church in Baltimore when chosen chaplain of the national House in 1821, and after serving his term resigned his Baltimore pastorate and bought the North American Review. He became professor at Harvard in 1839 and president of that college in 1849. His memorial sermon in the House of Representatives on the death of William Pinckney was one of the most eloquent masterpieces of religious oratory ever heard in the halls of Congress, and was printed in 1822.

Thousands of us now have framed upon our wall the popular motto, "My Symphony" which was written by William Henry Channing, the second of these four Unitarian chaplains of Congress. He was the nephew of the noted clergyman, William Ellery Channing, the leader of the Unitarian movement in this country, and was a graduate of Harvard, the alma mater of Sparks. After being pastor of Unitarian churches in several American cities and in Liverpool, England, he was called early in the Civil War to the Unitarian Church in Washington, whose pulpit is now occupied by Dr. Pierce. It was while his church was being used as a military hospital that he was chosen chaplain in the House of Representatives. He spent his last days in England, where his elder daughter became the first wife of Edwin Arnold, the poet, who later married a Japanese.

Divided on Chaplain Question.

On the question of opening prayers in Congress the fathers of the republic were divided. On the opening day of the first Continental Congress Cushing moved that the session be thus opened, but Jay and Rutledge objected on the ground that the colonies were too much divided in religious sentiment. Samuel Adams, however, arose at this point and protested that it ill became men professing to be Christians to say that they were of so wide a difference of belief that they could not, as one man, bow their knee in prayer to the Almighty.

He then moved that the Rev. Mr. Dushe, an Episcopal minister of Philadelphia, should open the next morning session with prayer, and the motion carried.

This same minister was regularly elected chaplain of Congress five days after the Declaration of Independence, and the following December two chaplains were appointed for the Continental Congress.

That the two chaplains of Congress should be of different denominations and that they should interchange weekly—the Senate chaplain going over to the House, and vice versa—was a precedent laid down by the first Congress, under the Constitution.

The first Congressional chaplains received $500 apiece or just half the present salary. The first Senate chaplain was Dr. Provost, an Episcopalian, who served from 1789 to 1790, while the first chaplain of the House was the Rev. William Linn, whose term extended between the same years. In the early 50's there was a protest because the old rule had been violated by Congress choosing two chaplains of the same faith. By this time the salary had been raised to $750 a year.

Each Sect's Share.

Of the election of chaplains in Congress, 30 have gone to Methodists, 24 to Episcopalians, 24 to Presbyterians, 15 to Baptists, 5 to Congregationalists, 4 to Unitarians, 2 to Lutherans and 1 each to Universalists, Disciples of Christ and Catholics. The Senate has had more Episcopalian chaplains than those of any other denomination, the first nine being of that faith. The House's preference has been for Methodists, although it started off with three Presbyterians.

The only Roman Catholic chaplain of Congress was the Rev. Father C. C. Pise, who opened the [illegible] sions of the Senate in 1832 and 1833, while [illegible] Calhoun, as vice-president, presided over that body. [illegible] immediate predecessor of the Rev. Everett Hale [illegible] lain of the Senate was, like the present House [illegible] a blind man. This was the Rev. W. H. [illegible] a Methodist minister, who had previously [illegible] seven terms as chaplain of the House in [illegible] and 1885-93. The oldest living ex-chaplain of [illegible] is Bishop Thomas Bowman of the Methodist [illegible] who is now living in Orange, N. J., and who on [illegible] day of this week will be ninety-two years old. A [illegible] chaplain who, like Dr. Pierce, was also the pastor of [illegible] President, was the Rev. Byron Sunderland, at [illegible] Presbyterian church in Washington President [illegible] attended. He had been chaplain of the Senate [illegible] from 1873 to 1879.

Army Parsons' Many Duties.

Of our sixty-two army chaplains, eight rank as [illegible] jors, thirty-two as captains and twenty-two as [illegible] lieutenants. Those with the rank of major [illegible] high as $4000 a year on reaching their twentieth [illegible] service, while those ranking as captains get from [illegible] to $3360, while the lieutenant chaplains draw from [illegible] to $2800. In addition to this pay go free quarters, [illegible] feed, medical attention, etc., in each case, and at [illegible] ment each receives three-quarters of his last [illegible] salary.

In 1833 Congress created the office of "post [illegible] and schoolmaster" at a pay of $40 per month, [illegible] tions a day, quarters and horse feed, but with [illegible] enlisted nor commissioned rank. Not until 18[illegible] all chaplains commissioned.

New army chaplains are appointed every few [illegible] In 1907 there were five and in 1908 there were [illegible] pointed, while this year so far there have been [illegible] new ones, the last being Father John Rivera, a [illegible] Rican priest, who will look after the welfare [illegible] Porto Rican troops. In the War Department is [illegible] register wherein applicants for chaplaincies enter [illegible] names, and from this as vacancies occur, the [illegible] selects the names of those who may be examined [illegible] be eligible each candidate must prove that he is [illegible] years old, a citizen of the United States and an [illegible] minister in good standing. He must appear [illegible] a board of officers and submit to a severe phys[illegible] amination, as well as to educational tests. [illegible] been confirmed by the Senate, he enters with the [illegible] of lieutenant and soon learns that his duties are [illegible] be confined to preaching and praying. In addi[illegible] holding religious services at his post each [illegible] must perform burial services over the dead of his [illegible] mand, distribute reading matter among the sick [illegible] hospitals and the prisoners in the guardhouse, [illegible] struction in the common English branches of [illegible] to the enlisted men of his regiment, identify the [illegible] after a battle, act often as counsel for the [illegible] courts-martial and serve generally as post [illegible]

There are four colored chaplains in the army [illegible] Methodists and one Baptist, all attached to [illegible] ments.

Some Plucky Parsons.

The ranking army chaplain, the Rev. Henry [illegible] the Thirteenth Infantry, was wounded in action [illegible] Juan and honorably mentioned for bravery there [illegible] as at the Siboney pest hospital during the [illegible] epidemic in Cuba, where, while ministering to the sick, he contracted the disease himself. Before entering the army he was an Episcopal missionary among the Indians. Chaplain Cephas C. Bateman of the Coast Artillery performed some valuable ethnologic work in the Philippines, where the Moro dattos are said to have confided to him information never before given to an American. One of our heroes at the relief of the siege of Pekin was Chaplain Water Marvine, now of the Coast Artillery, who was intrusted with the identification and burial of all our soldiers who died in China.

"There isn't a braver man in the regiment," said Roosevelt in his farewell address to his regiment, when speaking of Henry A. Brown, "the Rough Rider chaplain," now of the Engineer Corps. "He was right there on the firing line," the colonel continued, "tending to the wounded, and when we went up that hill I caught him with a carbine in his hands."

When Manila was taken a Yankee wearing the Latin cross in his shoulder straps stood guard over the wounded Spaniards and at the point of a pistol held at bay a force of Filipinos which rushed up to bolo them. This was Chaplain David Fleming, now of the Second Cavalry.

Unitarian Army Chaplain George D. Rice, now of the Twenty-seventh Infantry, has been our only army chaplain to receive a medal of honor in recent years. This he received "for devotion to the wounded and assisting them from the firing line" at Fort Bayan, Mindanao, in May, 1902. He was also honorably mentioned for "absolute and fearless devotion to duty in administering to the wounded under heavy fire." Our first Unitarian army chaplain seems to have been the Rev. William A. Whitwell, appointed at Hancock barracks in 1840. The first of this faith in the navy appears to have been Protius Fisk, detailed to the Pensacola navy yard in 1844, while the second was J. Orville Dewey, appointed in 1851. There is no Unitarian chaplain in the navy at the present time.

The Navy's Dominies.

Our two dozen naval chaplains rank as captains, commanders, lieutenant commanders or lieutenants, according to how long they have been in the service. Those on sea duty receive from $2200 to $4400 a year, while those on land duty get from $2000 to $4000. Their function is similar to that of the army chaplains, and one of their most solemn duties is to go about among the crew when a ship is clearing for action and obtain from each man a note containing his "last message," to be sent to his family at home in case he is killed in the engagement.

The ranking naval chaplain now is David Howard Tribou, stationed at the Naval Home in Philadelphia. There are but three other chaplain-captains on the active list: Frank Thompson, at Portsmouth navy yard; Roswell R. Hoes, at the Norfolk navy yard, and Carroll Q. Wright, at the Philadelphia yard.

In the navy until the twenties some such petty officer as a captain's clerk or purser's steward, as a reward for good services, was generally allowed to officiate as chaplain in reading Sabbath and burial services, generally from the Episcopal prayer book, for which duty he was paid a chaplain's salary. But about 1826 there began to be observed a rule requiring that only a regularly ordained minister should be chosen as chaplain in the navy.

Prison Chaplain's Odd Duties.

At each of the big Federal penitentiaries, at Atlanta and Fort Leavenworth, there are two chaplains, one a Protestant and the other a Roman Catholic. One of them, doing religious work alone, receives $600 a year, while the other, drawing $1500, has various administrative duties in addition to those of a pastoral nature. He must examine all of the incoming and outgoing mail of prisoners and must keep record of it in a book, whether these include letters, parcels or papers. All money sent to prisoners also goes through his hands. He is also the prison librarian and the censor of all reading matter entering the cells. At the Federal prison, McNeil's Island, State of Washington, the chaplains thus far have been supplied by the religious organizations.

Tried to Oust All Chaplains.

A sensational effort to oust all chaplains from the Federal service was made a half century and more ago by certain members of Congress and outside politicians, who sought vengeance against the thousands of the clergy who had been instrumental in memorializing Congress against the repeal of the Missouri compromise, against the Kansas-Nebraska bill and against the running of the mails on Sunday. The move began by an attempt to prevent the election of a chaplain of the House and this was followed up by an attempt to abolish the office of chaplain also in the Senate, the army and navy and in the Indian service, as well. The contention of those favoring the proposition was based on two clauses of the Constitution, one providing that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States," and the other specifying that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." This troublesome matter was referred to the House Judiciary Committee for which James Meacham of Vermont prepared an adverse report, a remarkable document, in which he defended the army, navy and Indian service chaplains and had this to say about the necessity of retaining those at the Capitol:

"If there be a God who hears prayer—as we believe there is—we submit that there never was a deliberative body that so eminently needed the fervent prayers of righteous men as the Congress of the United States.

Interesting Reading.

"WE'RE FINDING HOW RICH HALF LIVE," SAYS HOTEL CLERK.

By a Special Contributor.

"WUZ you readin' about that there latest divorce soot in high life?" asked the House Detective of the St. Reckless.

"Of course," said the Hotel Clerk, "everybody in my set's been reading all the horrible and disgusting details and enjoying them, something wonderful. I don't know of a more popular form of summer reading matter among the poor than a nice circumstantial account of a truly nauseating scandal among the rich. Should old Mrs. Mulligan, up Rag Alley, look too much upon the ale when it's mixed and disrupt the household, her husband, Mr. M. J. Mulligan, the popular and well-known retired scow trimmer, either restores peace on the spot by the simple expedient of fighting for it, or else some of the neighbors run for the cop, and the paper gives old Mrs. Mulligan six lines in "Casual Jottings About Town" and the judge gives her six months in the workhouse. But there's no divorce. Why should there be, as long as Mr. Mulligan, her husband, has a good right arm and a tongue left in his head? And why should we, being of the lower orders, read about it? There's not one of us but has the price of a crock of mixed suds himself. But if the preliminary training was done on vintage champagne in one of those stone Newport cottages about the size of a county courthouse, and if it develops during the trial that the lady was in the habit of bouncing priceless articles of virtu off the esteemed dome of the man that she swore to love, honor and obey, with the fingers crossed, we just eat it alive. I buy every edition myself to see if it's come out yet about the trusted family butler looking through the keyhole and seeing his mistress mixing the morning supply of brandy and soda in an Italian umbrella vase; or if the confidential maid's gone on the stand to tell about tracing her master across the bridge and catching him in the act of leading one of those semi-detached, Brooklyn, two-family lives. Far be it from me, or anybody in my circle of society to overlook any of the fascinating particulars of the deplorable details.

"If a cockroach could read, d'ye think, Larry, that he'd read about other cockroaches? He would not. He'd read of the domestic affairs of the ostrich and the eagle. Human nature is just the same with us as it is with a cockroach, maybe more so, for all I know. Let us picture the scene:

"Tired and weary after his day's work in the hotel kitchen, Henry J. Cockroach comes home to his simple tenement on the third floor and dresses for the evening by removing his top shirt and shoes and putting his feet out on the fire escape. 'What have you tonight, woman, in the way of eats?' says he to his wife, the henroach. 'Corned beef and cabbage,' says she. 'Fine,' says he. 'Afterward I'll chase down to the corner with a pop bottle and get a nickel's worth of light beer for dessert. It looks like a big night tonight,' says he. And then he sits down in the window, in the gloaming, in the undershirt, and reads all about the divorce case of the Reginald Emus, of Fifth avenue, Newport and Part Five, Special Trial Term, out loud to Missis Roach while she's setting the table for supper. He's liable to read the whole thing all the way through before he even turns over to see if the Joints won the game. ''Tis great stuff,' says Henry J. 'It says here that the beauteous chatelaine of Castle Emu used to order for breakfast two quarts of wine, a yard of assorted cocktails, a caviar sandwich and a dachshund.' What would the daschshund be for?' asks his wife. 'To eat the sandwich, to be sure,' says her husband, he being somewhat of a wag, like most cockroaches. 'And for dinner now what did she have?' asks his wife. 'The same order,' says Henry J., 'only doubled. It must be a grand diet,' says he, 'and filling, too. You'd be full all the time,' says he. 'No need of any of that Fletcherizing slow-chewing stuff, there,' he says. 'You could relish that meal if you didn't have a tooth in your head. They'd have to cut my throat to keep me from enjoying such a line of nourishment, and even then I might find a rubber tube somewhere,' says he, 'and beat the game. But just for that,' says Henry J., 'just for that and nothing else, except a few long ones, maybe, between meals and before meals and after meals, the husband must go and accuse the lady of drinking. He must be one of those suspicious guys,' says he. 'And what does the wife charge?' inquires Missis Roach. 'Incompatability,' says he. 'It seems the heartless wretch persistently refused to wear neckties that would match the scrambled eggs she used to throw at him in the rose-filled breakfast-room of the stately castle. And also cruelty,' says he. 'The family physician was on the stand in her behalf today. He testified that he found the patient suffering from injuries such as had undoubtedly been produced by a dull, blunt instrument.' 'I'll bet her husband had been butting her with his head,' said Missis Roach. 'You must have been looking at his picture,' says Henry J. 'She also charges lack of support,' says he. 'It's been brought out in the evidence that he deprived her of the bare necessities of life something fierce,' says he, reading on. 'She only had ten to twelve thousand a month in the best years, and toward the last he cut this meager sum down to a beggarly five. What d'ye know about that?' says he. 'The stingy thing!' says Missis Roach. 'Speaking of money,' says she, 'what did you get in your envelope tonight?' 'Fourteen seventy-five, counting the overtime,' says Henry J. 'Well, come to dinner,' says she, 'and we'll read the rest of it afterward if I can find a bit of kerosene around the flat for the lamp.'

"At that, Larry, Henry J. Cockroach and his wife, Maggie, have nothing on me, or on you, either, have they? We like to hear about the domestic affairs of the Reggie Emus ourselves. It's none of our business, so naturally we enjoy it fine. And it certainly makes seasonable reading for hot weather, being full of high cooling drinks and nights in Venice, with a bun on.

"It's funny how a simple matter of suing for divorce will bring out so many interesting private facts about people with money. For years a society couple have gone along without attracting much attention anywhere except in the tax office. The husband has $11,000,000, which he inherited, and wears a size five and three-quarters hat. The wife appears at the opera looking like she'd just come out of the hands of Tiffany's head window dresser, but is otherwise not particularly noticeable among a lot of ladies who'd be regarded as underdressed if they ventured out wearing a diamond stomacher that weighed less than nine pounds. Their yacht is a plain three-story-and-English-basement yacht with a crew of only ninety men and no all-night elevator service. Their summer home is merely a simple little two-million-dollar estate with one private ocean attached, and they have but three town houses to their name. In fact you might say they are not conspicuous in any way in the gay life.

"But all of a sudden along comes the grand slam. A seemingly quiet and unostentatious household is abruptly disrupted. The wife retains one of our most criminal lawyers to defend her rights; the husband hires a prominent legal person with the reputation of being a very cross-examiner, to represent him, and pretty soon a great divorce trial, one of which is deeply regretted and highly popular in all walks of life, has been started before a light sleeper in a black silk kimono, called a judge. The papers are very sorry about the deplorable affair on the editorial page and very glad about it on all the other pages; the family servants come into court and speak out with such freedom that I make up my mind if ever I should have a million dollars and a temperamental lady wife, I'll live in a safety vault and do my own housework; all the leading authorities suitable to such a case are quoted, from Dun's Agency to the 'Barkeeper's Guide,' and the great truth is brought home to us that in the gilded palace full of Louis Kahn's furniture, even as in the humble cot, in the midst of luxury and ease and flunkeys with plush pants and foolish faces, there's liable to be a constantly rising temperature and hard squalls whenever you've got the combination of a gent who has about one consecutive thought every change of the moon and a lady whose deeply emotional nature inclines her to come down to breakfast of a morning and pass the Spanish omelet, with fine herbs, across the orchid centerpiece into her husband's abashed bosom, then burst into tears and sweep from the room in a high dudgeon."

"Wot's a high dudgeon," asked the House Detective, breaking in.

"It's the thing that a society lady so frequently sweeps from the room in, when her disposition begins to clabber," explained the Hotel Clerk. "I never saw one myself, although I have a friend, a special writer who raises 'em for the society trade and uses at least one in nearly every story he writes. But whatever a dudgeon may or may not be, whether it's hairy or slick and whether it buttons up the back or hooks down the front with hooks and eyes, I'll say this much: The last prominent lady that took her troubles into court would never sweep from a room in any style dudgeon except a high one. The proof showed that her taste always ran to things that were high, from jewelry to temper. The higher the better. Also the frequenter. Hence, as I say advisedly, the high dudgeon.

"Anyway, they get a divorce and marry again, being as you might say, beggars for punishment, or else they do not get a divorce and have to struggle along with the present incumbents a while longer, until something better turns up, each of course retaining the option of picking out sympathetic natures for friends in entirely different parts of the town."

"Well, the divorce evil certainly has growed, accordin' to what the papers say," gloomed the House Detective. "You don't hear these times of any more of them old-time golden weddin' celebrations."

"That's easy to explain," said the Hotel Clerk. "A young chap who wasn't born with a silver spoon in his mouth and hasn't since been apt to get much of the same material into his pockets at any one given time, marries a girl whose only dower is a working acquaintance with a cook stove. Well, their first anniversary is the installment furniture wedding, and the next is the balbriggan underwear wedding, and after that there comes along the amalgam fillings wedding and the new-tin-roof-for-the-kitchen wedding and the first-and-second-mortgage wedding and the sending-the-boy-off-to-college wedding, and by the time for the golden wedding celebration rolls around, the couple have worked themselves into honorable but comparatively obscure graves or else they'll be perfectly satisfied to receive their golden gifts in the shape of a little fourteen-carat decorating on the new set of rubber and chinaware teeth that the dentist is making for their reclining years. That goes for the middle classes, Larry. The very rich change partners and their luck so often that the only way I know of for them to celebrate a golden wedding would be for the lady to wait until the grand total of her married lives mount up to the right figure and then invite all her ex-husbands to attend a family reunion, to be somewhere outdoors, where ther'd be room."

"Well," said the House Detective, philosophically, "one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives, does it?"

"We'll be in a fair way to find out, if the courts stay open and the family servants continue to take the witness stand," said the Hotel Clerk.

American Gem-Stones.

GREAT INCREASE IN OUTPUT OF PRECIOUS STONES.

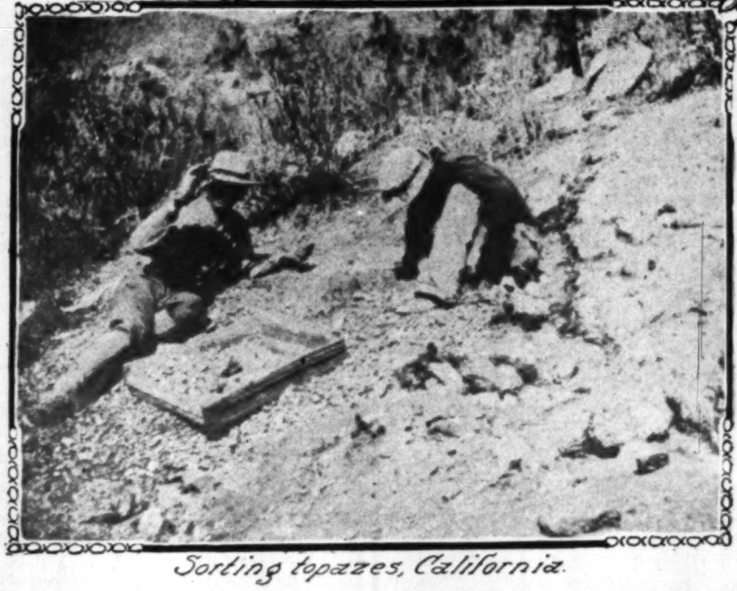
By a Special Contributor.

THIS country is coming to the front as a producer of precious stones for the markets of the world. The greatest sapphire deposit in existence has been opened recently in Montana; Arizona and New Mexico are supplying Europe with the most beautiful turquoises ever seen, and in California a new gem-bearing belt, productive of a dozen kinds of crystals from topaz to hyacinth, bids fair (according to George F. Kunz, the famous expert) to rival the Ural Mountains, which have led for half a century in the production of such minor stones of ornamental value.

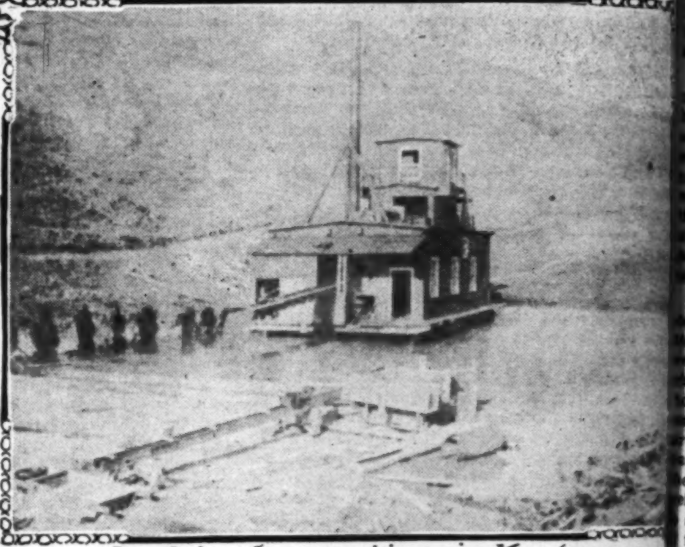
Dr. Kunz describes the sapphire deposit as "perhaps the greatest gem mine in the world." It is located in Montana, on a fork of the Judith River, and is already turning out 1,600,000 carats of stones a month. The sapphire, in fact, has suddenly sprung into front place as the most important American precious stone, commercially speaking, displacing the turquoise, which for a number of years past has held that position.

Washing for emeralds in North Carolina.

Sorting gravel for tourmalines, in California.



Sorting topazes, California.



Dredging for sapphires in Montana.

The discovery of this wonderful deposit was made under rather picturesque circumstances. Not very long ago, the business of washing gravel for gold was being pursued in a more or less irregular fashion on certain bars in the upper waters of the Missouri River, a few miles east of Helena. The miners picked up a number of bright and pretty pebbles, which were caught in the sluice riffles, and ascertained on inquiry that they were real sapphires.

Later on, the source from which these gems were derived was found in the above-mentioned locality, nearly 100 miles to the east of the bars, and mining for them was begun. The formation in which they occurred was a broad "dike" of yellow earthy material, which proved to be decomposed rock. On digging downward a few feet, the unaltered rock, obviously of volcanic origin, was disclosed. It was soft and friable, and sapphires were scattered through it like plums in a pudding.

Once upon a time, perhaps a million years ago, the place now occupied by the "dike" was a great crack or fissure in the crust of the earth. Molten stuff from below was thrown up by volcanic forces, filling the crack, and, as it cooled, a quantity of oxide of aluminum which it contained was crystallized out in the shape of sapphires. Today the body of sapphire-bearing material there found extends for a distance of four miles on the surface, and to unlimited depth apparently. Experts believe that it can be worked as far down as 2000 feet.

The sapphires obtained from this deposit are of a surprising variety of hues—light blue, blue green, green, and pink. Some are peacock blue, and every now and then one is found that is of the true "corn-flower" tint, so highly esteemed in the sapphires of Ceylon! All are brilliant, and, as a rule, free from flaws. In size they range from "culls" (used for watch jewels and other mechanical purposes) to gems of five or six carats. The culls sell at from $2 to $6 an ounce. They are shipped to New York, and thence to Amsterdam, for cutting, in which process they lose half their weight.

Nowhere in the world, however, has there been found so great a variety of rich colors in corundum gems (sapphire, ruby, etc.) as in another newly-exploited locality in Montana, on Rock Creek. Many of the tints, indeed, were never seen before in precious stones. Butterflies made of them possess all the vivid beauty of the natural insects, and not long ago a brooch was put on exhibition, composed of over 200 of them, no two of exactly the same tint or shade. From red and pink they passed by delicate gradations into salmon, yellow, yellowish brown, pale blues and greens, and blue green. All of these gems are of unusual brilliancy, and look their best by artificial light.

The gem belt in California is about forty miles in width, extending from the San Jacinto Mountains, in Riverside county, southward through San Diego county and into Lower California. Within this area an extraordinary number of deposits of precious stones have been discovered within the last half-dozen years, including tourmalines of several colors, blue and white topazes, rose-colored beryls in wonderful crystals, and yellow hyacinths. The green tourmalines rival the emerald in beauty.

Ten miles north of Lemon Cove, in Tulare county, a vein of rose quartz, of exquisite color and quality, three feet wide and of undetermined length, was opened recently. This stone, though comparatively unknown in the United States, is highly appreciated abroad, where quantities of beads and other ornaments are made of it. And within the last year news has been received of the discovery, near the headwaters of the San Benito River, of an entirely new kind of gem—a hitherto unknown mineral, in fact—which, of a most lovely blue color, is more brilliant than the sapphire. Its crystals occur in veins of white soda zeolite, in schist rocks, and chemical analysis proves that they are a "titanosilicate of barium."

This is the second entirely new gem that has been discovered in California within the last half-dozen years. The other is "kunzite"—a lilac-hued spodumene, which was first brought to light in San Diego county, in 1903. When cut, it looks somewhat like a pinkish or lilac-colored diamond, and has a market value of $6 to $20 a carat, being exceedingly brilliant and beautiful. In tint it runs from faint pink through lilac pink and into dark lilac. The first important deposit was struck about a mile and a half northeast of Pala, San Diego county, yielding many crystals of noble size, unusually [illegible] and free from flaws, and of a delicate rosy [illegible] hue. They occurred in coarse, decomposed [illegible] rocks.

The stone—named after Dr. Kunz, who first [illegible] it as a valuable gem material—has proved especially [illegible] teresting by reason of certain curious physical [illegible] which it possesses. After being exposed to the [illegible] for a few minutes, a crystal of the stuff displays a [illegible] sistent luminosity in the dark,. shining quite [illegible] and, if shut up inside of a dark box in the presence of a photographic plate, it will actually take a very [illegible] tory picture of itself sufficiently clear for half-tone [illegible] production.

The place which the sapphire now holds as the [illegible] cipal American gem, in a commercial sense, was [illegible] until recently by the turquoise, of which the [illegible] and most valuable existing deposits are located in [illegible] Mexico, Nevada and Arizona. For a good many [illegible] past, our turquoise has held first place in the [illegible] even against the classic Persian. Not only has it [illegible] true "pigeon color," but it holds the tint better than [illegible] foreign article, which is liable to lose value by [illegible] from blue to green.

In early days, the European market relied for its [illegible] plies of turquoise upon the Persian deposits, the [illegible] of which, coming by way of the Turkish dominions [illegible] ceived its trade name from that fact. The stone [illegible] well known, long before the landing of Columbus, [illegible] Mexican aborigines, however, who prized it highly [illegible] mined it extensively. In New Mexico and Arizona [illegible] to be seen to this day many remains of ancient [illegible] for turquoise, with stone hammers and other prehis[illegible] tools scattered about, and dumps of excavated [illegible] overgrown now with trees centuries old.

Apparently, the early Mexicans knew no better [illegible] of getting out the turquoise than to split the rocks [illegible] taining it by the use of fire, afterward breaking the [illegible] terial of the matrix into small pieces with stone [illegible] mers. In one locality, east of Grand Central [illegible] in New Mexico, the whole of the north side of a hill [illegible] been quarried out in this primitive fashion, and [illegible] are still to be seen there of a great fall of rock, [illegible] occurred in 1680, wiping out many lives, and which [illegible] believed to have led to the uprising in the same [illegible] against the Spaniards who were directing the work. [illegible] a result of this uprising, the invaders were driven [illegible] the region.

In 1893, John E. Coleman, better known as "Tu[illegible] John," discovered some of the prehistoric excava[illegible] the Burro Mountains of New Mexico, and, as a [illegible] valuable claims were developed. Not long after[illegible] however, new deposits, as yet untouched, were [illegible] the same neighborhood. These, known as the [illegible] and Gem Mines, and now owned by the Azure [illegible] Company, have already yielded millions of dollars [illegible] of fine turquoise.

In the same year, the Azure Mining Company opened up the famous Elizabeth pocket, which has produced up to date more high-grade turquoise than any other deposit on record—the material of a deep blue color, slightly translucent, and exceptionally hard. From this square—a box, as one might say, sixty feet long by forty feet in width—more than twenty-two pounds of the finest turquoise, mostly nuggets, were obtained in a single month.

The turquoise of this region was originally deposited in cracks and fissures of granite rock from hot solutions forced upward by volcanic forces from the bowels of the earth. Aluminum phosphate was the chief material, the coloring matter being contributed by copper salts. As it comes from the mines, the gem stuff is sorted, and the best of it, packed in sealed cans and shipped to New York, fetches from $5 to $25 a carat.

RENE BACHE.

A Merchant of Fez.

The merchants of Fez are to be found all over Morocco. Their representatives are engaged in commerce in all the cities from Sus to the Mediterranean, and they have even several offices in Manchester for the purchase of calico. In due course Ali Mahmoud launches out into business on a large scale. He prospers exceedingly, and presently purchases a black female slave to assist his wife in her duties. This is necessary for another reason. Ali Mahmoud takes a house in the Medina quarter of Fez overlooking the pleasant olive groves to the south of the city. In course of time he buys two more slaves and is fairly set up as a householder.

When his first daughter is born there is great rejoicing, for the birth of a daughter as first born is regarded by the Moors as a happy omen. The baby is immediately stained all over its little body with henna and then smeared liberally with butter and wrapped in woollen cloths. On the seventh day these are removed and the child is washed for the first time. When the girl has reached her first year, her head is shaved, leaving a little tuft by which Mohammed could catch her up to heaven if he were so disposed. In her seventh year her hair has grown again. She is then veiled and her proud father sets about looking for a husband for her. It is still the custom to betroth children from infancy.

Ali Mahmoud prospers and, save for a few domestic rumbles, his life runs smoothly. Perhaps he has lost two of his female slaves or rather one has been beaten by his jealous wife and run to sanctuary. From the mosque she claims to be resold, and he has to obey the law for slaves. The other regains her freedom by bearing a child.

These negress slaves enjoy a much better time than their Moorish mistresses. They are not bound by iron laws and customs. They may go unveiled in the streets, and if ill treated, they have their remedy.

In the evenings, Ali will sit and smoke in the bosom of his family. On Thursdays and Saturdays, he visits his friends. They pass the time in simple games of cards or in listening to the weird efforts of itinerant musicians. Sometimes, with a few others, he will wend his way to the walls of the city. Here the party will sit watching the sunset and regretting the days when Christian slaves were as plentiful as sheep in Morocco. Our merchant gets stout as he approaches middle age. One day his world tumbles about him. Such is the uncertainty of fate in Morocco.

He was serving in his shop when the customer suddenly raised his voice and cried out that he was getting false weight. The accusation was terrible, and Ali vehemently protested his innocence. It was an arranged charge by an enemy of the merchnt, who philosophically bowed his head with the saying: "Kismet! Mine enemy has found me and the serpent requires milk." The arbitrators are called and, having been bribed previously, they find Mahmoud guilty and sentence him to the usual punishment meted out to givers of false weights. He is dragged to the southern wall of the city, a place where a tall gibbet is erected. By the irony of fate it is within sight of his own house. A rope is made fast to his right wrist and hoisted up until his toes can just touch the ground. Here he is left till sunset. The idlers jeer at him and the gamins of the quarter pelt him with stones and refuse. At sundown his friends carry him home—a poor; bruised and senseless body. Broken and disgraced, thus ended his career as a respectable merchant. Ali Mahmoud el Fasi. Kismet;—Morocco Correspondence London Daily Graphic.

Children of Crooks Apt to Be Honest.

It is a curious fact—one all at variance with the doctrine of heredity, but borne out by police records—that the children of crooks, of all classes, rarely turn out to be crooks themselves. Deeper study of the subject might reveal that they are possessed of the criminal instincts, but that the tragically close example of the punishment and wretchedness that attend a criminal career has been a terrifying deterrent. The fact, at any rate, remains. The "Rogues' Galleries" of Scotland Yard, New York, and Chicago may be studied in vain for the photographs of a father and a son.

Criminals are ever alert to keep their children from adopting similar lives. The rage of old, ugly "Mother" Mandelbaum, the famous receiver of stolen goods, was frightful when she found that her daughter, whom she had been at unstinted expense to educate, had secretly married "Sammy, the Jew"—Koehler, a thief with whom the old criminal had long traded. She disinherited the girl, and a flock of relations were the beneficiaries of her ill-gotten money. In her Chatham Square headquarters "Mother" Mandelbaum maintained a room where thieves could smoke and drink, but she felled with a bronze lamp a pickpocket who attempted one night to invade the private parlor where she was overseeing her daughter's French studies.—[Everybody's.

What's in a Name?

An Amiable Discussion Among the Drummers.

By a Special Contributor.

"THERE'S precious little in some names to recommend them. Money is lost every day by merchants and manufacturers who tack fool names on to their goods."

The tall, thin drummer glowered at the boarding in the field opposite. He had missed an important connection, and now, with four other traveling men, was condemned to a long wait at a lonely junction. Apparently he found some small relief in venting his ill-humor on the advertising sign which covered the big billboard that nearly monopolized the scenery within view of the station platform.

"I guess that's right," said the red-headed drummer, for the sake of stimulating further remarks.

"I could strike off a better name than that blindfolded on the typewriter," continued the first speaker sourly. "It's all very well for a man to hunt around and go out of his way a little to get a taking name for his wares, but a name like that—bah! it's idiotic. No customer really likes to go to a shop and ask for an article with a freak name. That may seem a small point, but it's a vital one, and the sellers who don't recognize it get sold themselves. Look, for example, at the names of some of the breakfast foods that are being foisted and hoisted upon the market. Who enjoys asking a grocer for a thing with some such name as 'Scrape-grits,' 'Mug-o-see,' or 'Jereboam's Bran?' You'd much rather, if there's a packet of the stuff anywhere in sight, point to it and say: 'Give me some of that—whatever you may call it.' If any of these freak foods were necessary for our health or happiness, we might manage to get hold of them somehow in spite of our blushes; but with such truck as plentiful as sawdust and hardly more nutritious, aren't we likely to follow the line of least resistance and buy what we can pronounce without feeling like fools?"

"There's no accounting for folks' taste in naming," said the fat drummer. "So long as men don't show any too much sense in naming their children, you can't expect them to show wisdom in naming their goods. I went to school with a boy named Solomon I. Silliman—beat it if you can. He was a shy, sensitive little chap, and I guess we made life miserable for him all right. He was either 'Sis' or 'Sissy,' or 'Silly Solly' through every room in the grammar school, and then I lost sight of him. I met him again about a year ago. He's married and his name is Stephen Sylvester now. He got it legally changed. He said no children of his ever should suffer as he had been made to suffer from that fool name of his. His parents were foreigners, and didn't know any better, but I know an old man whose name is Benjamin Barton Brown, and though he writes it out in full always, he tells me he has been known almost from the cradle as 'Bumblebee' Brown."

"Parents who have the future happiness of their children at heart," said the short drummer, "will be careful how they give them handles that don't join neatly, or that join too neatly with the family name. If Mr. Green names his son Peter, Paul or any other name with the initial P., he simply condemns him to become 'P. Green' as soon as he's old enough to get among other boys. You've heard of the Mr. Rose who named his daughter Wild, which was a pretty enough conceit till she grew up and married a Mr. Bull. That may be only a story, but it illustrates the point that parents can't use too much care in naming their children—if they don't want them to rise up and curse them later. A Mr. Pitt shouldn't name his daughter Olive, any more than Mr. Day should name his May, or Mr. Bell call his boy Isidor. Mr. Noyes oughtn't to name his boy Loudon, for he would be sure to be known as 'Loud' Noyes, and if Mr. Damm should name his son Godfrey he would be—well, he'd be guilty of latent profanity."

"The man who misnames his child is inconsiderate or thoughtless," said the thin drummer, again taking the floor, "but the merchant who misnames his goods is, or comes near to being an imbecile. Beside made-up names and names that sound like nonsense or baby talk, there is what seems to me like monumental stupidity, the foreign name given needlessly to a domestic article. Suppose, for instance, a manufacturer puts on the market a laundry soap which he calls—nobody but himself knows why—'laver-bien.' Suppose you, having found his free sample satisfactory, ask your grocer for a packet. If you use the correct French pronunciation he will probably first stare at you uncomprehendingly, then, when you have pointed toward some of the stuff on his shelf or counter, he'll inform you pityingly that you mean 'lavur-bean.' Several weeks later, with the lesson in mind, you apply at another place for 'lavur-bean,' and are superciliously told that the name should be pronounced 'lahvay-biang.' Whereupon you depart with a flushed face and a wrathful resolve to purchase in future only soap having an honest English name."

"Sure's you're born!" said the red-headed drummer emphatically, "it works that way lots of times. No later than last week I went into a candy shop and called for some nougat. The girl gave me the icy glare till I showed what I wanted, then she told me I meant nougatt, with the final letter sounded good and strong. But I shouldn't dare ask for nougatt at the next place for fear of getting a throw-down the other way. I used to know a girl once, and she told me she had long yearned to taste tutti-fruitti ice cream, but didn't dare risk trying to pronounce it for fear of being laughed at. I didn't know how to pronounce it myself then, but I made out to get some all the same."

"There are enough undesirable names that nobody in particular is responsible for," continued the tall, thin drummer, "without adding to them deliberately and unnecessarily. In the dry goods, drapery and some other trades, especially, there are many foreign names, mostly French, that comparatively few dealers or customers know how to pronounce. Some of them, like chou, cretonne, chiffon, khaki, etc., aren't difficult, but others, like voile, crèpe de chene, drap d'eté, etc., call for rules quite outside those that govern English pronunciation. If you ask for voile at the counter of a department store and give the word the French twist you may make yourself understood, or you may not; but it's ten to one you'll be told that you mean what the shop people call 'vaw-el.' On the other hand, if you ask for 'vaw-el,' you may get a free and somewhat scornful lesson in French pronunciation; you never can tell beforehand."

"Foreign names are a handicap to a man selling goods, no doubt of that," said the fat drummer. "I find it so. I travel for an importing house that handles wines, and some of those French and Italian and German names are a caution to the uninitiated. Few of my customers know how to pronounce them, but most of 'em make some sort of a bluff at it. The consequence is I have to remember each man's particular pronunciation and use it myself—or run the risk of hurting his feelings and injuring my trade."

"It works out something that way in the automobile business," said the short drummer, "only it acts as a sort of protective tariff on American goods. A man who can talk only United States, and that not too handily, doesn't want to own a car that he can't pronounce the name of; so, everything else being equal, he buys one of domestic manufacture."

"The application of the rule is as broad as commerce itself," said the tall drummer, who had now talked himself into rather better humor, "and even extends beyond it. There's a lesson there for everybody who deals with the public for gain—hotel and theatrical men for instance. To give a hotel a name that cannot be pronounced correctly at sight by any fairly intelligent person is to discourage the coming of guests to that house. Perhaps to a less extent the rule holds good in theaters. When the Bijou was added to the list of playhouses in my home town, the unfortunate street-car conductors whose routes took them past it were greatly embarrassed in calling out its name. They were at their wits' end how to pronounce it without giving away the fact that they had only the vaguest idea of how it ought to be pronounced. Anything from 'Birshow' to 'Bijo' had to pass current, but probably those conductors drew a long breath of relief when the name was changed to another less unpronounceable.

"The play of Divorcons, which was presented in this country under its French title, was pronounced in almost every conceivable way by the public; I even heard of one man who asked his neighbor if he had been to see 'Divorkins.' Another French theatrical word that is almost invariably murdered in the pronunciation is vaudeville. Sometimes it's 'vawdyvill' and sometimes 'voddyvill,' but seldom, by any chance, is it pronounced correctly, either by those before or behind the footlights, and that in spite of the fact that the correct French pronunciation is as simple and easy as A B C. I suppose you'll think I'm a crank on this subject, and probably I am, but I'm sure if a society for the suppression of needless folly could be organized——"

"Train's coming!" announced the red-haired drummer, and the session closed abruptly.

The Silver Hair.

Pert and glistening, he stood forth obtrusively beyond his fellows and derided their somber hue.

"I am not surprised at your jealousy and malevolence," he said. "How tamely you lie in one great mass, while I show independence and bristling energy."

The brown hairs, having no defense to set up, refrained from answering him, but they whispered among themselves.

"When did this stranger creep into our midst? How did he acquire his dazzling coat? Do you suppose we could do anything to make ours like it?"

Silver Hair overheard them, and replied scornfully: "Not in a hundred years. You were created black and are fit only to serve me."

On the following morning, when they were brushed by their owner, he alone remained upright. But he was so far behind her ear that she could not see him in the large glass, and being late for church, she hastened away without using the small one and getting a full view. In the pew back of her sat a youthful torment who wriggled and whispered incessantly.

"Mamma, look," he commanded.

"Hush, Jimmie."

"But, Mamma, see that funny white hair sticking straight out."

The cheeks in front of the hair became red, but the hair extended himself more brazenly than ever. "See how discerning people admire me," he exclaimed to his mates.

The minute his owner reached home, she seized the small glass, and with its aid inspected the back of her head. Immediately she discovered Silver Hair and uttered a groan.

"Something wonderful is about to happen to me," boasted Silver Hair.

And he prophesied correctly, for his owner jerked him out with her tweezers and deposited him in the grate fire.

A Tale of Bee Robbers.

EXPERIENCES OF A WOMAN IN THE DESERT OF ARIZONA.

By a Special Contributor.

WE might have been described as a cosmopolitan crowd at old Henry's camp that hot January afternoon as we hugged the shade of the cottonwoods. The Arizona desert stretched its mauve silences for miles and miles below the mountainside, but in this old prospector's quarters litter and sociability were supreme. There were five of us all told: a woman, a piebald burro, and three men.

Old Henry, the small, thin-faced, bewhiskered host, was fitting some shoes on his burro. Nan seemed cranky and gave the old man much trouble, moving when she should not and not moving when she should. And so they fought out their small battle in scufflings and dust.

Big Tom, the other visitor, sat idly, bridle over arm, on a soap box, talking little and spitting often. He declared on arriving that he hadn't seen any one for a week up at his copper prospect, and was so lonesome that he had quit work and hit the trail for folks. My industriously-inclined husband improved the opportunity to do a little tinkering on one of my boots, worn thin on mountain trails.

From where I sat on an inverted bucket near the tent door I could study the simple arrangement and conveniences of the old man's domicile. A cot then was of course at the farther end, and under it were packed provisions, clothes, and dishes. Thin pine boxes occupied all available space and bulged with all sorts of stuff ranging from dried apples to a pink celloid shaving glass. A stove was in another corner with a covered kettle standing in greasy silence upon it. The floor, as much of it as could be seen, was covered with sacking through the meshes of which green things were sprouting.

The Man and I were there by special invitation: the old prospector had told us several times of the hundreds of pounds of wild honey that could be found in the crevices of the rocky mountain, and had always ended these sweet narrations by urging us to visit his camp and sample some that he had. When we arrived that afternoon, our host, after the "Howdy" of greeting, cheerfully left off whittling the small hoofs of the obstreperous Nan to find for us the honey. He went inside, dropping the tent flap behind him, and we could hear a great moving and pushing of boxes.

"Now please, Henry, don't go to so much trouble to find it," I called.

"I'll get at it in just a minute," came the answer. "I guess I got it now all right."

After my intimate view of the domestic arrangements of our host's I was devoutly hoping that the lost confection would stay lost; but at last he appeared—more dusty than ever—with a large tin cup piled high with a light brown, mottled-looking mess, a tin spoon stuck into it for general use.

"Mebby you won't like it, but I think it tastes fine," he said. "A little rock and sand in it, but that always does get in when you blast for the stuff."

I helped myself sparingly from the cup and passed it to the Man, who, without taking any himself, handed it to Big Tom. The latter ate a big spoonful, rock, sand and all, and remarked that he had heard that there was any amount of honey to be found in these parts, but he himself had no time to look for it.

"Can we not go bee hunting this afternoon?" I inquired, looking at Henry, who was comparing Nan's front shoes, and, spitting copiously before answering, he replied: "Sure, I guess we can go if I ever get these shoes on. I don't know what makes her act so darn mean today."

Thereupon I urged every one to lend a hand at the work, and the Man smiled when I offered to blow the bellows of the little forge. Big Tom arose at once and I enjoyed seeing the erstwhile capricious Nan behave herself under his vigorous suppression of her tantrums. The work was speedily done, and within the hour we were off down the big wash, leaving Nannie on her new boots to keep house while we were gone. Big Tom on his big horse led the way, old Henry with bee-proof garments in the rear. Fifteen minutes' walk brought us to a rocky cliff at the edge of the wash where we heard a deep, droning sound. Looking up, we saw a crevice in the wall about ten feet up, in and out of which hundreds of bees were passing. Henry proved himself a veritable Napoleon in laying out the line of attack, and in a few moments, clad in gunny-sack shirt, and head piece, was up on the wall drilling a hole below the opening. "Oh, yes," he kept assuring me, "you will have plenty of time to run after I light the fuse. I have to git out a' the way myself."

The Man, Big Tom and I stood below among our buckets and spoons, waiting for word to run to cover, when the horse was safely tied. "I bet you," said the miner, "that we don't get any honey." And thereupon I wagered a half-dozen quails—to be killed later, that we would.

Finally, after much drilling, old Henry inserted a stick of giant powder in the hole, lit the fuse attached to it, and then things happened quickly. There was a wild dash up the wash, an explosion—not so loud as I expected, and then we rushed back. At first I didn't understand what had happened, but a short inspection showed that the shot had loosened the whole face of the cliff and sent it tumbling down. Both bees and honey were buried under tons and tons of huge boulders. My disappointment almost reduced me to tears, but Big Tom saved me. seating himself on a convenient rock, he laughed and laughed until the very desert laughed with him. "Say," he finally exclaimed, "this has been the best show I was ever at. I'm sure glad I came." And then he pointed at old Henry, who was standing with a most woebegone expression on his face and moaning over and over: "They was honey there all right, lots of it. I seen it as she fell."

The Man, poking around among the débris, suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove! See the rattlers." And there within a few feet of the top of the rough slope the blast had formed was a squirming, writhing mass of snakes whose winter quarters had been uncovered. In an instant, the three men were after them, armed with drills and rocks.

"Say! don't knock 'em to pieces," was old Henry's caution. "Hit 'em on the head." And suiting speech to action, he neatly decapitated one as it swung its ugly-looking length away from its fellows. And so the battle was on, three men against nine smakes. I didn't count in it, and watched the uneven fight from afar. In a few moments, the rattlers were all tossed down to the bed of the wash, all dead, Henry declared, but, snake-like, they still kept wriggling on.

Big Tom took this time to weave a fancy tale of a Mexican he had known dying from the bite of a rattlesnake head after it had been severed from the body.

"The skins would make beautiful belts," I offered as a suggestion in the general discussion as to what should be done with the reptiles.

"Yes, I heard they was all the go back in the States," said the ever-gallant Henry. "You pick out the ones you want an' I'll skin 'em fer you."

Having thus avowed his knowledge of the whims of fashion and offered to supply me with my quota of its follies, he further explained that he always took the fat and gall of rattlers, for they were sure cure for rheumatism and other pains. The Man and Big Tom cheerfully ceded their rights, and left Henry and me of the skins and galls. And then the miner his horse and departed, wishing us better time.

The next morning as I was nailing two skins on a board, I called out to the Man, who writing in the tent: "What do you say to for honey this morning?"

"It seems to me you are dippy on honey," "And where do you propose to get it?"

"Why," I replied, don't you remember the colony Henry told us about? It's a good way said the hole was low down and that he could scrape out some honey without blasting that I must have some for my pancakes before day goes by."

I urged this last plaintively. "I really don't should go without Henry." The Man said: ised to take us there upon his return from

He came out of the tent and stood looking at tening skins. "Pooh!" said I, as I rubbed them, "he will probably not return for days. I go this morning. I feel just like it."

"Well, Madam, I see that this is a point consciences differ. I'm for waiting until back. Aren't you putting too much grease on the looking critically at them over my shoulder.

"I won't argue with you on ethics, or be criticisms on my method of tanning snake plied. "I want to know if you will go beeing,

"Ah ha!" he exclaimed. "But tell me first be the guileless John to go forth into the dark his uppers and scratch for the golden pelf, bugs sting his poor body?"

"Would John be afraid?" I asked.

"No, a thousand times no," the Man replied on! I follow."

After an hour's walk and search, we found swarms of them humming about a small, only a few feet from the bottom of a red We trailed on past it a hundred yards or so, hauled our beeing outfit. My plan was to smudges for a place of refuge, envelope the arrangement I had rigged for him that was sting-proof, and I, not too near the place, the meshes of a blue worsted shawl, would wisdom and valor to be demonstrated in a encounter with the bees.

"Be it on your head if I am stung, young hunter mumbled from within the cheese swathed his head, as I tied the sleeves and pajamas with yellow string, and fastened them his clothing with safety pins in every available

At last, he was ready, the smudges lit, and the teeth with fire shovel and pail, he approached hole, I following at a safe distance and ready should the bees come my way. After he had self down, with his head in the hole, the seem to notice me, and few lit on him as he poked his shovel into the darkness. I drew stood within a few feet of the place, and to poke and gouge more vigorously even though suffocating and stone blind.

Rising at length, he came over and extended "What is it?" he asked. "I can't see with this head."

Peering into it, I had to confess that I saw comb.

"Oh, give it to me," he said resignedly, "and another try." And going back, he lay down front of the hole and worked the shovel more than ever.

"There's a lot of honey here," he called, it is out of my reach; around a curve I can get of big combs of it."

After more straining and poking, and scraping, clared that he had some, and sure enough, showed me the pail, it was over half-full. was dark brown in color, and some of it in and there were many young bees squirming the broken mess. I tasted it with a flat piece and alas! it was horrid.

"What's it like?" the Man inquired, divesting of his hot and honey-daubed head piece and "Fine," I felt bound to answer; "taste it and I offered him the flat stone. He did clared it nasty.

"Well," I said, "it's been fun getting it,

"Oh! has it!" he exclaimed, dusting his sticky person. "Come on, let's go home."

When he proposed that our finding should Henry, I made no objections. The old man best way to treat the wild, bitter honey of tains, and that was to put it under his bed.

Bertha Villiger.

THE SUCCESSFUL ENDEAVOR OF A FAITHFUL DAUGHTER.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was in a boarding-house in Washington that the writer met with Mrs. Margaret Eaton, the famous beauty of the olden time who caused the greatest social upheaval ever known in Washington city.

In girlhood's days she had been known as "Pretty Peggy O'Neal." Her father had been the keeper of a popular tavern in old Washington, in the days when tavern-keepers were tapsters; but this only daughter received no little social recognition because of her uncommon beauty, and because of her vivacious Irish wit. The old tapster was proud of her, as he had ample reason to be; in fact, she was all that he had in the world of which he could be perfectly proud. He gave her a superior education. She had musical talent, and became locally celebrated for both vocal and instrumental performances.

With the story of her life, its storms and hurricanes, we shall have a chat one of these days, but for the present you shall have the repetition of a true story as it was told by Mrs. Eaton; a story concerning a dutiful daughter of the old world.

Incidentally, it should be stated that the jealous society women of Washington assailed the reputation of Mrs. Eaton, refused to associate with her, declared her an outcast; but President Jackson believed in her, stood by her, and discharged or accepted the resignations of some of the members of his Cabinet, in order to get rid of their character-assassin wives. That dismemberment of his Cabinet in defense of the honor of a woman is regarded by many students of history as one of the boldest deeds of Jackson's career.

The writer hereof knew her well for almost a year, helped to soothe her last days and hours, and believed in her integrity. From her lips the writer heard this story concerning Bertha Villiger. Mrs. Eaton had known the lady and had met with her several times in Europe when the songstress was mature of years and prosperous; when she was proudly caring for an afflicted father and giving pride as well as comfort to that [illegible] man. Mrs. Eaton gave the names and places as they had been narrated to her. This is the story.

Bernhard Villiger, a German-born gentleman, was gifted with musical ability and education. He was struggling hopefully for eminence and fame, when he was stricken with partial paralysis. When Her Majesty's Theater at London was the only Italian Opera-house in all Great Britain, Bernhard Villiger was chief violinist and leader of the orchestra. It was a position of eminence in the musical world of that day. While thus engaged, he was privately laboring on some original compositions which he fondly believed would win fame for him.

Then the paralytic stroke came. Physicians said that it was caused by overwork, loss of sleep and inattention to the laws of health. Herr Villiger had allowed his ambition to drive him beyond his physical strength. While he was thus prostrated, his wife died. She was a good musician, and could have earned sufficient to care for him, but death claimed her. His daughter alone remained to the stricken man. The story, as told by Bertha Villiger, began with the day of the final extremity, when they were existing in two small rooms on a second floor in London; when all their furniture had been disposed of in order that they might buy food and medical supplies. Herr Villiger, only 40 years old, lay helplessly on a small bedstead, with a sheet and a threadbare blanket for his meager covering, and clad in a well-worn dressing gown. He had [illegible] patience. Hope for ultimate recovery illumined his large brown eyes. The spirit of ambition still struggled within him. Day after day he repeated to his faithful daughter: "Patience and hope. I shall yet be well." The days came, the weeks wearily wended their way into months, and disappointment seemed only to feed the fires of his hope and ambition. Bertha Villiger was not deceived. She saw no silver lining to the clouds that grew darker day by day. But she always turned to her beloved father a smiling face, and answered him with "Patience and hope, my papa. You shall yet be well. Your name shall yet be known throughout the world."

But at last came an evening when there was only half a loaf of bread left to them, and their two little rooms were almost bare. Secretly Bertha had sold her own bedstead in order to pay the rent and buy food. She had been sleeping on the bare floor of the other little room, but the helpless father knew nothing of that. Then another month rolled away. The inexorable landlady was demanding rent, and cold-bloodedly threatening eviction.

Poor Bertha! As she toasted the last crusts and made a little weak tea, tears unbidden suffused her eyes. Prayers welled from her heart, while her brain teemed with texts from the Luther Bible which she would not forget. With the tears there came a convulsive sob.

"Bertha, dear, what is the trouble?" exclaimed the [illegible]

"There is no trouble, my papa," she replied, as she brushed away the tears. "I am toasting the bread."

"But, my Bertha, you are crying. I heard you."

"Oh, my papa, how you do dream!" she exclaimed, as she went to him and kissed him.

"Maybe I was dreaming," he said patiently, "but I thought you were in great distress and were crying. It was a frightening dream."

"But you are wide awake now, my papa, and here are the toast and tea. When you dream again, let your dreams be of patience and hope."

"Have the doctors forbidden watercresses for me?"

"No, my papa, they are not forbidden, but the woman did not call today, and there is no green grocer near. I could not go far and leave you all alone."

"Very true," he answered. "I almost thought that you had forgotten how I like them and look for them."

"Now I am crying, my papa," she said, for the tears were flowing from her eyes and the suppressed sobs burst forth.

"True, my Bertha, and I have made them flow. How selfish I am, when I am such a burden and you are so faithful!" and he caressed her with his one unafflicted hand, while she crushed back the tears and kissed him devotedly.

When the frugal meal was ended, Herr Villiger said:

"Now, my Bertha, will you go to the piano and sing for me one of Weber's songs? Sing for me that one which I adapted to the words of Lord Byron's 'Farewell.' "

"I will sing it for you, my papa," she replied. "But you have forgotten about the piano, haven't you?"

"True, child, I had forgotten. But you still have your mother's guitar. You will never part with that."

"No, my papa, I will always keep mamma's guitar. Here it is; but your adaptation is not for the guitar."

"Yes, I know. It was for the pianoforte. But my Bertha is as competent as I ever was, to change the adaptation and to improvise her own accompaniment. You are a skillful musician, my child."

"Thank you, my dear papa. I will try for you."

She sang for him, and she noted with strange emotion that he was beating time with his only useful hand.

Softly she laid down her mother's guitar and went to the window to spend a long evening alone with her thoughts of helplessness; for the morrow would soon come. The rent must be paid.

She opened her dilapidated little trunk. There were keepsakes of her own—and of her mother's. Several of them would be pawnable for enough to pay the rent. But which one? All was darkness before her mental vision. Her eyes rested upon the guitar. It was a valuable instrument. She must pawn it!

She shuddered at the idea. Then she heard a voice. Even in her mature years she insisted that she heard her mother's voice saying: "You can sing, Bertha, you can sing. Go into the streets and sing; but keep mother's guitar!"

"But papa would be heartbroken," she whispered.

"You must go and sing. Go now!" was her answer.

Then there was complete silence. Her raiment was shabby, but it was clean. Over her head she threw a scarf which had belonged to her mother. Taking her guitar, she tiptoed to the cot and kissed her father. He smiled, but did not waken. She took that for a good omen. In a moment she was in the street, wandering aimlessly and saying:

"This is not what the world calls respectable, but I am on a holy mission. My purpose is respectable. God knows. Mother is with me."

Very soon she found herself in Oxford street, near the Portland Chapel. Before it she prayed for help, for guidance. Then she slowly walked on. Stopping before a house in Great Portland street, she noted that the parlor was lighted. There were people within. It was an old-fashioned house, numbered 91. She stood there with quivering lips, murmuring a prayer, when a quiet-looking old manservant entered the gate carrying with him a dish of oysters. He entered the front door, as though he belonged to the family. This house was surely respectable, and the street was respectable, for it was very quiet and orderly.

Bertha tremblingly took her mother's guitar from beneath her mantle. Then, standing in the road near the curb, she began to play a prelude. Two men on the other side of the street stopped. One lady stopped near her. Several children came out of the houses. Timidly she began to sing the "Farewell," just as she had been singing it for her father.

When she had concluded the first verse of the song, she was rewarded with several sixpenny pieces and several more pence by the small gathering of a dozen or more people. The parlor window of No. 91 had been raised just a few inches. Hoping for greater reward, she sang the concluding verses with such pathos and power that her increased audience showed its appreciation with a slight clapping of hands—and with some more silver and copper.

Then, to her surprise and gratification, the old servant came to the door, walked to the curb and very respectfully asked her if she would come into the house and let the master speak to her for a moment.

Bertha bowed to her audience and thanked the people for their kindness, and followed the servant into the house. She was taken into the back parlor, where a short, stout man, gray-haired and old-fashioned in attire, bowed to her and asked her to be seated. She laid her guitar upon a small mahogany table, seated herself in a large high-backed chair, and then noticed another man in a corner of the room who bowed to her and then sat down. He was somewhat taller and was dressed in plain black clothing of later fashion. She noted that he was very thin, with high cheekbones and sunken cheeks. He had a very prominent Roman nose. His eyes were strangely large. His face was very pale.

After that passing glance at him, Bertha turned toward the master of the house. He was taking a pinch of snuff and murmuring something; apparently talking as though suffering with cold, talking through his nose. Finally he spoke clearly and said:

"You sing exceedingly well; far too well for a strolling singer in the streets."

"Thank you, sir," said Bertha expectantly.

"Now, young lady, I want to ask you why you came to single out my house, of all the houses in this great city; why you came here to show off your voice."

"I came here wholly by chance," replied Bertha, instantly arising. "I had no idea of disturbing you. I am very poor, but I am well bred, and I shall not disturb you again."

"I beg your pardon, young lady," he exclaimed, hastily but sincerely. "Pray be seated. I am too abrupt, but I mean well. You have not offended me. I am gratified with your singing, and I want to hear more of it. But I wondered how you happened to select my house, of all others."

"Simply because it seemed to be a respectable house, and in a respectable neighborhood; that is all," she replied.

"Then you are not an English girl?" he inquired.

"My dear mother was English. My father is German," she said.

"Will you please tell me who taught you to sing?"

"My father, sir. He is a thorough musician."

"Well, well, well. Can you play the pianoforte?"

"I believe that I understand that instrument, sir."

"Well, my dear young lady, will you kindly favor me? Please come to the parlor. Here is a special make of Broadwood—and Broadwood is a maker of the best only. Please favor me." He placed a stool for her.

As soon as her fingers touched the keys of that splendid instrument, Bertha Villiger forgot herself; forgot her troubles and anxieties. Only the born, bred, trained musician can comprehend how she felt as that magnificent piano responded to her touch. She was not now playing for pennies, nor for wealth, but for exalted pleasure. She broke into a waltz of Weber's. When she had finished it, the little man came to her side and said:

"It is wonderful. Please do not stop. I am a glutton for good music; please go on."

She went on and on and on. She went from one subject to another, and everything that she played was Weber, Weber, Weber. Although her father had taught her everything classical, he had kept Weber before her constantly, until she knew all of Weber's music by heart. Because Weber was her father's favorite, he was also her favorite, and so she played nothing but Weber; and for half an hour she continued, giving a recital of every phase of superior music. At last she hesitated for a moment, looked up at an old-fashioned clock, hastily arose, and apologized, saying:

"You gentlemen will please excuse me, for I was lost, completely lost. I have never touched such a grand pianoforte. I must be going now."

"Wonderful! wonderful! You are a marvelous musician, young lady," exclaimed the little man. "Your singing and your playing are superb. Now I will tell you why I asked you for your reason, when I supposed that you had a purpose in selecting this house. I am Sir George Smart, director of music at Covent Garden Theater, at the Oratorios and so forth. I can help you. I will help you. You shall not sing in the streets. No, you shall sing to royalty and to the great public."

While Bertha Villiger was bowing and thanking Sir George for his compliments and for his kindness, she was thanking God for His guidance. The quiet man in the corner arose, came forward and spoke for the first time. Manifestly he was a foreigner—a German—for he said:

"Your fader, he is a Cherman?"

"Ja, mein Herr," Bertha replied in German; and then they conversed wholly in that language. He asked many questions, and finally asked her to tell him her age, and she replied:

"I am 22."

"How long have you been singing in the streets?"

"Tonight, for the first time, and in front of this house only."

"May I ask why you have done this?"

"We have no money for rent nor for food. My poor father is helpless, because of partial paralysis. My father would not approve; but he does not know. I have never before done anything without his consent. But this was absolutely necessary."

"May I ask your name?"

"My name is Bertha Villiger."

"Villiger?" he exclaimed.

"Yes, sir. I am the only daughter of Bernhard Villiger."

All of this had been said in German. The tall stranger turned hastily to the master of the house, and exclaimed:

"Sir George, this is wonderful! This is a countryman of mine. I knew her father many years ago. We were personal friends. I shall take care of her, and of him also."

"Very well," replied the little man; "but you shall not take her voice from me. I must present her to the public."

"That will be proper," replied the stranger, and then turning to the bewildered young woman, he said:

"You have given me your address, and I will call on you and your father tomorrow. He will be glad to see me, I know. Your future shall be not in the streets, but in palaces. In the meantime, you will take this and make your dear father comfortable immediately."

He placed in her hand a purse which was heavy with coin. It contained well nigh $100. Feeling the weight of it, she murmured a protest, and he replied, very earnestly:

"The people in the streets paid according to their means for the pleasure of hearing you. I am doing the same. You have given us an evening's entertainment of great value. Now go to your father and tell him that you have met with an old friend, one who knew him in his young manhood, and who will call to see him tomorrow."

"But as you are an old friend, you will surely give me your name, so that I may tell it to him," said Bertha.

"No, child, not tonight," he replied. "I want to call and see if he will recognize me after all these years."

"Well, then," interrupted Sir George, "I shall tell her, for she hesitates about taking the purse. Miss Villiger, this gentleman is too modest, on account of the music which you have been playing for us. Tell your father that you have met with the greatest musician living in this whole world today. Let me introduce Carl Maria von Weber."

Dancing in Paris Streets.

HOW FRENCH CELEBRATE THEIR FOURTH OF JULY.

HAPPY MARRIAGES DATE FROM THE REPUBLICAN ANNIVERSARY—SOCIETY IN THE STREET BALLROOM—CANNON OF MT. VALERIEN—THE FORBIDDEN SONG—ROYALIST RUBBER STAMPS—THE KING'S CAMELOTS—REPUBLICAN THEATRICALS GRATIS!

From a Special Correspondent.

PARIS, June 22.—Nothing so astonishes American tourists. Dancing in the Paris streets on the French Fourth is like a sudden return to the Golden Age of gaiety and kindliness.

There is no horse play, no incorrectness. Any girl is safe to dance with any strange man.

Our girl tourists and young matrons feel it, and whirl off with clean young artizans, while brothers, husbands tolerantly wait. Blooming shop girls say "With pleasure, Monsieur!" to our boys, with simple confidence.

What is the miracle that makes the timid unafraid and the fastidious tolerant? How do even Paris street roughs become gentle, courtly? The heart is there. It is a queer anniversary sentiment, for one day only. It is branded on the French heart by the splendid ideals of the terrible old Revolution—which beheaded its own children for lack of "fraternity."

Thousands of happy marriages in Paris date from the republic's anniversary; and the government of the republic planned that they should do so.

It is Machiavellian politics. It is the dancing in the streets on past French Fourths since 1889 that strengthens the republic against Royalism, Socialism, Bonapartism, anarchy. Twenty years have passed since I saw the republic set the fete up—and tempt common people to look back on it with tenderness.

Suppose you are a working girl, with no society. In Paris working girls have no society if they desire to keep good. Then, suppose, suddenly, in the name of George Washington and Bunker Hill, your street is transformed to a ballroom, the trees glow with tinted fairy lamps, and a great orchestra strikes up for general dancing!

Young men cluster round you, the unknown girl; and it is perfectly correct. They ought to be fraternal, and you ought to be fraternal—it is the feast of fraternity, equality and liberty! You danced with the young god whose pay envelope you open, now, for life. Would you not be grateful to the Independence bell and the Boston tea party?

Thus vague loyalty to the republic surges in the hearts of countless Paris women when their boys are tempted to join the King's Camelots to get clean clothes, or handle the royalist rubber stamp for easy pocket money. When their husbands start up the Forbidden Song, they throw cold water on the hot revolting sentiment.

Probably few Americans have an idea of the scope of the "Internationale." It is not a song of socialism, nor of anarchy, nor exclusively of workingmen. It is the song of the Revolution from Below, as was the "Marseillaise" 100 years ago. When the striking postoffice clerks wished to affirm their mastery of the department, they sang the "Internationale." It was worse than striking.

But for the women of Paris, the "Internationale" might be more terrible. It has the swing of a great song of the century. It was written by an otherwise unknown Belgian named Pottier, and, alone, it will take him down the roll of history. The following rough translation gives but a faint idea of its majestic flow:

"Stand up, ye living damned! Stand up, ye hunger slaves!
Reason's volcano thunders, boiling its last great waves!
The past is past forever. Rise, cravens, hear the words:
The axis of earth is changing. The serfs shall be the lords!"

So runs the first stanza, followed by the solemn chorus, as of a great war hymn: "C'est la lut-te fi-na-le!—the 'final struggle,' and, doubtless, it means brothers' blood as much as did the "Marseillaise," which was originally a mere song against kings and their foreign allies. As the "Marseillaise" was not tolerated in the second empire, so the "Internationale" is stopped by the police today; but it is the working women of Paris who daily throw cold water on its sentiment.

Why? Because they danced on an unforgotten Fourth; because each Fourth has been a social anniversary; because the sentiment of home and family is associated with the brotherly street ballroom and the gratuitous republican theatricals of the public squares.

It is most brilliant in these great squares, like the Place of the Republic, on the site of the Bastile. Beneath the shade trees, the municipality sets up its big band stand; but the central government pays an allowance for musicians, 470 orchestras for Paris only, not to mention towns and cities to the smallest. The ward Mayors send their bills in: dance music for the people!

Crash, bang! It is the great quadrille, the democrat of dances. It is a hot afternoon. The endless cafés round the Place are crowded. The sidewalks overflow with chairs and tables to the Place itself, across the street. At times the gay multitudes will stop the street cars, not to let them interrupt an act of the saucy wandering players.

Crash, bang! The dance music is further toward the center. Here, the edges of the Place are packed with standing thousands. They form circles round a raft of singers, dancers, acrobats, sword swallowers, pantomimists, sleight-of-hand men and small boys with patriotic speeches—and a hat to take collection.

Crash, bang! The big platform of the ward's Republican Theatricals is besieged by a solid crowd that will not yield an inch. But in the shade, around the band stand, even the toughest street boys leave clear space for the girls of Paris in their ballroom.

See them in their cool white shirt waists, self-possessed, like rich men's daughters at a costly function! See their pretty airs and graces! See the unknown young men eye them!

What a lottery! What romance! Every girl knows that her fate may take a new turn on this sweltering afternoon. It is like an immense masquerade—with their own pretty faces. There are unknown youths from every part of Paris. The girls come in blushing bunches, giggling silly secrets, yet tense and alert for the adventure that can come but once a year.

Every girl stands on her merits. Every man has a chance to be pleasing. Later, they may tell each other what their daily lives are.

Boom! The Mt. Valerien cannons thunder from their heights beyond the city, at ten-minute intervals. They remind the enemies of the republic that it has its army. The republic is beginning to feel its enemies again—else why these extraordinary ward republican theatricals?

Few Americans note their meaning. They confound them with the faking artistes of the sidewalk. They are really actors of merit, paid by the French government to act all day—short pieces, without scenery, on high platforms in the public places. They are pieces written by known playwrights with consummate art—again on order by the government. It is a fact not generally known. The government pays well for pieces of strong republican moral!

The French Fourth is the 14th of July, the anniversary of the people's capture of the Bastile, handy prison of the King. Like our own Fourth, it celebrates the putting-down of kings, aristocrats and privilege. Well I remember one such piece last year, played on the very site of the Bastile itself. The characters were wicked nobles, shaky victims of the old State prison, and republicans like Mirabeau, Camille Desmoulins, Necker and Bailly, Mayor of Paris. It sounds heavy, I admit. The republican tirades were longer than a popular American audience would have tolerated. Yet, before the little play was over, the actors had their Parisian public wild against the naughtiness of all kings and aristocrats.

It is curious that the French government feels called on to attack the royalists at this late day. It may surprise you. But the royalists are looking up. Fear of the "Internationale" is making well-to-do folks look to them as possible saviors of their property.

Stand outside any Paris church, of any Sunday morning—and observe two kinds of young men op ing: "The royalist paper!"

"L'Actin Francaise! Le Journal Royalist!"

You cannot mistake the rich, artistocratic "The King's Camelots"—"The Newsboys of the Clean-cut, elegant, high-headed, dressed by Lond ors, they make a queer figure selling paper companions, alert, strangely enthusiastic, wear rich suits, of last year's cut. You cannot either; they are working youths—in the aristo clothes!

"The King's Camelots" do not merely They "demonstrate;" cry out: "Vive the King crowds; they decorate statues; they distribute brochures; they get young men into clubs; and less it is they who operate the rubber stamps.

They might be insignificant but for one fact continue. Paris has seen them four years past we laughed. They were boy fakers earning striking pose and get-up, almost gentlemen. They adventurous sons of aristocratic families, showing 15-year-old cousin of Cte. Robert de Montesqui came the hero of the Faubourg St. Germain by arrested. A police judge laughed at them as royalists."

"No, the first royalists—a new lot!" answer youth. The word went round Paris. Four year passed. "The King's Camelots" should be They are more in evidence than ever. The high are full of them.

In fraternizing with working boys, they accom politics their elders failed in through the century. ask working boys to their rich homes. They dress in their last year's clothes. Their elegant mothe sisters smile on the poor boys, awake ambition, them with doctrines of "the good old times" say even middle-class boys are let in.

Nothing seems more futile than their rubber And yet, who knows? They are plain rubber st foot long. "Vive the King!" and "Down with public!" The ink pads are pinned to the coat The work is to stamp "Vive the King!" and "Down the republic!" on all bare walls. It is secret work.

It seemed laughable at first. Now we are wo There must be immense energy behind it. Who directing politician? He is using two great forces ple, direct advertising and the training of the yo

The sun is setting. Paris glows with fairy The housekeepers are illuminating. The munic lights its vast lines of colored bulbs. In every they dance. Let us glance at the little Place St. nand, where every one knows every one by

Here is another kind of romance. Young men admired this girl or that for months past. They not get introduced. Who knows what may come the French Fourth's dancing?

Hop! See them dance the polka: the "America tist" and the florist's daughter; the postoffice cle the cashier-girl of the "Mère de Famille," the man from "Raoul's Shoes" with fair creature cake shop!

Watch the youths of the electric-light plant ing with the graceful shop girls of the "Amacitia" boarding branch. M. Vasseur, who owns two apar houses, dances his pale daughter. She hopes th headed law student will come and say to her "What a healthy mingling of the classes!" Then ask her for the mazourka.

Surely, it is mingling. The brave valets and servant girls for three blocks round are footing side their mistresses. The street is long, the P wide. Three elegant ladies want to dance. Their bands laugh. "Yes, dance, of course!" The flori with the white beard is the ward deputy. There lady dancing with her butler!

Now the breeze is up, the air is cool. each dance they lead their partners to their husbands, chaperones, at the café sidewalk tables chair-filled doorways. Fraternal glasses clink. are light words. "Vive la république!" A cry. la république!" strikes in an accidental pause pause grows long. "Vive la république!" comes hundred throats. Tears stand in many eyes. emotioned. Yes, after all, fraternity is their is a fair ideal, all classes mingling.

So another French Fourth passes. Dancing streets has once more strengthened the republi than you might think.

LET US BE CHILDREN.

Why should we gather with infinite wearines
Facts that destroy the illusions of youth?
Wrap ourselves up in a mantle of dreariness
Naming it knowledge or calling it truth?

Truth, when we find it, is cruel and saddens u
Wisdom convinces, conviction strikes chill;
Childhood's illusions did nothing but gladden
Let us be children and hold to them still.

Let us still fancy at sunset the mountain peak
Touches the sky with its cap of pink snow;
Still in the green woods some fabulous fountain
That can perpetual springtime bestow.

Hope is a garden whose soil is untillable,
When age plows furrows and wisdom runs
Faith should be taught us in words of one
Simple and strong as the prayer of a child.

And oh, may our love be as pure as the fai
That first awakened our innocent thrill!
So when the worldly, the wise and the wary
We may be counted as God's children still.

We and Our Neighbors.

THE VERY UNTIMELY CALL OF MRS. SPICANDSPAN.

By a Special Contributor.

ONE of the chief causes of unhappiness in our domesticity may be expressed by the one word "callers." I do not mean friends, although frequently one is fortunate enough to have the words synonymous, for friends are rarer and more precious than the Philosopher's Stone or the Golden Fleece, and are not to be mentioned lightly with the horde of people who force themselves or are forced by circumstances upon us in this vale of tears.

One of the irritating thorns in my flesh is our near neighbor Mrs. Spicandspan. You must know her, for she is not confined to one neighborhood—in fact, I believe her to be omnipresent.

She is also called (I always groan before uttering the following words, for much the reason that one raps upon wood after making a boast) a model housekeeper.

Our husbands quarreled in their youth. That, and the fact of our proximity, seem to be the only reasons for our intimacy, and warrant her pouncing in upon me at irregular intervals.

It cannot be because she cares for me particularly, as she likes only housekeeping perfections, which I am not. Billy says that I need not be so noisy in that assertion, as no one would be likely to even suspect me.

I return her calls merely as a matter of discipline on the old and I think worn-out principle that, as I hate to do it, it must be good for me.

Reasoning according to the law of analogy, she probably looks upon me in the same light, as a kind of ever-present demonstration of what, but for her activity, she might have become.

So we play our parts in the farcical side of our everyday existence.

I do not deny that Mrs. Spicandspan is a model. She is more. She is a living wonder. I verily believe that if a pot of gold should be offered for a speck of dust found within the walls of her domicile, she could not produce it. I have said so numberless times to Billy. "So?" says that worthy creature. "Wouldn't we be set up for life, though!"

To keep him from becoming personal, which, of course, is ill-bred, I hasten to add: "And you should see her kitchen floor—you could eat off it."

"Why in the dickens should I do that?" replies he, looking at me in wide-eyed amazement. Sometimes I think that Billy must be an Englishman.

Still it is a fact that never house shone like that house. The windows fairly twinkle. The curtains look like foam. The chandeliers and radiators rival the mirrors, and are in turn outdistanced by the kitchen range, whose brilliancy makes the eye ache.

The bathroom (that terror of our lives) is a mixture of dazzling silver and snowy porcelain, and the kitchen floor, as I have remarked, is a sheet of white, satiny wood that would make you weep with envy, if you were of that kind.

The sofa pillows are beautiful—so upright and smooth; the davenport and couches are so plump; my lady's boudoir is so immaculate; Mr. Spicandspan's dressing table so shipshape; in fact, the whole house is so extremely orderly, trim and just so-so, that I often wonder if they don't really live in the basement and just appear when the place is on exhibition.

Whenever Billy and I spend an evening there, which we invariably do after we have had an unusually frivolous and lovely time, I come home quite depressed.

"I really intend to do better in regard to my housekeeping, dear," I say meekly. "Mrs. Spickandspan makes me ashamed."

"Me, too," says Billy. "Ashamed that a friend of mine should have married such an old shrew."

"She is a model housekeeper," I say, parrot-like.

Here something is muttered that I cannot hear distinctly, but which I am too wise to ask repeated.

"I feel as though this house is filthy," I say crossly, getting more desperate as I note his indifference.

"Oh, not so you can notice it," he replies gaily, as he opens the door of the aforesaid place; then, like the magic of the enchanted places of old, all my blues fly away as I step over the threshold.

It is not so bad as I had thought. There is a dear, old homey look about it that is irresistible. To be sure the sofa pillows are all bunched up where Billy took his after-dinner siesta, as he said, "to brace up for the coming ordeal;" and Micawber, my dear old cat, is curled up peacefully slumbering on my Navajo blanket, a habit we both disapprove of on account of his shedding his hair, but with which neither of us have the heart to remonstrate; while over all is that faint, sweet aroma of good Havana which speaks of love and peace and blissful content.

When my call is returned, however, I do not always recover so quickly. In the first place, she always comes at such inopportune times; when I have been writing steadily for a week, to the oblivion of everything else; when we have had company or illness or something equally distracting.

Ah, "distinctly I remember" her last visitation. As it was only on Monday, the horror of it is with me still.

Billy had departed to a stag dinner, after making a whirlwind toilet, and I had settled myself in the den, with my mind fully made up to hours of blissful devotion to my favorite muse, when who should appear but my worthy lady of Sapolio fame!

As I am rather superstitious in regard to malign influences over embryo manuscripts, I did not take her into the den, but unthinkingly opened wide the library and bade her enter.

As she stepped across the sill I saw her eyebrows lift in surprise, while a look of undisguised disdain curled her lips. I looked hastily about. Would that I had done so earlier in this wretched day!

I remembered with dismay that Billy, finding his room too warm the night before, had gathered "the drapery of his couch about him and lain down to pleasant dreams" on the library sofa, and I had forgotten all about it.

There was the blanket and comfort in an indescribable tangle, the pillows scattered about the floor, and oh, horror of horrors! there, hung up in fantastic array upon the fire screen, was a pair of yellow pajamas.

For a moment I asked myself that fatal question: "Is marriage a failure?"

Billy has since told me that at that precise moment, just as the fish came on, he had a terrible presentiment of evil.

After I had made my feeble apology, which was superciliously received, I coaxed my awful guest into the parlor, hardly daring to open my eyes and groaning inwardly over my terrible habit of procrastination. I had had time to attend to these things, but of course I simply would not do it, preferring to write a lot of drivel.

"My, what a strong smell of tobacco!" she says presently, as she seats herself, with eagle eye alert. "Is it possible that you allow Mr. Alexander to smoke in here? Don't you know that your curtains will retain the odor?"

"I can buy new curtains," I reply lightly, laying undue stress upon the last word, which she seemingly ignores.

"Yes—but how much better to forbid such abominations," she says, quite seriously. "Such a very injurious and filthy habit! Why do you allow it?"

"Well," I say, a trifle hotly, my anger at poor Billy cooling as I hear him abused, "I suppose, my dear Mrs. Spicandspan, it is not that I love Caesar less, but Rome more."

That settles her. Being such a model, she has little time to read, but she is wise enough to recognize when she is in danger, so she looks as sagacious as possible and hastily changes the subject.

Later, in a burst of enthusiasm over a Multi-Flora rose of mine, I ask her to come upstairs to see it. I remembered that I had given especial care to my room that morning, as a sort of compensation for the neglect of everything else, and so tripped lightly up the stairs with a sense of assured virtue.

Just as I opened the door I remembered with a gasp of actual terror how late Billy had been in dressing for the stag, and what a wild scramble had gone on over my head a few hours before.

I gave one glance, and made a dive for the window where stood my rose, fervently wishing that like the fabled beanstalk of old it might grow with magical swiftness and hide both myself and this awful room from the eyes of humanity.

I thought of that immaculate table of Mr. Spicandspan, and almost groaned aloud. I absolutely never saw so many articles, nor of such variety, on any stand in my life, as were gathered upon Billy's dressing table.

Collars, cuffs, studs, buttons, razor strop, soap, magnesia, bay rum, military brushes, whisk broom, clothes brush, towels, handkerchiefs and cigar stubs were mixed in inglorious profusion about a shaving mug—that reminded one somehow of a mad dog.

Billy has since told me that at that moment, also, just as he had arrived at the salad, he became conscious of little chills running up and down his spine, which, as every one knows, is a sure sign that some one is walking on your grave.

I felt that I could cheerfully have done so. When he came home, at the close of this trying ordeal, and I had told him of the trials through which I had passed, he merely said:

"Why in the wide world doesn't that old crank stay at home?"

"She thinks you are a dirty animal," I reply with an ill-concealed smirk.

"Well, if she doesn't like the animals, why does she visit the menagerie?" says my worthy husband with an air of finality.

Nevertheless it has some effect upon me. For a few days I work like a galley slave. At night I am too tired to dress for dinner and too weary to do anything but jump into bed at 8 o'clock. I rout poor old Micawber out of his sunshiny corners into the basement, hide all the pipes and cigar trays, and lead Billy a regular dog's life; but I just cannot keep it up.

I hate to have red hands and live in kimonos and sleep half my life away with the chickens, haunted by Billy's reproachful eyes, so I have a speedy relapse.

I do up my hair in the most frivolous way possible, but on a gown that Billy calls "a Lala-Coola," slip on my best patent slippers, which the aforesaid gentleman designates as my "shiny feet," and prepare to return to the flesh pots of Egypt.

I call him up by phone and ask him to come home as early as possible, so that we may have a nice, long evening.

That is just like a cipher message to Billy, who came promptly at 6, with a bunch of carnations in one hand and a box of chocolates under his arm; and after a dinner that I secretly believe even Mrs. Spicandspan could not surpass, we spend a most delightful evening.

At this time we had no maid—a state of affairs described by my mate as "an oasis in the desert."

"Can you allow the dishes to remain until the morning, slothful woman?" says he severely, as I proceed to pile them in orderly array upon the kitchen table.

"You bet I can!" I answer slangily, as I take him by the arm and lead him away from the evidence of my return to evil ways.

I felt as an exile must, on returning to his native land. Oh, how happy we were, and how comfortable! Billy lay on the couch, as of old, with Micawber slumbering peacefully on the Navajo at his feet, while I rocked happily to and fro, close to them both, with "Pickwick Papers" open on my lap—the latter being one of the necessities of our housekeeping.

The beautiful pinks nod at us from their place of honor on the library table; the delicious Lowney's is within easy reach; I look about me with a happy sigh of pure content. Above my head the room is fairly blue with smoke, in whose fantastic rings all my petty irritations

GENERAL TRAINING DAY.

AN OLD GENTLEMAN FROM NEW ENGLAND RECALLS THE DAYS OF HIS YOUTH.

[New York Sun:] "I don't know what brought it to my mind," said the old gentleman, "but there came to me the other day a recollection of general training day in the New England town where I was born and where I lived until the Civil War.

"Every year we had in the spring what we called general training day, a day on which all the militia turned out to be reviewed by the Governor of the State. That was always a great day. The militia formed on the green to be reviewed there, and then they formed in a grand procession and marched over the route covering the principal streets of the town, making a show to young and old most imposing and inspiring, the bands playing and the banners flying and the soldiers in their varied uniforms awakening no end of admiration.

"The parade was far from being the only delight of the day, though it was its glorious culmination.

"On general training day, special trains were run on the railroads leading into town, and many people came from many other towns to make the day a holiday, and from all around the neighboring country farmers drove in.

"Of course, all the town people turned out, to the last boy and girl and baby, and what with the town folk and the folks from all around the streets were full of people and everybody was in his best clothes and all the girls wore their lightest and brightest dresses, and the streets in the center of the town were crowded with all these people and the scene was marked by great variety and constant change and motion, animated scene of endless fascination.

"Along one side of the green on general training day there was always set up a line of booths where they sold refreshments. Refreshments of all kinds they sold, sandwiches and peanuts and big scalloped ginger cakes and oranges and popcorn balls, and then there were always some stands that sold nothing but oyster stews; these to me were particularly inviting in those days.

"I always used to get my father to let me buy a stew, and that experience always delighted me. Twelve and a half cents a stew cost in those days, a York shilling. A Yankee shilling was sixteen and two-thirds cents, six to a dollar, while York shillings were eight to a dollar.

"They didn't use to put many oysters in these stews, and they were pretty well watered; it wouldn't surprise me to learn that the present-day church-fair stew was really modelled on one of those old-time general training-day stews, but they were always piping hot and they were something different.

"That was general training day in our New England town in the days before the war, and then when the war came there was training of another sort; solid regiments of men now with knapsacks on their backs and guns on their shoulders, and not in gaudy uniforms now, but in just plain blue.

"I wonder if they have general training day anywhere now."

Moving a Buffalo Herd.

The most precious cargo of live stock ever carried in Western Canada arrived here today in the form of 341 buffaloes originally from the Pablo herd in Montana, but now transferred from Elk Island Park at Lamont to Buffalo Park at this point.

Apart from their commercial value, they represent a very large part of the few hundred bison remaining to represent the millions that a few years ago roamed the western plains. The transfer of 500 miles was a work of considerable difficulty, and required a good deal of preparation and foresight owing to the agility and strength of the animals. It was all carried out under the superintendence of Howard Douglas, commissioner of Canadian parks.

So well was it organized that no accidents occurred during the loading. At Lamont an excited bull buffalo gored a mate in the corral, death being almost instantaneous. The only losses on the road were a young cow, which in anger choked herself to death, and a yearling that was exhausted when shipped and was trampled to death by the others in the car.

The train of twenty-three cars of buffaloes excited the greatest attention en route, the entire population of some towns, seemingly, turning out, and when curiosity led them to tease an animal, they were rewarded with a kick against the side of a car that was heard a train length. When the buffaloes were unloaded in the new park here today, they threw up their heels in the joy of freedom once more, and started for the hills.—[Wainwright correspondence Toronto Globe.

"And did you return those lovely presents to him?" they cried.

"No," she admitted, "but I sent back all his letters."

In the Grave of the Elks.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE IN THE NORTHERN WOODS.

By a Special Contributor.

THE winter I was 18, I spent with a string of traps away up in the forests of British Columbia. I had expected to start working my way through college that fall, but father's health suddenly failed, and we went up there to see if the ozone and the pine smell of the woods would restore his strength. We took up our abode for the winter in a deserted log cabin on the shore of Lake Quesnelle, a pretty little sheet of crystal white in the great black forest at the west foot of the Selkirks.

With the first snowfall I began to trap. That country was new in those days, the nearest settlements fifty miles to the south, and the furred animals lived in abundance in the little streams around the lake. My success surprised me. By the middle of March we estimated my fur pile as worth enough to pay my expenses at least one year at college, and my operations were extending into still better ground in the mountains.

One glassy cold morning I went up Otter Creek Cañon to look after some snares and traps. When several miles north of the lake I came upon the fresh trail of a big buck. We needed meat at the cabin, snowshoeing was fine, and I followed. If I could ever get a sight of the deer my high-power 30-30 repeater would reach him.

Mile after mile I traveled up the creek, under the tall, snow-laden trees. The dead stillness of the morning was broken only by the rythmic swish-swish of my shoes as I glided over the soft, deep snow. Occasionally a limb cracked under its icy load. Once a partridge whirred out of a thick pine, and a little Arctic fox slunk away into the trees, eyeing me curiously. Far down toward the lake a moose called hoarsely.

At the end of perhaps an hour I found myself in a secluded little valley high up among the mountains. From the short steps I judged that the deer was idling along just ahead, and stopped before a thicket to unglove my trigger hand.

I had just eased the heavy revolver that sagged my cartridge belt and was preparing to start on, when suddenly out of the bushes along the little stream to the right came a sound that raised my hair. Like that of an animal, and yet unlike, the strange wild bellow was almost unearthly. It rolled, reëchoing, through the lonesome cañons like nothing I had ever heard in the forest. Something, I guessed not what, was there. I dropped on one knee, aiming shakily into the bushes.

But nothing came forth. The sound died away in a strangled moan. I strained my ears. Then a wolf barked, quick and angry, as if after its prey, and I took courage to investigate. I stole noiselessly through the brush and fallen pines, my finger on the trigger.

I had advanced about twenty yards when, through an opening, a huge timber wolf, the much-dreaded "lobo," was outlined on the bank of the stream. So intent was he on something below him in the creek bed that his sharp ears had not detected me, though I was only a few rods away. I took careful aim. A wild leap straight into the air, and the gray giant lay twitching on the snow! At the same instant, too quick for a second shot, another wolf darted away among the trees. But a menacing howl from up the stream told of dangerous hate and furious reluctance to leave the dead mate.

As I came up, a confused scrambling and trampling took place over the bank. Rifle at my shoulder, I peered over the edge—at a great bull elk, red-eyed and insane with rage and fright, thin, bony and torn. The old fellow was in a trap, and the wolves had been worrying him. His cries of terror and fury were the unnatural sounds I had heard.

A ravine before me was about thirty yards long and perhaps twenty feet wide, with perpendicular ten-foot walls of rock on both sides. At the upper end a tiny stream dropped over a fall, and the water seemed to find its way under the snow out through a high pile of boulders that blocked any exit from the lower end. The snow had filled the ravine, for it still reached the top of the wall in places where the animal had not tramped it down with endless pacing. He was starving now, and a prey for the wolves. I could never help him out, and to shoot him was an act of mercy.

I decided to take a pistol shot, and leaned the rifle against a tree. I stood on the edge with the elk directly down before me, pawing and roaring in impotent rage at what he took to be a new enemy. As I aimed, I heard a sound behind me, started at the sight of the angry wolf at my heels, slipped, and sprawled in blind fear down to the mercy of the foaming brute below. The gun fell from my hand.

I fell in a heap. And luckily, for an antler, as the elk charged, just grazed the fur on the top of my cap. I barely escaped being stepped on as he braced himself to keep from plunging into the wall.

The animal was exhausted and dizzy with his fight, and before he could recover himself, I sprang past him to an eighteen-inch crack up the opposite wall. I thought I could climb it, but no foothold offered. And my assailant was almost as quick as I. As he turned and made at me again, I could only squeeze my body back into the crevice. He struck blindly, the wide horns almost shivering on either side of me. Paralyzed, I waited for him to try again and gore me. Pawing in senseless rage, deafening me with his roarings, he backed away and rushed at me again. But again the wall on both sides met the force of his horns and he blew foam into my eyes in a vain effort to reach me. Five times he tried, with the same result. He was only breaking his horns on the rocks.

Then he became more wary. A knowing, almost human, look of cruelty seemed to dawn in the little eyes. He stopped roaring and regarded me narrowly, facing me squarely, for a few minutes. His head was within three feet of my face. The queer, steady, inexplicable gaze fascinated me. I wondered what was passing in that mind.

Slowly he seemed to decide what to do. Wheeling, he walked across the ravine, faced me again, surveyed me critically, and bawled, it seemed to me, in triumph. With the longest prong on his right antler held at an angle so that it would pierce the crack, he walked straight at me, to transfix me as I stood. I felt that it was all over, and closed my eyes in sickening resignation, as that deadly spear came rapidly at my breast.

And then help came. A savage snarl from the other bank made me look up, and made my would-be murderer snort and swing round apprehensively. The old wolf, evidently maddened at the death of the mate, was coming down the wall after the elk. He, forgetting me, all his craftiness gone in fear, hesitated, trembling, then rushed fiercely as the wolf dropped on the floor of the ravine. The newcomer leaped nimbly aside and sprang for its antagonist's throat; a stunning side sweep from a horn made her retreat limping toward the waterfall; again the big elk charged, bellowing the infuriated but terror-stricken roar I had first heard, all the inherent hatred that an elk has for its tormentor, the wolf, in the booming voice; and the white fangs ripped, reddening, at the lank neck.

I don't know how long I stood in the crack watching the fray. It was a battle to the death. The combatants fought savagely over every part of the ravine. Once the wolf was pinned between the horns; once the bull fell to his knees, then raced madly down the slope with his enemy on his back. He finally threw his rider and chased her into the waterfall, but was again in his turn forced slowly back toward me. Back and forth the struggle surged, with varying fortunes for the contestants. It was a cruel, fiendish duel, but the issue was sure. The brave old elk was fast growing weaker. Often he would think he was sure of his blow, but he was too weak and slow, and always the dog of the woods would slip aside, inflicting fresh wounds on the torn sides and throat. Both were bloody and panting, their breath like smoke in the frosty air.

Finally it dawned upon me to escape while the fight was still on and attention directed away from me. I knew well that when either succumbed, the other would attack me. I made a dash to clamber up the boulders below. But the elk, a little calmer again, made no distinction between his enemies. He saw me start, turned like a pivot, and was after me. His labored puffing was close behind, but he could run little faster than I.

Just as I leaped up the first rocks, a blow sent me limp into a dead tree clump upon the side of the rock pile. Half-senseless, I lay there, at the mercy of the horns. But the wolf was once more to my aid. Growling and snapping, she was at the elk's heels, upon his neck. The old animal shook her off, and the danger was turned away from me as they strove desperately over the broken snow. I moved, a limb snapped, and I dropped, vaguely and weakly afraid, into darkness and unconsciousness.

How long it was before I awoke I do not know. Reality dawned slowly on me. I seemed to come painfully out of a dim, long, fearful dream. I comprehended at last that I was lying in a dark hole, faintly lighted through cracks fifteen feet above. The immediate past was a blank; I wondered, in a listless way, where I was, tried vainly to reason how I got there. My head was aching horribly. I was stretched out on the ground with my head on a rock.

A sudden bellow brought me to a sense of my position. The fight and everything came back at once. I remembered the fall. I had hit my head on the rock and been stunned.

The next thought was of my welfare when the elk was conquered and the wolf would seek me. I got stiffly to my feet. If I could get to the rifle, I would be safe, and could end the fight at once.

I could see pretty well now. I was in a deep hole-like cavern ten feet in diameter washed out underneath the boulder pile, through which the dim light found its way. The walls were steep, and I could not climb them with the snowshoes on my feet. So I sat down to take them off and let the dizziness leave my head.

As I sat down, I became conscious that the floor of the place was literally carpeted with teeth. I picked one up. Elks' teeth! Fine ivory, worth $2 per tooth in the States! I shoved my foot into them. There was a thick bed of the precious teeth! I think I shouted for joy. I had made a find worth several times my winter's trapping; worth my college course.

My good fortune had hardly dawned upon me when a wilder roar than usual from outside made me climb carefully out of the hole to the top of the rocks. Up by the waterfall the elk was down, making a last feeble struggle; all would be over in a moment. I hastened to get out upon the bank and run to my gun. And I was none too soon, for as I reached it, the wolf had left her victim and sprung up the wall to come after me. My shot dropped her before she had come half-way. A second bullet put the old elk out of his misery.

You may be sure that I lost no time in investigating my discovery. I went down to the rock pile again. I saw then that the hole into which I had fallen was a deep cave washed out just at the side of the main water course, which was out through a large hole. When the water was high the cave would be filled with water.

I decided to get the revolver before going down into the place again, as I could hardly climb down with the rifle. I walked up to where I had slipped into the ravine. As I stooped to pick up the revolver, I noticed bones and horns protruding from the snow and earth. There were a great many of them. Then I became aware that the whole bottom of the place was formed, under the dirt, of skeletons of elk and deer. I was puzzled.

At last I understood all, and the enormity of my good fortune made me gasp. On both sides of the ravine grew a fringe of evergreen "sweetlick" bushes, deer will eat eagerly when the snow is heavy storm filled the place to the top, and the pecting animals walked from both sides into a which there was no escape. The blizzard had caught this elk in just that way. During years thousands of skeletons had bleached away hole. When the spring freshets came, the bones and teeth were washed through the rocks An eddy swirled them into the cave.

During the rest of the spring I proved my correct. I dug nearly 3000 of the teeth out of the tom of the cave, and actually excavated the the ravine, which afforded fully that many few were found down the course of the stream.

The fortune that we realized helped father back his health, and has given me the career of my boyish dreams.

RATTLESNAKE ISLAND.

LAKE WINNIPESAUKEE'S RATTLERS ALL CENTRATED IN ONE SPOT.

[New York Sun:] One of those strange freaks of mal and reptile distribution that puzzle the is found on Rattlesnake Island in Lake Winnipe N. H. The Yellow Tea Party.

UNUSUAL DOINGS AT THE VILLAGE OF HICKORY SHADES.

By a Special Contributor.

"WELL, Ephraim Parker," said Aunt Nancy with something more than her customary energy as she dropped into a chair, "of all the doings that Hickory shades ever did see! If Aurelia Ann Pillsbury ain't just about the limit, I'll miss my guess!"

Aunt Nancy took off her bonnet and folded the ribbon ties neatly around and around an old postal card, as was her long-standing habit, to keep them smooth. Then she carried it into the spare bedroom closet and put it into its bandbox.

When she came out into the kitchen she tied a capacious gingham apron about her comfortable waist and opened the cupboard door.

Uncle Ephraim looked up inquiringly. "I've had my supper, Nancy," he said. "I warmed up them beans left over from dinner, and et some bread an' butter an' huckleb'ry jam."

"Well, I hain't had mine," announced Aunt Nancy with energy. She put some fresh water in the shining teakettle and set it on the stove.

Uncle Ephraim stared at her. "Land's sakes!" he said, "been out to a tea party an' didn't get nothin' to eat?"

Aunt Nancy nodded. "That's just about it," she said, as she cut two generous slices from a loaf of her own good bread. "You wait till I warm up this dish of boiled dinner," she said, "and make me a good cup of tea and set down, and I'll tell you all about it. My stars! I never did see such doings in Hickory Shades before, but no knowin' what we will see in the future now that Aurelia Ann Pillsbury has got to putting on city frills the way she does. Aurelia Ann aims to be a leader of society out here in Hickory Shades, but who she'll lead, I don't know!"

Uncle Ephraim watched his wife's capable hands as they quickly warmed over the boiled dinner and spread her impromptu meal on the folded table cloth at one end of the table.

When she sat down and took a delightful swallow of the fragrant tea she broke into her usual comfortable laugh.

"Well, Ephraim Parker," she said, "there you set just consumed with curiosity, so I'll have to go ahead and tell you about Aurelia Ann's yellow tea."

A knock sounded at the kitchen door, and Miss Elnora Peabody looked in. She still wore her best dress, which had graced the social affair of the afternoon.

"I just run over, Mrs. Parker," she said, "to see if you could spare me a slice or two of bread. I'm all out and I'm too tired to go down to the bakery."

Aunt Nancy laughed. "For pity's sake, Elnora," she said, "what you borrowin' bread for? Ain't you been out to tea, like I have?"

Elnora Peabody laughed. "Well," she said, "I wonder what you're doing setting there with that platter of boiled dinner and bread an' butter an' cookies an' tea! Seems like you didn't get enough to eat over to Aurelia Ann's."

Aunt Nancy laughed again. "Come right in, Elnora," she said heartily. "Set down and eat a bite with me. You and me can tell Ephraim about Aurelia Ann's yellow tea party. Mebby what I forget you'll think of."

Elnora sat down, a willing guest but politely protesting. "Well, of all things!" she said, "the very idee of my coming over here to eat like this! Well, I always was fond of warmed-up boiled dinner, and this tea does taste good. Yes, Mr. Parker, Mrs. Parker and I have been out to tea, and here we are as starved as hounds—at least I am. What little Aurelia Ann did have was real good, I'll admit, and just whetted my appetite for something more. I declare I don't know when I've been so hungry. You tell him about it, Mrs. Parker, for you can set it out if any one can."

"Well," said Aunt Nancy complacently, "ever since Aurelia Ann come back from the city where she'd been visiting her brother Ezra's folks, she's seemed different somehow—tried to talk different, seemed to me, and didn't act quite so common an' neighborly as she used to. She'd slip off her white apron before she'd go into a neighbor's house, and put on a nice starched white shirt waist every single afternoon. An' bolster her neck way up in the air with them high stiff collars or stocks or whatever they call 'em. An' wear gloves to work in the garden with! Gloves! And she appeared [illegible] put out one morning when I run over and caught her diggin' angle worms for the chickens.

"Says I to myself: 'Aurelia Ann's gettin' proud an' stuck up for some unearthly reason, but she'll get over it. Some grown-up folks have to have these spells same as children have to have the measles an' chicken pox. She'll get over it.' Pour yourself another cup of tea, Elnora, and you tell Ephraim how stiff and formal she was at the door."

Elnora laughed. "Well, it was kind of funny," she said. "There was we, all neighbors, and seeing one another every single day, and not in the habit of shaking hands except at meeting on Sunday—and what did Aurelia Ann do but shake hands with every one of us, and way up in the air, too! Mercy! I felt so silly. Made me feel like I was a little girl again playing 'the needle's eye that doth supply the thread that runs so truly,' when she pulls my hand about on a level with her chin. Well, I lived through that, and passed on into the spare room to lay off my things. And there was that bed made out perfectly comical. The nice big goose-feather pillows that Aurelia Ann's grandmother had raised the geese for was put away out of sight, and a kind of long thing like a big roll of wall paper was put in place of them. And I do declare Aurelia Ann had taken an old pair of lace curtains, and washed and starched and ironed and mended 'em, and put 'em over pale-blue paper cambric, and the counterpane and that queer headpiece was made of that. Well, it did look kind of neat and pretty, after all, but I do like to see a nice fat pair of pillows with the slips trimmed with handmade pineapple lace. You tell about the table, Mrs. Parker."

"Well," said Aunt Nancy, taking up the story, "them cards Aurelia Ann had sent out inviting us said to come to the yellow tea at 5 o'clock. So we all got there right on time, though 'twas awful late to go visiting. Aurelia Ann showed us right out to the supper table the first thing. There wasn't a bit of time to set an' visit an' do fancy work, but I presume that ain't stylish any more.

"The table was rigged out an' trimmed like a milliner shop or a posy bed. First there was a paper table cloth, if you'll believe me! Yes, sir, paper! And I know for a fact that Aurelia Ann has got a beautiful snowdrop linen table cloth three yards long. And there was paper napkins, too—and Aurelia Ann has got at least a dozen real nice linen ones. They was kind of Japanesey-looking, and right down the middle was a bright yellow ribbon the whole length of the table. Seems like it's extravagant to buy that much good ribbon just for show, don't it? If it would do for Aurelia Ann's bonnet strings afterward, it wouldn't be so bad, but it's such a bright yellow that I don't suppose she'd wear it.

"Well, there was a big bouquet made of daisies in the middle of the table—just common field daisies—white, with yellow centers. And I'll admit it did look pretty. Aurelia Ann said she had to have daisies to carry out the yellow and white 'scheme.' Well, the dishes was beautiful, anyway—Aurelia Ann's grandmother's gold band china set—and right by every place was a little piece of pasteboard with a yellow daisy painted onto it and our names wrote on 'em. And when Aurelia Ann says, in her dignifiedest manner: 'Please find your seats, ladies,' there was a great time putting on our specs so's we could look up our own name. Why couldn't she have just said: 'You set here, Elnora, an' you here, Mis' Parker, an' you over there, Miss Todd,' and so on—but no, I guess that wouldn't have been stylish.

"Well, Ephraim Parker, there we set at last as solemn as owls, an' taking little nibbles of the fancy sandwiches so's to make 'em last till Aurelia Ann passed 'em again. It was just ridiculous to see us set there an' nibble when we could have et the whole kite-shaped thing at one bite!

"And then there was a little bundle of some kind of fancy wafers—looked an' tasted kind o 'like brown pasteboard—actually tied up with yellow baby ribbon. We didn't hardly know what to do with 'em till Miss Todd boldly untied hers an' et 'em. We didn't really know but what we was expected to eat the ribbon an' all, or else hang 'em on a dress button to wear home.

"Well, I could have et at least six or seven of them sandwiches, an' I only had two. An' there was a plate of bedeviled eggs—(I was some surprised at Aurelia Ann's using such language, as she is a church member,) and I will say they was good, in spite of their name. I know every one of us could have disposed of four or five, and there was just one apiece. I'm going to find out how to bedevil them an' fix some for Ephraim. You tell him about the salad, Elnora."

"Well," said Elnora, "there was the funniest kind of a salad—kind o' mashed potatoes, I think it was, with red lobster claws a-stickin' up out of it like the masts of a ship. It tasted real good, though, but nobody dared to take more'n a spoonful. Then there was some cake—little bits of square pieces of fruit cake with frosting on 'em, and of course we dassent take more'n one piece."

"But of all things," broke in Aunt Nancy energetically, "the tea come trailin' in the last of all! Mercy! I want my tea right along with my victuals, style or no style. And there was them little gold-and-white teacups not more'n half-full, and nobody but Miss Todd could get up their courage to ask for more.

"Well, after it was all over an' Aurelia Ann had got up from the table, I declare if every one of us didn't cut an' run! We was so hungry we had to! Mrs. Sampson blurted out that she had to go home an' feed her settin' hen, and Sophia Bennet said she had to go home and make biscuit for Ezekiel, and Elnora said she had to set bread an' sprinkle her clothes so's she could iron tomorrow. And not one soul of us had the moral courage to up an' tell Aurelia Ann that we was hungry, an' going home to get something to eat!"

Aunt Nancy laughed. "Mercy!" she said, "I'd like to get up a take-off on Aurelia Ann's party and have some real victuals and enough of 'em! If that's what they call city style, why, old Hickory Shades is plenty good enough for me. Now, if Aurelia Ann had had the kind of supper she might have had (for she's a first-class cook)—nice sour-cream biscuits, an' cold sliced ham, an' crisp cabbage salad, an' damson-plum preserves, an' nice chocolate layer cake, an' good hot tea—why, that would have been good enough for a queen's party."

Uncle Ephraim chuckled slyly as he looked from one to the other of the two unappreciative guests.

"How about bedeviled eggs, Nancy?" he asked. "Woudn't you have bedeviled eggs?"

Aunt Nancy looked at him with disapproving eyes.

"Ephraim," she said sternly, "I don't think that's a nice way to talk, an' however they come to call them eggs such a name I'm sure I don't know. But I'm going to ask Aurelia Ann how to make 'em, an' fix some myself."

"Bound to be in style, hey?" chuckled Uncle Ephraim. "Well, Aurelia Ann has done one good thing by comin' home from the city with new ideas. She's made a kind of ripple in Hickory Shades society, what with her paper table cloth an' napkins, an' lobster salads, an' such things. An' that's a blessing. Folks in Hickory Shades is apt to get into a rut, and we need something out of the ordinary to jounce us out of it. But jiminy crickets! I do wish Aurelia Ann bad popped in here whilst you two women was cleaning up that platter of boiled dinner! What under the sun, moon an' stars would she have thought!"

ISOLATED CAPE HATTERAS.

ITS SHIFTING SANDS—BREEDING PLACE OF BIRDS: SAILING THE FISHING SKIFFS.

[Charlotte Observer:] There are few names more widely known in the United States or localities about which a greater ignorance prevails than Cape Hatteras. Situated as it is at the angle where the long strip of sand beach from Cape Henry south turns at a right angle to the westward, with the widest part of Pamlico Sound between it and the mainland and with the beach both west and north cut into several islands by inlets from sound to ocean, its position is most isolated. No means of transportation exist along the beach, and with the nearest railway station from which a regular transportation route is operated nearly a hundred miles away, it is an easier place to talk about than to visit.

Like all sand promontories, the point of the cape is always moving. An old wreck imbedded deep in the sand and showing only the stumps of her masts and bowsprit and the rusty skeletons of what were once her chain plates and dead eyes is now a quarter of a mile or more inland. Twenty years ago she is said to have lain in the water, where she struck or drifted ashore, the land now outside of her having been built up since by the action of the wind and the waves. A resident told me that he owned the copper that still remained on her bottom, having bought it as it stood at the "vendue" or wreck sale. I don't think any one is likely to steal it from him.

In the summer time the breeding gulls and terns occupy certain shoals and bare "lumps" out in the sound, and now that the protective laws are being enforced, their numbers are rapidly increasing. Herons of various kinds nest in the woods, and so also do a pair or two of bald eagles, and last summer several good-sized flocks of brown pelicans enlivened some of the near-by reefs and sandy islands.

Two features connected with the sailing of the fishing skiffs used hereabouts are new to me. One is that of using a member of the crew as shifting ballast. A plank is run out over the side, the inner end caught under the lee washboards, while on the outer end with legs dangling over the water sits the man acting as ballast. And this not in racing, mind you, but in every-day sailing. The other is the practice of "nodding," as I heard it called. In moderate weather when the skiff is only lightly gliding along one man will stand up alongside the centerboard on the weather side, and facing outward will steadily rock sidewise from one foot to the other with the idea that it makes the boat sail faster. And perhaps it does.

All Would Be White.

Does any one really believe that the genius of Caesar and Napoleon, of Milton and Goethe, had nothing to do with their facial angle, and could have found an equally convenient habitation behind thick lips and under woolly skulls? The negro himself (as distinct from the mulatto rhetorician) takes his stand on no such paradox. Whoever may doubt the superiority of the white race, it is not he; and it is a racial, not merely a social or economic, superiority to which he does instinctive homage. It does not enter his head to champion his own racial ideal, to set up an African Venus in rivalry to the Hellenic, and claim a new Judgment of Paris between them. If wishing could change the Ethiopian's skin, there would be never a negro in America. The black race, out of its poverty, spends thousands of dollars annually on "anti-kink" lotions, vainly supposed to straighten the African wool. The brown belle tones her complexion with pearl powder; and many a black mother takes pride in the brown skin of her offspring, though it proclaims their illegitimacy. There cannot be the smallest doubt that amalgamation, in the negro's eyes, means an enormous gain to his race. It means ennoblement, transfiguration. It is quite natural that he should not too curiously inquire whether the gain to him would involve a corresponding loss to the white man. That is the white man's business, not his. The one thing his instinct tells him is that, if he can break down the white man's resistance and make the Southern States a brown or yellow man's land, he will have achieved a splendid racial triumph.—[William Archer, in McClure's.

Spiked Mexican Mountain.

One of the most remarkable geological freaks in Mexico is a mountain situated on the outskirts of Pachuca which presents the appearance at a distance of being covered with spikes. The sides of the mountain are closely studded with stone columns or palisades. These columns are five to twelve feet long and as large around as an average man's body.

It is a remarkable uplift of nature, which has the appearance, however, of being the handiwork of human beings. One side of the mountain is almost perpendicular and the stone columns protrude from the surface at right angles, forming an impressive picture. The stone is as hard as flint and has withstood the elements for ages. The spikes form a natural battlement that makes the mountain appear from a distance like some ancient fort.—[Indianapolis News.

Waila Nambuka.

ROMANCE OF AN AMERICAN BOY WHO BECAME KING.

By a Special Contributor.

FROM country youth to king of one of the Fiji Islands. This is the story of Edward Thompson of Albion, Illinois, as revealed in the news of his death announced in a recent Associated Press telegram from Christ's Church, New Zealand.

In the Fijis Thompson was known as Waila Nambuka, which means "child of the sun." The island over which he reigned is one of the Lau, or eastern group, and is called Naikeva.

The King leaves two children, a boy and a girl, aged 10 and 8 years respectively. The former will be crowned King to succeed his father when he is 15. In the meantime, the reins of government are handled by Queen Lakanita, the King's widow.

Thompson's story is one of the most remarkable records of love and adventure that has ever occurred in real life. How he loved and wooed in his boyhood days; how the object of his adoration broke her vows and forsook him for a rival suitor; how with a recklessness born of despondency and a deadened sense of care, he bade an eternal farewell to his native town, and wandered on to the land's end of the continent; nor pausing then faced the ocean, continued his way toward the setting sun, and wandered on and on over unknown seas to land where white men had never trod before; how he met and was beloved by an island princess; how she nursed him through a siege of tropical fever; how he led the islanders to victory in a war with a rival tribe; how his subjects revered him and proclaimed him their King. These are some of the incidents this story has to relate, and if all the attendant circumstances were told, it could be woven into a volume of size and interest surpassing our most popular novel without the necessity of embellishment.

To get away, far away from civilization, seemed to be the besetting impulse of young Thompson after his American sweetheart had proved faithless to him. The village of his nativity seemed despicable to him. All the boys and girls there knew of his being jilted by one he had openly claimed as his future bride, and he knew they would regard him either as an object of pity or of ridicule. Either was unbearable to him, for his was a proud and sensitive nature; his a spirit that could not endure such goading.

Away from his town, while he yet remained in civilization, he heard the voices of girls, and saw their smiles. They reminded him of the faithlessness of his former sweetheart. The voices sounded hypocritical, and the smiles seemed perfidious. So from civilization he turned as from a thing he abhorred. He sought a land where nature was young, where enlightenment had not taught that words were made to deceive, an abode among people who had not learned the deceptive wiles that had brought on his heart's distress. He was fleeing from a land of flirts.

The Naikeva inhabitants are dark-skinned, a remarkable characteristic of them being that their women are much lighter than their men, who are nearly as black as negroes. Though the island at times has been devastated by internal strife, the inhabitants are by nature peaceful, very merry in their disposition, and extremely fond of pleasure. They have bright, sparkling eyes, and their facial expressions show them to possess intelligence much above the average of the Fijis. The women are very pretty, with clear-cut features, not at all like those of the negro. But for their dark skin, of rich olive hue, many of them could pass for American beauties. They mature early, many of them being wives and mothers at 13, but still their beauty is not short-lived, for they are not considered old until they are past 30. Dancing is the favorite diversion of the Naikeva maidens. On all festive occasions they are clad in short ornamental skirts which extend from the waist to a little below the knee, leaving the legs and the upper part of the body bare. But on occasions of mourning, long robes are worn, reaching from the neck to the feet.

After leaving America, Thompson roamed about aimlessly among the eastern islands—Hawaii, the Carolines, the Philippines, and Australia. Finally landing at Auckland, New Zealand, he discovered a tramp schooner being fitted out for a cruise of the Fijis. This appealed to his love of roaming and adventure, and so he joined the expedition. After months of cruising and trafficking and trading among the natives, the schooner landed at Tangu Vatu, a village of Naikeva Island, where dwelt the King, Latu Nanu, and his only daughter, Lakanita, the beloved of Mbanghu, the King's head warrior.

Latu Nanu, himself, was not a native of the Fijis, as was evidenced by his fairer complexion. He was from the Island of Luzon, of the Philippines, coming from an aristocratic Mestiza family. He learned the arts of war in the many struggles between the native Filipinos, and it was through this knowledge that he had become King of the Naikeva Fijis. His wife, Matatha, the mother of Lakanita, however, was a being the daughter of an island chieftain.

The old King extended a royal schooner crew, and received them in his own Young Thompson, fair-haired, blue-eyed, letic build, was a wonderment to the natives like him ever before had been seen in fact, the members of the schooner crew real white men that had ever visited the Latu Nanu, the King, was of lighter the natives, he was far from white. Conversation in the royal bungalow was in the ish tongue, which the King and his daughter ently, but which Thompson spoke poorly.

The schooner remained at the Island village weeks. Thompson and Lakanita met as often tunity would permit, and their love for each apace. Thompson had learned enough of tell her that he thought her most beautiful, loved her. He understood the language to grasp her meaning when she replied: "I you, Señor, for you are the most beautiful ever seen, but I dare not, because of my Mbanghu, whom I must wed."

When Mbanghu learned of these meetings Princess' love for the white man, his anger Lakanita was imprisoned in the bungalow, duced the King to order the white men from

The visitors knew they were more than a match for all the islanders, but they thought it good diplomacy to not oppose them, because of the disadvantage it would work in their bargain deals with natives of the neighboring islands. So after rendering apologies, and offering reassurance of their friendship, they departed in peace.

The schooner continued to cruise about among the islands of the Lau and engaged in trading and bargaining with the natives, which netted the crew handsomely. Weeks had passed since the stop at Naikeva, and Thompson, despairing of ever seeing Lakanita again, looked back on his meeting with her as a pretty dream. But one day when the boat was anchored off a village of Fulguna Island, a rowboat like those used only by the Naikevans approached and signalled the vessel. It drew up alongside the schooner, and an islander, tired and worn from two days and nights of rowing, climbed to the deck. He brought a message from Lakanita for the man with the blue eyes. The message told that Lakanita was in danger, that the Kasu tribe had rebelled, Mbanghu had been slain, and that she and her father with a few faithful followers had sought refuge on a small uninhabited island two miles from Naikeva, and dared not return.

There was a hasty consultation on board the schooner, and after a short debate, it was decided to go to the King's rescue. To cause his reinstatement on the throne, it was contended, would mean many important trading advantages with Naikeva as well as with other islands.

Guided by the messenger, the boat sailed to the island that harbored the refugee King and Lakanita. Both were taken on board and the boat sailed boldly toward Naikeva. When it hove in sight off the Naikeva coast, it was greeted by the bellicose shouts of the rebel warriors, and a shower of boomerangs swerved out into the air and back as a warning. But the warning was not heeded. Every man took a rifle in hand and the vessel proceeded on toward the shore. When just without the range of the boomerangs, it anchored. The tribesmen were about to embark in rowboats to get within nearer range of the vessel, when at Thompson's command, every man on board took aim and fired at the blacks lining the shore.

A wail of agony and terror went up from among them, and they fled precipitately. Two small boats were lowered from the vessel, and passengers and crew landed without further opposition. But as all were proceeding on toward Tangu Vatu, the capital, a shower of boomerangs flew at them from rebels in ambush, and Latu Manu, the King, fell dead at Thompson's feet. The party halted and sent a volley of shots in the direction whence came the deadly missiles. There were cries of pain, and the scattering underbrush of the jungles showed that many had sought safety in flight and others in hiding. A bullet was sent in the direction of every moving shrub, and Thompson's forces wreaked terrible revenge on the foolish blacks.

The fighting was over. The war was ended. The tidings went forth that Waila Nambuka, the child of the sun, had come to fight for Lakanita and avenge the death of the King. The old warriors of Latu Manu who had survived the slaughter of the uprising, emerged from their hiding and crowded into Tangu Vatu to greet the returning Queen, and the white man "she had brought from the spirit land."

Scarred warriors joined with the visitors in paying respects to the dead body of Latu Manu, and thus the rejoicing in the victory over the rebels was commingled with the sorrow for the death of the King.

The schooner decided to remain at Naikeva until Lakanita was firmly established on the throne, and the affairs of the island had regained their equilibrium.

When finally they were ready to depart again, Thompson was stricken with fever, and it was impossible for him to move. Lakanita had him taken to her bungalow, where she nursed and watched over him day and night. For a month he lay at the point of death. But for the constant watching, the tender, gentle care of the Princess, he would never have lived to conclude the chapters of the remarkable human romance his life was enacting.

The Princess nursed him to convalescence. One day as the time drew near for his departure, he found her seated beside the bungalow weeping.

"Why, what is the matter, my pretty?" he asked.

"Lakanita fought death when it tried to take you from me, that the white man might take you from me," she replied.

"I must go with my comrades now," he said, "but I will come back to you soon and will stay a long time, and we will wander by the streams together, and watch the waves and pick the flowers on the shore, again as we so often have done, and then if you do not tire of me, I never will leave you again."

"I don't want you to leave me now," she said. "Lakanita will be so lonely. Death has taken my father and Mbanghu, and the big ship will have taken you. Stay, and you will be my King and Naikeva's King. The tribesmen love you, and call you Waila Nambuka, and even now they are sad to hear that your going is near. Stay, and I and my tribesmen will love you, and we will all live in peace and happiness together."

Thompson's pleading that it was his duty to go with the boat's crew failed to convince her, and she could not understand. His promises to return again failed to console her, and she grieved continuously. On the day set for his departure, Thompson went to tell Lakanita good-by, but she was nowhere to be found. After a search, he found her seated on a rock overlooking the waters on which the boat would sail.

"What brings you here, Lakanita?" he asked.

"I want to follow you, but the ocean is so wide, I cannot swim so far. If the waves should swallow you, and you should return to the sun where my father is, then I may see you again."

The Naikevans think they will dwell in the sun when they die. Filled with a dread apprehension of her intentions, Thompson placed his arms about her and said: "Come, my Lakanita. I will not leave you."

When Thompson and Lakanita returned to Tangu Vatu, the boat's crew was waiting with the word that everything was ready to sail.

"I guess you will have to go back without me, boys. I am going to stay here with Lakanita, who tomorrow will be my bride."

"Well, I'll be d——d!" the captain exclaimed.

"Well, I'll be d——d!" the crew echoed.

"We suspicioned that something was up between you two, but we didn't know it was so serious," the captain said. "Anyhow, we'll just postpone this sailing another day, and all join in the wedding ceremony."

So did all the island join in the ceremony. It was a double celebration in honor of the wedding of the Princess and the coronation of King Nambulka. The Naikeva maidens threw off their mourning robes and donned their short waist skirts again. The bamboo leaves were taken from the doors, and dancing and merriment ruled again. A joyous procession followed the boat's crew, who on weighing anchor fired a parting salute from rifles, revolvers and shotguns in honor of King Thompson and Queen Lakanita.

Never were king and queen more beloved by their people than were Nambuka and Lakanita. The island flourished in its tropical bounty. But Nambuka was not prone to teach them the ways of civilization. He preferred that they remain happy in their simple faith and ignorance of civilization's vices.

He was good and kind and generous and just, and this was why the natives loved him so. This was why the islanders really believed he was Waila Nambuka, the child of the sun. This was why there was such great sorrow throughout the island when Nambuka died after having reigned over the Laikeva Fijis for more than fifteen years.

News of Thompson's death and of the facts in the remarkable romance were brought to Christ's Church, New Zealand, by Frank A. Hamilton of Chicago, who has just concluded a lengthy cruise of the less-known islands of the Lau. Previously Hamilton had sent home much valuable information about the Fiji Islands and their inhabitants together with camera pictures, showing the manner of dress, their dwelling-places and interesting manners and customs. But the most interesting of all the islands, he says, is Naikeva, and the most beautiful woman of the Fijis is Lakanita, whose picture is included in the interesting collection he has forwarded to Chicago.

The name Rufus was given to Thompson's son in memory of a companion of the father in Albion, Ill., whom Thompson claimed was the only true friend he ever knew in civilization. It was his father's will that he shall continue to bear this name when he is King.

Over the grave in which the remains of King Nambuka are interred there rests a huge rock, inscribed with words which the King himself engraved during his lifetime.

Here is the inscription: "Faith and love, which civilization denied me, here among the Fijis I found."

It was at his special request that this stone marks his last resting-place. The words tell his story well, and show that he died happy, even after the disappointment and sorrow he had known in his younger life.

Lakanita will carry out Thompson's instructions in the rearing of their two children, and will rule over the island with the same love and justice which already has endeared her to her people, and which made the royal pair the adored of all their people.

RUTLEDGE RUTHERFORD.

The Detective's Romance.

Lecoq the detective smiled approvingly at the blue sea.

"To me," he said, "me, of all persons, a romantic adventure happened this morning. As I got off the Salt Marsh Special, a beautiful blonde threw herself into my arms.

" 'Oh, dad!' she cried, snuggling very close, 'I am so glad you've came.'

"Undeniably," said Lecoq, "it was pleasant to hold this lovely creature against my pink shirt, but I winced at being called dad. I am not old enough to be the dad of a young lady. And as that golden head snuggled yet closer, I suddenly gave another wince. She looked up at me.

" 'But you are not dad!' she gasped. She struggled to free herself from my embrace. Tears filled her eyes."

Lecoq laughed grimly.

" 'Yes,' I said to her, 'I'm dad all right. You're my long-lost daughter. And I won't let you out of my sight again, either, till you're safely landed in the lock-up.'

"I did, however, let her go," Lecoq concluded. "She gave back the sparkler that she had pinched so clumsily from my red tie. She pleaded hard. She was a pretty girl."

He relighted his cigar, which had gone out, and sighed.

"Quite a romance," he said, gazing dreaming at the sea.

Alarm Clock for Horse Owners.

A boon to late sleepers who own horses and care for them themselves has been invented by George A. Flicker, a young farmer living near Spring Grove. Its chief feature is an alarm clock which automatically gives a horse its breakfast.

A closed box contains the proper amount of feed, and a wire connected with the sliding bottom of this box winds about a shaft on a common alarm clock. Elicker sets the clock for the hour at which he wants his horse fed and slumbers undisturbed.—[Philadelphia Record.

Education of Horace.

THE EXPERIENCES OF A YOUNG MAN OF SENTIMENT.

From London Leader.

HE was very impressionable, inclined to be sentimental, and his name was Horace Simmons.

Horace was employed in a seed merchant's office. It was not a big business, one typist, a senior clerk, and Horace representing the whole staff. The typist was a shrewd, eminently sensible girl, absorbed in her work and strictly punctual. He liked her and—which was much more important—she liked him from the day of their first meeting.

They were good friends, but there was no question, on Horace's side, of falling in love. Whether such an idea occurred to the typist is another matter. She was a reticent girl, but Horace was very communicative, and told her all his affairs. His indolence and indifference to business greatly annoyed her. She thought his education had been sadly neglected.

"If you were not a nephew of old Mr. Simmons, you would get the sack," she said on more than one occasion, old Mr. Simmons being the head of the firm.

"You're right, Effie, but I shall always hate clover," he answered.

They called each other Horace and Effie by mutual consent. They frequently went out cycling together. He found her a capital companion. She insisted on paying her share of the expenses; she was not at all exacting; she gave him really good advice, but flattered him discreetly at the same time.

He began to improve in office work. He tried to be more punctual. In brief, Horace's education was progressing very satisfactorily when Miss Emmeline Vavasour appeared upon the scene.

Miss Vavasour called herself a practical politician and food reformer. She was handsome, earnest, and considerably older than Horace. He heard her speaking at a women's suffrage meeting, which he had been induced to attend by his aunt, and she captured him by sheer force of character.

They were introduced. Miss Vavasour talked to Horace about "the Cause," and fired him with enthusiasm.

The following Sunday he did not go out cycling with Effie. He accompanied Miss Vavasour to an open-air meeting in Hyde Park, was invited to supper afterward at her tiny flat, and spent the evening addressing envelopes.

She spoke to him very seriously and sweetly about Purpose in Life, made him promise to study his diet, and lent him a pile of pamphlets.

He told Effie all about it. Effie congratulated him warmly on his new friend. She urged him to see as much of Miss Emmeline Vavasour as possible.

Horace took her advice. He gave up meat and smoking, attended lectures, and took to wearing low collars.

Miss Vavasour and her friends made him very useful. He was expected to write letters, help to keep order at meetings, run errands, and cheerfully undertake all the worrying little commissions which women inflict on a willing man.

Then, just as his slavery threatened to pall, Miss Firefly Gay fluttered across his path.

Horace did not talk about Miss Gay. Effie saw her photograph inside his watch case, but she was too wise to mention it.

Effie was more kind and friendly than ever, when they met at the office, and it struck Horace, for the first time, that she was quite a pretty girl—if a little dull—in her simple frocks. He found her society restful.

Miss Firefly Gay continued his education, but on very different lines from the practical politician and food reformer. She was a sparkling little girl, with the biggest hat and the smallest shoes he had ever seen.

A week after their meeting, Horace sent back all the books he had borrowed from Miss Vavasour, began to smoke again, returned to high collars, and took Miss Gay out to dinner.

She was capricious, childish, and ignorant. He timidly gave her the pet name of "Babs." Miss Gay, with equal originality, promptly called him "Kiddie." They exchanged confidences during the dinner, and became engaged over the coffee.

Miss Gay was "walking on" in musical comedy. Horace began to haunt the stage door, and cultivated a taste, under her guidance, for dainty little luncheons and expensive suppers.

Firefly was a victim of the taxi habit—she hated walking—with a passion for choice flowers and French chocolates, and Horace gave her a diamond ring.

A month passed. Horace neglected his work, and, when he went to the office, was hilarious and irritable by turns. The senior clerk frowned upon him, and old Mr. Simmons, the seed merchant, began to talk of dismissing such a fool of a nephew.

Then Horace grew morose. He was heavily in debt, and furiously jealous. Firefly was neglecting him for another man.

Every day his gloom increased. At last in a fit of despair, he confided in Effie.

. . . .

Horace has forgotten Miss Emmeline Vavasour. He never speaks of Miss Firefly Gay. He has once more taken to cycling, and is devoting himself to clover.

Effie has made up her mind to continue his education very strictly and without interruptions. As they are going to be married, she will have ample opportunities to complete it.

A PICTURE OF LIFE IN EARLY CALIFORNIA DAYS.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was the close of a hot summer day—a scorching, blistering day it had been. The ocean breeze passing over the bare, dry mesa was as the breath from an overheated oven, for this was a September day in California some thirty years ago, ere the magic which has since called into being the fields and groves that now cover this same mesa had been used; or, if developed, was in such quantities as to make only limited irrigation possible. Father, fortunately, had struck what was then, and has since been considered an unusually good artesian well, so that around our little home the weeping willows, grape arbors and fig trees flourished and made a most welcome and inviting shade.

All that hot day mother had been busily engaged with the fruit of these same vines and fig trees, while Sister Elizabeth and I, small folk of a few summers then, played as children will, and now at the close of the day, tired, but unwilling to own it, dangled weary feet from the highest branch of the big fig tree. I presume you are imagining us as two bare-limbed, hatless youngsters—but oh, how very far you are from the truth. Stout shoes and stockings incased our "nether extremities," and gingham bonnets were securely tied on each rebellious head. Because mother must bring her children up in a wilderness, should she allow them to grow up large of foot or freckled? Not she! And because she was a woman who lived up to her convictions, we wore shoes and stockings and sunbonnets. But is it any wonder that to this day a small, barefoot, unbonneted specimen of childhood sends envious thoughts careering through me? Especially as the theory regarding the development of pedal extremities has proven a fallacy in one case at least.

Suddenly sister ceased her occupation of endeavoring to jolt me from my seat on the other end of the bough, and looked knowingly at a small cloud of dust just discernible on the road that stretched its sandy length away into the, to us, mysterious east. "Somebody's coming," she announced, "and there's just one horse." Now, we children had never heard of Sherlock Holmes, indeed, Sherlock, I believe, had never at that time heard of himself, but the isolated life we lived had taught us many things. For instance, a broad, low cloud of dust meant that a band of sheep were crossing the mesa; if a higher cloud, it was a drove of cattle; a very small cloud always obscured a one-horse team, while the variations in size meant two or four horses; all of which learning we had imbibed unconsciously. "Oh-h," I shrilled, "maybe it's the minister!" and quickly scrambling to the ground, I rushed to the house, there to impart my conjectures to mother.

I lived many long years ere I understood mother's reception of the news. "Dear me!" she exclaimed, "I wish there never was such a thing as company!" With disapproving, perplexed eyes, I looked at her. Why shouldn't mother be glad when company came—especially minister company, for that meant fried chicken and cream cake; to be sure, it also meant more dishes for Elizabeth and me to wash and wipe—but mother always helped with that, and even the disagreeable dish washing was forgotten in the prospect of the toothsome delights of fried chicken and cream cake. Company also meant that Elizabeth and I would sleep on a quilt spread on the floor at the foot of mother's bed. My! how hard that bed would sometimes get before morning, and how often inquisitive toes would find their way from under the blankets and get so cold! But there, again, was mother, tucking us in or taking us into bed with her; it certainly was a mystery why company, especially ministerial company, wasn't a jolly lark.

I was still perplexing my small brain with this unanswered question, when we heard the sound of carriage wheels passing to the rear of the house where a big pool of water surrounded the pipe of the artesian well. It really was the minister, and with him was the presiding elder, and despite mother's remarks, her greeting was a cordial one. The ministers always came to our home in those days, for didn't father know as much about the Bible as the minister? Hadn't we heard the minister himself say so? and therefore didn't it follow that we were the only ones fit to entertain him? I assure you this idea originated in the minds of us children, and was not the result of any teaching or remarks on the part of either father or mother. But now, with the knowledge that has come as the fruit of riper years, the conviction forces itself on me that perhaps it was mother's skill in culinary art, rather than father's Biblical knowledge, that was the lodestone which drew the minister as well as many another traveler to our home and hospitality.

Nowadays we hear so much of California bungalows. You all know their appearance—they are usually brown in color, are built on broad, low lines, and here and there on their sides you will find an excrescence ornamented with a latticed window. Can we doubt the theory of evolution when we remember our little home? It was brown, but the tint had come solely from the rain and wind and sun, and the aforementioned excrescence, which is now so much admired, is the direct descendant of mother's scheme to add more room to our little home. Lumber was very scarce in those days, so a large drygoods box was securely fastened to the outside of the house, the open side of the box being next the wall. Mother then went inside the house, cut out the section of the wall against which the box rested, put a cleat on the boards removed, and with a few pieces of leather for hinges, had constructed a door for her little closet.

But to return to our company. I doubt if any one had any fault to find with the abundant tea mother served that evening, although it was guiltless of fried chicken or cream cake, and I believe its preparation caused her no annoyance; it was the disposing of two guests for the night which brought that anxious, troubled look to her face. She solved her problem at last by putting father and the two guests cross-wise in the big double bed, and then we children shared our little bed with her—surely not a very restful arrangement for a tired housekeeper. Now it so happened that we possessed a large cat—an unusually large one, which answered to the name of "Dick," and it was his nightly custom in summer time to enter mother's room through the stovepipe hole, which of course was not in use in warm weather and which was left open for ventilation. His method of entrance was to mount to the shed, cross the kitchen roof and bound through this pipe hole, alighting on the foot of mother's bed, there to curl up on a feather pillow until morning. About 2 o'clock that night, poor innocent Dick attempted to do this, but instead of alighting on the usual soft spot, he landed on all fours smack in the middle of the minister's face. It is on record that he—the minister, not the cat—yelled "Jehosaphat!" which to me seemed most appropriate and in keeping with his Biblical learning and training. It took a good bit of eloquence on father's part to convince him that it was only Dick, and not a wild cat, and he joined heartily in the laugh, when finally convinced. But poor Dick failed to understand such a reception, and took refuge under our bed, from which no amount of coaxing could lure him that night.

Though this was the first recollection I have of mother's dislike to company, it was not the last, and as the days and months rolled into the years, and we grew to young womanhood, we came to realize that only especially-invited company was really welcome, and that such invitations were few and far between. Do not think we were without guests, far from it, but they were always of the kind I have just named—unexpected, and their departure was "unwept, unhonored," and I might add "unsung," were it not that when I recall the paeans of joy which sometimes arose on the departure of such guests it seems hardly truthful.

Elizabeth and I used to think this lack of invited guests unjust, and many a time have we assured each other that when we had homes of our own we would have company all the time. And finally, in the course of years, the opportunity came to Elizabeth. Not to me, oh, dear no! How could parents expect a child to grow up anything but an old maid when she had been christened "Phoebe Ann," not only christened, but called it, for always and ever was that full name flung at me. Elizabeth might be Bessie, or Libby, or Beth, but I was ever Phoebe Ann. The years, of course, brought many changes. The mesa, once so dry, was now all under cultivation, and our ranch had long since been cut into lots and formed part of a thriving city. Elizabeth and Tom built their home on one of these lots, and true to her prophesy, Elizabeth had company! It was the era of what might be termed "specified parties," and she reveled in violet luncheons, Easter teas, rose dinners, yellow breakfasts, and all the other colors of the rainbow, to say nothing of the intermediate tints. In all these festivities I had with Elizabeth an equal share, not only the pleasure of them, but the work as well, and like two long-repressed children, we joyed in our liberty. Tom had a fair income, Elizabeth was a good manager, and did not go beyond their means, and those good times I shared with them are among my sweetest memories.

But the "changes that will surely come" came to our lives; first there came into Elizabeth's home a wonderful little bundle of humanity known as a baby, then within the space of a few months father and mother were taken from us, and last came the necessity for me to go into the business world and make my own living, which, thanks to father's insisting on his girls having a thorough business training, was not a very difficult thing to do. Through the influence of an old family friend I obtained a position in the northern part of the State, and thus it came about that for seven long years Elizabeth and I were together only during my brief yearly vacation. Then, all unexpected, all unlooked for, there came into my life that wonderfully beautiful thing called love. To me! who had never dreamed of being other than the old-maid aunt to Elizabeth's babies, even though I hated my business life with an intensity which would have surprised my friends and relatives had they known of it. Could I write Elizabeth of this? No! It was far too precious to trust to a letter. Robert had pleaded that an early date be set for our wedding, as business demanded his making a trip East, and he wished to make it also our wedding journey. My decision was quickly made, and forthwith my trunk was packed and I was speeding southward. I don't believe the dreams of any young girl over her first lover are one-half as sweet as those of one of us bachelor maids, whose horizon has for years been bounded by work and the necessity for it for one's daily sustenance. Every turn of the wheels, every throb of the engine, even the very gusts of hot wind which blew eddies of choking dust into the car, sang over and over Robert's parting words: "Just two short weeks and I'll come for you, dear."

But my dreams suffered a sudden check when at last I entered Elizabeth's home. Such a wan, haggard Elizabeth arose from a littered couch and stumbled over a far more littered floor to reach me. "Phoebe Ann!" she sobbed, "how did you know I wanted you?" "What is the matter?" I gasped, looking in dismay and amazement from Elizabeth to the disorderly room. As the only answer I received was a succession of choking sobs, I drew her toward an arm chair, and with one free hand unloading it of its burden of toys, papers and pillows, I gently forced her into it. "Now tell me," I demanded, "what means all this?" With a laugh which was half a sob, she said: "The doctor calls it nervous pr but it isn't, Phoebe Ann, it's company—it is! I've five relations-in-law here for six weeks, and——"

"But, Elizabeth dear," I interposed, as the [illegible] showed signs of coming to the surface.

"Don't stop me, I think I'd feel better if I told all about it. Do you remember how unjust we used think mother when she objected to our having pany? Well, just let me tell you, I think mother a saint to stand the constant coming and going of for years. You remember how proud I was of our guest chamber, and how I carved on a panel by the dow those beautiful words of Bunyan's: 'The Pil they laid in a large upper chamber, whose win opened toward the sun rising: the name of the cha was PEACE, where he slept till break of day, and he awoke and sang.' I'd just like to take that down put up some uncanny thing that would give 'em nightmare. Bunyan never had a plague of company he'd never have written that!"

"Elizabeth, you absurd woman," I laughed. Wh noticing my interruption, she continued: "You th this room looks as if a cyclone had swept over it; w you should just see that guest room! There scratches on the walls where the madam struck mat to light her alcohol lamp; a big piece of plastering knocked out of the wall where a trunk lid has b banged against it; a bottle of some liquid containing al hol has been left on the dresser, and of course ru the polish; there are stains on the chair cushions; a knowing, as they did, that I was doing my own ho work, they never in all the six weeks of their stay much as made a bed or wiped a dish.

"You poor, tired-out child!" I said indignantly.

"Yes, I am tired, so tired I can't even keep track my own babies, and dear only knows where they are minute," and her voice broke. I arose briskly. "Th I'm going to tidy this room, and you are going to a nap while I hunt up those precious babies, and the then we'll talk some more."

It took but a few minutes to set the room to rig for Elizabeth is really a very dainty housewife, and disorder was all on the surface—a few minutes and little effort for my strong, well self, but what a mo tain it had seemed to poor worn Elizabeth! That ev ing when dinner was over and the babies tucked in th little beds, I told Elizabeth and Tom of the wherefor my visit. It is not necessary in this narrative to down all their comments, especially Tom's, as he ever been by far the worst tease I've ever known, when their surprise had somewhat abated, Eliza said:

"I'm going to give you some advice as to your East, which I don't know that you need, but which the fruit of my experience as a hostess, not as a gu I've always been too busy entertaining people to anywhere myself," she added dryly. "Firstly, al send some intimation of your intended visit, giving some idea of the length of it. A hostess, as a rul anxious to make a guest's visit pleasant, and whe guest is a total stranger to her she must of course her own ideas in regard to entertaining; therefore, ad yourself to those with whom you visit and be appre tive of all their efforts. Verily, they will rise up a call you blessed when you are gone. I needn't tell to be careful of your hostess's property, for you, I kn would never be anything else," and Elizabeth sighed thought of her abused guest chamber. "Then, if you visiting with those whose means are not as great yours, don't make your hostess feel shabby by un displaying your pretty things. To be sure, a wo usually likes to see all her guests pretty garm but——"

"But," struck in Tom, "she means, don't make poor host feel like 30 cents when he comes home and hungry and finds a fashion plate seated at the ner table when he has on a business suit himself." perceive," I laughed, "that you and Elizabeth have b having experiences."

"And wherever you are, no matter if they have s ants galore," continued Elizabeth, "see that you prompt at meals. There is nothing that clogs wheels of domestic machinery like the guest who law unto himself or herself. The nicest guest we ever had was Tom's cousin; she was never off never followed me around the house as though couldn't let me out of her sight, as some guests h an unfortunate habit of doing; was always rea help with any household task, even one day when I detained downtown, getting dinner and finishing as ing I had been compelled to leave. She has never c speaking of her delightful visit with us, but I've al insisted she helped make it so. And the day after left, that big arm chair was sent up from the furn store with the kindest little note. Of course, it is every one who can afford to make so costly a gift, it is not positively necessary to make any gift to hostess, but if you only knew the glow that com the heart of a hostess when she receives an appre little note after her guest's departure, you would neglect sending one."

"Dear me!" I exclaimed, "I never realized before a responsibility visiting is. I—I'd almost rather for how can I ever come up to such a standard set? I just know I'll do something to make people hate me, and I—I wanted to be liked a any way."

"Oh, Phoebe Ann," began Elizabeth contritely Tom's voice drowned hers. "Phoebe Ann, just li your big brother. Anybody who will come into a that looked the way this one did when I left this ing, straighten it up, make a new woman out of tired little woman I've worried over all day, beguile babies into playing in their own yard, to say of the coaxing it must have taken to persuade the clean rompers and submitting to a scrubbing the good dinner we've just enjoyed—well, I wouldn't be afraid to trust her to do the right thing in any home in this land."

Then suddenly all the sweet dreams of the morning came crowding back, and it was with a happy heart, though somehow the tears seemed mighty near the surface, that I kissed them both good-night.

LILLIAN FLEMING TURK.

A RIVAL OF GLOUCESTER.

LUNENBURG, NOVA SCOTIA, IS SOME PUNKINS IN THE HUNT FOR COD.

[New York Sun:] The fishermen of Gloucester have long monopolized fiction and poetry as being the real catchers of cod and the most picturesque of those who make their living on the Grand Banks. Rudyard Kipling let his character in "Captains Courageous" speak disrespectfully of the Frenchmen and Bluenoses who competed in the race for fish, and other so-called sea writers have done the same.

If you ask a Bluenose, that is a resident of Nova Scotia, who are the real bankers, he will tell you "the men of Lunenburg." Lunenburg is the rival of Gloucester in the hunt for cod, and a pretty husky rival, too, for fishermen from that seaport on the south shore of Nova Scotia are the backbone of that industry that is valued well over $3,000,000 a year.

The Lunenburg fishermen spend about half the year at home, but they do not use this time sitting around the docks spinning yarns. They are busy with lobster catching or in the woods. When March comes around, they begin to make ready for the sea.

The schooners are put in order and stocked with provisions. On the Sunday nearest March 21 the churches hold special services and prayers go up for safe and prosperous voyages. They are devout, these Bluenose fishermen, but they keep an eye on the profits, too.

The fishing schooners are small, rarely reaching 100 tons. The law requires vessels exceeding that size to carry a certified master, and the Lunenburg man can't see the use of passing examinations in navigation. With a compass and a dipsey lead, the master of a banker can find his way in any weather.

The start from Lunenburg is like the start of a yacht race. Most of the bankers go out on the same day and there is good-natured rivalry among the skippers as to who shall first anchor on the fishing grounds.

When a skipper makes berth in a likely place, real work begins. The dories, flat-bottomed boats about fifteen feet long, which are very seaworthy but don't look it, are put overboard and the trawls are set.

These trawls are something sizable in the way of fishing lines. The main line is from one to one and a half miles, with a fringe of smaller lines which carry the hooks. The trawls are anchored at each end and are set like the spokes of a wheel whose hub is the schooner. The dories move up and down the trawls, taking off the fish and rebaiting the hooks. It sounds easy, but in a heavy sea it is ticklish business.

When a schooner has loaded full with fish, cut and salted down, she steals away from the shrieking medley of fog horns and makes for Lunenburg. It is a lucky ship which enters port without her colors at half-mast, which would indicate that one of her crew has gone. The fleet gets back from the spring trip about the end of May, unloads and sails back again on the summer trip, which lasts until the autumn.

Canterbury Pilgrims in Old Puritan Gloucester.

On the 4th of next August, the seaport city of Gloucester, Mass., will hold an outdoor fete unique in the annals of New England. At night, overlooking the harbor from a natural amphitheater seating 15,000 people, a combined masque and pageant of the fourteenth century will be performed.

The descendants of the Pilgrims of Gloucester will give welcome to the Pilgrims of Canterbury. For the first time in more than 500 years, Chaucer himself will ride in pilgrimage—surrounded by the motley characters of his imagination—not in the vellum of William Morris, nor between the covers of a text-book, but on solid ground, under the stars. Moored within a few hundred yards, twentieth-century warships will blend their searchlights with the many-colored fires of the pageant. From across the bay—when the pealing of chimes gives cue from imaginary spires in the masque—the bells of Puritan steeples in the town will—for the first time in their history—ring for mass—at the ancient shrine of Becket! Among the thousands of spectators, as chief guest of honor, the President of the United States has accepted the city's invitation to be present.

In view of so unusual a celebration by a city so distinctively American, it seems worth while to consider the local significance of this pageant masque, and to associate it with some of the larger meanings of pageantry and drama for our time and country.

The first settlement of Gloucester was in 1623, at Stage Fort. There, in the same year, was erected the house of Roger Conant, first Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony—a quaint, gabled structure now no longer standing. In March of the present year, through the Gloucester Committee, the city authorities unanimously decided to take steps to reproduce this ancient landmark on the original site, as a permanent historic museum.—[Percy MacKaye, in Scribner's.

The Seashore Kind.

The moon painted on the sea a path of quivering silver.

"But," she murmured, "it isn't right for you to say you love me. You must only think it."

Smiling, he strained her to him yet more closely.

"But I don't think it," he retorted, "I only say it."

Fate's Introduction.

ADVENTURE IN MADEIRA FOUNDED ON FACT.

By a Special Contributor.

TO Willard Osborne, immaculate in white flannels, smoking his cigar in front of the hotel at Funchal, the girl opposite under the magnolia tree, in the white linen suit and the rose-covered hat, was quite the loveliest vision in all Madeira. That was saying a good deal, for he had always been enamored of Madeira, so much so that he had allowed the rest of the party on his yacht to go on to Oratava without him, whence they would return and pick him up some time during the next two days, the exact time being problematical with their interest in Oratava.

Had he but known it, he was no more enamored of the island than was the pretty girl opposite, for she had sucked in her breath with sheer delight ever since the Sunshine had sighted its dark, purple, volcanic rocks rising out of the sea early that morning. But there was no means of his knowing this, for while she was the most attractive girl he had ever seen and he was mad to meet her, and while at that very moment she was perhaps thinking how lazily handsome he looked leaning back in his chair until he threatened to precipitate himself into the bed of Guernsey lilies behind him, that garrulous old composite, Madam Grundy, had dictated well-bred affectation of ignorance concerning each other's presence and proximity.

It was the tea hour, and the Portuguese band was playing soft music upon the Braca. An indescribable fragrance filled the air, the fragrance of a million blossoms, made up of the sweetness of purple passion flowers, of waxen magnolia buds, of heliotrope and hibiscus and a hundred other scents, honey-sweet.

Had Willard Osborne been at New York at that moment, he might have been drinking a cup of steaming tea in the company of some pretty girl—for he had leisure and was in much demand for tete-a-tetes and tea; instead, out of respect for the balmy climate, he had ordered a glass of tea punch.

The native lad shortly appeared with it, but instead of one ice-sweated glass, there were two upon the tray, and one was for the girl who sat opposite. She received hers gratefully, while he took his a moment later with irritation. Apparently quite oblivious of each other's presence, they sat and drank it. Willard Osborne was not used to being denied anything he wanted, and at that moment it seemed to him he had never wanted anything as he wanted to know the pretty girl off the yacht Sunshine. Once when she happened to glance in his direction, he thought he detected the slightest smile of amusement curving her sweet mouth, and guessed that he had been looking very sour indeed. Then his own face relaxed into a smile, meeting hers, seeing which she colored a little and looked away out where the white yacht lay at anchor in the silver, glistening bay.

Conscious of rudeness, realiizng that he had been staring at her unmercifully, he busied himself sending the native children scrambling for pennies, and presently the rest of her party came up on horseback. In the group he picked out a stately couple for her mother and father, and the lad's roistering cry of "Sis!" was not necessary to identify the boy of 10 as her brother. The boy frolicked about her, fond and teasing. After a time, the whole party went to dress for dinner.

Later as he sat at his soup he found himself watching eagerly for the party to come down, and having stared at her an entire afternoon, he was not prepared for the girl's surpassing loveliness when she finally appeared in her white dinner gown, cut to modestly reveal the white column of her throat. He drew a quick breath at sight of her, and scarcely took his eyes from her during the entire meal.

When he went out after dinner to smoke his cigar under the magnolias, it seemed to him that the soft pedal had been put upon the entire island. It was hard to distinguish between sound and fragrance. The quiet ripple of the waves upon the sand, the splash of the fountains, and the velvet-scented darkness through which the red ash of his cigar glowed solitarily, merged together, and the fragrance of the world went to his head.

The wing of a night insect brushed his cheek. "What a night for love!" he whispered to himself as he paced back and forth, and the girl's face came in his vision. Their laughter came to him tantalizingly, almost tauntingly, from the veranda, swelling which he could distinguish the boy's shrill peal of merriment and the girl's sweet mirth-choked echo.

Before his cigar was smoked to its glowing end, the party came down the path, brushing quite near him in the darkness on their way to the boats which would take them on board the yacht for the night. He heard them planning a ride for sunrise.

A few moments later, there were footsteps on the gravelly beach, and the boy came running back, bumping into Osborne in the dim shadow and going down before the suddenness of the onslaught. Osborne helped him to his feet.

"Oh, thank you, sir," he exclaimed. "I hope you'll pardon a fellow bumping into you that way. You see, some one left their tennis racket down on the sand, and I thought I'd bring it up to the hotel. The colored kids are such thieves."

"It is mine. Thank you, sir," Osborne answered, and at the equality of this address, the boy burned with generosity.

"Oh, don't thank me," he said embarrassed. "My sister sent me back with it. She's a ripping sort. I'll introduce her to you in the morning. All the fellows want to marry her."

With which proud declaration he was off down the beach. For the first time that day, Osborne was satisfied with things. Before he went to bed, he ordered his horse for sunrise.

To his disappointment in the morning, however, the lad was not with the horseback party, having in all probability been left fast asleep upon the yacht. They had evidently breakfasted upon the yacht, and before he had finished breakfast they were off. When his own horse was brought up, he took the same road, riding slowly and keeping at a respectful distance, not knowing quite what he expected from the ride, but contented to keep the girl in sight.

The road, banked with wild geraniums, hydrangeas and fuchsias, led up the mountain. He had often been over it before. As he expected, when he reached the end of the road, he found the horseback party in raptures over the profusion of flowers in the little shelf-like park. There were rare plants from every part of the world transplanted there, and every little while the girl would give a gasp of delight as she came upon some beautiful specimen of tropical life, calling upon the others to share her delight.

The native grooms were already descending the mountain road with the horses, and Osborne knew that the party was planning to make the descent of the mountain in the basket-work sleighs, each holding two people and attended by two natives lashed together.

Two by two the party entered the sleighs, until only two were left, one to be occupied by the girl and her father, and one by Osborne. The girl and her father were having an animated discussion over some plant they had found, when the rest of the party, with shrieks of mingled fear and laughter, were pushed off, shooting at tremendous pace down the mountain. The girl still lingered over her find, but her father came and climbed into the sleigh that was to take them down. The two natives behind, seeing no one else, and evidently thinking that the gentleman was to make the descent alone, pushed him off without warning to the accompaniment of vociferous protests in English which they did not at all understand and could not have heeded if they had.

The sleigh was half-way down the hill with her father when the girl turned around. She peered down the decline, giving a little gasp of bewilderment at find herself alone in the park with Osborne.

He raised his hat politely. "The natives evidently thought there was no one else to go, and pushed off with your father," he explained. "He protested furiously, but as they did not understand English, in vain. I shall be very glad if you will share my basket with me."

The girl addressed looked down the mountain where for a moment the sleigh containing her father bumped into sight around a curve, and to Osborn's relief, laughed aloud.

"Poor dad!" she said. "He's probably frantic." She laughed again. "I'll be very glad to share your conveyance. It's kind of you to offer."

At first it seemed to the girl that they were being hurled through space at a tremendous pace, but she made no outcry, and soon the novel, gliding motion became a delight to her. The two men managed the sleigh with great skill, steering in the most wonderful manner around the sharp angles in the zig-zag road, using their bare feet as brakes when necessary. Some of the turns were so abrupt that it seemed impossible that they could avoid being upset. The runners snapped from the friction with the gravel road, and occasionally a spark shot out.

"Oh, it's heavenly!" the girl exclaimed as they rounded a trying corner cleanly, leaning toward Osborne with her face shining and drawing a deep breath. They were almost the first words she had spoken. The next instant the breath became a gasp. There was a heavier snapping from the runners than usual; instead of a spark there was a shaft of flame to the side, and the dry basket in which they sat blazed up, the fire catching hungrily at the girl's skirt.

For one horrible instant Osborne looked out of flame far below into the flame of flowers in the chasm, the next he caught the girl in his arms and leaped with her from the burning basket on to a little shelf of rock barely wide enough to hold them and with inarticulate cries was crushing out the blaze from her skirts against his body.

His breath was coming in great sobbing gasps when he released her, and he was sick enough to have fallen. His eyes were closed for an instant before he had seen the flames shooting toward her face. When he opened them he saw that her face was as white as her dress, but that she was calm and almost unhurt. A few feet away, the natives watched the blazing sleigh writhe itself to ashes, their dark faces scared-looking.

Late that afternoon Osborne was sitting in the midst of an adoring group from the Sunshine. The boy was dancing about him, occasionally reminding him that he was a hero, to his complete embarrassment.

At 5 they were leaving in the yacht Sunshine. Osborne had acquainted himself very thoroughly with their plans, as may be judged by what he said to the girl as they stood a little apart from the others before she went on board.

She held out her hand, and as his own closed over it, she swayed toward him a little and her voice was broken with emotion. "I owe you my life," she said. "How can I ever thank you?"

"Some day I will tell you," he said, bending his fine head to look into her eyes, and keeping her hand still held fast in his. A moment later it was gently withdrawn, as though it left his clasp reluctantly.

"Until we meet, then, at Til," he said softly. And as the boat pushed off, the girl echoed happily: "Good-by, until we meet at Til."

FRANK WORK, the venerable New York millionaire, discussed, in his distinctive way, international marriages.

"Our girls don't marry men any more," he said grimly. "They marry titles. Girls haven't changed, it seems, since the Middle Ages.

"There was once, you know, a lady of Touraine who was wedded to a medieval count. The count went out from his castle one fine morning to meet the foe, but the foe defeated him and took him prisoner.

"Then the count's castle was besieged. The countess was summoned to the battlements. From below, a herald shouted to her:

"'Lady, your lord has been defeated, and is now our prisoner. Surrender the castle to us, and he shall be restored to you in safety.'

"But the countess answered without an instant's hesitation:

"'No, I'll do nothing of the sort, for I can easily obtain another husband, but getting another castle is quite a different matter.'"

The Sincere Epitaph.

"HYPOCRISY," said Dr. C. S. Parkhurst at a farewell dinner in New York—he was about to leave for Europe—"hypocrisy is often not hypocrisy at all. We all have bad in us. Well, if we hide that badness, it's a sign that our goodness preponderates over it. Yet the short-sighted, detecting something of bad in good men, dub them hypocrites.

"The sincere and honorable, these short-sighted people think, must always show their worst side. But surely that would be a foolish thing to do.

"Take, for example, the inscriptions on our tombs. Apt to err, you say? Apt to put the best side foremost? Well, isn't that better than putting the worst side foremost, like the self-righteous, pharisaical woman who ordered to be carved on her headstone after her death the inscription:

"'She was not like the woman who lies in the next lot.'"

Charity That Begins Afar.

"I DINED with Col. James Hamilton Lewis at the Hotel du Palais in Paris last month," said a Chicagoan. "Col. Lewis had just got back from the Far East. He said China would soon start a crusade against her American and European residents.

"Col. Lewis praised the missionaries in China, but at the same time he thought that missionary work should begin at home. He thought we had enough missionary work in our midst to keep us fairly busy a few years yet.

"He said two poor women were talking. One asked the other:

"'Where did you get that pretty dress for the baby? It's most as good as new.'

"'The rich folks on the corner gave it to me,' was the answer.

"'Why,' said the first woman, 'I've asked them for help several times, but they always turned me down cold.'

"'Well, you see,' explained the other, 'I didn't let on it was for myself. I pretended I was collecting cast-off duds for the heathen.'"

HEAD KEEPER SNYDER of the Central Park Zoo was smiling over a newspaper account of a monkey that had died of love.

"It's a good story," said the head keeper. "This reporter has an original turn to him. He's like the western jury.

"A westerner, you know, once hung himself to the bed post by his suspenders, and the verdict of the Coroner's jury ran:

"'Deceased came to his death by coming home full and mistaking himself for his pants.'"

The Pitcher.

HARRY McCORMICK, the Giants' star hitter, replied with an anecdote to a compliment on his batting.

"I could always bat," he said. "One Fourth, in my boyhood, a pitcher was taken out of the box after I had knocked a home run, and another pitcher was substituted.

"As I was taking a drink after my round of the bases, I heard a pretty girl in the grand stand say:

"'Oh, how stupid of them to change their pitchers! The other man was awfully good. He hit the bat nearly every time.'"

A Corpse Excursion Ticket.

"IT may be economical, it is certainly ridiculous," said Senator Tillman of a proposition he opposed. "It reminds me of Calhoun White.

"Calhoun White stuck his head in through the ticket window of Salters Depot railroad station and said:

"'Boss, gimme two round-trip tickets to Society Hill, one fur myself and one fur a corpse.'

"'I never heard of nobody buying excursion tickets for corpses,' said the agent. 'What's the meaning of this?'

"'Well, boss,' Calhoun White replied, 'my brother Webster died yesterday, and I want to take the corpse up to Society Hill and let the family review the remains, and then I'll bring him back to Salters Depot here and bury him. That'll be a big sight cheaper than for the whole family to traipse all the way from Society Hill and all the way back again.'"

The Children's Friend.

"JUDGE" ROSA BENDER, the superintendent of one of the model family houses on the East Side of New York, is so called because, with sympathy and acumen, she settles all the disputes of the 800 tenants in her charge.

"Judge" Bender was talking the other day about the host of children in her enormous model house.

"'They delight me," she said. "They are continually doing and saying the quaintest things. For instance, a little chap told me the other day that his yellow dog Salome had died.

"'An' I bet the angels wuz scairt,' he said, 'when they seen Salome comin' up the golden stairway, fur Salome wuz allus cross to people what hadn't much clo's on.'

"Another little boy," pursued "Judge" Bender, "said last month to his mother:

"'Ma, get me a little baby sister, will ye? I'm awful lonesome.'

"'Yes, my child, I will,' the mother answered, with a glad smile. 'I promise you either a sister or a brother.'

"A baby sister is there now, but that boy often growls in the middle of the night at her:

"'Say, if I'd knowed what a yeller ye wuz goin' to be, I wouldn't have ordered ye.'"

The Law's Delays.

"I UNDERSTAND that you called on the plaintiff, Mr. Barnes. Is that so?" questioned Lawyer Fuller, now Chief Justice.

"Yes," answered the witness.

"What did he say?" next demanded Fuller.

The attorney for the defense jumped to his feet and objected that the conversation could not be admitted in the evidence. A half-hour's argument followed, and the judges retired to their private room to consider the point.

An hour later the judges filed into the courtroom and announced that Mr. Fuller might put his question.

"Well, what did the plaintiff say, Mr. Barnes?"

"He weren't at home, sir," came the answer without a tremor.—[Success.

Young America.

John, aged 6, was sent by his mother to the chicken coop for some eggs. He soon returned with the report:

"There ain't no eggs in the nests at all, 'cept the ones they copies from."

Carrie's sister May, 6 years of age, on being asked why the Sabbath day was different from the other days in the week, answered very carelessly: "Oh, that's the day you pin things on, 'stead of sewing."

My little girl in the early stages of her education asked me what a-e-i-o and u were. I told her they were called "vowels." With a look of astonishment she replied: "Mother, I think they should be called stomachs; that other word sounds vulgar."

Dorothy was being taught to say her prayers. She repeated each line perfectly after her mother until they reached the third—"if I should die before I wake"—and here Dorothy paused with a look of terror in her eyes at the thought of dying, then she said with a look of intense relief: "No, we won't die, mamma; we'll take castor oil."

A minister's little daughter was visiting a family in a parish which her father had recently left. One day she explained to her hostess that he hoped the people of the church would not send for him to conduct funerals, but would have the present pastor of the church. Thinking perhaps she might have given offense, she looked up with a bright smile and added: "But of course he would be very glad to attend your funeral."

Clifford can ask questions quicker than we can answer them, and a few days ago his uncle told him he would turn into an interrogation point. I agreed with him and said: "Yes, I had once seen a picture of a little boy turning into one. He had become more and more curved, and finally had become just a large interrogation point."

Cliff listened intently, and when I had finished, he instantly asked: "Well, how did they keep the dot under him?"

"Don't you want your nice bread and butter, Anne?" asked her father. Anne shook her head. "It's a shame to waste such nice bread and butter," continued her father. "I'll eat it myself." Anne watched the process with big eyes and a look of expectancy on her face.

Finally, when the last mouthful had disappeared, Anne asked: "Papa, did it tickle?"

"Tickle!" said her father. "Why, no; what do you mean?"

"I thought it would tickle," said Anne. "It had a long hair on it."

The baby was being questioned playfully as to his senses.

"What are these for?" touching his eyes.

"To see with," he answered.

"And this?" touching his nose.

"To see wiv," he answered.

"And your mouth?"

"Oh, to eat."

"What are your ears for?"

This was a puzzler, but after a moment, he said with firm conviction: "To wash."—[Delineator.

IRRIGATE AND CULTIVATE.

IMPORTANT PROCESSES THAT ARE MUTUALLY HELPFUL.

By Ernest Braunton.

DURING these warm summer days, the slogan of the orchardist, the truck gardener and the nurseryman is "irrigate and cultivate," and each of the two renders the other more effective. Soil must be stirred to receive water, and again stirred to prevent its too rapid evaporation. Irrigation, unless followed by cultivation, loses half its value. A sufficient amount and proper balance of the two form the highest standard of plant culture.

Garden culture, in theory, differs in no wise from the most improved methods in vogue in orchard and farm work. To be sure, we cannot in the garden use farm cultivators to "open out" furrows or to pulverize the soil subsequent to irrigation, but with hoe and rake we may carry out the same principles and accomplish like results. The greatest mistake made by our garden owners is the incessant sprinkling of everything in the garden. The method is correct, for on restricted areas it is economical and by far the most effective if continued until all the soil is thoroughly wetted. Where failures result, they are caused by insufficiency of water which only wets the surface soil and does not reach the thirsty roots of anything except some herbaceous plants. It pays at all times to stir the soil, even though shallowly; yet the profit is much greater if it be done deeply. In stirring the soil, however, it is as well to stir something into it occasionally. Thoroughly-rotted manure, thoroughly and deeply incorporated with the soil, will make a garden produce the finest of plants and flowers.

Cobblestones in the Garden.

Though by no means the best material for rock gardens, our common cobblestones may be made quite effective by a proper mixing with plants. The best rockery material is the most porous rock to be had, for time and the elements will mellow its harshness. Our cobble stones are too hard and too smooth for ideal plant rockeries, and when used should be nearly obscured by plants.

What Is Chlorophyll?

Even the world's most eminent chemists have been unable to determine with certainty the composition of chlorophyll or the green coloring matter in leaves. Plants often get "sick" and lose this color, the leaves becoming white, yellow, or variegated. This disease is called chlorosis. All the chemists can tell us at present is that "chlorophyll is a magnesium derivative, from which the metal is eliminated readily by means of acid but with great difficulty by alkalis. The green pigment consists in most plants apparently of a mixture of magnesium derivatives, a crystalline chlorophyll, and another chlorophyll or mixture of chlorophylls which are esters of the unsaturated alcohol phytol." The statement is made that there is a considerable amount of evidence which tends to show that an intimate chemical relationship exists between the green pigments of plants and the red pigments of blood.

Grow Herbaceous Perennials.

1. For Their Beauty.—Great variety in the habit of the plant. Much diversity and beauty of foliage with flowers of interminable variety in form and color. By a proper selection, a continuous bloom can be kept up during the entire season.

2. For Their Permanence.—When the foliage and flowers fade, that is not the last of them, they will appear stronger and more beauteous the next season.

3. For Their Dividends.—One can give away the increase and still be as rich as he was before. At the same time he can do good to his neighbors and friends by adding to their enjoyment.

4. For Their Ease of Culture.—When once planted, they may usually be left undivided for three or four years, and in some cases much longer, requiring little or no care.

5. For Their Flowers.—They are generally abundant bloomers, and many are excellent for cut flowers.

6. For Their Cheapness.—This class of plants costs very little when obtained in small size. Better perhaps, than buying plants, is growing them from seeds; it is an easy matter.

Native Asters of California.

Our State contains about twenty-speices of wild aster, though in the United States there are some 200 species out of a total of 300 for the whole world. Our climate in general is rather warm, for as a rule, asters prefer cooler and damper climes, yet strange to say, our handsomest species grows upon the desert sides in rocky soil.

A very handsome species, known as Anderson's aster, grows in the Sierras northward and is but sparingly found in Southern California, though we are not without a few showy species in any portion of the State. Locally, our finest species is quite rare, being restricted to the Arroyo Seco north of Los Angeles. So few in numbers is it that until lately it has escaped the eye of the botanical explorer, being recorded in science as Aster Greatai. We have two others in this section that are worthy of garden culture and both grow in the low meadows toward the coast. These are A. hesperius or Western aster, and A. Menziesii or Menzies' aster.

Though asters probably are found in every county in the State, another flower closely allied, is often taken for them, for some of the species have flowers as large and showy as many of our asters; these are the Erigerous, and the showiest, E. Philadelphicus, is to be found not only east and west in this country, but in Europe and other countries as well. Most of our native asters are perennials, and if one does not wish to wait to grow them from seeds, they can be marked and a clump of them taken up later. Most of the species are in bloom at the present writing.

Grass Under Trees.

Exhaustive experiments have been made to determine the cause of grass beneath trees causing death to the nobler plants, but so far without definite results other than a certainty that such action is due to some poisoning action exerted by the grass. Death of the trees is not due to root competition, increased evaporation, difference in temperature or aëration.

Destroying Ants.

A solution of potassium cyanide at the rate of one ounce to a gallon of water when poured into a small pit at the exit of a burrow destroys ants to a depth of one and a half feet below the surface of the soil. This solution can be prepared at a cost of from 1½ to 2 cents per gallon. It appears, however, to be injurious to plant life.

An Attraetve Vine.

Vitis heterophylla variegata is a very showy, variegated-leafed grape that makes a fine show throughout summer and autumn, its only drawback lies in the fact that it is deciduous; however, it is well worthy of a place in any garden.

NATURE STUDY.

Interest in It Never Before So Widespread as Now.

NEVER before has interest in nature study been so deep or widespread as at present, and it is believed by those most closely in touch with its workings that it is destined to give us, in another generation, a nation of plant lovers that will revolutionize the appearance of our home and cities. Then cities will no longer be known as "forest" or "garden" cities, for all will be forests, and parks, instead of being sparsely-planted areas with roads through them, as are all of ours at present, will have more of the "tangled wildwood" effect —a smack of real nature.

It has been noted that nature-study students lean far more heavily toward plant life than to any of the other branches and the methods of teaching seem to be a pleasing departure from that which characterizes botanical instruction in our schools and colleges. One prominent writer in the Nature Study Review writes: "It would be far better if biology teachers in our normal schools be drawn from graduates of our agricultural colleges, or from the ranks of intelligent gardeners and horticulturists, than from those who have had the present biology course in many colleges and have been given no hint that it is not and cannot be 'adapted' to the needs of normal-school students and grade pupils. If the colleges are to train normal-school teachers in biology, it is imperative that they supplement their present technical courses by a thorough course in biological nature study." Prof. L. H. Bailey, dean at Cornell, and one of the foremost educators of this country, maintains that the ordinary public school seems to lack motive power, being dominated too much by system, regularity, and college ideals, and that "the formal literary college entrance requirement is not an expression of the best activities of living." He believes that while nature-study work should be systematic, definite, and have relation, nevertheless it is easy to make it so formidable as to take the life out of it. "Laboratory teaching may be just as far from life as book teaching is; it all depends on the intention and the mode."

J. W. Shepherd points out that a large part of elementary science work has been diluted college work, that much of the laboratory work does not raise a personal problem for the individual student, and that the nature-study teacher must come over to the children's standpoint and concern herself with furnishing them rich, vital experiences, rather than developing scientific generalities. To this end the student-teacher should herself have experiences as a student with the same kind of material that the children will use in nature study.

O. P. Dellinger, in discussing the same general subject, holds that the nature-study training course should differentiate nature study from what it is not, make clear the aim of nature study as distinct from that of other related subjects, acquaint the student-teacher with the literature of the subject, give a few type outlines of lessons, and stratify the work for different grades. M. A. Bigelow sets forth the belief that nature study should not be limited to any particular phase of the subject, that direct observational study is the essential method, that the study should be made from the standpoint of nature as it touches our daily lives, and that close imitation of the technical science of higher schools is highly undesirable for nature study in the elementary schools. Thus we see that nature study has really little in common with botany, though most of us have been hugging the delusion that in studying botany we were getting closer to nature in one of her most important and interesting departments. Very seldom indeed is a botanist a plant lover, and if we are to have a nation of builders of the "home beautiful" and the "city beautiful," we must pin our faith to nature and to botany not at all. Those who care for botany enough will be sure to study it.

AN IDEAL NATURAL PARK SITE.

Public Comfort Stations.

One of the longest and most important municipal strides of the last decade is the increased and increasing number of public comfort stations and still we need more, for after all the world is for those who live in it. European countries are far in advance of America in these public conveniences, and Los Angeles is well to the foot of the class in this most important phase of public improvement. There is no question as to the necessity of these stations, but city authorities do not always know or will not always see what is best for the whole people. Too often "city fathers" have individual fads, and lose sight of comfort for women and children, to say nothing of the visitor or the rural resident not used to city life. The question of public comfort stations is an all-important one, and will force itself upon our attention more and more in the immediate future. The writer would like to predict that our city will be taking up this question with some seriousness in the near future.

Town Parks.

In town or small cities, the most important park matter is acquisition of land; park development may come later. In nearly all places, more especially in California, land values increase rapidly, and it is necessary to apply all available funds to the purchase of land. Even if a town has but a stretch of wild land for a few years, it is vastly to be desired over an improved "public square" or small area covered with closely-clipped lawns. One hundred dollars per acre will plant all the fundamentals to make in the future the very best of parks. The only proper method is, first, get all the land you can; secondly, use the next available funds in securing a plan from some competent landscape designer; thirdly, plant out the trees provided for in the plan, and then the shrubs. Let all lawns and small plants be unknown until the public can well afford them. Trees and shrubs will give them shade and shelter for recreation and picnic grounds. A place to rest in comfort, away from the glaring artificialities of city life is after all, the chief end to be desired. To have this, it is not necessary to build statues, ornamental fountains, bright-colored flower beds or any of the artificial features of the ordinary city park. We may see all these in city gardens and none should be seen in public parks except they are leaders in this class of work. A "touch of nature" should be the key to all park planning and planting.

Combatting Red Spider.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin on remedies for red spider which attacks both gardens and orchards in Southern California, and is also a serious green-house pest everywhere. The following remedies are advised:

"For the green house and for general use, sulphur with neutral, whale oil, and other soap solutions; kerosene-soap emulsion; and spraying with water.

"For the treatment of trees and shrubs, the same as the above, with the addition of resin wash and the lime-sulphur and lye-sulphur mixtures.

"For truck and garden plants, lye-sulphur wash and the same remedies as for the greenhouse, with the addition of clean gardening or farming, early fall plowing, keeping down weeds, and crop rotation where practicable."

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

OUR AMERICAN BREEDS.

OCCUPY A PROMINENT PLACE WITH PACIFIC COAST BREEDERS.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

TAKEN as a whole, the American breeds of poultry occupy a foremost position among commercial breeders. On this Coast it is a toss-up as to which class predominates, the Mediterranean or the American. In our opinion they are about evenly divided, with the Mediterranean in the lead about San Francisco Bay, but in the northwest and southwest the American, we believe, is slightly in the lead. And what a grand class it is. No breed has so many champions as the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes and no other breeds of all-purpose fowls are so numerous or represent a larger investment. France boasts of her Houdans, certainly a fine breed, but they furnish a white carcass with black legs and the plumage being of the same color, the carcass does not present so fine an appearance unless the black pin feathers are all removed. England has her Orpingtons, but it is doubtful even with her own breeders if the American breeds are eclipsed by them, for our English fanciers have done much to improve both the Wyandottes and Rocks, especially the newer varieties. Closely following these two leaders in the American class are the Rhode Island Reds, which have been handled with remarkable intelligence during the first few years. In type closely resembling the Rocks and Dottes, they have been otherwise strengthened in both economic and fancy advantages, especially in color of plumage and head and leg points. By many it is supposed that the American class is limited to this group, but there are a number of others which have never attained any great prominence, but still are bred more or less. Among these are the Black and Mottled Javas, Dominique, and Buckeyes; all recognized by the standard. In addition, some reference should be made to the Sherwoods, strongly resembling the White Rocks, with a tendency to Langshan shape, the White Wonders, suggestive of the White Dottes, only having slate-colored legs. These two latter breeds are now almost obsolete. There is a combination of qualities in the Rocks and Dottes that is indeed hard to beat. Being good layers they also combine with this good quality as table fowl. Unlike the Leghorn, which has become recognized as the egg machine on this coast, the American bird makes a fine roaster when arriving at an age when egg production shows a decline. The Cornish and Dorking are great meat breeds, but as a class cannot be compared to the Rocks and Dottes for hen fruit; the Mediterraneans are good croppers of hen fruit, but do not "show up" on the marble slabs of the butcher shop. In the showroom the American easily attract admiration and give every evidence of beauty of form and plumage. These things having all been proven in the show pen and in the market-place, there is every reason why the American breeds are popular wherever known.

An Economic Source of Green Food.

Mrs. J. N. M., Los Angeles, sends in the following timely correspondence on the green-food question. Have any other readers of The Times experimented with corn in the stalk as food for poultry?

"The easiest, quickest, cheapest and therefore, perhaps, the best way to get green feed for poultry is to plant corn in rows, two or three kernels to the inch, rows about twenty inches apart. Keep it well watered and it will grow luxuriantly and in a few weeks be large enough for use. Pull the largest stalks as many as can be held in the hand; take a good sharp butcher knife and after the manner of whetting with a jack knife, slice it thin, not more than half an inch thick. Begin with the roots; they will eat it all. For the young ones slice thinner; chickens of all ages will go for it as they do for fresh meat. I feed in the morning—because then it is fresh and juicy—all they can eat up by noon. It takes but a few minutes to cut enough for fifty fowls. If one had a seed cutter perhaps it would be easier. Any little space in the garden can be utilized and by repeated plantings one may have green feed almost the year round in Southern California. If space is limited, plant between the rows when the corn is two feet high, but to continue such a tax and also to have the feed tender, the soil must be kept very rich. The fertilizer from the yards will do wonders. I have fed corn in this way for several years, and the results in health and egg production have been excellent."

The Value of Egg-Laying Contests.

On more than one occasion, reference has been made in this department to the various egg-laying contests that have of late years been a feature of experiment-station work, and also of the poultry business in general in England and Australia. For the most part these contests have been carried on with the recognized egg-producing breeds with the result that honors have been rather evenly divided. There is a feature, however, connected with these contests that merits a word of protest. When any given breed comes out with a brilliant record, owners and propagators at once seize the opportunity for advertising purposes, giving the impression that all hens of that particular breed will do equally well. This is not true. The egg-laying contests usually represent the pick of a given flock, and though giving fine records, only demonstrate that the particular individual hens in a given contest are good layers—it is no criterion as to the laying propensity of like number of different hens of the same breed. In other words, egg-laying contests do not prove superior values of breeds, only of individuals of breeds.

The Black Jacobin Pigeon.

Southern California enjoys the distinction of breeding some of the finest pigeons in America—especially in the breed known as Hen Pigeons. Of the other varieties some progress has been made with Parlor Tumblers, White Fantails, Pouters, Jacobins, Carriers, etc. The illustration shows a fine Jacobin hen, a breed possessed of many qualities calculated to fire the enthusiasm of the fancier, and which is especially popular in England, Scotland and Ireland. It is a medium-sized bird, full-breasted, long, and slender, with a jaunty carriage, holding its head about eight inches from the ground. Its head is small, hidden to the eyes by the long hood. The eye is pearl, white, or sometimes, orange-tinted; beak, short, and rather thick; wattle, small and smooth, and eye wattle, small, circular, and prominent. Head from the mouth and eye upward white, also the tail coverts and primary flight feathers. The remainder of the bird is black.

Eliminating the Crow.

An anonymous correspondent sends in the following pathetic appeal to The Times:

"Could not some of the people who do extraordinary things with fowls be induced to exert their wizardry in the direction of eliminating the "crow" from cocks? The man who succeeded in performing this feat would assuredly be regarded as a philanthropist of the highest type by the millions of suffering human beings whose necessary rest is destroyed by the crowing of cocks from midnight to the dawn of day."

It seems to us that the man or woman who objects to the glorious call of the crowing cock must have a trifle of the pessimist in the blood, especially in the morning after a bad or joyful night. There is nothing but courage, fortitude and ambition in the call of chanticleer, announcing the approach of another day in which we are to do and dare, to embrace Dame Fortune and conquer. A lusty crow is never negative, but always positive—an element that all of us at times need in our business. In spite of this, your night worker and day sleeper finds chanticleer's shrill and high-sounding notes at times annoying, and since this sort of people are all city workers rather than followers of the outdoor life, something may be said in their behalf. For instance, city people can keep a few hens for eggs without males. This precludes breeding, but when beyond the age of profitable egg production the hens could be disposed of for eating purposes and pullets purchased from some responsible breeder to take their place. In this way a neighborhood or locality might be kept quiet for lazy people in the early morning. As to eliminating the crow, you might as well try to take the laugh out of a man or the smile from a woman. God in his wisdom gave male poultry the privilege to crow. Unless cocks are all killed, we take it for granted that the practice will continue for some time to come.

A "Know How" in Arizona.

Success usually comes to those who "know how," and hence are deserving of it. For years it has been the custom for Arizona to import nearly all of her poultry products, presumably upon the theory that poultry raising did not pay as well as mining and cattle growing. It remained for an invalid Episcopal minister to explode this false idea, and the place of his exploitations is just out of the city of Tucson. Here Frederick Lyne has succeeded in establishing one of the most profitable poultry farms in the southwest. His breed is the ever-popular White Leghorn, of which he has at present upward of 5000 head on the place. In mentioning some of his experiences in building up the business Mr. Lyne said that when he started his poultry ranch he heard much of the great Arizona chicken disease—meaning roup. "But I have found that the disease most to be dread poultry is acute laziness or ignorance on the part man who owns the hens. There can be no 'ma successful poultry raising."

The hen yards at Lynehurst look like a park. yard has its trees which afford ample shade. is piped to all yards, insuring a plentiful supply hot days of summer.

In one respect, the Lynehurst ranch leads the and that is the way in which it places its egg market. The eggs are packed in a one-dozen car sealed up under a strikingly beautiful label. labels are dated and nobody sees or touches them from the time they leave the ranch until the ton is opened by the consumer. Likewise all and hens are marked with an aluminum band leg of each chick on which is stamped "Lynehurst."

When asked why he goes to this expense and Mr. Lyne says: "This egg business needs toning ginger, style, if you please. Hitherto it has been the knees, and needlessly seedy. The day of the paper bag and lard pail for delivering eggs to the sumer is passing away. I also see the coming the rotten-egg industry. Lynehurst, and all like it, are doing good work in that they make the dream of the pure-food propagandists."

The success attained is strongly indicated in the fact that one firm in Los Angeles supplies this lishment with 10,000 carton labels a year, which that an equal number of dozens of eggs have been keted at fancy prices. This success only again sizes the fact that when followed along intensive poultry culture is quite as much of a business ning a bank or superintending a railroad—it's all "know how."

Litter for Birds in Confinement.

For birds in confinement some provision made which will promote exercise. To bring this eastern breeders have what is known as scratching or runs, which consist of an inclosure containing six to eight inches of litter—old straw, dry leaves, into which the grain feeds are scattered to scratching or hunting for it on the part of the In Southern California, litter is not always conve available, in which cases many breeders keep their well plowed or spaded, and rake the grain feeds the loose and porous soil. Either method answers well. With the former, it is advisable to chang litter material as soon as it becomes soggy and by the latter method, it is essential that the frequently worked.

Of the two methods, we believe the litter when able puts more ginger into the birds, because it ca more activity in finding the seed grains. As a " ing force," dry leaves are admirable because to to pack easily. A yard covered to a depth of ten inches will certainly have to be "stirred over" hens in order to have their hunger satisfied. also good, though apt to pack somewhat quicker.

Work is as important to the highest developm the hen as it is to all life. Effort makes for for health, and for productiveness. The lazy bird only unprofitable, but easily subject to disease vicious habits. Verily, work is the salvation world, while idleness is its ruin—this applies world of domesticated web and feather quite as it does to mankind. Get your poultry to work you will have a contented and happy flock.

Disinfectant in the Poultry Yard.

The regular use of disinfectants in barns, poultry yards and houses has almost become whenever live-stock farming is intensively Under modern methods it has become recognized the intelligent application of a few cents' worth of killing elements in the food and water, and its tion as a spray to houses, nests and yards is one most effective preventives of disease and vermin to the breeder. For be it known that germs crobes are ever present, and unless held in will soon vitiate the economic values of even of flocks.

There are many good disinfecting preparations on the market, all of which are comparatively sive and efficient in action. As a means of practi plication, a low-priced spray pump is to be com though where the yards are small and only a co tively few birds are kept, it is practical to use a broom or swab in yards and houses, and especial latter in cleaning drinking vessels. Some of the infectants also act as preventives in case of when sprinkled on roosts and floors; the fowls the fumes and so become more or less immune.

About all the commercial disinfectants are by the addition of water, rendering their cost cents per gallon.

To Help Young Women.

PRACTICABLE PLAN BEING SOUGHT IN BOSTON.

From New York Sun.

BOSTON is to have something like a Harvard union for young women. This institution, to give it a long name, is to serve the convenience not of a single university but of many schools, general and technical.

Although Boston long ago ceased to be the literary center of the country, the city is still in a very important sense an education center, and almost as much for young women as for young men. Readcliffe, the University of Boston, the Boston "Tech," Simmons College, the Normal Art School, the Museum School of Design, the Conservatory of Music and many other schools great and small have several thousand young women from places in Massachusetts and New England outside the city; from distant parts of the United States, from Europe, Asia, Africa, and the isles of the sea. Persons who are fond of large and round numbers say that there are 10,000 women, mostly between the ages of 17 and 25, attending these schools and living for the most part in dormitories and boarding-houses.

Others go in and out of town daily to their studies, and many live with relatives and friends. Perhaps the hazarded total of 10,000 includes a good many that find homes in this last fashion, but the homeless make up a large and distinctive class of the young spinster population.

Now, the wonder is that a town fairly dripping with such sympathies for the lonely, a town that has a refuge for neglected domestic pets and a home for disabled horses has so long left all these young women to shift for themselves. A woman who came to Cambridge some years ago to take a technical course and brought a letter to the clergyman whose church she attended complains that neither the pastor nor his assistant made any attempt to seek her out, and she was left in utter loneliness.

Hers was probably an extreme case, for there have been efforts, sporadic and systematic, to look after the eager young students who live in and about Boston eight or nine months in the year and have no natural social relations. Some excellent women give afternoon teas to girls whom they suppose to be lonely. Such students appear at week ends, at dinners and at ordinary social affairs. Those young women who attend some church regularly are included in such social gatherings of the congregation as they have time for.

In the dormitories, large and small, of such an institution as Simmons College there is a community life. Perhaps every considerable school that is attended by young women from out of town has some form of social organization. There is a social life of the studios in which the girl art students have their share.

All of these efforts taken together, however, do not satisfy the social needs of these thousands of young women. In fact, their social needs are so different from those of other women resident in Boston that ordinary means cannot meet their requirements.

Young women at school in Boston are in a very different situation from young men. On the average, they have much less money to spend, and they are more in earnest about their studies, because they go to school for a serious and practical purpose.

That indefinite thing called culture is not the chief object of many girls students from out of town, and still less do they come hundreds of miles to a strange city for the sake of four years' loafing, athletic and social amusements. They are terribly in earnest, and it must be confessed that a good many wear the traditional gold-bowed glasses of the caricatures.

Simmons College, for example, has thrown overboard the whole classic paraphernalia of education, and teaches even modern languages mainly with a view to their practical use in technical studies. Most of the hundreds of girls attending its classes are fitting themselves to be professional housekeepers, librarians, stenographers, private secretaries and the like.

Even some of those who attend the university schools are mainly occupied in strictly utilitarian studies. Busy young women such as these who are trying to save time and money do not want the form of relaxation supplied by ordinary social gaieties.

It is supposed, however, that they would welcome the sort of social opportunity to be offered by a more or less distant equivalent of the Harvard Union. The institution will not be a charity any more than the union is, and it is probable that the various schools whose students will be admitted to the advantages of the place will find it wise to contribute to its support. Individual fees will thus be attractively small.

The place will not be elaborate in appointments, but will furnish reading and idling rooms, and there will be teas, receptions and the like at suitable hours. As the young women have quite enough of lectures in the classroom, it will perhaps be unique among Boston public and semi-public institutions in not undertaking to provide its members with too much of such intellectual pabulum. Of course it will not be able wholly to escape the accustomed Bostonian means of pleasure, for where ten Bostonians get together nine listen while the tenth lectures.

The problem of student life in Boston the contemplated institution cannot easily solve, that of food, for even if it should provide a single centrally-located restaurant where young women could be wholesomely and decently fed at a moderate price the gastronomic needs of these scattered thousands could not be met. Boston women students know more about the science of cookery than any others in the world, but perhaps there are not 10,000 worse fed young women among the presumably educated classes of any city than those in the Boston schools.

The raw material of food is very high-priced in Boston, and the device of employing relatively cheap cooks, while it saves a good deal on cost, does not contribute to the most wholesome and palatable preparation of the expensive raw materials. No town has more cheap restaurants or worse.

Girl students and others with notions about economy and health go a good deal to certain cheap and scientifically-conducted restaurants, one of which at least is said to furnish with each dish a careful analysis of its nutritive value. Some of these places have repellent names suggestive of gastronomic hospitals. The food is said to be sound and well prepared in even the worst-named places, but no person with a lively imagination or a sense of humor finds it easy to enter the "Gastronomic Kitchen," the "Health Food Buffet" or the "Dyspeptic's Delight."

If the projected union for girl students can take this matter of proper feeding in hand, and while looking out for health not forget esthetics and the palate, it will do much for the educational system of Boston.

Where Real Men Live.

STIRRING ACCOUNT OF LIFE ON A DESTROYER IN A GALE.

From Cassell's Saturday Journal.

PICTURE overhead a deep, heavy, gray sky, with the cloud wrack scudding along at awesome speed, the chilling rain coming in sharp bursts of hazy dreariness, driven by the howling sou'easterly gale and slashing down upon the ironwork of the black destroyer, who, with her deck fittings lashed tight and her interior sealed, is smashing her way, in spite of foam, through the long-drawn "nose-ender." On every hand great shouldering seas rise high above the pitching rails and slide away in yawning abysses.

To cross the main deck in this turmoil of wind and water requires the use of hands and feet, a quick run, a flying clutch at anything staple, through sheets of flying spindrift and fretted sea ankle-deep, and the bridge ladder appears above your straining eyes, swinging in the giddy fashion of rope steps, as the destroyer describes parabolic curves at the bidding of the elements.

Up this naked-steel terror contrive to climb—if you are one of the crew, you will swing up like unto the fashion of an ape—as she leaps upward, remains for a brief second kicking on the crest of the wave, all shivering vibration, then down, down, like the bad nightmare of your youth, into a green valley.

A Momentous Discussion!

The torpedo coxswain stands at the wheel, a stolid-faced, oilskin-covered figure, a true type of the burly sea dog. The lieutenant-commander, beak-nosed, keen of eye, and spare of frame, holds tight to the binnacle and shelters as far as possible behind the canvas "dodger." The sub has jammed himself in the corner of the opposite weather cloths, a dripping figure that, as I peep over the platform, is arguing loudly with his superior officer upon a subject of fearsome import.

"Hello! Here's the passenger, by all that's lucky!" quoth the commander above the howl of the wind through our banging cordage as a haze of spindrift drenched the bridge crew. "He'll be able to settle the whole question in two ticks. The fact is Goddard and myself have been having a bit of an argument on the rights of a taxicab driver to ask for a 'tip.' Now, there's the question: what's your view?"

By all the powers of the tempest, by the black, heaving sea, by the roar of the sixty-mile storm, these two men upon this windy platform, tossed hither and thither by the fierce gale, half-drowned by the smashing water that rolls over the frail, puny 200-odd feet of shod death, calmly discussing the rights of a grimy cab driver to receive gratuities!

A Wild Rush of Water.

A great sea higher than the rest rises like a solid black hill in the middle distance, slides over in a whistling crest of pure white foam, and leaps upon us like some angry beast. For an instant it curls above, then slats down upon our heaving turtle back, and drenches over us in a wild rush of riven water. Even the two officers behind the weather cloths to port and starboard, the burly figure at the wheel—veering not an atom from his course—all are hidden for the moment in the sheets of cutting spray; then, when we rise once more, with the water pouring off us (escaping in an icy stream down between our blade bones,) there are those two youthful officers calmly waiting, with never a shiver, for me to commence my dissertation upon a subject that I cared nothing about.

"There's not a dry spot in her or on me, for the matter of that," I growled, successfully disposing of the subject of taximeter cabbies, "and I'm hanged if I would face a sou'easter again in one of these tin boxes for a ten-pound note."

The sub smiled. "What did you expect," he laughed, "a drawing-room and dinning-room, with a table d'hote served at 7 precisely, with a gyroscope to steady her?"

They roared.

"All in a day's work," quoted the hawk-faced one soberly. "Making you appreciate the pleasures of a nice warm room and a cosy fire. Makes you know what good food is, old chap; makes you think, when you get into your civilian rig and go ashore. East by south—quarter south."

"E' be sou'—quarter sou' 'tis," rumbled the helmsman.

Submerged!

A great green sea comes tumbling up. The commander looks anxiously below. A figure all glistening oilskins is dragging himself forrard along the deck.

"By Jingo! Here comes a beast," quoth the sub, watching the wave.

"Hold tight, below there!" roars the skipper, his eye on the man, as the sea meets us with a crash that shakes her from stem to stern, that roars like a whirlpool over the poop, hissing like a thousand snakes round our heated funnels, and washing clean over the seaman in his oilskins.

"Good God! he's gone," I cried, high above the wind.

"Not he," growled the sub; and, in corroboration, the glistening "oilies" peeped forth again as the gallant little craft rose, shaking the foaming sea from her decks in a score of minature Niagaras. Then the man came, with no concern, to the bridge and reported.

There are others like him crouching under the bridge, behind the funnels, or aft; swearing now at the liveliness of His Majesty's torpedo craft, and then at the wetness of things, and finally going off into a heated argument on the merits of a certain comedian or professional footballer, conducted in a voice trained to reach one octave above the whistle of the wind.

Daring Things, and Facing Death.

Contrive by divers means to get below the stokehold, and see here grimy humans that dare things and face death in a terrible form. Clamber down a steel ladder—one instant under the feet, the next coming over until you crawl like a fly on the ceiling; negotiate this, and you reach the checker-plate floor of the stokehold, shuddering and heaving to the pitch of the ship. Around is a heated haze of warm, metal-smelling vapor; on either hand great half-hidden fans roar at countless revolutions a minute, pumping the air below; black, heavy oil soaks into your clothes and ruins them forever.

A leading stoker—the name is a misnomer now that oil fuel has superseded coal in our mosquito fleet—tends the panting force pumps that drive the warm, crude oil through the burners with a fiercely-burning spray into the fire-brick-lined furnaces of the water-tube boilers. Crawl gingerly through this haze in the fierce light from the numerous ventilator doors on the boiler fronts, and come upon another grimy human—the assistant-engineer—peering with far-seeing eyes into the sooty window in the funnel uptake and regulating his burners with the care of a mother. His face, dirtily-pale, turns.

"Find it a bit warm after the deck," says he, wiping his hands upon a grimy piece of cotton-waste; "but it's not half as bad as it used to be on the old coal burners. You see, these 'oilers' require a deuce of a lot of air for combustion, say about 14,000 gallons of air to every gallon of oil consumed, so you see we have these fans that pump down plenty of oxygen. Any danger, did you say? Well, of course, there's danger—a motor-bus ride is a dangerous thing, you know, old chap." His sharp, blue eyes roamed round and became fixed upon a glistening wheel valve; on the instant he had muttered an apology, had jumped from his spy hole in the uptake, and was turning that wheel slowly, swearing gently under his breath. I thought it time to leave him.

"A Battened-Down Inferno."

The engine-room I found a battened-down inferno.

In the murky haze asbestos-coated drums drive us ahead, calm and immovable on the outside, but within a roaring mass of whirling blades, catching every ounce of steam and turning the motor at incredible speed.

Clang! The chief "tiffie" turns a wild eye to the bridge telegraph and eases her down.

Down goes our stern, then turns and begins to come up with a rush. There is a warning cry, and through the ship goes a great shiver as the whirling propellers leap out of water and roar in the air with that fierce, pulsating vibration that none but those that have known it can dream or picture. Every bolt, rivet, wheel, stanchion is strained to its utmost tension; then down they go, and for the nonce things are normal again.

The engineer-lieutenant—a calm fellow, as they all are—remarks to me that it's a gay life. I queried of danger yet again.

"Oh, yes. If one of those eight-inch mains went off with a pop, things would erupt—absolutely boil. That's just the fun of these hookers—they never do anything by halves. If we bump anything—well, there is a bump, and, if the collision mat won't do the needful, then we lose our baggage, and perhaps—well, we are a bit cramped down here, and there's not a big exit, either." He calmly glanced at the gently-moving gauge glasses on the faces of his turbines. "What do you think of them; they are beauties?"

I clutched at a glistening copper main, as I wondered, to steady myself as we rolled.

"Look out!" howled the engineer; and struck my hand away. "My charges are very reciprocal," he laughed; "they return your grip with warmth."

A bit of a wag that man.

A Toast.

From this atmosphere of sizzling steam mains and top-tilting boilers, from the domains of profane, unclean, long-suffering men, I came to the deck again, shivering in the cold, and saw a battleship in the offing."

"We are going to crawl under her lee," the sub yelled at me, "and beg for a bit of shelter, then rendezvous with the fleet at dusk; so before the fun commences let's go and have a tot together."

Thus I scrambled down and aft again, where lurked the small apartment we dignified with the name of "Wardroom," while I drank to the very best of fellows—the men that are men—the officers and crews of His Majesty's torpedo craft.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Sacramento Elms.

THE property owners of the Capital City have been greatly distressed lately over the condition of their shade trees, especially of the elms. Hundreds of trees are throwing off honey dew to such an extent that the sidewalks are plastered a half-inch thick with this sticky substance, which mixed with the dust makes a most disgusting annoyance. They are alive with aphids. This insect is usually to be found on the elms, but the present season it has appeared in such quantities that the elms infected have become a nuisance. Some of the local authorities claim that the only elms immune are those on which the lady birds have bred in numbers sufficient to control the pest; others say that the American elm is practically immune, and that other species of the elm are those that are becoming a nuisance. At any rate, the city authorities have become alarmed and are cutting back many of these magnificent specimens, spraying others and getting into trouble for daring to touch with the saw the pride of Sacramento—the elms.

I have never known the plant lice to permanently injured large shade trees, and I think the alarm in Sacramento is not well founded, though the pests have stopped the growth of some of these great trees completely. Since the attack of the "green bug" of 1906, the aphid family has increased its unsavory reputation materially. This species was unknown upon the North American continent until 1882, and then nothing more was heard of it till 1890. In 1903 a small outbreak was noticed in Northern Texas which was perhaps the forerunner of the devastating army of two years ago which overrun the west from Oklahoma to Nebraska and damaged cereals to the amount of $15,000,000.

Local outbreaks such as are occurring in Sacramento, Coachella and Imperial may possibly become as serious to the interests involved as were the Toxoptera graminum which destroyed the western crops under the name "green bug" in 1906-7. The shade trees, however, have this in their favor: They become the breeding-places for lady bugs, lacewing flies and braconids, and the aphis will have to meet foes here not found in the cantaloup fields. The city authorities of Sacramento are taking a scientific view of the late attack and will depend more upon the introduction of parasites than upon the saw In fact, the Council is discussing the appointment of a tree warden similar in authority to that of Riverside, who will devote his time entirely to the care of the city's magnificent shade trees—perhaps the finest shade trees west of the Rocky Mountains.

The New Orange Crop.

DISCUSSING the orange outlook with me a few days ago, a gentleman who is preparing to plant a large grove in Tulare county asked me the reason that the orange men did not seem to fear overproduction. He had "seen it in The Times" that the crops rarely if ever exceeded 30,000 carloads, including the oranges used by our own people. In fact, the output has not reached the above figures. I carried him over the same ground taken in this department for years. Briefly, the present growers do not fear overproduction for two reasons: First, the average grower is not able to maintain his orange soil in condition to set and mature a full crop, no matter how profusely the trees may bloom. Summer dropping of fruit is so common, barren trees so numerous and decrepit groves so general as to excite no comment. This is a fact in spite of the magnificent crops that hundreds of old orchards are bearing, and so long as this status exists, the 30,000 mark will be reached only in the far future, unless a year of unusually propitious circumstances raises the output for the time being only.

Secondly, those engaged in orange growing have the selling business well organized, and, with the improvement of financial conditions and in the facilities for fruit distribution do not fear a future slump in the orange business. Whether the dire predictions of an exceeding short crop for 1910 come true, it is a fact that somehow the output does not reach undue proportions, and probably will fall far below the average figures the coming year.

Fraudulent Land Schemes.

ONE form of land cheating is liable to get a serious setback in the Sacramento Valley, if a committee appointed for that purpose is able to correct the evil. It is not of the barefaced and publicly flagrant type seen in some of the eucalyptus land schemes, but is even more harmful in the aggregate, because it is more insidious because of its privacy. Yet the evil attempted to be corrected is confined to the Sacramento Valley. The committee proposes to expose at least the most undeniable cases of misrepresenting the land and the products that may be successfully grown upon it. A case coming under my own observation comes directly into this category. An aged laborer, who had been a gardener in the old country had "amassed a fortune" of nearly $1000, after years of hard labor and close economy in California. He wished to return to market gardening, and a local real estate firm soon separated him from his cash, giving him in return about five acres of an obdurate, shallow clay, as suitable for vegetable growing as Plymouth Rock.

The recital of this poor man's woes upon discovery that his farm, although suitable for some purposes, would not "sprout peas" may have influenced the formation of the investigation committee reported above. He voiced his troubles with a hopeless volubility peculiar to his race, and the incident impressed the fair-minded real estate men who heard the story. And this is not an isolated case. Many important farm sales every day are based upon the suppression of the truth about the land, upon direct misrepresentation or upon direct fraud. The appointment of this committee will cause all reputable real estate men in the Sacramento Valley to draw their own lines closer, and the ultimate effect will be an improvement all along the line of landed investments.

History Repeating.

WHEN the Southern California citrus-fruit growers were giving their demonstration of the "brotherhood of man" to the visiting committee of Florida fruit growers a few weeks ago they did not know that the organization of the Florida growers would proceed at the great pace it has since assumed. In showing the visitors the very heart of the California citrus fruit business, our people not only indicated that commercial frankness is safe and sane, but they gave the Florida committee a clear understanding of the methods of organization from which the southern growers now seem to be forming a State-wide exchange with a minimum of effort and little danger of making serious mistakes. The late action of the Florida people is of such deep interest to every citrus grower in California that it may be profitable to comment on it in these columns.

The convention held at Tampa recently, called for the purpose of hearing the report of the 45 growers who had just visited California, was attended by over 300 of the leading citrus men of Florida. The delegates voted unanimously to organize the "Florida Citrus Exchange" upon the California plan. Then followed the selection of a committee of thirty to which is delegated the work of organizing associations in all of the eighteen counties of the State in which citrus fruits are grown. This committee is headed by Dr. Inman, who caused the late visit of investigation to California, is composed of the most successful growers and promises to have the State organized in a few months.

Now I know there are a few doubters in California who look for another failure to organize in Florida. But they will cease to doubt when it is recorded that the Tampa convention gave its committee of thirty absolute authority to go right along with the work and then promptly adjourned sine die. Few fruit growers' conventions have that much sense, for there are always individuals in an assembly of this kind who want a whack at the work of their own committees, and confusion usually follows. It is also recorded that the committee has already induced the Florida Legislature to pass similar to that enacted by our own lawmakers last winter, and under which the new exchange will be formed. Progress, this, but there is more. When the new committee called for money with which to begin the campaign the convention raised $3000 without rising from its seat, and chipped in a matter of $200 in chicken feed to pay local expenses. The records show further. The Florida Fruit and Produce News has been boycotted by the fruit commission men for daring to support the exchange movement. This act of the commission men was in line with the old California plan, as the editor of this department well realized in the late nineties at Azusa. Well, the Tampa convention adopted the News as its official organ, and one man arose and subscribed for a copy of the News for one year for every member of the convention, and paid the cash therefor. So those of little faith will see a strong coöperative organization in Florida, no doubt dominating the citrus industry of the Palmetto State from one side of the peninsula to the other and working for the good of the citrus fruit trade of the entire continent.

The Florida Citrus Exchange.

THE new organization of Florida orange growers to be known as the Florida Citrus Exchange, which was launched with such unanimity of purpose last week at Tampa, will begin its career under the most auspicious circumstances that could be hoped for.

In the first place, the Florida orange growers are unusually fortunate in having men of such sterling character and such proved ability as are possessed by those to whom has been delegated the arduous task of laying the foundations and working out the details of this great undertaking.

There is no financial or commercial enterprise in this or any other State that would not gladly entrust the management of its affairs to such a body of men as those who compose the executive committee of the new organization.

They are all men of affairs—of large and most important interests, and what is even more significant, each has been the architect of his own fortunes, and has attained success by pure force of character and native ability.

Second only in importance to this enviable beginning is the fact that they have gathered around them as a nucleus of the organization a majority of the largest and most important citrus fruit growers in the State. Such men can and must inspire unquestioning confidence—an invaluable asset to the organization, without which it must soon fall on evil days.

Our orange growers are also fortunate in having the way blazed for them by their California brethren. This is not to say that we have no problems here for which a solution may not be found at Los Angeles. We better than that. We have conditions here peculiar to our habitat, but the general principles have been so conspicuously successful among fornia growers are applicable here. We have and the implements; we must now proceed garment to fit. With such artificers to shears as were selected at Tampa we may that there will be no misfit when they have constructive work.—[Fruit and Produce News

Lord Lacland drew his handkerchief nervously his cuff.

"Then I may infer," he hazarded, "that I am gether indifferent to you, Miss Golde?"

Sweet, unsophisticated Lotta Golde laughed

"Indifferent! Oh, no!" she cried. "I have mendously interested in you, Lord Lacland, told me you were an adventurer. And now I to tell me all about your battles and escapes."

Propagation of Shrubs.

IF home owners knew how inexpensively their lawns might be improved there would be fewer bare, unsightly yards. With little trouble and the expenditure of only a few days' work in each year the boys and girls can adorn the home with clambering vines and beautiful trees and shrubs. Many kinds of desirable trees and shrubs can readily be propogated by means of cuttings; and all kinds of vines can be increased in this manner or by the equally simple process of germinating seed.

An instance is known of an enterprising young home-improver who has grounds considerably more than an acre in extent, improved with a varied and extensive collection of shrubbery, nearly all of which is the product of a small number of stock plants procured at a cost of a few dollars. Planting material which would have cost a hundred times as much if purchased at a nursery has been produced at a surprisingly small outlay. Outside of the saving, there is a delight in growing one's own shrubbery, and, should it be desirable, the practice can be made to yield no small revenue, even in the most isolated rural community. By employing the simple expedient of propagating from hardwood cuttings, a single specimen of spirea Van Houttei, or golden elder, or panicled dogwood may yield in a single season from half a dozen to a score of thrifty, well-rooted little plants—sufficient for the formation of one or more pretentious clumps that will soon become the envy of the entire neighborhood.

The method is so simple as scarcely to merit description, yet perhaps a few words concerning it may not be amiss. In October wood of the current season's growth should be cut into sections eight or ten inches in length, neatly and securely tied in bundles of twenty-five to fifty and buried in a narrow trench in a well-drained corner of the garden plot. These bundles should be covered with earth to a depth of from three to six inches, and the warmth afforded by a mulching of straw or coarse manure will be beneficial. As early in the spring as the ground is at all fit to work, the cuttings should be removed from the trench and planted a few inches apart in rows eighteen to twenty inches distant from each other. Zealous attention to the details of weeding and hoeing should induce a vigorous growth, and at the end of the first season the cultivator will be rewarded with thrifty, vigorous, well-rooted stock.—American Journal of Agriculture.

The Garden.

WE noticed an unfamiliar hedge-like growth in the garden of a friend. It presented a mass of rich dark foliage so heavy as to form a complete screen between the front and back yards. The leaves were very dark green and glistened in the light; the branches ended in innumerable spirals and tassel-like plumes of light green and brown with dark red and bright yellow stems showing through the bead-like foliage. We were surprised to learn that this new and ornamental plant was beets gone to seed. The old roots of both the blood and the yellow beets are set out in a row a foot or more apart, in rich soil which is kept mellow and moist; this keeps up a luxuriant growth and new seed stalks and leaves are constantly forming, making a very unique and ornamental plant.—[Rural Press.

for Rock Gardens.

MY main objection to rock gardens, which nobody ever seems to get over, is that too much stone is used. If those people who design this sort of work would study how rocks crop up in hilly countries, as they often do in our own, as well as in Switzerland, they would see that the prettiest effects are often got when single rocks come out of the ground. If the ground is suitable, it is by no means essential that the rocks should be everywhere to grow Alpine flowers.—[Rural Interesting Berry Case Decided.

A DECISION rendered by Judge Rizer, in the District Court of Pueblo, Colo., will be of interest to all shippers of fruit, as the points involved have come up many times. The case at issue was where part of a carload of strawberries had spoiled after the time it had left the hands of the shipper. The Woldert Grocery Company, of Tyler, Tex., was the plaintiff and the Pressey Produce Company of Pueblo was the defendant. The court decided in favor of the plaintiff.

The case hinged on whether the buyer or seller is the owner of the merchandise in transit, and whether the seller can recover the price of merchandise sold, when it has been damaged in shipment, from the buyer, or must look to the railroad company for damages.

The Pressey Produce Company purchased a car of strawberries from the Grocery Company, of Tyler, Tex. At Trinidad the buyer had a portion of the shipment removed from the car, but when the car arrived in Pueblo the Pressey concern refused the shipment on the ground that the berries had rotted in transit and were scattered about the car, the crates broken, and the berries damaged to such an extent that they were of no value to the purchaser.

The plaintiff contended that when the berries were loaded on the car at Tyler, their ownership ceased and the berries were the property of the Pressey Produce Company, and any damages sustained in transit should be made good by the railroad company. The fact that the defendant had ordered a portion of the shipment removed from the car at Trinidad was contended by the plaintiff as proof of the ownership of the defendant.—[Farm and Fireside.

How to Pack Flowers.

FOR packing, shallow boxes should be used, as the flowers will travel much better if packed in single layers. The boxes should be just long enough to comfortably accommodate the flowers and should be lined with some soft non-absorbent material. Wood wool is the best material to use, but fresh moss will also answer the purpose. Over this place a layer of white tissue paper and then lay the flowers in position, packing them as closely as possible. Cover with another layer of tissue paper and fill in if necessary with a little more packing material till when the lid is placed in position the contents of the box are quite firm and unable to shift.—[Garden.

A Woman Onion Grower.

"YOU may have heard how the Rio Grande country has put the Bermuda onion growers out of business," said Capt. George H. Darter of Laredo, Tex. "Our most successful grower, by the way, is a lady, Mrs. E. C. Dodd, who lives in my town. She cultivated 135 acres this season and made a net profit on her onion crop of a little over $50,000. To make land bring a gain of $400 an acre is something few men have the ability to do, and yet this lady does not seem to regard her feat as entitling her to any great praise.

"Mrs. Dodd looks after every detail of her farm in person. Raising onions is no child's play; it involves hard work and great expense in our section, where irrigation of necessary. It is the intention of Mrs. Dodd to plant on a still bigger scale as she gradually brings more of her land under irrigation."

Poison Formed by Plants.

THE Bureau of Soils of the United States Department of Agriculture has recently added a new factor to the causes of soil fertility. The claims of the Bureau are that practically all soils contain a sufficient supply of mineral plant food for crops to grow indefinitely, and that plants give off or excrete from their roots certain toxic substances into the soil. These by accumulating become poisonous to the plants that produce them on the same principle as a man being shut up in a tightly-closed room will soon cause the air in that room to become poisonous to him by exhaling poisonous gases into it. Every kind of plant excretes a substance that is poisonous to itself, but this substance may not be detrimental to other crops, and may even be beneficial. By growing the same crop, say wheat, upon the same land year after year, the toxic or poisonous substance given off by the roots of the wheat plants accumulate to such an extent that the soil actually becomes poisonous to wheat plants and they refuse to grow there. If now other crops be grown on that land or it be fallowed these toxic substances disappear and wheat can again be grown there. Thus we have the benefits of rotation.

If manures or fertilizers be added to this soil, they have the power of neutralizing the poisonous substances so that wheat can again be grown there. The manures or fertilizers also add new plant food to the soil, but this is a secondary consideration, as the principal reason for adding it is to neutralize the toxic substances excreted by the roots of the previous crop.—[Campbell's Farmer.

Curing Smyrna Figs.

THE process of fig curing as practiced in Asia Minor is simplicity itself. The fruit dries naturally on the trees and drops when perfectly cured. They are then collected and spread out on serghis, or smooth, hard beaten pieces of prepared ground, measuring usually ten yards by two, and sloping slightly, so that any rain falling may run off immediately, where they remain four to eight days, according to the weather conditions, to dry thoroughly. They are then tightly packed in jute or woolen bags and shipped to the markets.

The figs to be packed in boxes are simply sorted into various sizes, rolled roughly into shape and then pressed into the boxes by the workers, whose hands are kept moist with sea water, or, in places where that is not to be had, with a brine of water and common salt.

About 80 per cent. of the fig trees are entirely dependent upon the rainfall for water supply, the last rains being generally early in May. In those districts where there is an abundant water supply, the trees are irrigated once in the month of June and once in July, and these plantations, without exception, produce the thin-skinned and juicy figs, which are the best quality. The trees that have not been regularly irrigated from the time of their planting are seriously damaged if irrigated upon reaching maturity.—[California Fruit Grower.

Automobiles in Johannesburg.

"Johannesburg, South Africa, is the greatest city in the world for automobiles," remarked John F. Scott of Chicago. "There are more automobiles in Johannesburg, I believe, than there are in New York City or any other city of this country. The streets and outlying thoroughfares are thick with them, and they are of all makes and apparently come from all parts of the globe. I saw many American machines there, but the largest number come from France. The streets of Johannesburg are excellent for automobiling, but the roads outlying are not good, and many machines are wrecked in the ruts."—[Washington Post.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

Many Giving Up Meat.

IT is interesting and encouraging to note the growth of the popularity of the fleshless dietary. On all sides you meet people who say that they have greatly reduced, if not entirely abandoned the use of flesh foods, to their great advantage, physically and mentally. This reform, so far as the United States is concerned, is undoubtedly largely due to the teachings of the Care of the Body department and of several other excellent hygienic publications, which have been preaching the gospel of a rational bloodless dietary.

From Dawson, in distant Yukon Territory, not far from the Arctic Circle, comes the following communication to the editor of the Care of the Body, from Rook Brothers, of that enterprising northern metropolis:

"We shall watch for the article by the Colorado physician on salt. We quit the use of salt over a year ago, and we quit meat of all kinds over two years ago, and our health is much improved. We want to encourage you in the good work you are doing. The 'Care of the Body' is of more interest to us than all the rest of the Magazine. We read it first. We will close out here this summer and go to Southern California. We shall be in Los Angeles, and may see you. Keep the good work going; you are doing more good than you think."

It is interesting to note that these correspondents, living in such a cold climate, are not only able to do without meat, but find themselves benefited by avoiding it. Yet some people think they must have flesh food at least once a day, in such a mild climate as Southern California.

It is generally supposed that flesh foods are absolutely necessary in a very cold climate, yet Arctic explorers have proved that oat meal and corn meal supply the dietetic wants of man in the frozen North more satisfactorily than flesh food. For animal fat, substitute nuts or dried olives, which are convenient to transport and keep.

A dispatch recently published in The Times announced that a crusade for vegetarianism in high circles will be conducted this summer by Mrs. Sherman, wife of the Vice-President, and Mrs. Bryce, wife of the British Ambassador. Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson, wife of ex-Senator J. B. Henderson, has for years been an enthusiastic advocate of a reformed dietary, as well as an active opponent of the use of alcohol. Her most valuable book, "The Aristocracy of Health" was reviewed here several years ago.

Vegetarianism has been making great strides of late in England. At the annual Congress of the Vegetarian Federation of Great Britain, held recently in London, several of the most prominent physicians of the British capital spoke, and many women of the aristocracy were present. The secretary reported among distinguished members the following: Duchess of Portland, Lady Paget, Lady Gwendolen Herbert, the Marchioness of Anglesea, and Lady Henry Somerset.

Some people, who have not given this subject thorough investigation, regard abstention from flesh foods as something peculiar and faddish. They are entirely wrong. The flesh eaters are peculiar. Were it not for the fact that we have been accustomed from childhood to see portions of the carcasses of living creatures hanging up in butcher shops we should regard the slaying and eating of sentient, warm-blooded animals as unnatural and horrible, and only a short remove from cannibalism, as it really is. In Scott's "Ivanhoe" he tells how, when the sheep of the laborer was prepared for the Norman baron's table, it assumed the French form of mutton, or "mouton," while the Anglo-Saxon ox became beef, or "boeuf." We eat flesh food because it is fixed up and disguised by skillful cooks. If every one who indulged in flesh had first to catch the animal, slay it, disembowel it, and cut it up, don't you think that the rank of the vegetarians would be greatly enlarged?

Suppose that instead of sitting down at an elegantly-appointed table, covered with shiny white linen, cut glass, silver, and flowers, and ordering of a waiter in evening dress a beef steak "à la" something or other, you should be forced to repair to a slaughter-house, and there say to the blood-stained butcher: "Cut me the throat of that brown-eyed ox, and then slice me a few pieces of flesh from its flanks." In that case, do you believe that you would consume flesh food quite so often as, perhaps, you do now?

In his book "The New Ethics," J. Howard Moore tells how Remenyi, the violinist, narrated to him that a musical friend, when driven from one position to another in defense of his carnivorism, finally refused to budge, because he said: "What should we do for catgut?" This is on a par with many of the foolish arguments advanced in favor of the asserted necessity of eating flesh food.

That a fleshless diet conduces to clearness of intellect, activity, endurance, and absence of disease, has been so thoroughly proved that no intelligent person who has given the subject a thorough investigation attempts nowadays to question it. In tests of endurance, flesh eaters do not begin to be in it with the vegetarians. Many of the ills that afflict poor humanity, such as that dread disease cancer, are practically unknown among those who abstain from flesh foods. There is, indeed, everything to be said in favor of a fleshless dietary, and nothing to be said for it. Flesh eating is unnecessary, unnatural and harmful.

Remember, however, once more, that the mere dropping of flesh food from the dietary may, from a hygienic point of view, be not a step forward, but a step backward. As frequently stated here, a simple meal of lean meat and a salad is less harmful, from a hygienic viewpoint, than the mixed-up mess of slops, starches and sweets which so many vegetarians indulge in. This is the reason why those who give up the use of flesh foods sometimes declare that it is a failure, and return to the flesh pots of Egypt.

Garbage-Fed Hogs.

WHAT a local contemporary refers to as the "long, weary, sickening, and suspicious delay" over the question of disposing of the city garbage of the city of Los Angeles has come to an end, the City Council having instructed the Board of Public Works to advertise for bids. The specifications call for three methods of garbage disposal—by incineration, reduction, or hog feeding. The hog feeding must be done not less than five miles from the city limits.

That will not make the flesh of hogs fed on garbage any less dangerous to those who consume it. As conclusively shown in these columns, hogs fed upon swill and garbage inevitably contract cholera of the bowels. They are utterly unfit for human food. Many mysterious ailments are undoubtedly due to the eating of such filthy flesh. The City Health Officer of Los Angeles has warned the Council against permitting this practice. Yet, notwithstanding all this, the Council calmly goes to work and does this thing, for the sake of the money there is in it. A disgrace to a great and wealthy city like Los Angeles.

Should any one of the members of the Council who voted for this ordinance die a death of agony from the effects of eating the flesh of garbage-fed swine, the editor of the Care of the Body will not be inclined to drop many briny tears upon his bier, for that man will undoubtedly have been indirectly responsible for suffering and death on part of hundreds or thousands of others, should the garbage feeders offer more money and have their contract accepted by the city.

Ptomaine Poisoning.

CASES of ptomaine poisoning have become much more frequent of late. Scarcely a week passes in which one does not read in the papers of some case of this kind. Only a few weeks ago, in Northern California, several thousand people, including the Governor of the State, were poisoned in this manner, at a lunch following the launching of a war vessel. Since then nearly a hundred Free Masons, attending a banquet at Vincennes, Ind., were poisoned.

This greater frequency of ptomaine poisoning is undoubtedly largely due to the great increase in the consumption of canned meats, cold-storage meats, and meats treated with preservatives. The decomposition arrested by cold storage sets in with greater rapidity after the food is removed into a warmer atmosphere.

Ptomaine poisoning is mainly caused by flesh foods, although it is due sometimes to other highly nitrogenous foods, such as beans. Sausages are particularly liable to be affected in this way.

Prof. M. E. Jaffa, of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of California at Berkeley, was recently quoted as saying:

"In all my experience and experiments I have never found dangerous ptomaines to develop in fruit and vegetables. The dangerous ones only develop in meat, fish, yeast, cheese, and ice cream."

It is a good precaution always to eat some raw green stuff—some kind of salad—with meat of any kind. The sodium, potassium and magnesium salts contained in these green leaves aid, to some extent, in neutralizing the poison, although they will not entirely counteract it. Also, it is a fact—although our prohibition friends may think that the fact should not be published—that alcohol tends to neutralize the effects of these poisons. In Germany it was noted, in a case where a number of people suffered from ptomaine poisoning, that those who drank wine freely either were not affected, or suffered only a mild attack. This is not an argument in favor of alcohol with poisonous foods, but against the use of such foods.

"Bacterial Food Poisoning" is the title of a book of 128 pages by Prof. Dr. A. Dieudonne, of Munich, translated by Dr. C. F. Bolduan, of New York. (Published by E. B. Treat & Co., New York.) The author divides the poisoning due to the eating of meat into three varieties, as follows:

"1. Poisoning due to the eating of meat from diseased animals. (This form is usually associated with the bacillus enteritidis or bacillus paratyphi.)

"2. Poisoning due to the eating of putrefied meat. (This is usually associated with bacillus proteus and bacillus coli.)

"3 Poisoning due to 'sausage poison.' (This is produced by the anaerobic bacillus botulinus.")

The author throughout the book refers frequently to the "forced" or "emergency" slaughtering of animals. This, it should be understood, is the killing of animals

Care of the Body.

that show signs of disease, and selling their flesh for food before the symptoms are far enough advanced to make them condemnable. Nice idea, isn't it?

The author says: "It is certain that the meat of animals slaughtered in an emergency is much more to be feared than the meat of sound animals."

What an exceedingly radical statement, to be sure. Further on he says: "Meat showing evidence of putrefaction should not be eaten."

Sure, Mike!

The author adds, however, that "boiling and roasting, or frying the meat lessens the danger." But it does not remove it. Besides, what right-thinking person wants to feed on boiled or baked filth?

Referring to cases of fish poisoning following the eating of canned fish or lobster, the author says that in some cases it is probable the poison was contained in the mayonnaise dressing. Always searching for some innocent victim. If mayonnaise is properly made, with good olive oil, the yolk of an egg, lemon, and a pinch of mustard, you may no more get ptomaine poisoning from it than you can from eating a baked apple.

Toward the end of the book, the author thus refers to the increasing use of canned foods:

"Schottelius has repeatedly warned against the ever-increasing use of canned foods in the household, and I believe the warning fully justified. There is a distinct field of usefulness for this form of food, for example, in the feeding of armies in war, or in expeditions of various kinds. On the other hand, in temperate climates, as for example in Germany or in the United States, there is really no reason, aside from convenience, why canned foods should be used in the household. It seems not to be appreciated that canned goods are always inferior to fresh vegetables, fruits, etc."

As to the treatment of ptomaine poisoning, all that Dieudonne can give us in the form of suggestion is the old-fashioned cathartics, such as castor oil or calomel, opium, etc.

The book is full of long and learned words, descriptions of various forms of disease caused by meat poisoning, but it does not tell how to avoid them. That is very simple. Do not eat canned preserved, or cold-storage fish, flesh or fowl, or any kind of fish, flesh, fowl or sausage unless you are reasonably assured that it is fresh.

That is to say, if you eat these things at all. Ptomaine poisoning has no terrors for the fruitarian.

A Real Rest.

YOU hear many people say in reply to an inquiry as to where they expect to spend their vacation that they cannot afford to take a vacation.

Well, Dr. Brook, of the Care of the Body, takes no stock in diagnosing the cases of these people. If they persist in this foolish idea, they will, before many years, be taken on an enforced vacation, in a neat black coach, to a beautifully appointed garden, dotted over with stone monuments. And they will not be able to plead poverty either. They may not be able to afford to live, but they will have to afford the cost of dying—or their relatives will.

The following sensible remarks in regard to vacations are made by the editor of the California State Journal of Medicine:

"This is just what the editor is going to do, and what he advises every one of you to do; take a real vacation, even if it is for only ten days or two weeks. Get away from 'shop;' don't think about anything medical; don't talk 'cases' with any other physician; get away to the country, near to the inspiring voice in the soil and the trees, and let Nature put new energy into you and new thoughts, new ambitions; broader plans and ideas. Take a real vacation of the mind and let yourself out of the rut into which we all find our way by steady and too narrow application. Take a vaca-

The Weather.

EASTERNERS, who happened to be in Los Angeles during the latter part of June, and who read the dispatches from eastern and middle western points, showing how, all over the country, persons were dropping dead and hundreds were prostrated by the excessive heat, had a good chance to make a comparison. Here in Southern California, near the coast, the weather during the month of May and June was so cool that we were comfortable most of the time, and a pair of blankets was always pleasant at night.

Many have remarked that this spring in Los Angeles has been most remarkably cloudy—or rather foggy, for the obscuration of the sun has been due to a high fog during the forenoon. This has tended to make the weather even more delightful than it would otherwise have been, although some captious persons have growled at the absence of sunshine. They will "get theirs" at the end of the year.

While the cloudiness of the months of May and June has been greater than the average, it has not been so much greater as some people suppose. Indeed, for the month of June it was slightly less. The Care of the Body is indebted to Mr. Wollaber, the local forecaster of the United States Weather Bureau, for two tables, showing the number of clear days during the months of May and June, 1909, and for the same months during the past thirty-two years. The average number of clear days in May for this period is nine. The number of clear days in May, 1909, was six. The greatest number during this period was twenty-two, in 1879; the lowest, [illegible].

The average number of clear days in June, during thirty-two years, was eleven. The number of clear days in June, 1909, was twelve. The highest number of clear days in June during that period was twenty-two, last year—1908—and the lowest one, in 1889.

A Deadly Drug.

IN A Stuffed Club for June, Dr. Tilden stoutly maintained that syphilis can be cured without drugs; that there are no syphilitics of twenty to forty years standing who have not taken mercury for the disease, and that when mercury is given freely, a mercurial disease is produced which is positively not curable.

Dr. Tilden is quite right. Were it not for the use of mercury, syphilis would be a comparatively simple blood disease to get rid of. In fact, quite a number of physicians claim that gonorrhoea is a more serious disease than syphilis. The main trouble is caused by that cursed drug mercury, which never has, nor ever can cure a disease, but only complicates it with another poison. For this drug, which has worked such an awful havoc upon the human race, we have to thank a fellow named Paracelsus, knowns as "The Prince of Empirics," a Swiss, who lived about 400 years ago. The whole medical world denounces him as a base, impudent, and unprincipled charlatan. Yet to him the same medical world is more indebted for the present system of allopathic drugging than to all other phyisicians who have ever lived.

Even red rubber teeth plates, colored with vermilion, a product of mercury, will sometimes cause blood poisoning, paralysis and death.

Beware of mercury in any form.

It would be humorous if it were not sad to note that while political doctors are persecuting and prosecuting honest men, who give natural treatments, such as rubbing and baths, these same "regular" doctors are permitted by the authorities to put this deadly drug into the bodies of men, women and children.

More About the Mocking-Bird.

THE statement recently made by the editor of the Care of the Body that the much-praised and admired mocking-bird is a disturber of the peace and a public nuisance, when he lives in cities, has called forth several protests from esteemed correspondents. Among others, the following communication has been received from W. Scott Way of Glendora, secretary of the Audubon Society of California, that is doing good work in the protection of wild birds. Mr. Way writes as follows:

"I have usually indorsed the no-drug recommendations and anti-cutting creed of the 'Care of the Body' man, but a paragraph in your department today, in which you cry aloud against the matchless mocker, leads me to say that, for a man who does not love the splendid mocking-bird, and is so 'sour' inside and out that its matchless song cannot reach his soul to draw him in closer touch with Nature and move him to a greater appreciation of God's best gifts to man, I would prescribe, as one dose, about half a pound of calomel and a gallon of castor oil. This would kill or cure, undoubtedly, but in either event the world would be the gainer."

The editor of the Care of the Body could not refrain from smiling when he received this letter. If he has one weak—or strong—point, it is his affectionate sympathy for animals of all kinds. Perhaps there is no one on the Pacific Coast who during the past thirty years has written more on behalf of those who are unable to plead for themselves. In these columns scarcely a month has passed, during the past ten years, in which some protest has not been published against cruelty to animals—against the torture of unfortunate fur-bearing animals, that die a slow and agonizing death in traps; against the wearing by women of egret feathers, the gathering of which results in the slow starvation of thousands of young birds; against the theory that the slaying of harmless animals may be regarded as "sport," and against many other forms of cruelty, most of which are due, not to deliberate inhumanity, but to the fact that most people do not think what these things really mean.

As to the mocking-birds, they are all right where they belong—in the forests. When heard from a distance, on a moonlight night, their note is pleasing. When, however, a pair of able-bodied mockers locate themselves directly under a person's window, and during about sixteen hours of the twenty-four, continue to emit their shrill, raucous, unmelodious, persistent shrieks, while a man is endeavoring to write an article or get some sleep, these birds are then, most assuredly, as the editor of the Care of the Body has said, disturbers of the peace, and public nuisances. They are worse than the cock that crows, about which we have been reading so many protests in the local papers of late, because that bird, at least, gives us a few intervals of repose between its high notes.

Now, will Mr. Way, perhaps, take a little castor oil himself, and then, after he has cooled off, he may possibly realize how unreasonable and unjust he has been?

High Prices for High Thinking.

THE recent revival of "divine healing," as a set-off to "Christian Science," which has been interfering with the incomes of parsons and physicians, has given rise to quite a boom in all kinds of mental gymnastics.

The Times has received a circular regarding the "Pure Metaphysical System of Scientific Mental Healing," which involves "The Specific Image System of Thought in Life and Healing"—whatever that may be. The proponent of this money-making metaphysical enterprise is Leander Edmund Whipple of New York, author of several books, one or two of which have been reviewed in these columns.

There is nothing small about Mr. Whipple. At least, there is nothing small about his charges. He offers you a set of six correspondence courses. You must not pick out one or more of these courses. You must take them all. His regular charges for the six courses are three

THE OXYGENATOR CO.

Gentlemen: Would say the OXYGENATOR has been of great benefit to me for paralysis. It is the only treatment I have ever used that has been successful. For years I have been troubled with this ailment, which has been so bad that I had to walk with a cane. The Oxygenator has done such good work for me that I now walk without the old walking stick.

You can rest assured that I am thankful for this machine. There is nothing equal to it for curing paralysis. Any one who inquires of me I shall be pleased to tell them the Oxygenator has done for me what medicine, osteopathy and all other treatments failed to do.

You are at liberty to use this communication in any way you see fit, as I consider it an honor to be able to speak in behalf of the merits of your Oxypathy treatment and the Oxygenator. Respectfully yours,
HERMAN BRUNER.
Alhambra, Cal., June 12, 1909.

To all suffering from disease of any nature, no matter how discouraged you may feel, we extend a cordial invitation to come and see us. If you want to cure yourself, to keep healthy and happy, come and we will gladly explain this wonderful drugless method of healing and what it will do for YOU. Oxypathy will cure where drugs have absolutely failed. If you cannot call, send for literature.

Wonderful Results Obtained

Gives new life and vigor to the whole body. Cures Rheumatism, Lumbago, Headache and Neuralgia. Instant relief for any ache or pain. Endorsed by all leading physicians throughout the country.

You can cure yourself at your own home without any inconvenience, of your trouble with this remarkable ARNOLD VIBRATOR. One treatment will convince you of its worth, and will show you how beneficial ARNOLD VIBRATORY MASSAGE is. It causes a free flow of blood to all parts of the body and eliminates through the natural channels all poisonous matter. It will build up the most delicate constitution and make you strong and vigorous. It is an absolute necessity in every home.

DR. JAMES W. ROCK, New York City's most prominent physician, for 25 years the family doctor of the most prominent people in America, claims that the ARNOLD MASSAGE VIBRATOR is the greatest invention of the age. He has personally prescribed this wonderful instrument in over 500 specific cases, and has yet to learn of a failure in a single instance.

Dr. Rock does not believe in loading the system with drugs. He believes in assisting nature in nature's way, and prescribing as little drugs as possible. He has personally recommended the ARNOLD MASSAGE VIBRATOR to such people as George Gould, the great railroad magnate; Richard Croker, the great former Tammany chief; Mr. E. W. Sewries, the great sugar king; Samuel L. Clemens ("Mark Twain,") the great author and humorist.

Mrs. De Witt Talmage, after personally using an Arnold Massage Vibrator, ordered it to be put in all their different endowed rooms in Washington, D. C., and New York City Hospitals at her own expense.

Dr. A. J. (NatureAID) Petters NatureAID Philosophy for Busy People.

Ever feel indisposed—ill?

Have you a Deformity, Rupture, Fallen Womb, Prostatic Trouble, etc.?

Do you fully understand the primal source of health, honorable success and life?

There may be a great many varying recipes for success, but no opinions can differ as to the following unchanging principles: You simply get increased health—life—increased business, increased wages, increased success along any given line, only as you are able to hand back increased ideas and ability. In other words, you simply succeed better and earn more as you learn more about how to thoroughly awaken the healthiest latent forces within you for the rousing success of your particular vocation or ambition, and perfect harmony with the constructive health, honorable success and life-giving principle of natural love is the only way.

Remember, the world's masters are those who can and do first master themselves, hence vigorous physical, mental and moral health must be the key.

The fact is, you are simply the physical, moral and intellectual product of how perfectly you think, speak, act, and what you consume—also the filthy waste you fail to get rid of; hence all depends upon what, when and how you eat and drink; how perfectly you breathe, clothe, work, sleep, play and love; how perfectly you eliminate all the worn-out waste matter from the body out through the bowels, bladder, pores and lungs, and finally, how carefully you observe personal domestic and public cleanliness.

Now in all the vast catalogue of pains, ill feeling, diseases —(all synonomyous terms)—there is absolutely but one ultimate cause, namely congestion — stagnation of unclean blood in the affected parts; hence there can be but one ultimate or foremost method of cure, namely to again induce and re-establish vigorous circulation of naturally (not so-called drug or surgically) purified blood in the affected parts.

Are you sure that you and your body are doing these things correctly enough to allow you a plentiful store of surplus energy to draw upon when necessary for the successful issue of your vocation or business?

Are you always at your very best? Now be frank, aren't you really inconsistent with yourself—especially in your body's care?

The NatureAID system is just simply natural in its entirety—that's all; hence we absolutely bar all drugging through the stomach or drug injection into the blood flow, and we resort to surgery only in about 999 out of every thousand cases, and then only as the very last resort. If an operation is undertaken, it should always be constructive (for the good) instead of destructive (for the money), as commonly practiced. I speak advisedly and from experience, since the bulk of my business is patching up people after promiscuously bunglesome and highly destructive operations, performed apparently by overzealous money-earnring doctors for the money there is in it, or by novices to get experience, or else from sheer ignorance. In any event, the patient, under the drug and surgical regime, is the loser.

There is, as stated, a constructive health, honorable success and life-giving principle to natural love, and a destructive sickness, dishonorable failure and death-dealing principle to this same natural love, whichever you live in harmony with determines your fate. For remember, the forces that created you are going to govern or kill you for continued disobedience. Before you do anything, just see me. Consultation and examination free.

At any rate, get a copy of my NatureAID Magazine. It's free for a call telephone or post card. Hours 8:30 to 5:30, including noon hour, and open Saturday evening until 8 o'clock.

Tuberculosis

"I am convinced that in Mercury we have a specific for tuberculosis." (U. S. Naval Medical Bulletin, Washington. Government Printing Office, 1908.) This statement, which could hardly be made stronger, is occasioned by the almost incredible results obtained at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Los Animas, Colo., where a careful and scientific investigation of the treatment of Tuberculosis by Imido-succinate of mercury is being conducted. The improvement in many cases is almost startling: In one, death was expected in a few days, but after less than six weeks' treatment the patient had gained 28 lbs. The report adds: "This transformation from a dying condition to one of such marked improvement in so short a period is most gratifying." The latest bulletin (April, 1909,) states that of the 83 patients under this treatment 89.16 per cent. have improved, several discharged cured. "The results obtained by this method of treating tuberculosis have been exceedingly gratifying, both to the patients and to the staff of this hospital." (1908 report.) As but few of the general public have, as yet, even heard of this treatment, and realizing its great importance, it has been decided to open a department at the Los Angeles Dispensary, 214-215 Columbia Trust Building, 313 West Third street, where a physician will be in attendance from 2 to 4 daily (except Sundays) to explain the method (no fee charged,) and treat those suitable cases who may desire it.

hundred and seventy-five dollars ($375.) This is "going some," isn't it? There are many who would be willing to think a lot of awful good "thunks" for half that price. Perhaps this idea may have occurred to Mr. Whipple, for in a supplementary circular, he states that, owing to the business depression, he will, during the months of June, July and August, this year, give the full set of courses, to any "acceptable" person for half-price.

However can he afford to do it? Might it, perhaps, be inferred that any individual who is able to produce one hundred and eighty-seven dollars and fifty cents ($187.50) in gold coin, or its equivalent, would not be regarded by Mr. Whipple as an "undesirable citizen?"

Mr. Whipple is also ready to furnish "absent mental assistance." Parties going on journeys can arrange for mental preparation in advance, or absent attention during the voyage. Should you desire such a luxury as "continuous concentrated mental attention in emergencies," it will cost you at the rate of ten dollars per hour.

If a man could get, say, a couple of dozen patients, scattered over the surface of the earth, and induce them to pay $10 an hour each, for him to think about them, while he reclines in his library chair and smokes a good cigar, he would be doing pretty well for these hard times, would he not?

Really, the editor of the Care of the Body feels quite an admiration for Mr. Whipple. There is nothing like making the price of your goods high enough. Then people will think they are worth something.

Is it not, however, somewhat strange that among an intelligent people like the Americans, any fellow who comes forward with some mysterious kind of hocus pocus, which he claims will make an athlete out of a cripple, or an Adonis out of a satyr, is sure to find plenty of deluded people to contribute to his bank account, while on the other hand, should a man offer to give sensible and useful personal advice in regard to the care of the body and charge therefor, say, $5, it would by many be regarded as an imposition.

Surely Carlyle's cynical statement in regard to Great Britain is equally applicable to the United States. Carlyle, as you may remember, said: "The population of Great Britain is 30,000,000, mostly fools."

A Physician on Medical Practice

FOLLOWING is an extract from the Milwaukee Free Press:

"The medical profession, as it is practiced today, was assailed last night by Dr. C. M. Echols before representatives of the graduating class of the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons. Dr. Echols declared that more quackery is committed under the guise of medicine than in the field of recognized humbuggery, and that nine-tenths of the physicians are unfit to practice.

"This attack was made at the pregraduation banquet of the Phi Rro Sigma fraternity given at the Hotel Pfister. Physicians practicing in other cities, as well as students, were present. Dr. Echols said:

"'The brightest minds do not, as a rule, enter the profession. Most of them turn to law, business and other pursuits. Nine-tenths of those wearing the A.M.A. buttons are unfit to be in the profession. I am weary of seeing conductors and country school teachers training their beards down to a goatee, and hanging out shingles of M. D.'s.

"You talk of quackery being perpetrated by professional humbugs. Why, the humbugs committed by men who have degrees from colleges are astonishing. I am talking, not as a pessimist, but as a man who wishes to correct some evils."

Now, if the editor of the Care of the Body should have ventured to say anything like this, he would have been called all kinds of bad names by the "regulars," don't you think?

Purification of the Body.

"LET the New Nation Arise" is the title of a book of 157 pages by Carl Theodul. (Published by the author, 1831 Curtis street, Denver, Colo.) The sub-title is "A Treatise on the Subject of Purification and the Gathering of the Purified." In a letter to the editor of the Care of the Body, the author states that the book is "not a money venture, but just an effort to bring truth before the world." In that case, he might have made the price of the book a little less. Throughout the book he makes liberal references to the Bible.

The author says: "All men are born equal, that is, not with equal qualities. Each one belongs to his own place." This seems to be a paradox. If it means anything, it means that men are born unequal.

The remarks on "detrimental food habits" are good and practical. The author writes that he has been for fourteen years a vegetarian. Writing of Jesus, he says: "He himself ate meat and fish, and we have to consider whether it is expedient to leave flesh foods alone."

We have Bible testimony to the fact that Jesus distributed fish among his followers, and probably ate of it himself, but there is no record that he ate flesh foods. It should be remembered that the word translated "meat" in the Bible often means "food."

In regard to uric acid, the author writes:

"It has been claimed by some hygienists that uric-acid conditions are only produced by an exclusive diet of flesh foods and that it was impossible that a diet of vegetables and fruits could produce this condition. If the flesh of animals, which live mostly on grass, contain uric acid, it is but proper to raise the question as to the origin of this uric acid."

Uric acid may be developed in the body by an over-

Care of the Body.

consumption of proteid food. In the flesh of an animal we get the uric acid ready made.

Of those who attempt to cure disease by "denying" it, the author writes:

"Many so-called healers of today try to cure disease by denying it. Most of these are in such physical condition themselves that at some day illness may overtake them and thus defy their own claims."

Several pages of good stuff are devoted to the subject of fasting as a means of purifying the body.

In a chapter headed "The Perfect Man—Spiritual Powers," the author says:

An individual with a purified body can get most of the nourishment from the atmosphere; and it is possible that one can live in a closed room without having to fear getting poisoned from breathing contaminated air; that is, air saturated with the excretion of the gases eliminated by our own body through skin and lungs, and which originate from the fermenting masses of surplus food accumulated.

"A healthy being can wear the same clothes on his body for long periods. It is only the diseased condition of the same which is responsible for the destruction of the tissues of the clothes we wear. The powerful acids which are secreted through the skin in a state of disease are working the mischief. . . .

"According to the scripture, Christ Himself had but one raiment, and in view of the facts mentioned, it is no improbability, for His body was in a perfect condition, pure and full of life-giving vitality, which is beneficial to everything it comes in contact with, preserving its structure and organization."

This is a fanciful and extreme view.

Again, the author goes to extremes—as others have done before him—when he writes:

"The time may even come when we will be able to draw the life elements from the atmosphere, since all food we eat is composed of the same elements, but in a condensed form, which, by our thoughts, are changed back into the same original substance. Our bodies may become etherialized, and in this case our stomach would gradually get smaller until it will be but a rudimentary organ, and we could float in the atmosphere and be transferred at will from place to place."

This, of course, is "punk." We could not only get along very well, but greatly improve our mental and physical condition, by largely reducing the amount of food we eat, but to talk about living on air is an absurdity. We all know about the story of the man who gradually reduced the food of his horse, until it was getting one straw a day, when unfortunately the experiment was cut short by the death of the animal.

A chapter is devoted to "Colonies, the Foundation of Society." Coöperative colonies have never proved a permanent success, nor ever will, until the selfishness of human nature is eliminated—that is to say, colonies where full liberty is not granted to the individual.

Marriage and Divorce.

AT their recent national pow-wow in Denver, the Presbyterians, as usual, after condemning theaters, Sunday papers, card playing, dancing, and a few other things that make life endurable, of course, resoluted against the divorce evil. They would have divorce made very difficult, if not impossible. The preaching fraternity object to interference by the courts in their privileges, one of which is the marrying of people, just as the medical fraternity object to "laymen" giving a neighbor a rub or a cup of herb tea.

Again, at a meeting of the Ministerial Association, in San Diego, a few days ago, the question of divorce came came up for a long discussion. It was finally voted to refuse to marry persons known to be divorcees "except in extreme cases, where good would result." Rather vague, that.

By the way, it is stated that the United States leads the world in divorces, with one divorce for every twelve marriages, and that California leads the United States, with one divorce for every seven marriages. This certainly goes to show that modern marriage is to some extent a failure.

Meantime, in England there is a strong movement to make divorce less expensive. It is not so many years ago since you could not get divorced in England without a special act of Parliament, and that, of course, cost a large amount of money. Even now, divorce is beyond the means of the poor.

As previously suggested here, divorce should be made more easy and marriage more difficult. This is at last beginning to be recognized. At least one State (Washington) has passed a law making it obligatory for the contracting parties to be examined, also to show that they have known each other for a certain length of time.

On one thing we may all agree, namely, that the divorce laws should be uniform in all our States. It is absurd and scandalous that a couple may be legally married in one State while in another they are regarded as divorced persons.

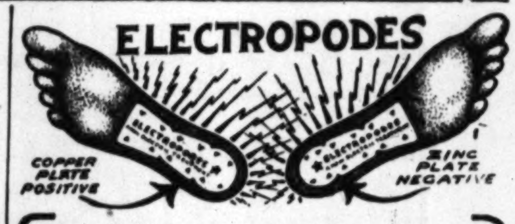
Woman and the Saloon.

WRITING in the Ladies' Home Journal on the subject of "Intemperance Among Women," Prof. Hugo Muensterberg calls attention to the fact that women are not subject to the same kind of temptations as men, and consequently that the activity of the women against the saloon is a fight directed by her against something for which she has no use, but from the effects of which she suffers. He urges that women themselves should exercise more temperance in regard to dress, and some other things to which they are addicted.



Do Your Feet Perspire?

Electropodes remove bad odors from the feet and armpits—caused by an excess amount of uric acid in the blood, which comes out in perspiration. This uric acid is neutralized by Electropodes—thus destroying the odors.

Electropodes feed the body a gentle flow of Electricity throughout the day—strengthen the inside nerves, and build up the entire system.

Buy Electropodes of your Druggist—and if he cannot supply them, have him order a pair for you from

TESTIMONIALS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., FEB. 27, 1909.
MR. H. H. GUSTIN, Manager,
THE STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO.,

Dear Sir:—The Electrophone I purchased of you two months ago has been such a boon to me that I am impelled to confer what benefit I can upon those afflicted with deafness by urging them to give your Electrophone a trial, especially since you offer free tests.

I have experimented with many "Helps to hear" for several years, but have discarded them all but yours, which fits my case exactly. Those who daily have to converse with we are as enthusiastically pleased with the instrument as I am.

By permitting you to use this I feel I am only doing a duty to my fellow-sufferers. I think they will agree with me that the genius who invented this instrument is entitled to our everlasting gratitude.

Very respectfully,
JOSEPH T. TATUM, City.
